THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA LOS ANGELES THE LIBRARY OF

THE LIBRARY OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA LOS ANGELES

NATHAN.COLE

WISDOM EXPLAINING the PRINCIPLES & the PRACTICE of the ARTS & SCIENCES

THE

Pocket Edition of BARCLAY'S Dictionary.

greatly Improved

& SUPERBLY EMBELLISHED.

Published by T. Kinnersley Jan.1st 1813.

W. McCrea Delin.

I. Brown Sculp.

Sawyer & Scudder

BARCLAY'S

UNIVERSAL DICTIONARY;

CONTAININO

AN EXPLANATION OF DIFFICULT WORDS AND TECHNICAL TERMS,

In all Faculties and Professions;

WHETHER IN

ALGEBRA,	DIVINITY,	HISTORY,	MILITARY ART,	PNEUMATICS,
ANATOMY,	GARDENING,	HUSBANDRY,	MUSIC,	POETRY,
ARCHITECTURE,	GEOGRAPHY,	HYDRAULICS,	NATURAL HISTORY,	PRINTING,
ARITHMETIC,	GEOMETRY,	HYDROSTATICS,	NAVIGATION,	RHETORIC,
ASTRONOMY,	GRAMMAR,	LAW,	OPTICS,	SCULPTURE,
BOTANY,	GUNNERY,	LOGIC,	PAINTING,	SURGERY,
CHEMISTRY,	HERALDRY,	MATHEMATICS,	PERSPECTIVE,	SURVEYING,
DIALLING,	HIEROGLYPHICS,	MECHANICS,	PHIOLSOPHY,	TRIGONOMETRY;

ALSO

A PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY,

IN WHICH THE PROPER SOUNDS OF ENGLISH WORDS ARE SO GIVEN, THAT BOTH NATIVES AND FOREIGNERS MAY ACQUIRE A JUST PRONUNCIATION:

LIKEWISE

The Origin of each Word; with its different Meanings occasionally illustrated by Authorities, properly accented, and followed by initial Letters denoting the Part of Speech to which it is appropriated; the Differences pointed out between Words esteemed Synonymous;

AN EPITOME OF THE HISTORY OF ENGLAND,

ARRANGED ALPHABETICALLY UNDER EVERY SOVEREIGN'S NAME;

A DESCRIPTION OF

THE VARIOUS STATES, PROVINCES, AND CHIEF TOWNS OF THE KNOWN WORLD;

A STATEMENT OF THE

Sects and Divisions of the Christian Church;

Together with a brief History of the Prophets and Apostles; an Account of the Counties, Cities, and Market Towns in Great Britain, with their Distances from London; and a Collection of our most Common Proverbs.

TO WHICH ARE ADDED,

A CHRONOLOGICAL SERIES OF REMARKABLE EVENTS,

FROM THE CREATION OF THE WORLD TO THE PRESENT PERIOD;

A SKETCH OF THE CONSTITUTION, GOVERNMENT, AND TRADE OF GREAT BRITAIN

WITH A

BRIEF LIST OF SOME OF THE MOST EMINENT MEN OF LEARNING AND GENIUS;

TO WHICH ARE PREFIXED,

A Free Inquiry into the Antiquity of Letters;

A SHORT ESSAY ON THE ORIGIN AND ANTIQUITY OF THE ENGLISH TONGUE; AND AN EASY INTRODUCTION TO ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

BY THE REV. JAMES BARCLAY.

A NEW AND IMPROVED EDITION.

London:

PUBLISHED BY J M'GOWAN, GREAT WINDMILL STREET, HAYMARKET

PE
1621
B23u

BARCLAY'S DICTIONARY,

ENLARGED AND IMPROVED.

N. B. In this edition, s. stands for substantive, a. for adjective, ad. for adverb, v. for verb, v. a. for verb active, v. n. for verb neuter, part. for participle, prep. for preposition, &c.

FREE INQUIRY

INTO THE

ORIGIN AND ANTIQUITY OF LETTERS.

BY THE

ABBOT ANSELM,

Member of the Royal Academy of Inscriptions and Belles Lettres at Paris.

NOTWITHSTANDING it would be a concern of no small importance, to be capable of rightly informing you, at what particular time the art of writing, or use of letters, was first found out; yet I must ingenuously acknowledge my insufficiency to resolve so abstruse, so mysterious a secret. All that I shall pretend to is, to collect, out of various conjectures, those opinions on so critical a topic, to which some of the most learned and judicious antiquarians have paid a more than ordinary deference and regard.

Nothing doubtless could be of greater service; nothing could possibly be more entertaining to human life, than an ability of recollecting what was past, and of giving an established being, as it were, to the sentiments of the soul, by virtue whereof, we might transmit them down to the latest posterity, without the least variation.

This, one would imagine, indeed, nature might have prompted mankind to have accomplished; and yet, it must be allowed, it was an arduous task, a discovery of the last importance.

We are sensible, however, as profound as the secret was, it has been found out; and it is self-evident, that custom, from its being first brought to light, not only received, but established and confirmed it.

Such authors as give the least antiquity at all to the invention of letters, ascribe the honour of it to Moses. Others, however, will not admit that it could ever possibly be discovered by any human penetration, by any dint of thought, how profound, how deep soever; and for that reason give God alone the glory of it; and peremptorily insist, that the knowledge of letters had never been found out to the final dissolution of all things, had not the Almighty condescended to have written the decalogue, or ten commandments, on two tables of stone, with his own right hand, in which was interspersed (as they very shrewdly observe) all the letters in general of the Hebrew alphabet, the teth only excepted.

And on what reasons that conjecture is grounded, we shall remark by the bye; though we cannot allow them to be conclusive.

Thus far we will admit, indeed, that the art of letters was known only by a few, and but very little practised before the law was delivered to Moses upon Mount Sinai; and we will farther admit, that divers nations have been, time immemorial, without it; and this has been the main, if not the sole occasion of those confused and absurd accounts that we find not only in the antient stories of those nations, but in the religion and genealogies of their gods.

These concessions, however, are no convincing evidence, that the art of letters was altogether unknown, that Moses had no manuscripts, no historical memoirs in his custody, which had been preserved, as an invaluable treasure, with the utmost care and circumspection, in the families of his predecessors.

Now those who peremptorily assert, that the art of letters was a human, and not a divine invention, and that we are indebted to the superior knowledge and profound penetration of Moses for that inestimable blessing, produce the following arguments to strengthen their conjecture.

Moses, say they, never quotes any book prior to his law; that not the least hint is given either of letters, or the art of writing in such places, where, had it been discovered at all, due notice had doubtless been taken of it; and again, that if the commemoration of former great and heroic actions had been preserved, such memoirs, or historical accounts could have been transmitted to their descendants no other wise than by word of mouth; or, in other terms, by oral tradition.

How plausible, or how convincing soever, this argument may possibly be to the abettors of that opinion, I shall not take upon me to determine; yet there are some very eminent and learned antiquarians, who strenuously oppose it; and insist that Moses himself has quoted a book anterior to his own Pentateuch; for in the xxi. chapter of his book of Numbers, (after having given a succinct account of the several places where the children of Israel had pitched their tents in the wilderness, which was before Moab,) he proceeds thus: "Wherefore, it is said in the Book of the Wars of the Lord, what he did in the Red Sea, and in the brooks of Arnon and at the stream of the brooks that goeth down to the dwelling of Ar, and lieth upon the border of Moab."

Now, though it must be granted, that many of the most judicious literati are much divided in their opinions concerning that treatise, as being a work, of which but very few have the least transient idea: yet St. Austin imagines, in his commentaries on the book of Numbers, that it was not the composition either of any patriarch or prophet, but written by those very nations themselves that had been conquered by their enemies, and looked upon that war so fatal to them, as to deserve the title that it bore. And then that great author goes on, and tells us, that when Moses makes mention of that book he bestows no greater authority upon it, than St. Paul has given to a Grecian poet, when he had quoted a short passage from his works; this however, notwithstanding the gloss that is put upon it, is in our humble opinion, a self-evident proof, that treatise was written long before the birth of Moses.

Furthermore, those who insist, that we are indebted to Moses for the invention of letters, pretend, that not the least notice is taken of this art, in divers circumstances of such moment and importance, as that, had there been any prior knowledge of it, it is highly probable they would have been committed to writing. When Abraham, say they, sent Eliezer into Mesopotamia, to settle and adjust the marriage articles between Isaac and Rebekah, not one line was written; no credentials had that faithful servant to show from his master, even on so solemn an occasion. Again, say these advocates for Moses, when Isaac had those wells dug up, which the Philistines had filled with earth and stones; we have no other account of that remarkable occurrence than this, that after they were opened by his orders, he gave them the same names that his father had done before him. Again, say they, when the patriarch Jacob had erected, at Beth-el, the stone which he had made use of as a pillow, in commemoration of his vision in that place, there is not the least account of any inscription having been made upon it.

Once more, when Joseph's Brethren, say they, went down into Egypt, as we find it recorded in the xlii. chapter of Genesis; and when Joseph sent for his dearly beloved brother Benjamin, as we find that affectionate circumstance told in the xliii. chapter of the same book, not a word was written either from the son to the father, or vice versa, on so momentous an occasion. And from this presumption, the admirers of Moses infer, that letters, or the use of writing, was not known in those days; but, with submission, those plausible arguments seem to me to be no ways conclusive.

Job lived, it is universally allowed, long before Moses had any existence; and his history must, in all probability, have been written long before Moses composed his Pentateuch.

Some, however, deny that the last conjecture is just; for if that had been matter of fact, say they, Moses would never have omitted such an illustrious example of patience to the incessant murmurs and complaints of his discontented Israelites; nay, farther, it is imagined, that Job laboured under his severe afflictions, even at that very time, when the Israelites were under Egyptian bondage; for there is not so much as one word mentioned either of the law or of the prophets, in the long dialogues which passed between Job and his most miserable comforters, styled his friends; neither is there, indeed, the least hint concerning the one or the other, throughout the long conference which God Almighty vouchsafed to hold with that most upright, though distressed prince.

To the above allegation our reply is this; It would be very presumptuous to fix the time when that history was written, or by whom; though it be received as canonical, and consequently as composed by divine inspiration. For it is mere conjecture, and nothing more, that some ascribe it to Moses; some again to the prophet Isaiah; and others with more probability of king Solomon, who, it is well known, was thoroughly versed in dialogical discoveries and prudential maxims.

It is universally allowed, likewise, that he was master of the most sublime poetry, and no stranger to the style of the Arabians, as may rationally be presumed from his conversation with the queen of Sheba.

It cannot, I think, be fairly denied, however, but that Job was acquainted with the art of writing, or the use of letters and the various methods, that in his time were made use of in engraving on both lead and stone:—for in the xix. chapter of that book is the following very remarkable expostulation; "Oh that my words were now written! Oh that "they were printed in a book! That they were graven with "an iron pen and lead in the rock for ever!"

Now he could not, doubtless, have talked in this style, or expressed himself in such direct terms, had the use of letters, or the art of writing, been absolutely unknown in his days.

But to proceed:—The knowledge of this art must needs be very antient; since the apostle St. Jude takes particular notice of the book of Enoch, who was the seventh patriarch after Adam, and prophesied of these, says the inspired penman, that is to say, of those false teachers, against whom he had before pronounced his anathema, in the 11th verse; "Woe! unto them, says he; for they have gone in the way of "Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, "and perished in the gain-saying of Core." And after this, he quotes the following very remarkable passage from the Book of Enoch, in the 14th, 15th, and 16th verses; "And "Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these; "saying, Behold! the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his "saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all "that are ungodly among them, of all their ungodly deeds, "which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard "speeches, which ungodly sinners have spoken against him. "These are murmurers, complainers, walking after their "own lusts; and their mouth speaking great swelling words, "having men's persons in admiration, because of advantage." And Tertullian is of opinion that the book of Enoch was either preserved in the ark, or restored by Noah, who was perfectly well acquainted with the contents of it.

Now though we are ready to acknowledge that the book of Enoch, thus quoted by St. Jude, is not canonical; yet we humbly conceive, it is a proof sufficient for our present purpose; since it is agreed, that not only that book, but divers others, cited in the Book of Kings, were not received either by the Jews or Christians [as St. Austin assures us] as canonical, for no other reason, but because they were so very antient; because many faults might probably have crept into them through the succession of ages. And lastly, because we cannot be satisfactorily assured, that they were the authentic works of those holy men whose names they bear.

As this book in particular, however, as well as divers others, are quoted by the inspired penmen of the sacred scriptures, it cannot fairly be denied, but that they are very old; and from thence we conceive, it may justly be concluded, that the use of letters, or the art of writing was well known before the publication of the Pentateuch by Moses.

Josephus assures us, that we are beholden to the children of Seth for the science of astrology; and because Adam had given them previous notice, that the world would in time be dissolved by water and fire, they were so solicitous lest their favourite science should be lost, before men might have sufficient time to become masters of it, that they were determined to erect two columns or pillars, one of brick, and the other of stone, on each of which the learning they had acquired was accurately engraven; that in case the deluge should destroy the former, the latter, however, might possibly stand its ground, and transmit to posterity those useful and important articles, which they had inscribed upon it with such unwearied diligence and application. And to this account Josephus adds, that in his time one of those pillars was actually to be seen in Syria.

Though there are some learned men, who deny this to be matter of fact because it is very uncertain whether the children of Seth were ever inhabitants of Palestine, or not; yet it proves thus far, that, even from that time the art of engraving, or inscription, was in some measure known; though not carried to that pitch of perfection, it afterwards was, in the land of Egypt.

Vossius proposes the following shrewd question: If the use of letters, or the art of writing, says he, had not been known before the decalogue was delivered to Moses, which way could the Israelites have read the law, as they were obliged to do by divine command.

Those who insist that Moses was the first inventor of letters, argue from what St. Austin asserts, that Moses appointed masters to teach them.

But we freely appeal here to the impartial and unprejudiced reader, whether such a weak answer as that, is sufficiently convincing against Vossius' inquiry? and whether those masters, whom St. Austin supposes only to be appointed by Moses, be any proof at all, that there were no such things as characters, nor any such art as that of writing, known before the two tables of stone were engraved by the finger of God; or indeed, before Moses himself was born?

And forasmuch as all the people were obliged, not only to read the law, but to transcribe it likewise, a great many masters must inevitably be wanted for the instruction of every man, as they are, even at this day, absolutely necessary to qualify mankind for the most easy sciences, and for such affairs as are of the least moment and importance.

All that can be said in short, amounts to no more than this: namely, That the use of letters was but very little known amongst a nation, whose principal employment was husbandry, and who were unacquainted with any other profession than that of a shepherd.

It is an established notion amongst the Greeks, that they are indebted to the Phœnicians for their knowledge of letters. Heredotus assures us, that the Ionians gave the title of Diphtheria to all their books, because they were written upon goat-skins; and that they called all letters Phœnician, because it was a received opinion amongst them, that one Cadmus had brought them out of the country of Phœnicia. And here we cannot forbear introducing the subsequent beautiful passage, extracted from Lucans' Pharsalia:

" Phœnices, primi, famæ si creditur, ausi
" Mansurum rudi ius vocem signare figuris;
" Nondum flamineas Memphis contexere biblos
" Noverat; et saxis tantum volucresque feraque
" Sculptuque servabant magicas animalia linguas."

Thus accurately paraphrased by the late ingenious Mr. Rowe:

" Phœnicians first, if antient fame be true,
" The sacred mystery of letters knew:
" They first, by sound, by various lines design'd,
" Express'd the meaning of the thinking mind;
" The pow'r of words by figures rude convey'd,
" And useful science everlasting made."

From this passage it is evident, that the Egyptians, long before the common way of writing was found out, were accustomed to inscribe upon rocks the figures of a great variety of brutes, a dumb sort of language, to which arbitrary meanings were ascribed.

Moreover, Quintus Curtius, having occasion to expatiate on the celebrated city of Tyre, assures us that the Phœnicians were the first inventors of Letters, and the first that ever communicated the knowledge of them to others.

However, whether that be absolutely fact or not, it must be allowed, that letters were very antient among them, for Tully peremptorily insists, that Greece had Poets before Homer; and Eusebius gives us a long catalogue or list of antient authors, whose works were never transmitted down to us; such, for instance, as Linus, Philamon, Thamirus, Amphion, Orpheus, Musæus, Epimenides, and divers others too tedious here to enumerate.

Those letters, which Cadmus had taught the Greeks, were carried, as is supposed, into Italy by one Evander, an Arcadian. And thereupon Petrus Crinitus, who flourished in the year 1304, and was pupil to one Politianus, in his poems on education; and Lilius Giraldus, who lived in the 15th century, and Vossius likewise, quote the following verses which were found in an old manuscript; namely,

" Primus Hebræas Moses exaravit Literas;
" Mente Phœnices sagaci condiderunt Atticas;
" Quas Latini scriptitamus edidit Nicostrata."

That is to say, Moses was the inventor of the Hebrew characters;

The Phœnicians taught the Greeks their letters;

And Nicostrata (who was the mother of Evander) was the first that introduced them amongst the Italians.

We are assured likewise, by Pliny, that Cadmus bestowed sixteen letters, or characters, upon the Greeks; that the antient Ionic letters, bore a near resemblance to those made use of by the Phœnicians, and that those Ionic characters were nearly the same with those made use of by the Latins.

And Scaliger, in his Critical Remarks on Eusebius, peremptorily asserts, that the Assyrian and Phœnician letters bear a very near affinity to the Samaritan characters, which were made use of by the Jews in general, before the Babylonish captivity.

But be that as it may, we may boldly assert, that the knowledge of letters was very antient in Egypt. If we may credit Diodorus Siculus, he tells us, that the Egyptians laid claim to that grand, that important invention, which some insist was beyond the power of man to contrive (as we have hinted before;) but then they themselves acknowledge, that it was long after they had made use of living animals to express their thoughts.

That the art of writing was very antient amongst them, is very evident; for Tacitus informs us, that one Germanicus paid a visit to antient Thebes, where incontestible marks of its former grandeur and opulency were even then to be read in Egyptian characters, engraved on obelisks for that purpose. On them were inscribed the several important articles here under-mentioned; namely, first, the tribute which was annually paid by the inhabitants; secondly, the weight of their gold and silver; thirdly, the number of their horses and their arms; fourthly, the ivory and perfumes that were peculiarly devoted to the service of their temples; and lastly, the taxes or imposts that were laid on all kinds of grain in particular, and on every commodity in general, either imported or exported.

It must be confessed, that he could not read them himself, but they were explained to him by an antient priest; for, according to Diodorus Siculus, none but the Egyptian priests could interpret such inscriptions.

Now all this is, in our humble opinion, a proof, beyond all contradiction, of the great antiquity of the use of letters and the art of inscriptions.

To conclude: We are assured by Valerius Maximus, that Pythagoras, when he visited Egypt, made himself master of their characters, by the instruction of more Egyptian priests than one; and that having consulted several books, which were intrusted to their care, he found the history of a great number of ages comprehended in them.

A SHORT ESSAY

ON THE

Origin and Antiquity of the English Tongue;

AND

Its Superior Excellence to any other Modern Language.

AS all languages in general have their infancy, their nonage, and their state of perfection, like the polite arts and sciences, to the knowledge whereof we attain in process of time, and by slow degrees; so by the same slow and almost imperceptible gradations, they lose their pristine beauties; they fade, they droop, they decay, till at length they sink into perpetual oblivion.

This is a truth too self-evident to be denied; for the Gothic language, to which the English tongue owes its existence, is now no more, and altogether unknown; and the Saxon, which succeeded it, is grown so obsolete, so darkly expressed and hard to be understood; that only a few of our British Virtuosi, whose taste or genius naturally leads them to make their researches into the Arcana of antiquity, can form the least adequate idea of its beauties.

However, notwithstanding we natives of England owe our mother-tongue to the Goths; yet the antient Britons, our truly heroic ancestors, who were first possessed of these happy islands, spoke a language widely different from ours, before they were conquered by Julius Cæsar, being a people we now call the Welsh, and may with propriety enough, be looked upon by us as the Aborigines of Britain; since CÆSAR himself acknowledges in the fifth book of his universally admired commentaries, "that they were the inhabitants of its interior parts:" and the language, which was first spoken there, had a quite different origin from ours; though from whence it had its source we confess ourselves at a loss to determine.

No sooner, however, had Cæsar and the Romans in general abandoned the British islands, but our ancestors, in their distress, gave an invitation to the Saxons to aid and assist them, against the Scots and Picts, who had not only greatly harassed and perplexed them, but had actually invaded their country.

By the assistance of the Saxons, it is true, those enemies, whose too frequent incursions they so much dreaded, were totally defeated; but then, soon after that glorious conquest was gained, those false friends, whom they so highly respected and caressed, played the ungrateful part; and not only turned their arms upon their benefactors, but were so successful in their treacherous proceedings, that the unconquered part of those Britons was reduced to the necessity of flying to the mountains of Wales for shelter and protection, insomuch that the Welsh language was no longer understood in these our British islands; and the Saxon only universally prevailed.

It is morally impossible to trace out the form of that language, when it was first introduced into England, that is to say, so far back as the year 450; for at that time, the Saxons were a people so barbarous, so illiterate, and artless, that some of our antiquarians have much doubted whether they ever had any established alphabet for the instruction of their youth. Neither have we any just grounds to imagine, that they ever made any considerable proficiency in the study of the arts and sciences, till an hundred and thirty years afterwards; at which time St. Austin came amongst them with the praise-worthy view of prevailing on them, if possible, to embrace the Christian faith; and met with success beyond his warmest expectations.

After this their happy conversion, indeed, they began to apply their minds to study, and by slow degrees improved themselves in polite literature; insomuch, that about one hundred and thirty years afterwards, one bishop Eadfride, who was at that time universally admired for his unaffected piety and sanctity of manners, wrote a well received comment on the inspired writings of the four most holy evangelists.

In the year 871, Alfred the Great came to the crown of England, when the Danes were in the very heart of his dominions, and all the sea-ports were filled with their fleets. After divers battles with various success, finding himself at last overpowered by numbers, he was reduced to the necessity of dismissing his very attendants; and having committed his wife and children to the care of some of his most loving and loyal subjects, he went in disguise to the little island of Athelney, in the county of Somerset, and there lived concealed for some years.

During that long interregnum, as he was not only one of the greatest and most pious princes upon earth, but the best scholar of the age in which he lived; it is a received opinion and in all probability it was fact, that he translated the Saxon Homilies in that rural recess, and composed divers other books of devotion for the religious improvement of his subjects, which were soon published after his happy restoration, though not with his majesty's name prefixed.

In the year 900 we are informed, that a translation of the Gospels made its first appearance; but by whom the elaborate and praise-worthy undertaking was accomplished the learned and judicious antiquarian, to whom we are indebted for our most essential remarks, has not informed us.

In the year 1066, the Saxon government ended by a very remarkable battle between Harold the second, and William the Bastard, then duke of Normandy, in which no less than sixty thousand of the British were slain. Upon this total defeat, the antient inhabitants of the island withdrew into Wales, where they preferred barren mountains with the possession of liberty, to the most fertile plains of England.

Soon after this revolution, the Saxon language began to lose its antient form, and grow out of repute; and, by slow degrees, to exhibit some traces of the English language, as it now stands; notwithstanding, but a very few Norman words were adopted for near an hundred years after the conquest.

About the year 1130, several compositions both in prose and verse made their appearance in public; upon the perusal whereof, notwithstanding the language was greatly altered, both in its construction and terminations, yet it still, with propriety enough, might be termed the Saxon tongue.

In the 13th century, however, a sort of language, partly Saxon, and partly English, was introduced; at which time the Miscellaneous Writings of one Robert of Gloucester were held in high esteem.

Among many other fugitive pieces, he inserted a poetical encomium on king Alfred, which at that time was received with universal applause.

In the 14th century, one Sir John Mandeville, who was a very learned gentleman, and an able and experienced historian, obliged the public with an accurate and elaborate account of his own travels.

Hitherto our language was widely different from that now spoken at present; two great poets, however, flourished in this century, namely Sir John Gower and Jeoffry Chaucer. Though the former published some few poetical pieces first; yet the latter is for the most part styled the father of all the English Bards that succeeded him. If the account given of him by Leland may be relied on. " He was not only a very facetious poet, but an acute logician, a great philosopher, a profound mathematician, and a pious divine;" but how that last part of his character may be fully vindicated, I shall not presume to determine; since there are too many of his tales, which though facetious and entertaining, are not, in my humble opinion, over instructive; since some of them can scarcely be read without a blush. And the late lord Roscommon has made the following very just observation, namely,

' Immodest words admit of no defence;
" For want of decency is want of sense."

In 1468, one Caxton brought the art of printing into England, and (amongst other books) published one, intitled Recuyel of the Historyes of Troy.

About two and twenty years afterwards he published a translation of the Boke of Eucydos, composed by Vyrgle.— The preface or introduction to which plainly shews, that the readers in those days were highly disgusted with the innovations which were then made in the English language.

About the year 1500, the celebrated Sir Thomas Moore made a flourishing figure in the English court; and by many authors has been highly applauded, as the politest and most accurate writer of the age in which he lived.

In the year 1558, Thomas Sackville, then earl of Dorset, published several fugitive pieces, and was universally admired, not only for the elegance of his style but the beauty of his compositions.

In 1573, one Ralph Lever, published a treatise intitled, the Art of Reason; and not long after him the celebrated Sir Philip Sidney wrote his Arcadia which is universally allowed to be the most entertaining and instructive novel that ever appeared in public at that time. He likewise published an accurate Translation of Philip lord Mornay du Plessis Morly's unanswerable defence of the Truth of the Christian Religion; which, in his time, met with the universal approbation of the public, which it justly deserved.

About the year 1509, that is to say, in the beginning of king Henry the VII's reign, one William Tindal published a translation of the New Testament; but soon after one Cuthbert Tonstal, then bishop of London, sent a very severe prohibition of it to the archdeacons of his diocese, with his reasons annexed.

In the 17th century, however, Sir Francis Bacon was the first author, whose style was capable of entertaining and instructing the readers of the present age. To him succeeded Milton, Waller, Algernon Sydney, lord Clarendon &c. &c. who made great improvements upon his style. We are indebted, however, to Mr. Dryden, Addison, Budgell, Steele, Swift, and Pope, for the inimitable beauties with which our language shines at present; and by whom I humbly conceive, it was carried to its acme, or utmost pitch of perfection.

To conclude: as the present undertaking is immediately calculated for the service of such English readers as are supposed to be unlettered, and not so happy as to have had the benefits and advantages of a very liberal education; it would be foreign to our purpose to embellish this short essay with any antient quotations, to shew the gradual improvements of English authors in their style, according to the state of our language at their respective periods.

Having thus said all we think absolutely necessary, and consistent with our intended brevity, we shall proceed to the last topic proposed; namely the excellency of the English language.

Now its beauties are most conspicious in the four particular articles here undermentioned; that is to say, it is free and easy; and, in short, more sweet and harmonious, and by consequence preferable to any living language whatsoever.

Its freedom and facility, in the first place is demonstrable, since it is in a great measure exempt from that multiplicity of cases and flexions, which clog or encumber almost all others, and render them for that reason extremely intricate, difficult and abstruse. Our adjectives being all invariable, make the concordance with their substantives remarkably plain and easy: the English pronouns, likewise are not half so confused and perplexed as either those of the Latin or the French. And scarce any thing can more easily be conquered than the conjugation of English verbs: Besides, our language is burdened with no such thing as verbs reciprocal, which render the French tongue in particular very dark and obscure; and very often discourage foreigners from the study of it.

To illustrate its copiousness, very little need to be said, since it is too manifest and self evident to be denied; for besides the antient Dutch, which the English retain in the Saxon monosyllables; the literati, of England, like so many industrious bees, have collected the quintessence of divers foreign languages, and rejected their refuse or dross; by which artful management, and their assiduity, they have improved their mother-tongue to that prodigious degree, that all such foreigners as have an adequate idea of the genius of it, are perfectly charmed to observe, that neither their own, nor any other language whatsoever, can stand in competition with it; and at the same time, to find a great variety of their own terms so happily transplanted and blended with it that they seem to thrive better in England than in their own native soil.

And whereas the French is to much limited and constrained, and through its over-niceness is grown in some measure barren, spiritless, and insipid; the English, on the other hand, is become prodigiously copious and luxuriant through its innate power of making such compounds and derivatives as are very comprehensive, emphatical, and proper to contract any expression into a narrow compass; it must be allowed, that neither the Greek itself, nor the Latin, can compound or join many words together in a more agreeable manner, which is one of the most shining beauties that any language can possibly boast of. In a word, there is no sentiment or thought that can be expressed in a greater flow of words, or with more propriety and a better grace, than in the English tongue.

As to its energy or significance, there is scarce any variety that any other nation can boast of, but what the English has almost with equal happiness made its own. With what propriety has the celebrated lord Bacon taught us to speak all the terms of art in our mother-tongue, which was looked upon as impracticable, till we saw it actually carried into execution? What inimitable pieces of oratory or elocution of our own growth, have we seen published within these few years! and what collection of poems bears a more sublime sense, is more manly and majestic, more strong and nervous, than what has been exhibited to the public by those universally admired poets, Mr. Milton, Mr. Addison, and Mr. Pope?

As to its harmony and sweetness, it must be confessed that the Italian abounds with vowels, as the Dutch does with consonants, which renders the first too effeminate, and the last too rugged and uncouth; whereas the English has, through a happy intermixture, the advantage of them both. We cannot but allow that the Italian language is peculiarly delicate, soft, and pleasing to the ear; but then it glides along like a purling stream. The French, doubtless, is very nice and courtly, but then it has too much in it that savours of effeminacy and affectation. The Spanish, it is true, is very solemn and majestic; but it is too apt to be stormy and tempestuous, and carries a kind of terror along with it. The German is very manly indeed, but it is harsh and unpolite; whereas the English, by judiciously borrowing a little here and a little there, from each of them, gives strength of consonants to the Italian, the full and perfect sound of syllables to the French, the variety of terminations with much gentler accents to the Spanish, and dissolves the Dutch consonants with greater facility and ease.

Now what can possibly be wanting to the perfection of that language, where substance and solidity combine with pleasure; where copiousness unites with delicacy, beauty, with majesty, and expedition with gravity and sedateness! And such doubtless is the composition of the English.

That all these advantages are inherent in our mother-tongue, all foreigners in general are become at length highly convinced; and notwithstanding indeed, in former days, they spoke of it with an air of indifference at least, and looked upon it with an eye of contempt; yet as those groundless prejudices are now removed, they stand in admiration at the sound of it.

The principal objections that some hyper-critics have urged against it, are these two: namely, its being a language compounded of divers others; and its being subject and liable to frequent variations. The former however, is so very natural to all languages in general, that we have never heard hitherto of any one entirely free from it, the Hebrew only excepted, as some say; but whether that be real fact or not, we ingenuously acknowledge our inability to determine.—The Latin language has a great mixture of that which was spoken by the Greeks and Goths; the French is a composition of Latin, Dutch, and the antient Gallic; the Spanish of Latin principally, with some spice or smattering of the Gothic and Morisco; and the German itself, though by some peremptorily insisted upon to be an original, has some savour of the Roman empire, and its neighbouring nations.

As to its being subject to various changes and mutations, the object is altogether as groundless as the former; for it is universally allowed, that all languages, as well as kingdoms, have their infancy and age, their perfection and decay.

I shall now conclude this succinct account, this transient view only of the excellency of our mother-tongue, with the observations of two very judicious critics, who, though masters of divers languages, hold our English tongue in the highest veneration.

"As the English language (says the first) is at this pre"sent juncture arrived at so great a pitch of perfection, is so
"very copious and expressive, by the accession of the life
"and spirit of divers other tongues with which it is blended,
"it were greatly to be wished, that a stop might be put
"to that boundless practice of naturalizing foreign words,
"of which the English seem too extravagantly fond; and
"that for the future all neological and factitious terms
"should be laid aside, except some few that might possibly "be introduced with judgment and precaution."

"Was the English nation, (says the last) but contented
"with making improvements on that grain which they have "already, without over-stocking themselves by importation
"from foreign ports, and putting their language in a per"petual ferment, it would contribute greatly to its future
"credit and reputation."

And to confess ingenuously, it is our humble opinion, that there is already as much in it, as is any ways useful or necessary; and as much, in a word, as the English soil is capable of bearing.

THE

COMPENDIOUS BRITISH GRAMMARIAN,

OR

AN EASY INTRODUCTION

TO THE

STUDY OF THE ENGLISH TONGUE.

GRAMMAR is the art of expressing our thoughts justly, with a due accent in the pronunciation, and with all the true and proper letters of each word in writing, according to the practice of those who are universally allowed to be the best judges in that language which we propose to study, be it what it will.

To speak English therefore, is to explain our sentiments reciprocally to each other, in the English language, by those signs which the learned have invented for that great and important purpose; and we find by experience, that sounds and the voice are the fittest and most convenient of any; but because such sounds are too transient, and pass away too soon; other signs have been found out, and so contrived as to render them, not only more permanent and lasting, but more capable of striking the eye; and these are the marks, or characters in writing, called by the Greeks grammata, a term to which that of grammar owes it derivation.

There are two things principally to be considered in these signs; namely, what they are, in the first place, in their nature as characters; and in the next, their true meaning or signification; that is, the manner in which they are made use of by mankind, in order to convey their ideas with as much ease and freedom as possible, one to another.

Some divide grammar into four parts only; namely, letters, syllables, words, and sentences; and this division, in my humble opinion, is not only the shortest, but the most easy and natural; and comprehends, in reality, every thing that can possibly be produced on the subject.

In the first place, then, we shall treat as briefly as possible of letters.

Of Letters

A LETTER is a mark, or character, which denotes a simple and uncompounded, though an articulate sound; for such as are inarticulate, for instance, the roaring of a lion, the beat of a drum, the purling of a stream, or the melodious notes of the nightingale, are altogether impossible to be expressed by the characters, or marks whatsoever.

Notwithstanding the English alphabet is, for the most part, said to consist of twenty-four letters only; and for this reason, because i and j and also u and v, were some centuries ago, expressed by the self-same characters; yet as the jā and vēē, for the generality termed i and u consonant, are now quite different in regard to their sound, as well as form, they may, with great propriety, be termed two distinct letters; and for that reason, there are six-and-twenty letters made use of in the English tongue. These, however, differ in their form, according to the various types in which they are printed, as will manifestly appear by the following

ALPHABET.

No.	Roman.	Old Engl.	Italic.	Their Powers or Sounds.
I.	A a	𝔄 𝔞	A a	ā
II.	B b	𝔅 𝔟	B b	bēē
III.	C c	ℭ 𝔠	C c	sēē
IV.	D d	𝔇 𝔡	D d	dēē
V.	E e	𝔈 𝔢	E e	ēē
VI.	F f	𝔉 𝔣	F f	ĕf
VII.	G g	𝔊 𝔤	G g	ghēe
VIII.	H h	ℌ 𝔥	H h	aĭtch
IX.	I i	ℑ 𝔦	I i	ī
X.	J j	𝔍 𝔧	J j	jā
XI.	K k	𝔎 𝔨	K k	kā
XII.	L l	𝔏 𝔩	L l	ĕl
XIII.	M m	𝔐 𝔪	M m	ĕm
XIV	N n	𝔑 𝔫	N n	ĕn
XV.	O o	𝔒 𝔬	O o	o
XVI.	P p	𝔓 𝔭	P p	pēē
XVII.	Q q	𝔔 𝔮	Q q	kū
XVIII.	R r	ℜ 𝔯	R r	ăr
XIX.	S s	𝔖 𝔰	S s	ĕss
XX.	T t	𝔗 𝔱	T t	tēē
XXI.	U u	𝔘 𝔲	U u	yū
XXII.	V v	𝔙 𝔳	V v	vēē
XXIII.	W w	𝔚 𝔴	W w	double yū
XXIV.	X x	𝔛 𝔵	X x	ĕx
XXV.	Y y	𝔜 𝔶	Y y	wy
XXVI.	Z z	ℨ 𝔷	Z z	zĕd 𝔞 𝔯
		𝔶 𝔮

The preceding letters, marks, or characters, in regard to their respective powers or sounds, are divided into vowels and consonants.

A vowel is a letter, that denotes a full and perfect sound of itself, without the least aid, or assistance of any other letter whatsoever.

As to the number of them, they are, in the opinion of the most accurate grammarians, only five; namely, a, e, i, o, and u.

The vowels i and u, indeed, sometimes are made use of as consonants, but then they change their form; as for instance, the i is converted into jod or y; as in the words just, jelly, juice; youth, years, yesterday, &c. and the u into vee; as in virtue, vice, vanity, &c.

Y, however, when it has the same sound or power as i; and w, when it is substituted in the room or stead of u; i. e. when any of them follow a vowel in any syllable or word, they may, with propriety enough, be termed assistant, or casual vowels; but, on the other hand, when they precede a vowel, though they never change their form, are actually consonants, and used as such.

As to the use of the preceeding vowels, they are intended to make either syllables or words; for neither the one nor the other can be formed without them.

Each distinct vowel frequently constitutes a syllable; as in the following words; a-muse-ment, e-vent, i-mage, o-live, and u-ni-ty, &c.

Moreover, the article A, the pronoun I, and the interjection O, are perfect words, as well as vowels; and the two last are always printed in capitals.

Before we proceed any farther, however, it will be highly requisite to take the various powers or sounds of each vowel into particular consideration.

It is to be observed, that all the vowels, in general, have not only two distinct sounds, namely, a long and short one, but some of them more; that sometimes they absolutely lose their sound; and their powers, at other times, are very imperfect and obscure; and sometimes again they borrow sounds of one another.

Of the powers or sounds of the vowel A.

To begin then regularly with the vowel a, which has four distinct sounds.

In all monosyllables, or words of one syllable, where a is the first and e the last vowel, the former is always long; as in hāte, fāte, māte, &c.

But when the syllable ends with a single consonant, the vowel a is always short; as in săd, măd, glăd, &c.

It is observable that the vowel a is the easiest to be pronounced; and is the first and the last sound that is uttered; the former is ā long, and the latter ā open; as in the interjection ah! which we shall take the liberty to illustrate by the following distich:

A, A, the infant in the cradle cries;
But when grown old, he sighs out āh! and dies.

A retains this open sound, when it precedes the consonants ft, lf, or lm; as in āft, hāft, shāft; cālf, hālf; psālm, hālm, &c. The sound of a is open likewise in words ending in awce; as dawce, prawce, advawce; which are sounded dahnce, prahnce, advahnce, &c. as also in the two following words, fa-ther, lawgh-ter, which are sounded or pronounced, fah-ther, laf ter, &c.

And lastly, a is broad, and sounds like the diphthong aw in monosyllables ending in ll; as in wāll, tāll, &c. or in ld or lt; as in scāld, bāld, mālt, sālt, &c.

A retains this broad sound when it casually occurs between the consonants w and r; or between w and t, as in the words war, water, which are pronounced wawr, wawter.

In the pronunciation of divers words, the sound of a is either totally lost, or at least very obscure; as in diamond, parliament, captain, chaplain, &c. which are pronounced di-mond, pārli-ment, cāp-tin, chāp-lin; and in measure, treasure, pleasure, which are sounded mezhur, trezhur, plezhur; and marriage, carriage, &c. which are sounded marridge, carridge.

In the improper diphthong aa, which frequently occurs in proper names, the sound of one of them is lost; as in Isaac, Balaam, Canaan, &c. which are pronounced Isac, Bālam, Cānan.

There are but very few words in the English language, that end in a, except the following monosyllables, flea, pea, sea, tea, &c. and then the sound of it is entirely lost; as it is likewise in all words where the vowels e or o precede it; as in heat, meat, which are sounded hēēt, mēēt; and throat, coat, boat, pronounced as ō long, viz. thrōte, cōte, bōte.

In most words, however, where the sound of a is final, the vowel y is added to it to make it a diphthong; as in the words dāy, plāy, wāy, &c. and then the a is always long.

In the proper names, however, where a is final, no y is added, and the a retains its sound; as in Phrygia, Pamphylia, Cappadocia, &c.

In the words wan, want, wanton, wallow, watch, swan, &c. it assumes the sound of ŏ, and is pronounced as such; namely, wŏn, wŏnt, &c.

There are divers other cursory remarks on the letter a, that might properly be here introduced; but for brevity's sake, I shall refer the reader to the Dictionary annexed.

Of the powers or sounds of the vowel E.

E, for the most part, has a short sound, when one or more consonants follow it in the same syllable; as in the words following, viz. hĕm, gĕm, hĕn, whĕn, flĕsh, frĕsh, &c. If, however, e be final, or joined with either of the vowels, a, i, or o, it is then long; as for instance in the following monosyllables, hē, shē, wē, me, mēre, hēre, bēast, lēast, feast; shield, yield, field; deceit, &c.

E, when final, loses its sound in the following words, cāke, lāke, awāke, forsāke, &c. and only serves to lengthen the sound of the preceding vowel. E final, however, in the following monosyllables, is short, and an exception to the general rule, viz. cŏme, sŏme, ŏne, dŏne, ŏnce, dunce, &c.

E loses its sound in many words, where the vowel a immediately follows it; as in the monosyllables hearth, heart, &c. which are pronounced härth, härt.

And lastly, the vowel e assumes the sound of ā long, in the word swear, which is pronounced swāre.

Of the powers or sounds of the vowel I.

The vowel i is always short, when l, m, n, or p, immediately follow it; as for instance; lĭll, wĭll, gĭll; imp, pĭmp, ink, wĭnk, lĭp, hĭp, &c.

I, however, has a long sound before such words as end in gh, ght, gn, ld, nd; as in sigh, nigh, sight, night, sign, resign, child, mild, mind, find, hind, &c.

I is altogether lost, when the vowel e immediately follows it; as in field, shield, &c. which are sounded fēēld, shēēld, &c. and if not perfectly lost, its sound is very obscure in the words evil, devil, civil.

In the words borrowed from the French, the vowel i assumes the sound of e, as in machine, magazine, which are sounded mashēēn, magazēēn. It assumes likewise the sound of u, in fir, stir, &c.

In the words venison, business, &c. the vowel i, if not altogether lost, is very obscure, and is sounded venzon, bizness.

N. B. As there are no words in the English language that end in i, the assistant vowel y is always made use of to supply its place, be the number of syllables more or less; as for instance, in monosyllables, as my, thy, fly, &c. in dissyllables, as in city, mercy, pity, &c. in trisyllables, as in glorify, justify, dignify, &c. and polysyllables, as in obstinately, remarkably, mathematically, &c.

Y is likewise made use of in the room or stead of i, both in the first syllable and the last of such words as are derived from the Greek; as in the words hypocrisy, sympathy, symphony, &c.

As also in the first, second, or last syllable of proper names; as in Phrygia, Pamphylia, Egypt, &c.

Y is once more made use of instead of i in such participles, whose verbs end in y; as in flying, from the verb fly, crying, from the verb cry; and sanctifying, from the verb sanctify, &c.

This y, however, when it begins a syllable, or word, and precedes a vowel, is always accounted a consonant.

Of the powers or sounds of the

The vowel o sounds long before ll, ld, lt, st, and rd; as in the following words, pōll, tōll, cōld, bōld, bōlt, cōlt, ghōst, hōst, ford, sword, &c. but short in all such monosyllables as end in a single consonant, as hŏt, lŏt, nŏt, pŏt, ŏf, ŏn, rŏd, &c.

The sound of o, though not absolutely lost, indeed, is very obscure, in the following words; bacon, capon, mutton, glutton, button, &c.

In several words it loses its own sound, and assumes that of the vowel u; as in once, which is pronounced wŭnce; son, done, sounded sŭn, dŭn; come and comfort, pronounced cŭm, and cŭmfort, conduit, sounded cŭndit, &c.

Note. The vowel o has seldom the privilege of concluding words; but the assistant vowel w is made use of to convert it into a diphthong; as in the monosyllables, blow, crow, flow, grow know, &c.

Of the powers or sounds of the vowel U.

The vowel u has always a long sound, before a single consonant, in words of more syllables than one; as in ū-nit, ū-nity, ū-nion, &c. but if the word be a monosyllable, and a single consonant immediately follows it; as in gŭn, sŭn, nŭn, jŭst, dŭst, crŭst, &c. then the power or sound of it is short.

When the vowel u immediately follows the consonant g, it not only loses its own sound, but contributes towards the hardening of the preceding letter; as for instance, in the words guilt, guest, guard, guardian, &c. which are pronounced gĭlt, gĕst, gärd, gärdian.

In some words, particularly the verb bury, with all its derivatives, the vowel u assumes the sound of the vowel e, and is pronounced berry.

As none of the preceding vowels, (the e only excepted) have the free liberty of concluding words; so very few words end with the vowel u. Thou and you are the only two English words; and the French terms beau, lieu, and adieu, which we have, as it were, adopted, are the only instances of this kind that can be produced; except, indeed, the word jet d' eau, a water spout, may be added to the number.

For the generality, therefore, in such words, where the sound of u is final, the vowel e is either added to it, as in the words blue, true, rue, &c. or else the improper diphthong ew is substituted in its room or stead; as in the words following viz. crew, blew, drew, &c. which are pronounced, cru, blu, dru.

Note. The assistant vowel w, is frequently made use of instead of the u, at the end of a syllable or word; as in pow-er, flow-er, tow-er, dow-er, &c. or in the words, flaw, flew, flow, &c. in which case, the w is then an assistant vowel, and forms a diphthong; and when added to the improper diphthong ie, it forms a triphthong, as in the word view.

Note likewise, That the letter w, when it precedes a vowel, or the letter h, is always accounted a consonant, as in the words wäll, wĕll, wĭll.

Of the diphthongs, or double vowels.

A diphthong, or double vowel, is the union, meeting, or coalition of two vowels into one and the same syllable. And these, for the generality, are divided into proper and improper.

The former are these that follow:	ai or ay	au or aw	ee	oi or oy	oo	ou or ow

As may be illustrated by the following words;

Ai, in frail, pair, fair; which are sounded only as ā long, viz. frāle, pāre, fare.

Ay, in day, play, way, pronounced likewise only as ā long, viz. dā, plā, wā.

Note. Ai is written in the beginning and middle of words; but ay always at the end; except in the word aye, when used by way of answer, instead of yes.

Au, as in author, autumn, august, &c.

Aw, as in awl, lawful, lawyer, &c.

Note. Au may begin a word, but never ends one; and for that reason aw is substituted in its stead, when final.

Ee, as in wēēd, sēēd, indēēd, &c. like e long.

Oi, as in oil, voice, rejoice, &c.

Oy, as in boy, joy, cloy, &c.

Note. Oi is for the most part used at the beginning of words, but oy at the end.

Oo, as in good, wood, stood, &c.

Sometimes, however, it changes its sound to o long, as in door, floor. sounded dōre, flōre; and sometimes to ŭ short, as in blood, flood, pronounced blŭd flŭd.

Ou, as in cloûd, shroûd, aloûd, &c.

But sometimes it is sounded as o long, as in soul, controul, &c.

Ow, as in blow, flow, crow, &c

Note. The above are called proper diphthongs; because both the vowels are sounded in them; but when a proper diphthong loses its natural sound, and changes to any other simple sound of some one single vowel, it becomes an improper diphthong.

The improper diphthongs are these that follow, viz. ae, ea eo, eu, ew, ei, ie, oa, ui, and œ; which are so called, because the sound of one of the two only is distinctly heard; and for the most part, it is the last that is lost; and these may be illustrated by the words following, viz.

Ae, as in Æneas, Ægypt, Ætna, Æther, Cæsar, &c. but as ae is no English diphthong, the words above are written for the most part with single ē: as Eneas, Egypt, Etna, Ether, and Cesar, and are always long.

Ea, as in pēace, cēase, increāse, &c. where the ea is sounded like ē long, or the diphthong ēē.

Eo, as in leopard, jeopardy, people, &c. pronounced lĕpard, jĕpardy, peeple.

Eu, as in eunuch, rheum, rheubarb, &c. sounded cūnuch, rūm, rūbarb,

Ew, as in dew, crew, knew, &c. pronounced dū, crū, knū.

Ei, as in receive, &c. sounded as ee. viz. receeve &c.

Ie, as in field, shield, &c. sounded feeld, sheeld, &c.

Oa, as in coat, boat, throat, &c. which are pronounced as o long, viz. cōt, hōt, thrōt.

Ui, as in guilt, built, quilt, &c. sounded as ĭ short, viz. gĭlt, bĭlt, quĭlt; and as ū long, in juice, fruit, &c.

Oe, as in Oedipus, sounded Edipus, and Oenone and œconomy, pronounced as e long, viz. Enone, economy. But in English words, as o long, as in toe, doe, foe, &c. pronounced, tō, dō, fō.

To these may be added ew, and ue; as in threw, drew, knew, pronounced as ū long, viz. thrū, drū, knū; and due, sue, spue, &c. sounded in the same manner, dū, sū, spū.

Of THRIPTHONGS.

When three vowels meet together in one and the same, it is called a thripthrong. Of these there are very few occur in the English tongue; however, we have the following, viz. queen, quaint, quail, eyes, and views; as for the words beau, sounded bō, as o long, as beaux, pronounced boze (from whence our word beauty is derived;) jet d' eau, sounded jet dō; lieu, and adieu, sounded as u long, lū and adū; are properly French terms, and only adopted.

Of CONSONANTS.

A consonant is a letter that can never be pronounced without the addition of a vowel before or after it; as b is sounded bēē; c, sēē; f, ef, and m, emm, &c.

The consonants, as they stand in order, are these that follow, in number twenty-one, namely, b, c, d, f, g, h, j, k, l, m, n, p, q, r, s, t, v, w, x, y, z.

In the pronunciation of these consonants, there is no great difficulty; because other nations agree with us, and sound them the same way.

There are several of the above consonants, however, which, though very different in their forms, bear a near affinity to each other, in regard to their respective powers or sounds. These, for instance, are as follow:

b and p. b and t. c, k, q, and x. f, v, and ph. g and j. h, l, m, n, and r. z and s.

And this method of teaching them to children, I conceive, to be the easiest and the best.

Printers have of late years made use of divers combined letters; as for instance, æ for ae, and œ for oe; fl, ff, fi, ffi, and ffl; as also of the following abbreviations, namely, & for and, and &c. for and so forth, or for the rest.

Note. The above consonants are divided into mutes, and semi or half-vowels; the former are b, c, d, g, j, p, q, t, v, and are thus named, because they cannot be pronounced without the addition of a vowel, as bee, see, dee, &c. The semi-vowels are f, l, m, n, r, s, x, z, which are so called, because they yield an imperfect sound of themselves, as some insist; to me however, this seems to be a mistake; since they cannot be pronounced at all, unless some vowel be prefixed; as for instance, ef, el, em, &c.

Four of these semi-vowels, viz, l, m, n, r, are for the generality termed liquids; because they flow very smoothly in a syllable after a mute; as in class, smell, gnat, brass; but they cannot be sounded before a mute if a vowel follows.

These consonants once more are distinguished into single and double. The former, as b, c, d, &c. have but one simple sound; w, x, and z, however, are complex consonants, and have manifestly the sound of two or more single ones in one; thus w is a compound of vv, x is compounded of ecs, and z is sounded as ds.

The following letters, though apparently two, are allowed to be but one single mark or character, viz. ch, gh, ph, sh, th, and wh.

We shall now proceed methodically to their respective powers or sounds.

Of the power or sound of the consonant B.

This consonant has one invariable sound; though in some few words, indeed, its sound is absolutely lost; as in the word bdellium, which is pronounced dellium. It is mute in words where t immediately follows; as in debts and debtors, which are sounded dets, dettors; it is silent likewise when it follows the letter m; as in climb, sounded clim; lamb, lambkin, pronounced lăm, lămkin. And thumb, plumb, dumb, sounded as ŭ short, viz. thŭm, plŭm, dŭm; and as ō long, in the word comb, which is sounded cōm.

The consonant b likewise is frequently made use of before the liquids l and r, as in the words black, blood, bloom, &c. and in bread, breast, bride, broad, brute. &c.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonant C and Ch.

The genuine and natural sound of this consonant is hard, like that of k; and is always pronounced as such, when it precedes the vowels a, o, and u; as in care, calf, cart; comb, cold, cock; curd, curl, curse, &c.

It is hard likewise when it precedes the liquids l or r, as in cloch, cloud, class, &c. or crack, crew, crust, &c.

When this letter c, however, precedes the vowels, e, i, or y; or is made use of before an apostrophe (') ; that is to say, where that mark is substituted in the room or stead of the vowel e, it is always sounded soft: as for instance, in the words ceremony, citron, cyder; and in plac'd, grac'd, defac'd, &c.

In the words Accloama, and Cis, or Kish, though the one precedes the vowel e, and the other an i, they are exceptions to the general rule; and are sounded hard like k.

When the letter c is written immediately after the letter s, it is, for the most part, entirely mute or lost; as in the words scene, scion, science, sceptre, &c. Sometimes, however, it is pronounced hard, like k, as in scarce, sceptic, scold, scurrilous, &c.

C loses its sound, whenever it precedes k, as in back, crack, pack, quack, &c.

This letter c might very well be omitted, could the etymology of words be equally well preserved without it.

Ch being (as we have hinted before) only one letter, though two marks or characters, is sounded like k, in most foreign words, as in chymist, chyle, choler, &c. as also in such proper names as occur in the sacred scriptures, as in Baruch, Malachi, Archesilaus, &c. When the syllable arch comes before a vowel, it is sounded hard, like ark; as in architect and archangel; but if a consonant immediately follows it, then it retains its original soft sound, or that of artch; as for instance, archdeacon, archbishop, &c.

Ch retains likewise its original soft sound in the words church, chin, child, charm, chair, &c. and in some proper names, as in cherubim, Rachael, Charles, &c.

In divers words immediately derived from the French, ch is sounded soft, like sh; as for instance, in chaise, champaign, chevalier, chagrin, chapuchin, machine, &c.

Ch is sometimes, though corruptly, sounded like qu; as in choir and chorister, which are vulgarly called quire and quirister; though the proper sound of them is that of k, and they ought to be pronounced koir and korister, as the word chorus, from whence they are derived, is sounded korus.

Of the power or sound of the consonant D.

D, like b, has but one invariable sound; as in the words diamond, dye, did, &c. and is frequently used before the liquid r; as in draw, dress, drink, drove, drub, &c. as also before the double consonant w, as in dwarf, dwell, dwindle, &c.

When the termination ed is abbreviated, and an apostrophe (') substituted in the room or stead of the e, it is converted into the letter t, to which, as we have before hinted, it bears a near affinity; as will appear in the following instance, though this mode of spelling is not now much in use;

Burned, burnt; blessed, blest; tossed, tost; crossed, crost.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonant F.

The letter F, as we have before observed, bears a near affinity to the letters ph and v; as evidently appears from the word phial, which is sounded vial; as also in the particle of, as, "George the third, king of (that is ov) Great Britain; and phlegm is pronounced flĕm.

Of the powers or sounds of the letters G and Gh.

The consonant g, is always sounded hard before the vowels a, o, and u; as in the words game, gale, garter; goose, goslin, gospel; gut, gun, guzzle; but when it precedes the vowels e, i, or y, it has, for the most part, a soft sound, like the consonant j; as in the words genuler, genitive, gentle; gin, ginger, giant; and in the word gipsy.

There are some exceptions, however, to this general rule, for it is pronounced hard in the words geese, get, gelding gild, gimp, gimlet, &c. It is hard likewise in such proper names as are derived from the Hebrew language; as Gethsemane, Geba, &c. and in some English proper names; as in Gilman, Gibson, Gilbert, &c.

It is always hard, likewise, when it precedes the letter h; as in the word ghost, &c.

G loses its sound when it precedes either the letters m or n, in the same syllable; as in phlegm, reign, &c. It loses its sound when it precedes n, at the beginning of a word; as in gnat, gnaw, gnash, which are sounded nat, naw, nash. Gh is lost in the middle and at the end of divers words; as in might, sight, night, flight, which are sounded mīte, sīte, nīte, flīte; as also in though, through, dough, which are pronounced thō, thrū, dō; and sigh, nigh, high, are sounded sī, nī, hī.

Gh at the end of some words is pronounced as ff; as in rough, tough, enough, which are sounded rŭff, tŭff, enŭff.

G is often used before the liquids l and r; as in glass, gleam, gloom, &c. Grass, grave, green, grind, &c.

Of the power or sound of the consonant H.

The letter h is a note of aspiration, which intimates that the vowel immediately following is to be pronounced with a peculiar strength; as in the words hat, help, hill, house, hunt, &c.

Note. It seldom begins any syllable, except the first; and for the most part is uttered with a full emission of the breath.

However, it loses its sound when the letters r immediately precedes it; as in rhenbarb, rheum, rhine, rhenish, rhetorician, &c. As also its sound is lost at the end of words; as in Jehovah, Messiah, Goliah, &c.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonant J.

This consonant has always an uniform sound, like the soft g, and is put before vowels only; as in Jack, jest, jilt, John, June, &c. This letter, like the preceding one of c, might very well be omitted, could the etymology of words be duly preserved without it; as in the words jocund, jovial, joy, ejaculation, &c.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonant K.

This letter k, when it precedes either the vowel e or i, has the sound of hard c, where, according to the analogy of the English, the e would be soft; as in the words cellar, cistern, &c. The k, however, has always a hard sound when it begins a word, and precedes a vowel; as in the words keys, keep, kept; kill, kind, kite, &c. but when k precedes the letter n, its sound is either lost, or at least very obscure; as in the words knot, knob, knowledge, &c. and totally lost when it follows c; as in the words back, crack lack, &c.

Note. The letter k is never used double in any word whatever; but in the middle of words c always precedes it; as in tickle, fickle, pickle, &c. in order to shorten the vowel before it.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonant L.

The letter l, has the same sound in English, as it has in other languages.

In monosyllables ending in l, another is for the most part added to it; as in all, full, call, &c. in order to give a kind of force to the preceding vowel; but in words of more syllables than one ending in l, such l is always single; as in carril, civil, evil, &c. Critical, whimsical, political, &c.

Sometimes the sound of this letter l is almost lost; as in the words calf, half, and their plurals, calves, halves; as also in could, would, should; talk, walk, chalk; psalm, calm, qualm, &c.

This l being a liquid, will follow almost any of the consonants; but will stand before none of them; as for instance blood, cloud, flood, gloom, plumb, slay, slew, sly, slow, slut, &c.

The sound of l is always distinctly heard where the l is final; as in excel, cancel, counsel, &c. but in words ending with le; as table, fable, cable, sable, &c. the sound of it is obscure or weak, and the final e almost mute.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonant M.

This letter m has an unvaried sound; as in man, men, mine, moan, moon, &c.

It suffers no other consonant but the n to follow it, in the beginning of a word or syllable; as for instance, amnesty, solemnity; and in the name of the Greek muse, called Mnemolyne.

If either the letter b or n, follows it at the end of a word: the sound of that b or n is always lost; as in thumb, plumb, autumn, solemn, &c.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonant N.

This n, like m, has always an uniform sound; as in name, neat, night, note, nut, &c.

In the beginning of words or syllables, it admits of the letters g, k, and s, sometimes before it; but no consonant whatever after it; as for instance, gnat, gnaw, gnomon; knave, knife, knot, knowledge, &c. and snake, snail, snow, snuff, &c.

When n follows m, and closes a word, it is always either mute, or very obscure; as in autumn, solemn, condemn, hymn, &c.

Of the powers and sounds of the consonant P and Ph.

The letter p (as we have hinted before) bears a near affinity with b, and has a uniform sound; as for example, pain, peal, pile, pool, pond, purse, &c. and the letters ph bear a near affinity to the letters f and v; as in Philip, sounded filip; Philosopher, pronounced filŏsŏfer; and phial, sounded vial.

When p precedes another consonant in the beginning of words, its sound is always either lost or very obscure; as in the words psalm, psalmist, psalter, Ptolomy, psuedo-prophet, phthisic, ptisan, psychology, &c.

When p immediately follows m in the middle of words, it is then perfectly quiescent; as in the words empty, contempt, attempt, exempt, &c.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonant Q or Qu.

Q is always followed by the vowel u, in all other languages as well as the English. By some it is accounted a superfluous letter, as being nothing more than eu.

In words of English extraction its sound is generally soft; as in quake, quell, quill, quote, &c. but in such words as are derived from the French, it bears the sound of k, or hard c; as in liquor, liquorish, conqueror, masquerade, &c.

Note. The letter q never ends a word, but the diphthong ue is added to it; as in the words antique, oblique, &c. which are sounded antīke or anteek, oblīke or obleek; and risque, which is pronounced rĭsk.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonant R and Rh.

This letter has the same harsh sound in English, as in other languages. The Saxons, at the beginning of words, used to put the letter h before it. In words derived from the Greek, the letter h immediately follows it both at the beginning and end of words; as for instance, rhetoric, rhinoceros, rhyme, rheum, rhapsody; and the word myrrh.

When words end in re, as in fire, wire, hire, desire; they are all sounded as ur short; as fiur, wiur, hiur, desiur.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonant S and Sh.

The letter s has a variable sound. Sometimes it has a hissing or soft sound; and at others a hard sound, like that of z. As for instance, it has the former at the beginning of words, as in steal, stale, stole, stool, &c. shame, shell, shine, shone, shun, &c. And the latter, in substantives of the plural number ending with s, as in trees, sees, bees, eyes, flies, pies, &c

And in the third person singular of verbs; as, he or she reads, bleeds, succeeds, &c. It has likewise a strong sound in the monosyllables this, yes, thus, us; his, ours, yours, &c. When words end in sion, and a vowel precedes the s, it is sounded hard like z, as in confusion, delusion, occasion, invasion, division, &c. But if a consonant precedes sion, it sounds like sh; as in diversion, immersion, conversion, &c. This distinction is regularly marked throughout the Dictionary.

It sounds like z likewise, where e final follows s; as in wise, rise, advise, &c. rose, prose, pause, applause, &c. and this variation is distinguished throughout the Dictionary. But its usual ending is in ss, as in grass, mass, class, pass, &c.

Once more, it has the sound of z when s occurs in the middle of words; as in desert, present, prison, wisdom, advertisement; another variation which is carefully marked. But if the s be doubled, it assumes the hissing sound; as in assume, assert, assign, &c.

In some words, however, where the single s occurs in the middle of them, the s is quiescent; as in viscount, island, isle, Lisle, Carlisle, and in demesne, &c. all which variations are regularly marked.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonant T and Th.

T has its proper sound in most words where it either begins or ends them; as in tame, ten, time, tone, tune; mat, met, sat, set, sit, sot; glut.

When the letter t, however, precedes the vowel i, and another immediately follows it, the syllable ti is always sounded like sh; as in vexation, inclination, contemplation, meditation, &c. and this variation is carefully distinguished throughout the Dictionary.

But when a consonant precedes the t, it retains its own natural sound; as in fast, feast, fist, frost, first, &c.

Th has nearly the hard sound of d in the words following, viz. then, thence, there, thus, thy, thine, thee, them, those, &c. As also, in all words where the th occurs between two vowels; as in whether, whither, weather, gather, rather, &c.

It has a hard sound likewise when it either begins or ends a word; as in thought, thirst, third, thunder; death, breath, width, worth, &c. but when e final follows th, it softens the sound of it; as from the substantive breath, the verb to breathe, from cloth, to clothe; from wreath, to wreathe, &c.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonant V.

This consonant (as we have observed before) bears a very near affinity to the letters f and ph.

This consonant v is placed before no other consonant, but before all the vowels in general; as in the words vale, vest, vice, voice, volume, vulture, &c.

Note. Both its shape and sound are as distant from the vowel u, as any two other letters in the alphabet.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonants W, and Wh.

Though the letter w, or double u, where it is used instead of the vowel u, is undoubtedly a vowel itself; yet it is at times indisputably a consonant; and for this reason, because it will precede any of the vowels without the least hesitation or difficulty in the utterance or expression of it; as in war, wind, world, worst, &c.

When the vowel o immediately follows the letters wh, the sound of the w is altogether mute or quiescent; as in the following words, whore, whorish, whoredom, whose, and wholesome.

It is lost likewise when the liquid r immediately follows it; as in wrath, wretch, wrist, wrong, &c.

In most English words, however, wh has a peculiar sound, as if the h was placed before it; as in the words where, when, whence, whale, white, whist, whilst, &c.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonant X.

This letter x begins no word in the English tongue, and but very few in any other language.

It begins, however, some proper names; as Xenophon, Xanthus, Xantippe, &c.

In English words, some one of the vowels always precedes it; as in ax or axe, axle, excellent, example, ox oxen, &c.

As also in several English proper names, as in Axbridge, in Somersetshire; Axminster, in Devonshire, and Exeter its capital; Oxford, in the county so called, &c.

Note. This letter x is a double consonant, and contains in it the sound of cs, or ks.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonant Y.

Though this letter, when it follows a consonant, is doubtless a vowel; as in the words twenty, thirty, forty, &c. yet, when it precedes a vowel or diphthong, it is converted into a consonant, notwithstanding it never changes it form.

It may be observed of this consonant y, as it was above of the consonant w, that it precedes most of the vowels without the least hesitation or difficulty in the utterance or expression of it; as in the following words, yard, yorn, year, yeoman, you, youth, youthful, &c.

Of the powers or sounds of the consonant Z.

This z is a double consonant (as we have hinted before) and contains in it the sound of ds, or rather s hard.

It begins very few words, except what are derived from foreign languages; as Zany, zest, zeal, zealous, zone, zodiac, and zenith.

The sound of it, in short, is expressed in its name, izzard; or s hard; and this letter is never placed before a consonant.

Note. The preceding cursory remarks on the English Alphabet are peculiarly calculated for the aid and assistance of young, unlettered students; but such as are more advanced in years, may be farther instructed and improved by a diligent inspection of the succeeding DICTIONARY.

PART II.

OF SPELLING,

OR THE DIVISION OF SYLLABLES.

THE art of spelling consists in writing correctly, or naming the several letters whereof any syllable or word is, according to the established custom, properly composed.

A syllable is an articulate sound, which is formed of any one vowel, or more letters included in the English alphabet. As for instance; a-mi ty, e-ve-ry, i-vo-ry, o-live, u-nit.

Sometimes a syllable is composed of two vowels united, or a diphthong; as in Æ-neas, œ conomy, Oedipus, &c. It must be remembered, however, that these are Latin and Greek syllables or diphthongs, and are expressed in English (as we have before hinted) by the vowel (e) only; as Eneas, economy, Epidus.

Sometimes, again, it consists of one vowel, or double vowel, and one consonant; as in am, or an; aid or paid; sometimes of a diphthong alone, as au-thor, au-tumn, &c. Or sometimes of one vowel, and two or more consonants; as in act, egg, ink, old, acts, eggs, &c.

Note. No number of consonants can be pronounced articulately, without the aid or assistance of one or more of the vowels.

A word, for the generality, is composed of as many syllables as there are either vowels, or double vowels found in it.

No syllable can consist of more letters than eight; and there are very few that will admit of that number.

Note. All words, which express the name, action, quality, or mode of any thing, are nothing more than an assemblage of letters and syllables.

Some words, therefore, if they consist of one syllable only, are termed monosyllable; as in just, good, great, &c. If of two syllables, as in justice, goodness, greatness, &c. they are called dissyllables; if of three, as in a-mi-ty, en-mi-ty, en-vi-ous, &c. they are termed trisyllables; and all such words as consist of four or more syllables, are distinguished by the name of polysyllables.

Note. Moreover, as no monosyllable will admit of more letters than eight; so no English words will admit of more syllables than eight.

Once more observe, that all words are either simple or compound; as, pious, im-pious; holy, un-holy; active, in-active, &c. All the rules for the division of each, must be such as are derived either from the analogy of all languages in general, or from the established custom of pronouncing any one language in particular.

The general rules, therefore, for spelling English words correctly, are these that follow; and as there is no general rule without some exceptions, more or less; such exceptions are best attained by an habitual use or practice.

The first then that occurs is this; namely, when a consonant comes between two vowels, it must be joined, for the most part, with the last; as for instance, in a-bun-dance, e-quity, i-ma-gine, o-pu-lent, u-ni-ty, &c.

If, however, the letter x happens to fall between two vowels, it is then an exception, and must be joined to the first; as in the words ex-ample, ex-amine, ex-ecute, ex-istence ox-en, vix-en, box es, &c.

Such consonants as precede either the liquids l or r, when the vowel e immediately follows, can never be divided; as in a ble, ta-ble, fa-ble, tri-fle, mi-tre, ni tre, &c.

This rule, however, seems to be included in that of initial consonants, because bl, fl, and tr, can begin words; but if two consonants come together which cannot begin words, then they must be divided; and one must be joined to the first vowel, and the other to the latter; as for instance, in in-justice, im-piety, infi-nity, tem ple, ten-der, &c.

All double consonants must be divided; as in plat-ter, mat-ter, let-ter, fet-ter, glit ter, bit-ter, cot-ton, rot-ten, flut-ter, mut-ter, &c.

Nor must two consonants be parted, as can begin words in spelling; and of these there are no less than thirty-four in number; as will more plainly appear by the catalogue, or table of them, as is particularly specified in the following, namely,

Bl.	as in	Black, bleed, blind, blot, blue, &c.
Br.		Bread, breast, brick, brook, brush, &c.
Ch.		Chance, cheek, child, choice, church, &c.
Cl.		Claw, clerk, cliff, clock, club, &c.
Cr.		Crape, cream, crime, crow, crust, &c.
Dr.		Drake, dread, drink, drop, drunk, &c.
Dw.		Dwarf, dwelling, dwindle, &c.
Fl.		Flame, flea, flight, floor, flute, &c.
Fr.		Frail, fresh, friend, frost, fruit, &c.
Gh.		Ghost, Ghittern, &c.
Gl.		Glass, glebe, glimpse, gloss, glue, &c.
Gn.		Gnat, gnaw, gnomon, &c.
Gr.		Grass, green, grist, gross, grudge, &c.
Kn.		Knake, knee, knife, knob, knurl, &c.
Ph.		Phases, pheasant, phial, phœnix, &c.
Pl.		Place, pleasure, plight, plot, plumb, &c.
Pr.		Praise, press, priest, proof, prude, &c.
Ps.		Psalm, psalter, pseudo, psora, &c.
Pt.		Ptarmics, ptoron, ptisan, Ptolemaic, &c.
Rh.		Rhapsody, rheum, rhime, rhinoceros, rhumb, &c.
Sc.		Scar, scene, sceptre, science, scoff, scorn, scum, &c.
Sh.		Shaft, sheaf, shirt, share, shutter, shy, &c.
Sk.		Skate, sketch, skiff, skue, sky, &c.
Sl.		Slave, sleep, sling, sloe, slut, &c.
Sm.		Smack, smelt, smile, smoke, smut, &c,
Sn.		Snake, sneer, snipe, snow, snuff. &c.
Sp.		Spade, spear, spire, spoon, spunge, &c.
Sq.		Squall, squeak, squib, squint, squire, &c.
St.		Staff, star, steed, stick, stork, stump, style, &c.
Sw.		Swan, sweat, swine, sword, &c.
Th.		Thank, theft, thief, thought, thus, &c.
Tr.		Trance, trench, tripe, trope, troop, &c.
Tw.		Twang, tweag, twig, twist, two, &c.
Wh.		What, where, when, whist, whose, &c.

To these add the following words, which begin with three consonants; as for instance,

Chr.	as in	Chrism, chrisoms, Christ, Christian, Christmas, chromatic, chronic, chrisalis, chrystal, &c.
Phr.		Phrase, phrensy, phrenitic, Phocion, and Phrygia, &c.
Sch.		Schedule, scheme, schism, school, scholar, &c.
Scr.		Scrag, scraps, screen, scribe, scroll, scrub, &c.
Shr.		Shrew, shrewe, shrine, shroud, shrub, &c.
Skr.		Skream, skrew, &c.
Sph.		Sphere, spherics, sphinctor, sphinx, &c.
Spl.		Splay, spleen, splice, split, splinter, &c.
Spr.		Sprain, sprat, spread, spring, sprout, spruce, &c.
Str.		Straw, stream, strike, stroke, struggle, &c.
Thr.		Thrall, thread, thrice, through, throne, thrush, &c.
Thw.		Thwack, thwart, &c.—And the two following
and		words, beginning with four consonants, viz.
Phth.		Phthisic, and Phthisical.

Note. Any single consonant in the alphabet may end a word (the q and v only excepted) the former of which assumes to it the diphthong ue silent to close it; as in antique, oblique, &c. and the latter assumes e silent, as in glove, love, dove, &c.

Note. Some words end with two consonants, others with three, and some with four. As for instance,

Words ending with two consonants; as in
Plumb, dumb, thumb, block, flock, lock, &c.
Words ending with three consonants; as in
Wench, tench, wrench, wright, night, fight, &c.
And words ending with four consonants; as in Eighth, weights, streights, length, strength, &c.

Note. As the monosyllables, which are numerous, are the springs (if I may be allowed the expression) or roots of the English language; the art of spelling correctly principally consists in the knowledge of their several powers or sounds.

ADDITIONAL RULES

To be observed in the DIVISION of SYLLABLES.

I. All grammatical endings, commonly called terminations, must be separated in spelling; as for instance, in the following verbs.

To charm—charm-eth, edst, ed, ing; and in the substantive —charm-er; and in the adverb—charm-ing-ly.

To abound—abound-eth, est, ed, ing; and in the adjective—abund-ant; in the substantive—abund-ance; and the adverb —abund-antly, &c.

II. When two vowels come together, and both of them are distinctly sounded; that is, when they are not diphthongs, they must be separated in the spelling of them; as for instance, in the words co-equal, co-eternal, co-essential, creator, usu-al, mu-tual, &c.

As also in proper names, namely, No-ah, Si-na-i, Si-lo-e, &c.

And lastly, all compound words must, in spelling, be resolved into their simple, or component words; as in unto, up-on, not-with-stand-ing, never-the-less, &c.

Note. In some polysyllables or words of several syllables the sound of shial, is expressed sometimes by (tial) as in the words es-sen-tial, nup-tial, par-tial, mar-tial, &c. and at others by (cial) as in com-mer-cial, pre-ju-di-cial, ar-ti-fi-cial, &c.

Such polysyllables likewise as end in (tian) or (cian) have the sound of (shian) as in Egyp-tian, Gre-cian, &c.

Some polysyllables, again, ending in (tiate) or (ciate) have the sound of (shiate) as in-gra-tiate, de-pre-ciate, &c.

Some polysyllables, moreover, ending in (scient) (cient) or (tient) assume the sound of (shient) as in om-ni-scient, proficient, pa-tient, &c.

And to conclude, many words, ending in (tion) (sion) are sounded as (shŏn) as in vex-a-tion, con-ver-sion, con-fu-sion, &c. All these distinctions, however, are marked as they occur in the DICTIONARY.

PART III.

OF WORDS.

FROM mere articulate sounds, that is, from the various manner of writing or pronouncing letters and syllables, which were the subject matter of the two preceding parts; we shall now, according to our plan at first laid down, proceed to an account of words.

And in order to denote the diversity of our sentiments; or, in other terms, to convey our ideas to one another either in writing or speaking, divers kinds of words must unavoidably be used to answer that important end; and these, by most grammarians, are called the eight parts of speech as follows, namely,

Noun,	Adverb,
Pronoun,	Conjunction,
Verb,	Preposition,
Participle,	Interjection.

These eight parts, however, for brevity's sake, may with propriety enough be reduced, as they are distinguished throughout the Dictionary hereto adjoined to these four only; namely, nouns substantive, nouns adjective, verbs, and particles; for all pronouns, or, as they are termed by some, adnouns, are nothing more than certain commodious names, or words, which are substituted in the room either of substantives or adjectives, in order to prevent a disagreeable repetition of the foregoing names or nouns; and all participles are no more than what may, with propriety, be termed verbal adjectives; and forasmuch as the four last mentioned parts are too inconsiderable, in my humble opinion, to deserve such a distinct separation or division, they may all very naturally and properly be included under the general term of particles.

Before we enter, however, upon this our new division, thus purposely abbreviated; it will, we imagine, be highly necessary to make some few previous remarks on those little words, which we chuse to call articles, rather than particles, (though both may be proper) which, in our mother tongue, are certain kinds of limitations prefixed to our nouns or names; and these are no more than two in number; namely, a, or an, and the.

An, indeed, is the original Saxon article, has an indefinite, or unlimited sense, and is in reality, as much an adjective as the pronoun one, with regard to more; and so indeed is a; as for instance, a scholar, an artist; that is to say, some one scholar, some one artist in general.

Note. A or an is only used in the singular number, but the in both.

Note. The article a is always used, when a consonant, or an aspirate h, immediately follows; as, a king, a queen; a hound, a horse, a hare, &c. But an is always substituted in the room or stead of a, when a vowel follows it, or an h that is not aspirated; as in the words an emmet, an elephant, an ox, an ass; an herb, an hour, an heir, &c.

Note likewise, where a and an are used in the singular number, there is no article at all made use of in the plural; as "These are well-built houses: Those are sweet-scented herbs," &c.

The article (the) however, is frequently made use of both in the singular and plural; as, the hour, the hours, the day, the days, the month, the months, &c.

Sometimes, indeed, it is not used. And first, it is never prefixed to proper names; as John, William, Thomas, &c: nor, in the second place, to virtues, or vices; as love, honour, honesty, injustice, anger, hatred, &c. nor, in the third, to metals or minerals; as tin, copper, brass, silver, gold, &c. nor is it, in the last place, used before such words wherein the mere existence of any thing is only implied; as for instance, "This is not water, but wine; That is not ale, but small beer," &c.

After these cursory hints, it will be incumbent on us to distinguish words into their respective kinds, or classes; and afterwards take the accidents of each into our consideration, which in every language is the essential part of grammar.

Words, then, are properly referred to four kinds, or classes, namely. 1. Noun substantives. 2. Noun adjectives. 3. Verbs, or affirmations, and lastly, particles.

Of these we shall treat in their proper order. And first,

Of nouns substantive and adjective.

A substantive is the name of the thing itself; as, a king, a queen, a horse, a dog: a chair, a table, a looking-glass, &c.

An adjective is a word which expresses the particular qualities, or properties, of the thing first mentioned; as great, small, black, white, fair, brown, fat, lean, wise, foolish, &c.

In order, therefore, to discover which are substantives and which are adjectives; I must consider whether the thing mentioned be plain and intelligible of itself; or whether it wants some additional word to make it so: Thus if I say, "I saw yesterday the king, the queen, the lord-mayor; an ox, a stag, a horse," &c. the sense is complete, and I am clearly understood; but if I say, "I visited an amiable, a prudent, a beautiful, a deformed," &c. my meaning is dark and unintelligible; so that some substantive must be put to it, such as man, woman, boy, girl, &c. without which it will never be sense, or rightly understood.

Substantives are distinguished into proper and common. The former belongs to some individual, or particular person, or thing; as Thomas, William, Mary, Susan, &c. the Thames, the Humber, the Severn, &c. London, Oxford, Cambridge, &c. The latter belongs to all of the particular, species; as man, woman, horse, hound, river, city, mountain, province, kingdom, &c.

As proper names of men, women, or children, denote persons; so those which we make use of to denote the threefold distinctions of persons are in a peculiar manner expressed, and called (as we have before hinted) either pronouns or adnouns; and these are different, according as the persons of whom we speak are one only, or more than one; or in other terms, of the singular or plural number.

If I speak of myself only, then the pronoun is I; if I speak of others as well as myself, the pronoun is we.

In case I speak directly to any one person, that is called the second person; and the pronoun in that case, is thou; but if I speak immediately to more persons than one, the pronoun is ye; if however, I speak of a person or thing, that is termed the third person, and the pronoun, if it be of one male, it is he; if of one female, it is she; if the thing spoken of be neither male nor female, but a thing inanimate, i. e. of the neuter gender, then we use the word it. In the plural number, indeed, if we speak of persons or things, we use the word they, be the gender what it will.

Of the manner of making singulars plurals.

For the generality, singulars are made plurals by adding only an s, as hand, hands; cock, cocks; bird, birds; noun, nouns; verb, verbs, &c.

When the singular, however, ends in ce, se, ze, x, ss, ch, sh, or ge, when sounded soft like je, we must add either s or es, and make an additional syllable; as in place, or places; horse, horses; maze, mazes; box, boxes; fox, foxes; lass, lasses; glass, glasses; church, churches; watch, watches; wish, wishes; bush, bushes; page, pages; age, ages, &c.

And nouns, ending in y make (ies) in the plural, as in body, bodies; glory, glories; ruby, rubies, &c.

Frequently the plural is formed by the termination (en,) as in man, men; woman, women; chick, chicken; brother, brethren, &c.

Those names, again, which end their singulars in either f, or fe, form their plural by (ves,) as half, halves; thief, thieves; calf, calves; loaf, loaves; wife, wives; knife, knives, &c.

In the English tongue, however, the manner of forming the plural is very irregular: for there are many words which can be reduced to no rule at all; as will manifestly appear from the following catalogue or table.

Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
Die	Dice	Brother	Brethren
Child	Children	Louse	Lice
Ox	Oxen	Goose	Geese
Mouse	Mice	Penny	Pence, &c.

In many words there is no difference in regard to number; as in sheep, deer, fern, hose, swine, &c.

Some words again admit of no singular number; as for instance,

Snuffers	Tongs
Scissars	Lungs
Breeches	Bellows
Wages	Ashes, &c.

Others, on the other hand, admit of no plural number; as for instance, the names of Virtues, as justice, prudence, goodness, &c.

Vices, as envy, malice, revenge, &c.
Corn, as wheat, oats, barley, &c.
Herbs, as thyme, rue, rosemary, &c.
Countries, as England, Scotland, France, &c.
Cities, as London York, Bristol, &c.
Towns, as Lewes, Steyning, Arundel, &c.
Rivers, as Thames, Trent, Humber, &c.

In the English Tongue, moreover, the distinction of genders is shewn by different words: as in

Mascul.	Fem.	Mascul.	Fem.
Boy	Girl	King	Queen
Man	Woman	Brother	Sister
Boar	Sow	Lad	Lass
Stag	Hind	Buck	Doe
Nephew	Niece	Bull	Cow
Lord	Lady	Cock	Hen
Wizard	Witch	Uncle	Aunt
Master	Mistress	Father	Mother
Ram	Ewe

Some masculine nouns, however, make the feminine by the addition of (ess) as in the words hereunder mentioned, viz.

Mascul.	Fem.	Mascul.	Fem.
Actor	Actress	Poet	Poetess
Doctor	Doctress	Heir	Heiress
Governor	Governess	Duke	Duchess, &c.

And some in (ix) as executor, executrix, administrator, administratrix, &c.

Most nouns have six cases, viz.

The Nominative	Accusative
Genitive	Vocative
Dative	Ablative.

The nominative case is that in which we barely mention the thing, whether animate or inanimate; and is known by the particle, or article, the, or a; as, the king, or a king; the queen, or a queen; a, or the horse; an ox, or the ox; the house, the stable, the yard, &c.

The genitive case denotes possession or property, and is distinguished by the particle of, or by an apostrophe, (') as for instance, "The integrity of Job, or Job's integrity. The proclamation of the king, or, the king's proclamation."

The dative case denotes the gift of something, or something done to a person or thing; and is known by the particle (to), as for instance; "To pay the tribute of adoration to the Almighty. To pay taxes to the public collectors. To turn rebels to the government, &c."

The accusative case immediately follows the verb, and is the subject of its affirmation; as, "I worship no God, but one; I read no book, but the Bible; Yesterday, I wrote a letter to my father. This day, the king made a most gracious speech to both houses of parliament," &c.

The vocative case is that which calls upon a person or thing, and is known by the exclamatory particle (O). As, "I appeal to you, O citizens, whether what I have said, be true or false! O times! O manners! O Lord God! O most merciful Father!" &c.

The ablative case is known by the following prepositions, viz. in, with, through, for, from, by, or than, &c.

All which cases are hereunder expressed in both numbers:

Singular.	Plural.
A or the King,	The Kings, of the King,	of the Kings,
to the King,	to the Kings,
the King,	the Kings,
O King,	O Kings,
From, by, or with the King,	From, by, or with the Kings,

The pronouns or adnouns, assume a different form in all the cases after the nominative, both singular and plural; as is evident, and clearly demonstrated by the scheme below, viz.

	Nom.	I	Thou	He	She
	Gen.	of me	of thee	of him	of her
	Dat.	to me	to thee	to him	to her
Sing.	Acc.	me	thee	him	her
	Voc.	O me	thou
	Abl.	from or by me	from or by thee	from or by him	from or by her
	Nom.	We	Ye	They
	Gen.	of us	of you	of them
	Dat.	to us	to you	to them
Plur.	Acc.	us	you	them
	Voc.		O ye
	Abl.	from or by us	from or by you	from or by them.

The pronoun adjective, which denotes our property or possession, are in each person in the nominative case before the noun, my, thy, his, in the singular number, and in the plural, our, your, their; as for instance, "my horse, thy horse," &c. But my and thy are changed into mine and thine, when they come after the noun; and add s to the plurals, above mentioned; as, "That horse of mine, that mare of thine," &c. "These tenements of ours; those farms of yours," &c.

The interrogatives who, for a person, and what, for a thing, make whom, after the verb; and in every case but the nominative and the genitive plural, whose.

The indicative pronouns, this and that, in the singular, make these and those in the plural; the first whereof has reference to something near, or present; and the other, to such things as are either at some considerable distance, though in sight, or actually absent.

In nouns adjective, or names of quality, there are three degrees of comparison, namely, the simple, or positive degrees; as, sweet, sharp; swift, slow; soft, hard; black, white, &c. In this degree the quality is mentioned, but nothing more. The comparative degree is formed by adding the termination (er) to the positive; as, sweeter, sharper; swifter, slower, softer, harder; blacker, whiter, &c. the third, or last degree of comparison, is termed the superlative; where we express the highest degree imaginable; and this is done by the termination (est) as sweetest, sharpest; swiftest, slowest; softest, hardest; blackest, whitest, &c.

In the comparison of adjectives, however, there is great irregularity; and the different degrees are sometimes expressed by so many different words, as, bad, worse, worst; good, better, best; little, less, least.

We frequently, again, make comparisons by using the terms more, and most; as more glorious, most glorious; more magnificent, most magnificent, &c.

Note. These words more and most are generally used where the adjective is a polysyllable, or a word of three or more syllables; but in monosyllables, or dissyllables, the terminations er and est, as above specified, are principally used.

There is one thing more to be observed in regard to adjectives, and that is, that many of them are converted into substantives; as for instance, we say a general, for a general commander; a particular, for a particular article.

Sometimes, again, adjectives are used adverbially; as exceeding great, mighty strong, prodigious high, &c.

Of verbs, or words; otherwise termed affirmations.

A verb or word, which (if we may be indulged the expression) is the soul, or most essential part of a sentence, is a part of speech that is conjugated with mood and tense, and betokens either doing, suffering, or being.

Of these verbs or affirmations there are eight different sorts, which are distinguished as hereunder written, viz.

Active	Auxillary
Passive	Regular
Neuter	Irregular, and
Substantive	Impersonal.

1. An active verb is that which expresses an action that passes on another subject or object; as for instance, "I adore the Almighty; I honour the king; I abhor a hypocrite." &c.

2. A passive verb is that which expresseth hearing, or suffering; as, "I am honoured, beloved, feared, hated," &c.

3. A neuter verb is such a word as expresses an action which has no particular object whereon to fall; as, "I sleep, I dream, I stand still, I run, &c.

4. A substantive verb, is such a word as expresses the being or substance which the mind forms to itself, or supposes to be in the object, whether it actually be or not; as I am, thou art, he is, &c.

5. An auxiliary verb is such a one that serves in the conjugation of both active and passive verbs, as am, was, have, had, &c.

6. A regular verb is such a one as is conjugated after some one particular manner or rule.

7. An irregular verb is such a one as has something singular in its termination, or the formation of its tenses. And,

8. An impersonal verb is such a one as has only the third person; as, it rains, it snows, it freezes, it thaws, it thunders, it lightens, &c.

Note. Were all verbs regular, and formed their positive participle by (ed) there would be very little trouble or difficulty to the learners, in acquiring a tolerable idea soon of the English grammar; but there is scarce any language that is more irregular than ours, in forming the passive participles; and this renders the acquisition of them very troublesome to foreigners.

As verbs are thus distinguished, the accidents to them are the four following, namely; person, number, mood, and tense.

By the first, we mean only those particular terminations, whereby the person, either acting or suffering, in each number is denoted; as, I sing, thou singest, he or she singeth, &c.

As to the second, (namely number,) that, in all verbs, follows in course; for the agent or patient must be one or more: the plural, however, in the English language, is expressed entirely by those personal adnouns, we, ye, and they.

As to the third, that is to say, the moods; or in other terms, the modes, or manner of speaking, are four only; namely, the indicative, the imperative, the subjunctive, and the infinitive.

The first indicates the action only, and nothing more, without any regard to the modes, or manner in which it is done; as, "I pipe, you dance, or thou dancest; he or she sings, they talk, laugh, or sing," &c.

The second, or the imperative, intreats, exhorts, or commands. As "Fear God; honour the king; love your neighbours as yourselves," &c.

The subjunctive mood is that, wherein the verb either depends on, or is subjoined to, some other verb in the sentence. As, "You will meet with applause, if you follow a virtuous course of life; If you will be intemperate, and indulge your appetites without control, you will severely repent the consequences, sooner or later."

The infinitive mood is that in which the action of the verb is expressed in an indefinite or unlimited manner; as to pipe, to dance, to play, &c.

Some, indeed, add to these the optative and potential moods. The latter is known by the particles may, might, can, could, would, should, &c. As, "I may write, if I will; you might improve, if you would; he can sing, if he pleases." &c.

As to the optative mood; it is the same as the subjunctive, or potential, with the addition only of the exclamatory particle O! whereby we testify our inclination, wish, or desire to do any thing. As, "O! that I may, might, or could, be master of the English, Latin, or French languages." &c.

It is manifest, however, that all the English words are expressed by little auxiliary or subservient particles, and not by any different terminations of the principal verb itself as is usually done in most other languages.

As to the tenses of verbs, we mean by that grammatical term, the several times wherein their respective actions are performed; and of these there are, properly speaking, three only; that is to say, the present, the past, and the future, or time to come. As, for instance, "I love, I hate;" or, "I do love, I do hate; I loved, or hated; or, did love or hate;" and, "I shall or will love, or hate."

The preter-tense, however, or the time past, is, for the generality, subdivided in three; namely, the preter-imperfect, which denotes the time past, but not actually finished; as "I was writing a letter to my father, but was hindered in completing it; the preter-perfect, which denotes the time absolutely past; "I sent a messenger to my sister three hours ago;" and the preter-pluperfect, which denotes the time past, before the time of some other past action; as, "I had heard that the king of Prussia had gained an entire conquest over the Austrians, some time before the publication of it in the gazette."

From whence it is manifest, as we hinted before, that the tenses, or times, are not formed in the English language by different terminations of the verb itself, as it is in most others, but by the aid and assistance of the auxiliary verbs do, did; have had; shall and will.

Of the method made use of to know whether a word be a verb or not.

Suppose the words to be sit, stand, walk, &c. place some personal pronoun before them, and they will be good sense, if they are in reality verbs; as, "I sit, you stand, or thou standest; they walk;" but otherwise nonsense.

To distinguish a verb active from another verb, place the particles do, or did, before it; and if it be sense, it will be an active verb; as, "I do walk, I did work, I do make," &c.

To distinguish a verb passive from another verb, place the particles am, art, or are, before the participle ending in (ed,) and in case it be good sense, it will be a passive verb; as, laved, hated, hurried, tired; "I am loved; thou art hated; he is hurried; we, ye, or they, are tired."

When it is in the subjunctive mood, the auxiliary word, he, must be used; as, "If I be weary, I cannot sleep; if I be hurried, I cannot write," &c.

Of PARTICIPLES.

A participle is an adjective formed of a verb; and has that denomination, from its taking part of a noun, as gender, case, and declension; and part of a verb, as tense, or time, and signification; and part of both, as number and figure.

Of PARTICLES.

These are generally distinguished by the four last parts of speech, called adverb, conjunction, preposition, and interjection.

As these, however, are too inconsiderable, in my opinion, to be made distinct parts of speech, I shall include them all under the general denomination of particles; and shall dismiss this head with the few following cursory remarks on each.

As to adverbs, they are a kind of words which are joined in a sentence to the noun, or verb, in order to shew the particular circumstance of their respective significations.

Of these there are four kinds. And

1. All such as express the manner or quality. And these are formed of adjectives, by the addition only of the particle (ly,) as for instance, from prudent comes prudently; from slow comes slowly; and from quick comes quickly. And that these are nothing more than a species of nouns adjective, is plainly manifest, not only from their sense or signification, but from their admission likewise of degrees of comparison; as, prudently, more prudently, most prudently; slowly, more slowly, or slowlier, most slowly or slowliest: and quickly, quicklier, or more quick, quickliest, or most quick.

2. The second sort are those of time; as for example,

now	seldom
presently	daily
yesterday	never
lately	always, &c.

3. The next sort are those of place; as for instance,

here	hither
there	thither
within	hence
without	thence
upwards	above
downwards	below, &c.

The fourth and last sort are those of number or order; as once,		first,

twice,		secondly,
thrice,		thirdly,
finally,	and	lastly, &c.

Of those particles which grammarians, for the generality, term conjunctions.

Of these there are various sorts. As for instance,

1. Copulatives,	4. Illatives,
2. Disjunctives,	5. Conditionals,
3. Concessives,	6. Expletives, &c.

Of the first sort,	are	and, with, for, by, &c.
Of the second,		or, either, nor, neither, &c.
Of the third,		yet, tho', altho', albeit, &c.
Of the fourth,		seeing, since, therefore, wherefore,
Of the fifth,		if, provided, always, nevertheless,
Of the sixth,		yes, indeed, forsooth, &c.

Of those particles which grammarians, for the most part, term prepositions; or, in other words, such particles as are prefixed to nouns in order to point out the case, state, or relation, wherein they are respectively used.

Of these likewise there are various sorts; as for example; the two articles a or an, and the. To these add of	by	about	at	till or until to	from	after	between

in	than	against	beyond	toward or within	&c.
with	above	among or amongst	on or upon	towards without

Of those particles which grammarians usually term interjections, which are but few in number, and make the smallest part of the English language, or indeed, of any other language whatsoever.

Of these last there are two sorts, viz.

Solitary and Passive	Social and Active.

The former are so distinguished from their being used when we are alone, and the result of pain, sorrow, or any other token of surprise or admiration; and sometimes are marks of our displeasure and resentment; and these are,

Heigh! hem! ah! alas! oh! pish! fie! pho! &c.

The latter are these,

Ho! holo! hush! hist! hark! and ha, ha, he! to express laughter, or a superior degree of pleasure.

To conclude. Notwithstanding these particles are called little words, and used for the several purposes above particularly expressed, and notwithstanding we have mentioned them as too inconsiderable to be termed distinct parts of speech, yet it must be acknowledged, at the same time, that they are words of the last importance, and that the beauty and elegance of a discourse, in a great measure, depend upon a judicious use of them; for notwithstanding it is no difficult task merely to point out a thing or action, yet to give a particular description of it, and to set it in the fairest and most advantageous point of light, requires more art and judgment in the use of the above particles, than most people would, without mature reflection, ever imagine.

PART IV.

OF SENTENCES.

A SENTENCE is either simple or compound.

The former (according to the grammatical idea of the term) is a period, or set of words, in which some perfect sense, or sentiment of the mind is fully comprehended; as "Jesus wept—Christ died—Vice is odious—Virtue is a beauty." &c.

The examples above produced are called simple sentences, as being nothing more than noun substantives or names in the nominative case, and proper verbs or affirmations joined to them; without which they could never be understood.

A compound sentence is, were two or more simple sentences are joined together by proper particles; as, "There is a time to pipe, and a time to dance; a time to work, and a time to play."

Of the concord between the substantive and the verb.

The noun substantive, or name, is the thing or person, that either is, does, or suffers; and this, for the most part is set before the verb; as for instance, "William is fast asleep; Thomas is awake; I am at work; you are at play; he or she is gone to market; we, ye, or they are going a fishing," &c.

This rule, however, is inverted in the four several cases hereunder particularly mentioned; viz. When a question is asked; When any word of command is given; When a sentence is conditional; and when the particle (there) or (its) precedes the affirmation.

In the first place, we say, "Could ever William be so careless? Could any servants be more insolent? Does the tea-kettle boil? Is supper ready, &c.

In the second case, that is to say, in point of any positive command: as, "Mind your business; Read your book; Hold your tongue," &c.

Where the sentence is conditional, we express ourselves thus; "Had I been apprehensive of the man's insincerity, I would never have trusted him with a shilling. Were I a man of fortune, I would advance all my poor relations," &c.

In the last place, we say, "There was a committee of the bank of England sat yesterday. There was a great debate in the house of parliament this morning. It was the husband, not the wife, that was found guilty. It was a mare, not a horse, that won the race."

Though a noun or name is, for the most part, the nominative case to the verb; yet this rule is not always observed; for, in the first place, a verb or affirmation, put into the infinitive mood, is sometimes substituted instead of a noun or name; as for instance, "To laugh at church is very indecent. To speak disrespectfully of a benefactor, is most shamefully ungrateful. To die for the good of one's country, is a truly heroic action," &c.

Sometimes, again, a whole sentence is made use of as the nominative case to the verb; as for instance, "A hearty zeal, and an ardent inclination to serve our great Creator, is our best fence against all mistakes of importance in points of religion," &c.

Now the general rule for finding out the nominative case to the verb, is, to ask the question, who, or what? And the word that answers to who or what is, does, or suffers, is the nominative case. As in the preceeding questions. What is very indecent? To whistle at church. What is most shamefully ungrateful? To speak disrespectfully of a benefactor. What is our best fence? A hearty zeal, &c.

Again, I sing. You dance. He plays. We, ye, or they work. Here ask the question, "Who sings, dances, plays, or works?" "I, you," &c.

Here it is to be observed, that the verb must always agree with the substantive noun or name, in number and person; as I love, thou lovest, he loveth, or loves; we, ye, or they love. Here, we must not say, I loves, or we loves, &c.

When two substantives of the singular number precede the verb, then the verb must be in the plural; as for instance, "My brother John and my sister Mary were at the play last night," (not was.) "My father and I were at dinner together at Guild-hall last lord mayor's day," (not was.) "The lord mayor and his lady were to be at St. Paul's this morning," (not is) &c.

Note. If a collective noun, that is to say, a name, which expresses a great number of persons, though itself be singular, precedes the verb, the verb must be in the plural number; as, "The mob were very outrageous in the streets last night, (not was.) Never mind what the vulgar say or do," (not says or does.) "The English army are now in Germany, (not is) &c.

Of the concord between the substantive and the adjective.

In the English tongue, when we apply an adjective to a substantive, we make no distinction (as grammarians do in Latin) of case, gender, or number; for we say, a modest man; an insolent woman; an affected fop; or, in the plural; modest men; insolent women; affected fops, &c.

Note. The pronoun this, in the singular number, makes these in the plural; as, "This hat is mine; but these two are yours. This chair is broken, but these are whole and sound."

Again, the pronoun that, in the singular number, makes those in the plural; as, "That pair of gloves in the window are yours, but those on the table are mine. That silver tankard is my landlord's, but those silver candlesticks were borrowed," &c.

Note, once more, that the English adjective, for the most part, indeed, precedes the substantive; as, a delightful prospect; a new built house; a pacing horse, &c. but there are some exceptions to this general rule.

And, in the first place, the adjective is frequently parted from the substantive, when a verb intervenes; as, "Truly brave and heroic is the man who dies in the defence of his country. Very richly and gaily drest are the ladies when they go to court. Infallibly true are all the doctrines of the sacred scriptures," &c.

Sometimes, again, the adjective follows the substantive, when the article (the) comes between; as, "George the third, king of Great Britain, &c. Lewis the fifteenth, king of France, &c.

The adjective follows the substantive in the following grammatical expression; as, a verb active; a verb passive; a verb neuter, &c.

To conclude; adjectives, as we have hinted before, are often made use of as substantives; as, the general, for the general commander; the subalterns, for the inferior officers. All, for all men; some, for some men; and others, for other men. As for instance, "All were found guilty of high treason; some were beheaded, and others hung up at Tyburn."

Of the concord between the relative and the antecedent.

A relative sentence is one that has in it the relative adjective who or which; as, "This is the lady who shone at Bath. That is the happy man who is the lady's bridegroom. This is the unlucky horse which threw me into the river. That is the ship which brought me home safe from Holland," &c.

The relative must always be of the same number and person, as the antecedent; as, "Thrice happy is he who is beloved by his Maker. Unspeakably unhappy are they who die in their sins."

Sometimes, indeed, the relative is suppressed; as, "This is the man I am infinitely obliged to; for, to whom I am obliged. That is the lady I love beyond my life; for, whom I love," &c.

There are divers figures made use of in some sentences; but, as they rather belong to the art of rhetoric, than that of grammar, we shall purposely decline saying any thing about them; as being, in some measure, foreign to our present purpose.

Of PUNCTUATION.

Of sentences, both single and compound are formed periods, which as they cannot consist of less than two members, so they should not have more than four; for dissertations where the periods are long, are attended not only with great difficulty to the person who delivers them, but with confusion and reluctance to those who hear them. And for that reason, they seldom meet with favour and applause.

As the members, therefore, of a complete period are four; so they are distinguished by four several marks, which are commonly called points or stops; that is to say, the comma, marked thus (,) the semicolon, thus (;) the colon, thus (:) and the period, full point, or stop, marked thus (.) And the reason that those distinctions are thus made, is this; because no whole period is to be pronounced in one breath, but requires more or less pauses, as the nature of the subject requires.

The first mark, or comma, is used when we make so small a pause, as whilst only we can tell one; and is made use of, for the most part, in order to distinguish particular names and things; as the names of the four most holy evangelists,

Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John. The four seasons of the year, viz. Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter; the twelve months, as, January, February, March, &c. and the three divisions of virtue; namely, the human, social, and divine," &c.

The second mark, or semicolon, is made use of to denote a pause whilst we can tell two, and is most frequent, next to the comma: this is affixed to such parts of a period, as have one or more commas in them, and contain only a part of the declaration of the subject; as in the following period; "If they be tempted, they resist; if molested, they suffer it patiently; if praised, they humble themselves; and attribute it to the Almighty."

The third mark, or colon, makes three times the pause of a comma; and is made use of to such parts of a sentence or period only, wherein the sense or assertion, is perfectly finished, as for example, "In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth: and the earth was without form, and void: and darkness was upon the face of the deep."

And here, the reader may observe, that the subject of the period differs, where the two colons are regularly placed.

A full-point or stop, is placed no where but at the end of a period; that is to say, when the whole declaration upon any particular topic, whether long or short, is perfectly finished.

Besides these, however, there are divers other notes, characters, or marks, made use of in the orthography of most languages, as well as the English; and which frequently occur. And these are,

First, A note of interrogation, marked thus (?)

Secondly, A note of admiration, marked thus (!)

The former is always made use of when any question is asked. As, "Who is there? Where are you going? When will you return? What o'clock is it?" &c.

The latter is made use of indeed, not only in cases of admiration, but exclamation likewise, as, "O for shame! Was the like ever seen! Was ever age so corrupt! O times! O manners! O heaven!" &c.

An accent, marked thus (') denotes that syllable in a word, whereon the stress of the voice is to be laid; as, to torment (the verb) to distinguish it from the substantive, which is accented on the first syllable, thus, torment.

An apostrophe, marked thus (') denotes that there are two words contracted into one; as, I'll, for I will; you mayn't, for you may not; he sha'nt, for he shall not, &c.

It is used likewise in the genitive case of nouns, by way of contraction; as, God's glory, for the glory of God; Job's integrity, for the integrity of Job, &c.

An asterism or asterisk, marked thus (*) and an obelisk, marked thus (†) are used for references to some note, either in the margin or the foot of the page.

A paragraph marked thus (¶) and a section marked thus (§) are frequently used, but more particularly in the sacred scriptures, when a new subject or section is begun.

A quotation, which is generally marked thus (") that is, two commas inverted; is used, to denote some passage extracted from some author, worthy of the reader's particular notice.

A hyphen, marked thus (-) is used for the separation of compound words; as, Christmas-day, Lady-day, mal-contents, water-mill, &c.

A parenthesis, marked thus () or a crotchet, marked thus [] is made use of to include an expression in the midst of a sentence, of a different import; as in the following text; "For to their power (I bear record) they were willing;" where the sense of the sentence is complete without the words so included.

A dialysis, marked thus (..) when placed over two vowels, denotes that they are not a diphthong, but two distinct syllables.

An Index, marked thus (☞) points to some particular passage, that is of more importance, and more remarkable than ordinary.

Besides these, there are divers other characters or marks, made use of by way of abbreviation, by tradesmen, mathematicians, astronomers, physicians, &c. which are needless here, we humbly conceive, to be particularly specified.

Having said thus much concerning points or stops, we come now to the use of capital letters, which are to be used only, first, in the beginning of words, and never in the middle. Secondly, after a period or full-stop, either in prose or verse. Thirdly, at the beginning of all proper names; as of men, women, countries, cities, rivers, &c. Fourthly, at the beginning of every word relating to the deity; such as God, Jesus Christ, &c. And lastly, the pronoun I, and the exclamatory O, must always be capital letters.

Note. All books are printed either in Roman characters or types, the black letter or the Italic; but the two last are now very sparingly used.

THE CONCLUSION.

Of Prose and Verse, as also of the variety of Styles peculiar to some Authors.

WHATEVER we speak or write, is either naturally in prose, or artificially in verse.

The former, being the common and general way, is a natural and proper connection of words thrown into perfect sentences, without being confined by any poetical measures, in opposition to verse.

The latter consists in a number of words which have a certain cadence, and determined measure; the like being also reiterated in the course of a poem, in opposition to prose. Or in other terms, verses are a particular method of delivering our thoughts, either without or with an harmonious rhyme; which rhyme consists in a certain proportion of feet or syllables, in each verse or line, and a conformity of sound at the close of several verses.

Of STYLES.

A style (in any language) is nothing more, than a particular manner of delivering a man's thoughts in writing, agreeable to the rules of syntax.

Now styles are as various as men's faces, or voices; and every one has a style that is proper and peculiar to himself.

However, the style ought always to be adapted to the subject: and be either plain, moderate, or sublime.

The first is that which is often called the low or simple; or, in other terms, the ordinary and familiar style; which requires little or no ornament, but that of a natural or common expression; and this is proper for any epistolary correspondence, dialogues, and such books as are calculated for the instruction of youth in any of the arts and sciences.

By a moderate style, or in other terms, an equable or intermediate style, I mean that which keeps a medium betwixt the plain and sublime; is that which goes something beyond the one, but aims not at the loftiness of the other. And this is properly used for narratives, chronicles, histories, and annals.

The sublime style is that which consists in pompous words and sentences; which, by its noble boldness, attracts, or rather commands the attention of the hearer, and extorts admiration and applause, even from such as are unwilling to give it. It is adorned with abundance of rhetorical figures, artfully introduced to move the passions. In a word, it thunders, as it were, and lightens. For which reason this is peculiarly used in tragedies, orations, and other persuasory discourses on subjects of the highest importance.

There are two other styles, which, without any impropriety, may be termed the two extremes; namely the Laconic and Asiatic styles

The former (so called from Laconia, a city of the Lacedemonians, where it was used to an affectation or excess) is a concise style that comprehends a great deal of matter in a narrow compass.

The latter (so called from the people of Asia, who affected to write and speak in the florid way) is a style that is redundant and prolix; or where abundance of words are made use of to express but a little matter.

There is another style, indeed, called the dry or jejune style, which is destitute of all ornament and spirit; and this I imagine, but few affect, and no one would recommend.

Having thus given my young readers a transient idea of the various styles which they will probably meet with in the prosecution of their studies; I might here not only naturally, but pertinently enough, lay down some select rules for their observance, in their future practice of the art of composition, but as remarks of that kind are of no immediate concern; and as brevity, consistent with perspicuity, is professedly aimed at throughout the whole of this present undertaking, I shall close this Compendious English Grammar, with a few general instructions for reading and speaking our mother-tongue justly; or in other terms, with elegance, propriety, and a good grace; as being an accomplishment more immediately requisite, and a concern of the last importance.

In order, therefore, that the young reader may attain so laudable a qualification, he must have an adequate idea of, and perfectly understand, the several articles hereunder particularly mentioned.

And, in the first place, he must have a competent notion of the nature and ground-work of accenting his words. As this, however, is a concern of no small importance, so it is not to be attained any otherwise than by an assiduous care, and daily practice. And for that reason, the judicious compiler of the Dictionary annexed has been peculiarly careful in this respect, in order to prevent a vicious pronunciation. And it is further evident, that the very same word is frequently a noun and a verb likewise; and that the sense of it is to be determined only by the different accent or stress of the voice that is put upon it; for if it be a noun or name only, the accent must be laid on the first syllable; but when it is an affirmation or verb, and signifies action, the stress of the voice must be placed on the last; as will more fully appear by the short table hereafter written.

The TABLE.

Nouns.	Verbs.	Nouns	Verbs.
A'b-sent	To ab-sènt	A'c-cent	To ac-cènt
Cé-ment	To ce-mènt	Cón-vert	To con-vèrt
Fér-ment	To fer mènt	In-cense	To in-cènse
Ob-ject	To ob-jèct	Pré-sent	To pre-sènt
Ré-cord	To re-còrd	Súb-ject	To sub-jèct

Here we must observe, that as the above dissyllables have sometimes an accent on the first, and sometimes on the last; so in trissyllables, or words consisting of three syllables, the accent or stress of the voice lies sometimes on the first, sometimes on the second, and often on the last; as will appear by the following tables. Though, in this case, it is true, the accent makes no alteration in the sense, as it does above.

TABLE I.

Accent on the first.	Accent on the first.
A'-va-rice	Mó-des-ty
Bónn-ti-ful	Nár-ra-tive
Chá-ri-ty	O'-mi-nous
Dí-li-gence	Pá-ra-dise
E'-ne-my	Quá-li-ty
Fá-mi-ly	Rí-ot-u-let
Grá-ti-tude	Sé-cre-sy
Hár-mo-ny	Tém-pe-rance
I'-mi-tate	Vá-ni-ty
Knáv-e-ry	Wil-der-ness
Lí-ber-ty	Yés-ter-day.

TABLE II.

Accent on the second.	Accent on the second.
A bún dance	La có nic
Bra vá do	Ma jés tic
Ca thé dral	No vém ber.
De mó lish	Oc tó ber
Em plóy ment	Pre cép tor
Fa ná tic	Re mém ber
Gi gán tic	Sep tém ber
Im pér fect	To bác co

TABLE III.

Accent on the third.	Accent on the third.
Ap pre hénd	Mis ap ply'
Bri ga diér	O ver cóme
Ca va liér	Per se vére
Dis ap péar	Re com ménd
E ver móre	Su per fi'ne
Gra na diér	Un be liéf
Here to fóre	Vo lun teér
In cor réct	Yes ter night.

Note, most polysyllables, or words of four or more syllables, have sometimes two and sometimes three accents; as for instance, in a'r-bi-trá-tor, bé-ne-fác-tor, com'-men-tá-tor, múl-ti-pli-cá-tor, trán-sub-stán-ti-á-tion.

Note likewise, the double accent, marked thus (") is used to denote, that a certain letter, in many syllables, though wrote but once is sounded as if it were double, or wrote twice; as in the words á-ni-mal, é'-le-ment, ó'r-a-cle, &c. And unless a reader or speaker be very careful in this particular, his expression or delivery will prove not only vicious, but harsh and disagreeable to those who listen to his discourse.

And as the business of accenting aright is thus requisite in prose; it is much more so in poetry.

It is in this, indeed, that their specific difference principally consists in the English tongue; for an English verse, for the most part, is nothing more than a line of ten feet, each consisting of a short and a long syllable, alternately throughout, as in the following distich:

Immódest wórds admit of nó defence;
For wánt of décency is wánt of sénse.

This distinction, indeed, of short and long syllables in Latin poetry, is called quantity: but in English poetry, it is nothing more than what we call accent in prose.

Here, however, it is to be observed, that there is a kind of harmony of notes and sounds in prose as well as verse, which depends on the quantity of expression, as to long and short, loud and low, grave and acute; in much the same manner as there is in music itself, which is nothing but a just modulation of sounds, abstracted from verbal. And it must be allowed, that a notion of the ground of harmony, and a musical ear, are, in a great measure, necessary to enable him that either reads or speaks, to deliver himself with propriety and a good grace.

In the art of reading and speaking justly, there is another article of great importance to be well observed; namely, that which grammarians usually call emphasis; that is to say, the pronunciation of some particular words with a peculiar energy and strength of expression; for according as this emphasis is placed on the several words which compose it, the sense may be capable of quite different significations.

And from what we have here advanced, we may observe, how highly requisite it is to avoid, with the utmost precaution, that vicious manner of delivery or utterance, commonly called a monotony; that is to say, such an even and invariable tone of the voice, which neither rises nor falls; and consequently wherein no such thing as accent, quantity, or emphasis, can possibly be; by which disagreeable manner of pronunciation, scarce any sense can be made of what such a miserable orator either reads or speaks. In a word, without a proper accent or emphasis the diction is lifeless, unaffecting and insipid; and nothing can possibly be more irksome to a judicious ear.

To conclude: there is no possibility of any person's reading justly, or speaking with propriety, unless he be a perfect master of the subject on which he presumes to harangue; for if the full force and true sense of each word and sentence be not thoroughly understood; it cannot, of course, be expressed with a proper emphasis and accent. And, in a word, to descant upon any topic without having a competent knowledge of it, is presumption to the last degree, if not folly in the abstract.

OF THE CONSTITUTION,

Government, and Trade,

OF ENGLAND.

ONE of the most useful branches of knowledge, and of which no BRITON should be ignorant, is that of the constitution of his native country. This is absolutely necessary in a nation where all are politicians, and where all are governed only by those laws which they, or their fathers, either personally, or by their representatives, were instrumental in forming.

The government of England was founded on principles of liberty; its constitution is the work of a brave and wise people, who, considering that all power was derived from them, and was to be subservient to their happiness, committed it into the hands of the three states, who were to be a mutual support, and a mutual check to each other, and yet so ordered, that the interest of each is best promoted, by each confining itself within its proper bounds.

The king, who is here invested with the highest prerogative, has all the honours, and all the splendor of majesty, and is only limitted where power might become tyranny, and where he might be capable of injuring either himself or his people: By this means, we reap all the advantages, without any of the evils of a monarchial government. "A king (says a noble author) has a divine right to govern well. A divine right to govern ill, is an absurdity; and to assert it is blasphemy." The king of England has the power of doing good in its fullest extent. This is the only power that can give him true dignity and distinguished honour; for it is not the least diminution to his glory, that he is confined from doing what would tarnish his reputation, and render him infamous to posterity; on the contrary, this is a circumstance that renders him truly great, and raises him above all the tyrants of the earth; "Our king (says a modern patriot) in the trust and dignity of his office, transcends all other kings and emperors on the globe, as far as we excel all other subjects in liberty, so that he may not unjustly be called a KING of KINGS, whilst most of the mighty monarchs of other nations are no more than the masters of some herds of slaves." The king of England receives all his honour, power, and authority from the laws, and therefore, at his mounting the throne, he binds himself by a solemn oath to make them the rule of his conduct, and before he receives one oath of allegiance, is obliged to swear to observe the great charter of the English liberties, and thus, at his coronation, renews the original compact between the king and his subjects. He then becomes the head of the state, the supreme earthly governor, and is himself subject to none but GOD and the laws, to which he is as much bound to pay obedience as the meanest subject. Though he has not the power of making laws, yet no law can be enacted without his consent; and though the execution of them is always entrusted to his care, he cannot seize the property of the most inconsiderable man in his dominions, except it be forfeited by law. On the contrary, the subject may, without the least danger, sue his sovereign, or those who act in his name, and under his authority; he may do this in open court, where the king may be cast, and be obliged to pay damages to his subject.

He cannot take away the liberty of the least individual, unless he has by some illegal act forfeited his right to liberty; or except when the state is in danger, and the representatives of the people think the public safety makes it necessary that he should have the power of confining persons, and seizing their papers on a suspicion of guilt; but this power is always given him only for a limited time. The king has a right to pardon, but neither he nor the judges, to whom he delegates his authority, can condemn a man as criminal, except he be first found guilty by twelve men who must be his peers or his equals. That the judges may not be influenced by the king, or his ministers, to misrepresent the case to the jury, they have their salaries for life, and not during the pleasure of the sovereign. Neither can the king take away, or endanger the life of any subject without trial, and the persons being first chargeable with a capital crime, as treason, murder, felony, or some other act injurious to society; nor can any subject be deprived of his liberty for the highest crime, till some proof of his guilt be given, upon oath, before a magistrate; all he has then a right to insist upon being brought, the first opportunity, to a fair trial, or to be restored to liberty on giving sufficient bail for his appearance. If a man is charged with a capital offence, he must not undergo the ignominy of being tried for his life, till the evidences of his guilt are laid before the grand jury of the town or county in which the fact is alleged to be committed, and not without twelve of them agreeing to find the bill of indictment against him. If they do this, he is to stand his trial before twelve other men, whose opinion is definitive. In some cases, the man (who is always supposed innocent till there is sufficient proof of his guilt) is allowed a copy of his indictment, in order to help him to make his defence. He is also furnished with the pannel, or list of the jury, who are his true and proper judges, that he may learn their characters, and discover whether they want abilities, or whether they are prejudiced against him. He may, in open court, peremptorily object to twenty of the number,* and to as many more as he can give any reason for their not being admitted his judges, till at last twelve unexceptionable men, the neighbours of the party accused, or living near the place where the supposed fact was committed, are sworn, to give a true verdict according to the evidence produced in court. By challenging the jury, the prisoner prevents all possibility of bribery, or the influence of any superior power; by their living near the place where the fact was committed, they are supposed to be men who know the prisoners course of life, and the credit of the evidence. These only are the judges, from whose sentence the prisoner is to expect life or death; and upon their integrity and understanding, the lives of all that are brought in danger ultimately depend, and from their judgment there lies no appeal; they are therefore to be all of one mind, and after they have fully heard the evidence, are to be confined without meat,† drink, or candle, till they are unanimous in acquitting or condemning the prisoner. Every juryman is, therefore, invested with a solemn and awful trust. If he, without evidence, submits his opinion to that of any of the other jury, or yields in complaisance to the opinion of the judge; if he neglect to examine with the utmost case; if he question the veracity of the witnesses, who may be of an infamous character; or, after the most impartial hearing, has the least doubt upon his mind, and yet joins in condemning the person accused, he will wound his own conscience, and bring upon himself the complicated guilt of perjury and murder. The freedom of Englishmen consists in its being out of the power of the judge‡ on the bench to injure them, for declaring a man innocent whom he wishes to be brought in guilty. Was not this the case, juries would be useless; so far from being judges themselves, they would only be the tools of another, whose province it is not to guide, but to give a sanction to their determination. Tyranny might triumph over the liberties and lives of the subject, and the judge on the bench be the minister of the prince's vengeance.

These are the glorious privileges we enjoy above any other nation upon earth. Juries have always been considered as giving the most effectual check to tyranny; for in a nation like this, where a king can do nothing against law, they are a security that he shall never make the laws, by a bad administration, the instrument of cruelty and oppression; was it not for the juries, the advice given by Father Paul in his Maxims of the Republic of Venice might take effect in its fullest latitude. "When the offence is committed by a nobleman against a subject, (says he) let all ways be tried to justify him; and if that is not possible to be done, let him be chastised with greater noise than damage. If it be a subject that has affronted a nobleman, let him be punished with the utmost severity, that the subjects may not get too great a custom of laying their hands on the Patrician Orders." In short, where it not for juries, a corrupt nobleman might, whenever he pleased, act the tyrant, while the judge would have that power which is now denied to our kings. But by our happy constitution, which breathes nothing but liberty and equity, all imaginary indulgence is allowed to the meanest as well as the greatest. When a prisoner is brought to take his trial, he is freed from all bonds; and though the judges are supposed to be counsel for the prisoner, yet, as he may be incapable of vindicating his own cause, other counsel are allowed him; he may try the validity and legality of the indictment, and may set it aside, if it be contrary to law. Nothing is wanting to clear up the cause of innocence, and to prevent the sufferer from sinking under the power of corrupt judges, and the oppression of the great. The racks and tortures that are cruelly made use of in other parts of Europe, to make a man accuse himself, are here unknown, and none punished without conviction, but he who refuses to plead in his own defence.

But, after all this, does the king lose any part of his real dignity, by not having the power to interfere, to rob and murder at pleasure? No; his honour results from the safety

---

* The party may challenge thirty-five in case of treason, and twenty in case of felony, without shewing any cause and as many more as he can assign cause against.

† Some have been fined for having fruit in their pockets when they were withdrawn to consider of their verdict, though they did not eat it. 1 Leon. Dyer. 137.

‡ "Some jurymen (says Mr. Clare, in his English liberties) may be apt to say, that if we do not find as the judge directs, we may come into trouble, the judge may fine us, &c. I answer, no judge dares offer any such thing; you are the proper judges of the matters before you, and your souls are at stake; you ought to act freely, and are not bound, though the court demand it, to give the reason why you bring it in thus or thus; for you of the grand jury are sworn to the contrary, viz. to keep secret your fellows' council and your own; and you of the petty jury are no way obliged to declare your motives, for it may not be convenient. In queen Elizabeth's days a man was arraigned for murder before justice Anderson; the evidence was so strong, that eleven of the twelve were presently for finding him guilty; the twelfth man refused, and kept them so long that they were ready to starve, and at last made them comply with him, and bring in the prisoner not guilty. The judge, who had several times admonished him to join with his fellows, being surprized, sent for him, and discoursed with him privately, to whom, upon a promise of indemnity, he at last owned, that he himself was the man that did the murder, and the prisoner was innocent, and that he was resolved not to add perjury and a second murder to the first."

of his subjects, and the god-like power of diffusing only happiness, by a strict observance of the laws, and in sometimes softening the rigour of them with mercy. The royal prerogative consists in the right of declaring war and making peace; in giving his assent to such new laws as he apprehends will be for the good of his subjects, and withholding it, when he believes that they will be hurtful; he is invested with the power of assembling, adjourning, proroguing, and dissolving the houses of parliament, and consequently of putting a stop to the consultations of both, when he believes they are acting consistent with the rights of each other, and the good of the community. He has the liberty of coining money. He is the fountain of honour; but though he gives nobility, their independence is secured by his not having it in his power to take it away. He has the right of commanding the army, and the militia is under his controul. His person is sacred; and a subject, for a single act of treason, not only loses his life, but his heirs are deprived of his estate. He is allowed a privy council to assist him with their advice, and the persons of those members of which this council is composed, are also sacred. He has the supreme power in all causes, ecclesiastical as well as civil, by which the clergy are divested of all dominion over the conscience, which is wisely left to him to whom it properly belongs—to that God, who alone can search the heart; and by this means persecution is prevented, and religious liberty secured.

In every kingdom, and in every state, there are always persons distinguished by birth, riches, and honours; advantages which give them such a considerable weight in the government, that were they to be confounded with the multitude, they would have no interest in supporting liberty; for as most of the popular resolutions would be made to their prejudice, the public liberty would be their slavery. The share they are therefore allowed in the legislature, is in proportion to the interest they have in the state; or from hence it is they form a body of nobles, that has a right to put a stop to the enterprises of the people, to counterbalance the right which the people enjoy, of putting a stop to their encroachments.

The legislative power is committed to these two bodies, to that of the nobles, and that of the representatives of the people, each of which have separate views and interests. But here there is this essential difference; for while individuals who compose the house of commons enjoy their power but for a limited time, and can only be restored by new powers given them by their constituents, the privileges enjoyed by the members of the house of lords are in their own nature hereditary. And this is the more necessary, as their high prerogatives render them subject to popular envy, and consequently their privileges must, in a free state, be always in danger. The only disadvantage that can possibly arise from this is, that as their power is hereditary, they might be tempted to pursue their own interest to the prejudice of the public; and therefore to prevent this, where they might receive the greatest pecuniary advantages from being corrupt, as in the case of granting supplies, they have only the power of refusing, while the commons alone have that enacting.

The great, we have already said, are always exposed to popular envy; and therefore, were they to be judged by the people, they might be in the greatest danger from their judges; they would then want the privilege of being tried by their peers, a privilege enjoyed by the meanest subject. They are therefore not to be tried by the ordinary courts of judicature, but by that part of the legislature of which each is a member. As all human compositions must be defective, and the best laws in some instances too severe; and as the national judges are mere passive beings, incapable of moderating either the force or rigour of the laws, this part of the legislature is here, as well as in the former case, a necessary tribunal, to whom it belongs to moderate the law. In their decisions, they give not their opinions upon oath; but each laying his right hand upon his heart, gives his verdict upon the single testimony of his honour. Thus are the lords invested with every outward mark of dignity, and with all the privileges necessary to maintain their rank in all its splendor; and yet are so limited, that they have not the power to encroach upon the rights and liberties of the inferior subjects.

But while the privileges of the lords are preserved, and other wise purposes answered by their having a share of the legislative power, the privileges of all inferior persons are secured by every man's having, either in person or by his representative, a share in the legislature, by which means no laws can be enacted or repealed, without the consent of the representatives of the majority of the nation. Thus the liberties of the commons are as strongly secured as the royal prerogatives, or as the privileges of the lords. The commons are the guardians of the public liberty; they are the deputies sent up from all quarters to make such laws as shall best promote the interest of the whole collective body. And though they have not the power of examining the meanest subject upon oath, yet they can search into the conduct of the highest peer in the realm, and, in the name of the people, impeach the favourite or minister of the king. They can call the judges to an account for the maladministration of their office, and bring all those to justice who make an ill use of their power. Thus the commons are the grand jury of the nation; but as it would be improper that those who are impeached in so high a court should be tried by a lower, which might be intimidated and over-awed by the power of the commons, therefore to preserve the dignity of the peers, and the security of the subject, those whom they impeach are tried by the lords, whose superior dignity sets them above all influence, and who have neither the same interests nor the same passions.

Thus our happy constitution consists of three states, each of which has separate privileges, each is a check upon the other, and yet each is equally dependent. The first, which is the executive power, has the privilege of assembling, adjourning, proroguing, and dissolving the two legislative bodies: because these are supposed to have no will, except when they are assembled; and when they were assembled, if they had the right to prorogue themselves, they might never be prorogued; they might encroach on the executive power; they might become despotic, and even one of these might destroy the liberties of the other. But as the executive power might make an ill use of this privilege, by never assembling the legislative, it is rendered dependent on these bodies, by their holding the sinews of government in their hands, and the granting the necessary supplies only from year to year. The king, indeed, has a power to raise what forces he pleases; but the representatives of the people, who grant the supplies, can only determine what number he shall be enabled to pay.

But while the representatives of the people have thus the important charge of watching over the preservation of our liberties, our trade, and our property, what care ought every county, city, and borough to take, to chuse such only as are qualified for performing this important task; for chusing such whose integrity will render them superior to the temptation of a bribe, whose wisdom is capable of managing our interests, and whose greatness of soul will make them think that they can never do too much for their country, and for their constituents. He who parts with his vote, and for a lucrative or selfish consideration, is instrumeatal in chusing one whom his conscience disapproves, and who is unqualified or corrupt, is a fool and a madman; is unworthy the name of a freeman, since he, as much as is in his power, sells himself and his country, and can never have the least reason to complain, if he should live to see this happy constitution overturned, and our liberty and all our privileges destroyed.

Having thus given a view of the British constitution, in general, we shall now present the reader (by way of supplement to it) with a general sketch of the government and trade of England. The reader will find some few particulars respecting our courts of justice, and ecclesiastical government, interspersed under different heads in different parts of the DICTIONARY. It was thought, however, that the very few repetitions it may occasion, will be amply compensated by the comprehensive but complete view this sketch will afford the young reader of the internal government of these kingdoms.

Of the Ecclesiastical Government and Courts

The convocation formerly, at least, had the principal part of the ecclesiastical government; for this is a national synod of the clergy assembled together, to consider of the state of the church, and to call those to an account who have broached new opinions, inconsistent with the doctrines of the church of England. But in a late reign, they having been thought to proceed with too great severity against the delinquents of this kind, they have not been permitted to sit any long time since. However they are called together at the same time as the parliament, by the authority of the king, who directs his writs to the archbishop of each province to summon all bishops, deans, archdeacons, &c. to meet at a certain time and place. The convocation consists of one proctor sent from each cathedral and collegiate church, and two from the body of the inferior clergy of each diocese. The upper house in the province of Canterbury consist of the archbishop, who is president, and twenty-two bishops; and the lower house is composed of all the deans, archdeacons, and proctors, as above; in all, one hundred and sixty-six. The archbishop of York may likewise hold a convocation at the same time.

King Henry the VIIth's chapel at Westminster is generally the place of meeting for the province of Canterbury; and York for the province of York. The first business of the lower house is to chuse a prolocutor, who is presented to the upper house by two of the members; one of them making a speech in Latin, and the prolocutor another; to which the archbishop returns an answer in the same language.

Under these two archbishops there are twenty-four bishops; that is, twenty-one in the province of Canterbury, and three in the province of York. These have all the title of lords, on account of the baronies annexed to the bishopric; and they take place of all other barons, as well in parliament as in other assemblies. The first of these is the bishop of London, who is dean of the episcopal church of that province; the next is Durham, and then Winchester; but all the rest take place according to the seniority of their consecrations.

The business of a bishop, according to his episcopal order, is to ordain priests and deacons, to consecrate churches and burying places, and to administer the rites and ceremonies of confirmation.

The jurisdiction of a bishop relates to the probation of wills; to grant administration of goods to such as die intestate, to take care of perishable goods when no one will administer; to collate benefices; to grant institutions to livings; to defend the liberties of the church; and to visit his own diocese once in three years. Besides these, there are many other particulars which our room will not permit us to mention.

The court of arches is the most antient consistory of the province of Canterbury, and all appeals in church matters are directed to this court. The processes run in the name of the judge, who is called dean of the arches; and the advocates who plead in this court must be doctors of the civil law. The court of audience has the same authority as this, and the archbishop's chancery was formerly joined to this. The prerogative court is that wherein wills are proved, and administration taken out.

The court of peculiars, relating to certain parishes, have a jurisdiction among themselves for the probate of wills; and therefore are exempt from the bishop's courts. The see of Canterbury has no less than fifty-seven of these peculiars.

The court of delegates is so called, because it consists of commoners delegated or appointed by the royal commission; but it is no standing court.

Besides these, every bishop has a court of his own, which is held in the cathedral of his diocese, and is called the consistory court. Likewise, every archdeacon has his court, as well as the dean and chapter of every cathedral.

Of the Parliament of Great Britain.

This august body consist of two houses, one of which is called the house of lords, and the other the house of commons. Before the union, the house of lords consisted of the spiritual and temporal peers of England; and the house of commons of 513 knights, burgesses, and citizens. But since the union, there are sixteen peers of Scotland added to the house of lords, and 45 commoners of the house of commons. The first of these are chosen before the sitting of every new parliament, by the peers of Scotland, out of their own body.

The design of parliaments is to maintain the constitution, to support the dignity of the crown, and to keep inviolable the privileges of the people. They are also to raise subsidies, to make laws, and to redress all public grievances. The power of calling a parliament, and of adjourning and proroguing the same, is entirely lodged in the sovereign.

The sitting of the parliament is appointed by the king's proclamation, with the advice of the privy council; and in chusing a new one, writs are issued out by the lord chancellor to the lords to appear at the time and place appointed. Writs are also sent to the sheriff's of every county, commanding them to summon the electors, to chuse as many knights, citizens, and burgesses, in their respective counties, as are to sit in the house of commons. The writs for Scotland are directed to the privy council, for summoning the 16 peers, and for electing 45 members.

No judge, sheriff, or clergyman, can be elected; and no gentleman can be elected for a county unless he has 600£. a year; nor for a city or borough, unless he has 300£. a year. Formerly parliaments met at different places in the kingdom; but of late they assemble at Westminster, at what was formerly called St. Stephen's chapel.

When the king comes to parliament, the usher of the black rod is ordered to call the commons up to the house of lords, where they stand without the bar, and the king commands them, by the lord chancellor, to chuse one of the members for their speaker, and to present him such a day. The choice being made by a majority of votes, at the day appointed he is presented to the king in the house of lords, between two members, for his approbation. The lord chancellor, or keeper for the time being, is always speaker for the house of peers. Since the reformation, no Roman Catholic can sit in either house, till he has first taken the oaths.

Though the number of the house of commons is so great, yet 300 are commonly reckoned a full house; and there can be no business done if there are less than forty. At the first meeting of the parliament, they always appoint standing grand committees, for privileges, elections, grievances, trade, and religion.

The chief business of the parliament is to revive and abrogate old laws, and to make new ones; but whenever a new law is proposed, it must be first put in writing, and then it is called a bill; but the commons have only the power of introducing money-bills. Before any bill can pass into a law, it must be read three several times in each house, except a bill of indemnity, which requires only once reading. The leave of the house must be obtained to bring in any private bill, and the house must be acquainted with the substance of it, either by motion, or petition. After it has been read the first time, the speaker recites an abstract of the bill, and puts the question, whether it shall be read a second time or not. But if a bill comes from the house of lords, so much favour and respect is shewn, that if it be spoken against in the first reading, the speaker puts the question for the second reading before it is rejected, if that should be the case. Bills are seldom read twice the first day, unless upon very extraordinary occasions, and requir the utmost expedition. Upon the second reading, if none speak against the bill, and several for it, the speaker may put the question for engrossing it.

When debates arise upon the second reading, and they are over, the house commonly calls for committing the bill to the committee of the whole house, or to a select committee. Sometimes it may happen, the bill may be recommitted before the speaker puts the question for engrossing. After a bill has been engrossed, it is to be read a third time, in order to have it passed. But when any debate happens, after it is over, the speaker holds the bill in his hand and says, "As many as are of opinion that this bill should pass, say yes, and as many as are of the contrary opinion, say no." Upon which he informs the house, whether the yea's or no's have it. But when the thing is doubtful, two tellers are appointed for each side, one to number the yea's, and the other the no's; however, the question is first put, which of these shall go out of the house, and this is called dividing the house. After the numbering them is over, the tellers declare to the speaker the number of yea's and no's; upon which all return to their places. If the no's have it, the bill is said to pass in the negative. But if it passes in the affirmative, they order it to be sent to the house of lords for their concurrence.

When a bill is sent by the lords to the commons, they send none of their members, but only masters in chancery, who deliver the bill to the speaker. When there is a disagreement in the houses about a bill, a conference is demanded, which is held in the painted chamber. In voting in the house of lords, they begin with the lowest baron, and so proceed to the highest peer; who each for himself says content, or not content; and if the voices are equal, the negative carries it. After an adjournment of either house, they may resume the business they were upon, but after a prorogation they cannot, for then the session is ended. Every one knows, that after a dissolution of the old parliament, a new one must be elected, in the manner mentioned above.

Of the Courts of Justice.

The courts of justice, sitting at Westminster, are open four times a year; that is, at Easter, Trinity, Michaelmas, and Hilary terms. There are four courts, namely the court of chancery, king's bench, common pleas, and the court of exchequer; not to mention that of the duchy of Lancaster, because that only take cognizance of all the causes relating to the revenue of this duchy, which has been long annexed to the crown; the chief judge of this court is called the chancellor of this duchy.

The court of chancery is a court of equity, and designed to relieve the subject against cheats, breaches of trust, and other oppressions, to temper the rigour of the law. However, the remedy has often proved worse than the disease, on account of the length of time before the cause has been determined. The chief judge is the lord chancellor, or lord keeper; and the form of proceeding is by bills, answers, and decrees; and the witnesses are examined in private; however, it must be observed, that the decrees of this court are only binding to the persons of those concerned in them; for they do not affect their lands and goods; and consequently, if a man refuse to comply with the terms, they can do nothing more to him than send him to prison. This court is not like others, which have no power except in term-time; for this is always open; and if a man be sent to prison, the lord chancellor, in any vacation, can grant a habeas corpus, if he sees there is reason so to do. He may also at these times grant prohibitions.

The lord chancellor has twelve assistants, called masters in chancery, whose business it is to take affidavits, or depositions upon oath, concerning any matter for which an oath is required by the rules of the court; and they have no office in chancery lane. They also examine accompts depending on this court, of which they make their report in writing. Besides these, there are several masters extraordinary, to take affidavits in the country.

The master of the rolls is the principal of the twelve, and he has the custody of all charters, customs, comanissions, deeds, and recognizances; which being made on rolls of parchment gave occasion to his name, and the repository of them is called the rolls; here all the rolls are kept since the beginning of the reign of Richard III. This is a great officer, and usually hears causes in chancery, when the chancellor himself is absent. He keeps a court at the rolls, where he hears and determines causes that come there before him; he has the gift of the six clerks' offices, and those possessed of them are next in degree to the masters in chancery. Their business is to enroll patents, commissions, licences, pardons, and other instruments that pass the great seal. When the master of the rolls sits in the house of lords, his place is next the lord chief justice of England, upon the second wool sack. Besides what is said above, the court of chancery has the power of sending out commissions for charitable uses, and enquiring into all the frauds and abuses which have been commited in the disposal of all charities throughout the kindom, and can oblige the trustees to perform their trust, according to the intent of the respective donors. Under the six clerks there were formerly sixty, but now there are ninety; and these, with their under-clerks, perform the business of their office.

The court of king's bench is the highest court in England, in common law, except the house of lords in parliament. All pleas are brought into this court between the king and the subject, such as treasons, felonies, breach of peace, and any kind of oppression. This court has also the power to examine and correct the errors of the judges and justices of England, in their judgments and proceedings; this not only in pleas of the crown, but in those that are really personal and mixed, except only in the exchequer. There are four judges belonging to this court, the chief whereof is styled the lord chief justice of the king's bench; and according to an act of parliament lately passed, all judges are to hold their places, notwithstanding the demise of the crown, but with the same restriction as formerly; that is, while they do nothing to occasion the forfeiture of their places. None can be a judge in this court except a serjeant at law. All matters of fact, relating either to civil or criminal causes, are determined in the court of king's bench by a jury.

The court of common pleas is so called, because the pleas usually here debated are between subject and subject. None but serjeants at law may plead in this court; and here all civil causes real and personal are usually tried, and real actions are pleadable in no other court. Likewise, no fines can be levied, or recoveries suffered, except in this court at Westminster, at a judge's chamber, at the assizes, or by a special commission out of chancery. There are four judges also belonging to this court, the first of whom is called lord chief justice of the common pleas.

The court of exchequer consists of two courts, one of which tries causes according to law, and the other according to equity. The court of equity is held in the exchequer chamber, before the lord treasurer, the chancellor of the exchequer, the lord chief baron, and the three barons of the exchequer; besides a cursitor baron. But the two first sit very seldom, and the five last almost always. Here are tried all causes relating to the king's revenue, namely, such as relate to accompts, disbursements, customs, and fines imposed. All judicial proceedings according to law are only before the barons; but the court of equity is held as above.

There are assizes and sessions held in the different counties of England, for the more easy distribution of justice, and the assizes are courts kept twice a year. The twelve judges are commissioned by the king for this purpose, and this they call going the circuit. At these assizes all civil and criminal causes may be determined; the first is called Lent assizes, soon after Hilary term; and the other called the summer assizes, after Trinity term. There are six of these circuits, besides those in Wales, in which principality two distinct judges are appointed; and both in England and Wales all causes are determined by a jury. The jury is chosen by the sheriff of the county, and they are only directed in points of law by the judges.

The commitment of malefactors is generally made by a justice of the peace, who examines witnesses to the fact upon oath. If the evidence is plain, he makes a mittimus, and sends the malefactor to the county goal where he continues till the next assizes or sessions.

There are justices of the peace in every county, designed to keep the peace thereof; and such of them that the king is supposed to have greater confidence in, are called justices of the quorum; because in their dedimus there are these words, quorum A. B. unum esse volumus; the meaning of which is, that no business of consequence must be transacted, unless with the concurrence of one of these. Their office is to call before them, examine, and commit to prison, all thieves, murderers, vagabonds, and all disturbers of the peace, of what kind soever.

The quarter sessions are so called from the meeting of the justices every quarter of a year, at the shire or chief town in their respective counties, where they have the power of trying all criminal causes in the same manner as at the assizes, though they commonly confine themselves to facts of a lesser degree of guilt.

There is a sheriff appointed for the execution of the law in every county, except Westmoreland and Durham who is nominated by the king every Michaelmas term. His office is to execute the king's mandates, and all writs directed to him out of the king's courts. He also impanels juries to bring causes and criminals to trial, and is to take care that the sentences both in civil and criminal affairs be duly executed. He appoints an under-sheriff, stewards of courts, bailiffs of hundreds, constables, and jailors, and has many men in rich liveries, to attend upon him on horseback at the reception of the judges, and during the assizes.

The office of high-constable, petty-constable, head-borough, or third-borough, is to execute the warrants and orders of the justice of the peace; but the high-constable only disperses them upon some occasions to the petty-constables.

Every city and corporation in England may chuse their own magistrates, which may be either a mayor, or a bailiff, with aldermen, common-councilmen, or capital burgesses; and these regulate all affairs which immediately belong to their respective corporations. Likewise, some cities have counties, and a power of trying all malefactors taking in their counties; but this is seldom undertaken without the assistance of one or more of the twelve judges. Some of these office during their magistracy are justices of the peace; these are commonly the mayor and an alderman, or two; but they cannot exercise their power out of their own liberties.

The lord-lieutenants and deputy-lieutenants had formerly a more considerable power and influence than they have at present, and they are chosen by the king himself out of the principal peers of this kingdom. Their business was to arm, array, and form companies, troops, and regiments; and the men so raised were called the militia. But this having been seldom done of late, on account of the standing forces kept continually in pay, these forces became in a great measure useless. However, it having been found necessary, during our last war with France, to have a militia properly regulated and disciplined, for the defence of the country against all foreign invasions, an act of parliament was made, by which they are put under new regulations, and in consequence whereof a new malitia has been actually raised in most parts of the kingdom. The officers are to be men of fortune, and the private men to be raised by ballotting: but these last are to be changed every three years. This has put the kingdom into such a state of defence, that we can now venture to send our regular forces abroad upon any emergent occasion; and it is not improbable but these last, in times of peace, will become entirely useless.

Besides the courts already mentioned, there are court-leets, and court-barons, which properly belong to the lords of the manors, who appoint stewards to hold them in their name. The first is a court of record, it being reputed the king's court, because its authority is derived from the crown. It is kept twice a year, and in it enquiry may be made of riots, and other criminal matters; but all great offences must be certified to the justices of assize.

A court baron is incident to every manor, though the other is not so, and is so called from the lord of the manor, who was antiently styled baron; all tenants belonging to the manor are summoned to this court; here part of them are sworn for a jury, and here the steward sits as judge. The jury is directed to enquire after the disease of copy-holders and free-holders, and to bring in their next heir, and also of the encroachments of any tenant. Likewise here they make orders and laws among themselves, with a penalty for transgressors, payable to the lord of the manor. There are also sheriffs, courts, and hundred courts, held every month in all parts of England, where small causes are determined. A court of conscience has been long held in London, for recovery of small debts under forty shillings; there has been some erected in Westminster, and other out parts about London; as also in several towns in the country, and it is thought, from time to time they will be erected elsewhere. The officers called bailiffs of the hundred, and other bailiffs and serjeants, are appointed by the sheriff to execute writs, to restrain goods, and to summon to the county sessions and assizes.

Of Trade and Navigation.

Navigation in this kingdom was formerly greatly neglected to what it is at present, notwithstanding its vast advantage; for it enables the inhabitants of the country where it flourishes to export what they have, and to import what they have not. While we were strangers to navigation, our country was thin of people, because we lived as it were upon the main stock. We had, indeed, a few staple commodities, and a very few manufactures, which were sold to foreigners at their own rate; but when navigation began to flourish, and we had vessels of our own, the face of affairs soon began to change; and we brought home the product of their countries at a small expence, in comparison to what they cost us formerly; we likewise disposed of our own commodities at much higher rates.

At present a trade is carried on to the Turkish dominions and the Levant, by the Turkey Company, and the commodities we send to those parts are lead, iron, broad cloth, and long ells; not to mention French and Lisbon sugars, as well as bullion. We take in return great quantities of raw silk, which serves for making stockings, galloons, gold and silver lace; and it is also proper for the warp of any kind of silk. We import also grogram, yarn, dying stuffs of various kinds, drugs, soap, leather, cotton, fruits, and oil.

To Italy, we carry tin, lead, pilchards, herrings, salmon, cod, and various kinds of East-India goods; besides some of our own manufactures, such as broad-cloth, long ells, bays, druggets, camblets, leather, and other things. We import from thence wine, oil, soap, olives, dying-stuffs, as well as silk, raw, thrown, and wrought.

We send to Spain much the same kind of commoditi to Italy, many of which are exported from thence to colonies in America. In return we have oil, fruits, wool, cochineal, and other drugs; and in times of peace, gold and silver, in specie or bullion.

The kingdom of Portugal takes from us almost all kinds of our commodities; we take from thence wine, oil, salt, and fruits.

In times of peace we export to France tin, lead, corn, and almost every other article of commerce, agreeable to a late commercial treaty between Great Britain and that country.

We send to Flanders tin, lead, iron wares, sugar, tobacco, serges, flannel, and a few stuffs, for which we receive fine laces, linen, tapes, inkles, and other goods of that kind.

We send to Germany tin, lead, tobacco, sugar, ginger, woollen manufactures of every kind, as well as all sorts of East-India goods. In return, we have from thence tin plates, linen, and several other things.

With Denmark and Norway we have very little trade, except for a few coarse woollen goods; for which reason we are forced to pay for most things we have of them. We have also a decaying trade with Sweden, for they buy little of us, and we purchase of them copper, iron, and naval stores.

We send to Russia, tin, lead, coarse cloths, long ells, worsted stuffs, and a great quantity of tobacco: and we import from thence tallow, furs, iron, pot-ashes, hemp, flax, linen, coarse Russia cloth, and leather; this trade is carried on by a particular company, in a manner very beneficial to this kingdom.

To Holland we send almost all sorts of commodities, and manufactured goods, whether of our own, or imported from abroad; and from thence we receive vast quantities of linen, tapes, inkles, whale-fins, all sorts of spices, and various kinds of dying-stuffs.

The African trade is of great advantage, for we not only send many of our own and the East-India manufactures, for the purchase of slaves, but we supply our several plantations with the last; and we also have from thence gold-dust, red wood, ivory, palm-oil, malagueto, gum-seneca, and many other valuable commodities.

The East-India trade is of very great consequence to this nation, and there have been several hot disputes about it, relating to its advantage or disadvantage; however, it is certain they purchase their goods at a very low rate, which are sold extremely high.

Our trade to America, notwithstanding they have gained their independence, is still very considerable; and it is probable, that the Americans will continue to trade with us, as there is no market in Europe to which they can carry their commodities with such a certainty of sale.

BARCLAY'S

ENGLISH DICTIONARY,

ENLARGED AND IMPROVED.

A IS the first letter of the alphabet in all known languages, except the Ethiopic, in which it is the thirteenth. In our language it is one of the five vowels, and has three different sounds; the broad sound: as, all, wall; the open, as father, rather; the slender a is peculiar to the English, and is to be found in place, face, waste. When placed before nouns of the singular number, it denotes one, as, a man, i. e. one man; or signifies something indefinite, as, a man may pass this way, that is, any man. Before a word beginning with a vowel, we write an, as an ox, and likewise before an h silent, as an herb; but when the h is sounded, we then write a, as a horse. Before a participle it denotes some action not yet finished; as, I am a walking. Formerly it was a contraction of at. Sometimes it signifies to. It has likewise a peculiar signification, implying each; as, he gains a hundred pounds a year. In abbreviations, with a stroke over it thus A it stands for 5000 among the Romans. With logicians, it denotes an universal affirmative proposition. Among merchants, if set alone after a bill of exchange, it signifies accepted, and is used by them to distinguish their sets of accompts instead of a figure; thus, A, B, C, are instead of 1, 2, 3. a, or aa, is used by physicians instead of ana, and signifies that the proportions of the ingredients to which it refers are to be equal. In abbreviations it stands likewise for Artium, or Arts, as A. B. artium baccalaureus, or bachelor of arts; when applied to time, for anno: A. C. ante Christum, before Christ; A. M. anno mundi, the year of the world; A. D. Anno Domini, the year of our Lord. A, in music, is that note which lies between the 2d and 3d line in the treble; or upon the top, or 5th line, in the bass. ABP. is an abbreviation of Archbishop.

AB, in the scripture chronology, is the fifth month of the Jewish ecclesiastical year, and answers to the moon of July. Ab, prefixed to the names of places in England generally denotes that they belonged to some Abbey as Abingdon.

ABA'CK, ad. a sea term, signifying the situation of the sails when the surfaces are flatted against the masts by the force of the wind.

A'BACUS, s. [Lat.] a counting-table, anciently used in calculations. In Architecture, the uppermost member of a column, which serves as a sort of crowning both to the capital and column.

ABA'FT, ad. [abaftan, Sax.] toward the stern.

ABALIENA'TION, s. [abalienatio, Lat.] an alienation, or estrangement from.

To ABA'NDON, v. a. [abandonner, Fr.] to forsake utterly; to cast off; to give up one's self wholly to any prevailing passion or vice. To abandon, is more applicable to things; leave, to person. He was under a necessity of abandoning his possessions, and compelled to leave his friends. To forsake, implies in resentment or dislike; to relinquish, quitting any claim; to desert, leaving meanly or treacherously. To quit, implies the breaking off from, and may be either voluntary or involuntary.

ABARTICULA'TION, s. [from ab and articulus, Lat.] a good construction of the bones, whereby they are apt to move easily and strongly; such as in the arms, hands, thighs, feet, &c.

To ABA'SE, v. a. [abaisser, Fr.] to lower, bring down, or humble.

ABA'SED, a. humbled; brought down. In heraldry, it means, when the tip of the vol or wings of an eagle are turned downwards towards the point of the shield.

ABA'SEMENT, s. the state of being brought low; the act of bringing low; depression.

To ABA'SH, v. a. [perhaps from abaisser, Fr.] to affect with sudden shame, or confusion; to dash. The passive is followed by the particles at or of.

To ABA'TE, v. a. [abattre, Fr.] to make or grow less; to diminish or decrease. These words are nearly synonymous. To abate, implies a decrease in action; diminish, a waste in substance; decrease, a decay in moral virtue; lessen, a contraction of parts.

ABATE'LEMENT, s. in commerce, a term used for a prohibition of trade to all French merchants in the ports of the Levant, who will not stand to their bargains, or who refuse to pay their debts.

ABA'TEMENT, s. [abatement, Fr.] in general, signifies the lessening or diminishing something. In heraldry, it is something added to a coat of arms, in order to lessen its true dignity, and point out some defect or stain in the character of the person who bears it. In law, it is the rejecting a suit, for some fault discovered, either in the matter or process, upon which a plea in abatement is grounded; and if the exception to the writ or declaration is proved, the plaint abates or ceases, and the process must begin anew. Among traders, it is the same as rebate or discount.

ABA'TIS, s. in Fortification, a range of large trees laid side by side, with their boughs outwards, to hinder the approaches of an enemy.

A'BBA, s. a Syriac word, signifying father. It is still given by Eastern christians as a title to their bishops.

A'BBACY, s. [abbatia, Lat.] the rights and privileges of an abbot.

A'BBE, (abbé) s. formerly the same with Abbot, but in a modern sense, the name of a description of persons in France, who act as tutors, instructors, companions, &c. and are sometimes provided for in the church, and sometimes in the state.

A'BBESS, s. a governess of nuns.

A'BBEY, s. [abbatia, Lat.] a monastery, or convent; a house of religious persons. To bring an abbey to a grange, a proverbial expression, to bring a noble to nine-pence. We apply it to spendthrift. At the dissolution of the abbeys under king Henry VIII. no less than 190 were in England, of between 200*l.* and 35,000*l.* yearly revenue, dissolved at a medium, amounted to 2,853,000*l.* per annum; a prodigious sum in those days!

A'BBEY-HOLM, (abby-home) in Cumberland. The market on Saturday. Distance from London 295 miles.

A'BBEY-MILTON, Dorsetshire; 112 miles from London.

A'BBOT, s. [abbad, Sax.] the chief ruler of a monastery, or abbey, of the male kind. At first they were laymen, and subject to the bishop and ordinary pastors, their monasteries being built in remote and solitary places. They were by degrees allowed to have a priest of their own body, who was the abbot.

A'BBOTS BROMLEY, a town in Staffordshire, six miles E. of Stafford, and 129 N. W. of London. It has a market on Tuesday.

A'BBOTSBURY, a town in Dorsetshire, 10 miles from Dorchester, and 128 miles from London. It is noted for a large swannery. Thursday is its market day.

To ABBREVIATE, v. a. to abstract from, shorten, or reduce to a less compass.

ABBREVIATION, s. a contraction or abridgment of a word or passage, by leaving out part of the letters, or substituting other marks or characters in the room of words.

ABBREVIATURE, s. the same with abbreviation.

ABBUTTALS, s. [abbuta, cor. Lat.] in Law, the buttings or boundings of lands, shewing on what other lands they are bounded.

To A'BDICATE, v. a. [abdico Lat.] to give up a right; to resign; to lay down an office.

ABDICATION, s. the act of abdicating; resignation.

A'BDOMEN, s. [Lat.] a cavity commonly called the lower venter, or belly: it contains the stomach, guts, liver, spleen, bladder, and is within lined with a membrane called the peritonæum. The lower part is called the hypogastrium; the foremost part is divided into the epigastrium, the right and left hypochondria, and the navel; it is bounded above by the cartilago ensiformis and the diaphragm, sideways by the short or lower ribs, and behind by the vertebræ of the loins, the bones of the coxendix, that of the pubes, and os sacrum. It is covered with several muscles, from whose alternate relaxations and contractions, in respiration, digestion is forwarded, and the due motion of all the parts therein contained promoted, both for secretion and expulsion.

To ABDUCE, v. a. [abduco, Lat.] to draw to a different part; to withdraw one part from another.

ABED, ad. [from a for at, and bed] in bed.

A'BEL-TREE, a species of poplar, which thrives rapidly in boggy soils, and is useful for wainscoting rooms, and for turnery ware.

A'BER, an old British word, signifying the fall of a lesser water into a greater, as of a brook into a river, and a river into the sea; also the mouth of a river, from whence several rivers, and towns built at or near their mouth, derive their names, as Aberconway, Aberdeen, Abergavenny, &c.

ABERA'VON, a town of Glamorganshire, in Wales, that had a market, which is now disused. It is seated at the mouth of the river Avon, 19 miles S. W. of Cowbridge, and 195 W. of London.

ABERBRO'THIC, or ABERBROTHOC, a town of Scotland, in the shire of Angus, seated on the river Tay. It had a monastery, which was demolished at the time of the Reformation; but there are yet magnificent ruins to be seen. There are two churches, one of which is half ruined. It has a pretty good harbour, advantageous for trade, and stands on a fertile plain. It is 15 miles N. E. of St. Andrew's, and 40 N. N. E. of Edinburgh.

ABERCONWAY, a town of Carnarvonshire, pleasantly situated on the declivity of a hill, with a fine prospect over the river Conway. It has a good harbour, and formerly carried on a considerable trade. Here is a magnificent castle, one of the most beautiful structures of the kind in Wales; it was built originally by the earl of Chester in the reign of William the Conqueror, was destroyed in the reign of king Stephen, and afterwards rebuilt by order of Edward I. Aberconway is 18 miles W. N. W. of Denbigh, 12 from Bangor, and 235 W. N. W. of London. Market on Friday.

ABERDEEN, the capital of Aberdeenshire, is the third city in Scotland for trade, extent, and beauty. It is formed of the old and new towns; the former, which is about a mile N. of the new, is situated on the Don, over which there is a lofty Gothic bridge of one arch, resting at each extremity on two rocks; the latter is on the Dee, over which there is a bridge of seven arches. Its university, consisting of King's College in the Old Town, and Marischal College in the New, has produced many learned men. The manufactures are stockings, cottons, thread, &c. which they export; together with excellent salmon, oatmeal, pickled pork, &c. The inhabitants, including the Old Town, are estimated at 35,000. A strong pier, forming an excellent harbour for vessels of moderate size, was erected here some years ago, on the N. side of the harbour of New Aberdeen. This pier is 1200 feet in length, and gradually increases in thickness and height as it approaches to the sea, where the head, or rounding, is 60 feet in diameter at the base, and the perpendicular elevation is 38 feet. To the S. of the bar, they have now a depth of 17 fathom at low water; and at the harbour mouth from 8 to 9 fathom, where they had formerly but a few feet. Aberdeen is 84 miles N. E. of Edinburgh. Lat. 57. 6. N. lon. 1. 40. W.

A'BERFORD, a small town in the west riding of Yorkshire, noted for pin-making. It stands on the Roman causeway; 16 miles from York, and 184 from London. Market on Wednesday.

A'BERFRAW, a village in Angelsey, where the princes of North Wales formerly resided. It is 263 miles from London.

ABERGAVENNY, a large populous town in Monmouthshire, noted for flannels; it has a market on Tuesday, and is 143 miles distant from London.

ABERYSTWYTH, a town in Cardiganshire, 30 miles from Cardigan, and 203 from London; has a great market on Monday.

ABE'RRANCE, s. [from aberro, Lat.] a deviation from the right way; an error.

ABE'RRANT, part. [aberrans, Lat.] wandering from the right or known way.

ABERRA'TION, s. [aberratio, Lat.] the act of deviating from the common track. In Astronomy, an apparent change of place in the fixed stars, which arises from the motion of the earth, combined with the motion of light.

To ABERUNCATE, v. a. [averunco, Lat.] to pull up by the roots.

To ABET, v. a. [betan, Sax.] to push forward another; to support him in his designs by connivance, encouragement, or help

ABETMENT, s. the act of abetting.

ABE'TTER, or ABE'TTOR, s. he that abets; the supporter or encourager of another.

To ABHOR, v. a. [abhorreo, Lat.] to hate with acrimony; to loathe; to abominate.

ABHORRENCE, or ABHORRENCY, s. the act of abhorring; detestation; the disposition to abhor; hatred.

ABHORRENT, a. struck with abhorrence. Contrary to, foreign, inconsistent with; used with from or to.

ABHORRER, s. a hater, detester.

A'BIB, s. [Heb. an ear of corn] the Jewish name of the first month of their ecclesiastical year, afterwards called Nisan. It answered to the latter part of March and the beginning of April.

To ABI'DE, v. n. [obidian, Sax.] to dwell in a place; not to remove; to dwell; to bear or support the consequences of a thing; to bear without aversion.

ABI'DER, s. the person that abides or dwells in a place.

A'BJECT, a. [from abjectus, Lat.] low, mean, beggarly. These words are synonymous.

To ABJE'CT, v. a. [abjicio, Lat.] to throw away.

ABJE'CTION, s. meanness of mind; servility; baseness.

A'BJECTLY, ad. meanly; basely; contemptibly.

ABI'LITY, s. [abal. Sax.] capacity or power to do any thing. Capacity has more relation to the knowledge of things; ability to their application. The one is acquired by study; the other by practice. When it has the plural number, abilities, it signifies the faculties or powers of the mind, and then it is synonymous with ingenuity, cleverness, parts. Ingenuity relates more to the invention of things; cleverness to the manner of executing them; ability to the actual execution of them; and parts to the discernment.

A'BINGDON, a town in Berkshire, sends one Burgess to parliament; is 7 miles from Oxford, and 56 from London. Markets on Monday and Friday.

ABINTE'STATE, a. [ab. and intestatus, Lat.] in the Civil Law, applied to one who dies without making his will.

ABJURA'TION, s. the oath taken for renouncing, disclaiming, and denying the Pretender to have any manner of right to the throne of these kingdoms. In our old customs, it implied a voluntary banishment of a man's self from the kingdom for ever, which in some cases was admitted for criminals, instead of putting them to death, provided they could shelter themselves in a church. Also the solemn recantation of some doctrine, as wicked and heretical.

To ABJU'RE, v. a. [abjuro, Lat.] to swear not to do something; to recant, or abnegate, a position upon oath.

ABLACTA'TION, s. [from ablacto, Lat.] the weaning a child from the breast; also what gardners call grafting by approach.

ABLAQUEA'TION, s. [ablaqueatio, Lat.] is opening the ground about the roots of the trees; an operation which the gardeners call baring of trees.

ABLA'TION, s. [ablatio, Lat.] the act of taking away.

A'BLATIVE, s. [ablativus, Lat.] in Latin Grammar, is the sixth case, and is opposed to the dative; the latter expressing the act of giving; and the former, that of taking away.

A'BLE, a. [abal, Sax.] endued with, or having power sufficient. Metaphorically, great powers arising from knowledge or wealth.

ABLEGA'TION, s. [ablegatio, Lat.] the act of sending abroad.

A'BLEPSY, s. [ablepsia, Gr.] want of sight.

To A'BLOCATE, v. a. [abloco, Lat.] to let out to hire.

A'BLUENTS, s. [from abluo, Lat.] with physicians, are diluting medicines.

ABLU'TION, s. [ablutio, Lat.] signifies the washing or purifying something with water. A ceremony in use among the ancients, and consisted in washing the body before sacrificing, or even entering their temples; and still practised by the Mahometans. In the church of Rome, a small quantity of wine and water, which the communicants formerly took to wash down and promote the digestion of the host. Among Chemists and Apothecaries, it is used for washing away the superabundant salts of any body: an operation they call edulcoration. See the word. Physicians use it for washing the external parts of the body by baths; or by cleansing the bowels with thin diluting liquids.

ABNEGA'TION, s. [abnegatio, Lat.] denial, renunciation.

ABNODA'TION, s. [abnodatio, Lat.] in gardening, the pruning, paring, or cutting away knobs, knots, or any other excrescences, from trees.

A'BO, the capital of Swedish Finland; built chiefly of wood, painted red; is a university, bishop's see, and good port; 140 miles N. E. of Stockholm. Lat. 60. 27. N. Lon. 22. 18. E.

ABO'ARD, ad. [a bord, Fr.] in a ship.

ABO'DE, s. place of residence; continuance in a place.

ABO'DEMENT, s. a secret anticipation of something future.

To ABO'LISH, v. a. [aboleo, Lat.] to repeal, destroy, and utterly erase any thing, so that no part of it remains.

ABO'LISHMENT, s. the act of abolishing.

ABOLI'TION, s. [abolitio, Lat.] in Law, denotes the repealing any law or statute; also the prohibiting some custom, usage, or ceremony, that had been long established.

ABO'MINABLE, a. [abominabilis, Lat.] that excites horror, joined with aversion and detestation. In conversation, this word is used to convey an idea of something superlative.

ABO'MINABLENESS, s. the quality which renders any thing odious.

ABO'MINABLY, ad. extremely, superlatively, in an ill sense, and a word of low language.

To ABO'MINATE, v. a. [abominor, Lat.] to abhor, detest, or have an extreme aversion to.

ABOMINA'TION, s. an object causing extreme aversion. When used with the auxiliary verb to have, followed by the participle in, to reckon, or look upon as an object of detestation.

ABORI'GINES, s. [Lat.] the primitive inhabitants of a country.

ABO'RTION, s. [abortio, Lat.] a miscarriage, or the exclusion of a child from the womb before the due time of delivery; in irrational animals, it is termed slinking or casting their young. In gardening, the word signifies such fruits as are produced too early.

ABO'RTIVE, a. [abortivus, Lat.] that is brought forth before its time. Figuratively, any thing or design which miscarries, is frustrated, or comes to nothing.

ABO'RTIVELY, ad. born before due time; immaturely, untimely.

ABO'VE, prep. [bufan, Sax.] higher in place or position; before nouns of time, it denotes more, or longer than. Figuratively, it signifies superiority, or higher in rank, power, or excellence; likewise beyond or more than.

ABOVE, ad. [this is distinguished from the prep. by the manner in which it is used, because that is followed by nouns, but this is not; and has a relation not to the words which precede, but those which follow it] a high place; and, figuratively, the heavens. In allusion to the method of writing anciently on scrolls, it denotes before.

ABOUKIR, otherwise called BIKER, or BIRE, and in French BEQUIERES, a small town of Egypt, lying in the desert between Alexandria and Rosetta. It is the ancient Canopus, and was formerly an island, according to Pliny, Strabo, &c. which its present local appearance, from the low grounds around it, renders very credible. The rock, on which the town is built, affords a convenient road for shipping. It is situated near one of the mouths of the Nile, 15 miles E. of Alexandria. See NILE.

To ABOUND, v. n. [abundo, Lat.] when used with the particles in or with, to have an excessive great number, or quantity of any thing; when used without the particles, to increase prodigiously, to be great in number, plenty, or excess.

ABOUT, prep. when applied to time or place, it denotes near, or within compass of; and when used before words implying measure. Its most simple acceptation is that of round, surrounding, or encircling, according to the Saxon, whence it is derived. Figuratively, annexed, or appendant to a person, as clothes, &c. concerning of, relating to.

ABOUT, ad. in circumference, or compass. "Two yards about." Merry W. Winds. Figuratively, the longest way, in opposition to the shortest, alluding to the difference between the circumference and diameter of a circle. When joined with go, it signifies from place to place, or every where. "He went about doing good." Acts. When prefixed to other verbs, it implies that the action or thing affirmed will soon happen; as, "about to fight." When following the verb to be, it denotes being engaged, or employed in: "What are you about?"

ABOUT', ad. [à bout, to an end, Fr.] a certain point, period, or state: "He has brought about his purposes;" i. e. he has accomplished them. When joined with come, it implies the thing arrived at a certain state or point. "When the time was come about." 1 Sam. i. 20. When joined with go, it implies preparation, or design. "Why go ye about to kill me?" John vii. 19. In familiar discourse we say, to "come about a man;" i. e. to circumvent him.

ABRACADA'BRA, a magical word, which has been used by credulous persons as a charm for the ague. To have this effect the word must be written on paper, and repeated, omitting each time the last letter in the former, so that the whole may make a sort of inverted cone, in which there is this property, that, whichever way the letters are taken they make the same word as is found in the first line.

To ABRA'DE, v. a. [abrado, Lat.] to rub off, or waste by degrees.

ABRA'UM, s. a species of red clay, used in England by the cabinet makers, to give a red colour to new mahogany wood. It is found in the Isle of Wight, also in Germany and Italy.

ABREAST, ad. [breast, Sax.] side by side; in such a position that the breasts may bear against the same line.

To ABRI'DGE, v. a. [abréger, Fr.] to shorten in words, so as to retain the substance; to express a thing in fewer words. Figuratively, to diminish, lessen, or cut short. Followed by the particles from or of, to deprive.

ABRI'DGMENT, s. [abrégement, Fr.] the contraction of a larger work into fewer words, and less compass; a lessening or diminution, in a secondary sense.

ABRO'ACH, ad. running out, in allusion to liquor, which is broached or tapped; to be in such a position that the liquor may easily run out. Figuratively, to undertake with a sure prospect of success.

ABRO'AD, ad. [a and brad, Sax.] without confinement, at large, out of the house, in a foreign country; in all directions; from without, in opposition to within.

To A'BROGATE, v. a. [abrogo, Lat.] to take away from a law its force; to repeal; to annul; to abolish; to revoke. Abrogate and repeal are terms rather to be used with respect to laws; abolish, with regard to customs; annul and revoke, to private contracts.

ABROGA'TION, s. [abrogatio, Lat.] the act of repealing, or the repeal of a law, used in opposition to rogation; distinguished from derogation, which implies the annulling only part of a law; subrogation, which denotes the adding a clause; from obrogation, which implies the limiting or restraining it; from dispensation, which sets it aside only in a particular instance; and from antiquation, which is the refusing to pass a law.

ABRU'PT, part. or a. [abruptus, Lat.] craggy, broken; sudden, unexpected, without the customary preparations; unconnected, when applied to compositions.

ABRU'PTION, s. [abruptio, Lat.] breaking off, separation.

ABRU'PTLY, ad. in a hasty, unexpected, rude manner.

ABRU'PTNESS, s. a hasty, unexpected, unceremonious manner; suddenness, the state of unconnectedness, ruggedness, cragginess.

ABSCE'SS, s. [abscessus, Lat.] a cavity containing pus or matter, so called, because the parts which were joined are now separated; one part recedes from another, to make way for the collected matter.

To ABSCI'ND, v. a. [abscindo, Lat.] to cut off. Not often used.

ABSCI'SSA, s. [Lat.] part of the diameter of a conic section, intercepted between the vertex and a semiordinate.

ABSCI'SSION, s. [abscissio, Lat.] the act of cutting off, the state of being cut off.

To ABSCO'ND, v. n. [abscondo, Lat.] to keep one's self from the view or knowledge of the public; to hide; applied to those who fly from the commerce of mankind, to escape the law, whether on account of debt or criminal actions.

A'BSENCE, s. [absentia, Lat.] distance, which renders a person incapable of seeing and conversing with another; used in opposition to presence: figuratively, inattention to the present object; because a person in that state resembles one who is distant. It is used with the particle from, which limits its signification.

A'BSENT, a. [absens, Lat.] at a distance from, out of the sight and hearing of a person. Figuratively, inattentive to, or regardless of something present.

To ABSE'NT, v. a. to withdraw, or decline the presence of a person or thing.

ABSENTEE', s. in Law, he that is absent from his station, or country; most generally applied to the Irish refugees.

ABSI'NTHIUM, s. [Lat.] wormwood. A plant whose leaves and flowers have a very bitter taste, and a very strong smell. It is not used by physicians.

To ABSO'LVE, v. a. [absolvo, Lat.] to acquit of a crime, to free from an engagement or promise; to pardon, in allusion to the absolution of a priest; to perfect, accomplish, or complete, applied to time.

A'BSOLUTE, a. [absolutus, Lat.] perfect, complete, without conditions; independent, without restraint or limitation.

A'BSOLUTELY, ad. completely; without relation; without limits or dependence.

A'BSOLUTENESS, s. completeness; freedom from dependence or limits; despoticism.

ABSOLU'TION, s. [absolutio, Lat.] in common law, a full acquittal of a person, by some final sentence; a temporal discharge for some farther attendance upon a mesne process: in ecclesiastical law, a juridical act, whereby a priest pronounces a pardon for sins to such as repent.

A'BSONANT, part. [absonans, Lat.] sounding harshly.

To ABSO'RB, v. a. [preter. absorbed, part. preter. absorbed or absorpt, from absorbeo, Lat.] to suck up.

ABSO'RBENT, s. [absorbens, Lat.] in physic, medicines which dry up redundant humours, whether applied internally or externally; likewise the lacteals, which absorb the chyle; the cutaneous vessels which admit the water in baths or fomentations; or those vessels which open into the cavities of the body, and imbibing the extravasated juices, convey them to the circulating blood.

To ABSTA'IN, v. a. [abstineo, Lat.] to forbear, to refrain from, or decline any gratification.

ABSTE'MIOUS, a. [abstemius, Lat.] temperate in the enjoyment of sensual gratifications. Figuratively, the cause of temperance. Sometimes used substantively, for those who practise the virtue of temperance.

ABSTE'MIOUSLY, ad. temperately; soberly.

ABSTE'MIOUSNESS, s. the quality of being temperate, or declining the gratifying of our sensual appetites.

To ABSTE'RGE, v. a. [absterge, Lat.] to wipe clean, to cleanse: used mostly by medical writers.

ABSTE'RGENT, a. [abstergens, Lat.] endued with a cleansing quality. In Medicine, it signifies medicines which resolve concretions, as soap, &c.

A'BSTINENCE, or A'BSTINENCY, s. [abstinentia, Lat.] in a general sense, the refraining from any thing to which we have a propensity; used with the particle from. In a more limited sense, fasting, or the forbearance of necessary food: distinguished from temperance, as that implies a moderate use of food, but this a total avoiding of it for a time.

To ABSTRA'CT, v. a. [abstraho, Lat.] to take one thing from another. Figuratively, to separate, followed by the particle from: used absolutely, the exercise of the faculty of the mind, named abstraction; or separating ideas from one another. When applied to writings, to reduce their substance to less compass.

A'BSTRACT, a. [abstractus, Lat.] separated from something else; generally applied to the operations of the mind. Abstract terms, are those which signify the mode or quality of a being, without any regard to the subject in which it inheres; it is used with the particle from. Abstract mathematics, those branches which consider the quantity, without restriction to any particular species of it. Abstract numbers, are assemblages of units, considered in themselves, without being applied to any subject.

A'BSTRACT, s. a compendious view of a treatise, more superficial than an abridgment. Figuratively, applied to persons, those who comprehend all the qualities, good or bad, to be found in the species.

ABSTRA'CTED, part. separated, refined, or abstruse; a disposition of mind whereby a person is inattentive to external objects, though present.

ABSTRA'CTEDLY, ad. with abstraction; simply; separately from all contingent circumstances.

ABSTRA'CTION, s. [abstractio, Lat.] an operation or faculty of the mind, whereby we separate things that are in themselves inseparable, in order to consider them apart, independant of one another; whereas precision separates things distinct in themselves, in order to prevent the confusion which arises from a jumble of ideas. Sometimes it is used for the exercise of this faculty. The state of being inattentive to external objects, or absence of mind. In pharmacy, the drawing off or exhaling a menstruum from the subject it was intended to resolve.

ABSTRA'CTLY, ad. simply, separately.

ABSTRU'SE, a. [abstrusus, Lat.] obscure, dark, not easy to be understood; deep, hidden, or far removed from the common apprehensions or ways of conceiving.

ABSTRU'SELY, ad. obscurely, not plainly.

ABSTRU'SENESS, or ABSTRU'SITY, s. difficulty, darkness, obscurity, hard to be understood or comprehended.

ABSU'RD, a. [absurdus, Lat.] not agreeable to reason, or common sense, or that thwarts, or goes contrary to, the common notions and apprehensions of men; inconsistent, contrary to reason.

ABSU'RDITY, or ABSU'RDNESS, s. [absurditas, Lat.] a contradiction to common sense; an inconsistence with reason.

ABSU'RDLY, ad. improperly, unreasonably.

ABU'NDANCE, s. [abondance, Fr.] great plenty; a great many; vast numbers, as abundance of people; a great quantity; more than sufficient.

ABU'NDANT, a. [abundans, Lat.] plentiful; exuberant; numerous; well stored with; replete, or abounding. Abundant number, is a number the sum of whose aliquot parts is greater than the number itself. Thus the aliquot parts of 12, being 1, 2, 3, 4, and 6; they make, when added together, 16.

ABU'NDANTLY, ad. amply, liberally.

A'BURY, or A'VEBURY, in Wiltshire near Marlborough Downs; noted for the stupendous remains of a Druidical temple, like Stonehenge.

To ABU'SE, (abcúze) v. a. [abutor, Lat.] to make a bad use of; to impose upon, or deceive; to treat rudely.

ABU'SE, s. the ill or improper use of a thing; a vicious practice or bad custom; unjust censure; carnal knowledge, either with or without violence.

ABU'SER, (abcúzer) s. the person who makes an ill use of any thing. An impostor, seducer, ravisher; one who makes use of reproachful language, or is guilty of rudeness towards another.

ABU'SIVE, a. [abusivus, Lat.] insolent; offensive; injurious.

ABU'SIVELY, ad. reproachfully.

ABU'SIVENESS, s. the use of reproachful language; or the exercise of rude and unmerited incivility.

To ABU'T, or ABU'TT, v. a. [aboutir, Fr.] to terminate, bound, or border upon another place or thing.

ABU'TMENT, s. that which abuts or borders upon another.

ABY'SS, s. [abyssus, Lat.] a bottomless pit or gulf, or any prodigious deep where no bottom can be found, or is supposed to have no bottom; a vast unfathomable depth of waters; the vast collection of waters supposed to be inclosed in the bowels of the earth. Among divines, it is often used to signify hell. In a figurative sense, that in which any thing is lost.

ABYSSI'NIA, called also HIGHER ETHIOPIA, and by the Arabians, ALHABASH, a very ancient kingdom or empire in Africa. It is bounded on the N. by Nubia, on the E. by the Red Sea and Adel, on the S. and W. by Ajan, Alaba, Gingiro, and Goram; lies between 6 and 20 degrees N. lat. and between 26 and 44 E. lon. It is about 900 miles long and 800 broad, and contains 378,000 square miles. The mountains are very high here, and scattered all over the country: in some parts they are so steep, that the inhabitants ascend them by ladders, and draw up the cattle with ropes; among these the Nile and the Niger have their source; and here, as in Egypt, they have their periodical inundations, which greatly fertilize the plains. The thunder and lightning here are sometimes tremendous, and the winds no less dreadful, overturning the houses, and tearing up trees by the roots; and the rain comes down like torrents. Their rainy season holds for near six months, during our summer months, and is succeeded by an equal period of cloudless sky. Gold, silver, and copper mines, are found here; the vegetables are various; the animals are, the lion, leopard, elephant, rhinoceros, dromedary, camel, stag, horse, cow, goat, sheep, monkeys, &c. with a great variety of birds, as the ostrich, eagles, vultures, storks, &c. and in the rivers are found the crocodile and the hippopotamus. The complexions of the inhabitants are copper-coloured, olive, and black; their religion seems to be a mixture of Judaism and the profession of the Greek church; their language is the Ethiopic, which bears a great affinity to the Arabic. The emperor or king is called Negus; and he has commonly been taken for Prestor John. His authority is absolute. The habit of persons of quality is a silken vest, with a sort of scarf; but the common people wear nothing but a pair of drawers.

AC, AK, or AKE, at the beginning or ending of a name of a town or place, is the Saxon word ac, which signifies an oak; as Acton is as much as to say Oak-town, and Austin's ac, Austin's oak; and as for the names of persons of the same form, they are for the most part derived from the places of their birth, or some achievements there.

ACA'CIA, s. [Lat.] in Botany, Egyptian thorn, or binding bean-tree. The Acacia, styled Vera, i. e. true, is the tree from whose branches exudes the Gum Arabic, and from whence the Succus Acaciæ, or Juice of Acacia, is drawn.

ACADE'MIC, or ACADE'MICK, s. in a large sense, signifies a member of an university or school, where languages and other branches of polite education are taught; in a stricter sense, a philosopher who followed the doctrine of Socrates and Plato as to the uncertainty of knowledge, and the incomprehensibility of truth.

ACADE'MIC, or ACADE'MICK, a. [academicus, Lat.] belonging to the academy.

ACADEMI'CIAN, or ACADE'MIAN, s. a name used for members of modern Academies, or instituted societies of learned men.

ACA'DEMY, s. [academia, Lat.] It was originally a public place planted with trees at Athens, so called from one Academus, who presented it. A place where learned men met to confer upon discoveries already made in the sciences, or to try experiments for their further improvement. It is sometimes used for a college, or university; a place where persons are taught the liberal arts and sciences, &c. It is also used for a particular society of ingenious persons, established for the improvement of learning, &c. and for a sort of collegiate school or seminary, where young persons are instructed in a private way, in the liberal arts and sciences.

ACA'DIA, or Nova Scotia, or New Scotland, one of the British Colonies in North America, situated between 41 and 51 degrees of N. lat. and between 53 and 70 degrees of W. lon. It is bounded by the river St. Lawrence and the Atlantic Ocean on the east, and by the bay of Fundy and the seas of Acadia on the south, and by Canada and the United Provinces on the west. The French ceded it to the English by the peace of Utrecht, who have planted a colony there. It is a very fruitful country, and affords plenty of game. In 1784 it was divided into two governments, one of which is called New Brunswick.

ACAPU'LCO, in Mexico, an inconsiderable town, consisting of only 2 or 300 thatched cottages; unless at the annual fair, which lasts about 30 days, when it suddenly becomes a populous city, crowded with the richest commodities of India, brought by the Manilla galleon; the treasures of Peru, brought by the annual ship from Lima; and all sorts of European goods, brought over land from Vera Cruz. Acapulco is seated on a commodious and excellent bay, in the South Sea, and has a harbour free and open for ships of any burden; the best, indeed, on all the western coast of Spanish America. Lat. 17. 22. N. lon. 102. 20. W.

ACA'RA, a fresh water fish; a native of Brazil, which resembles the perch, but is much smaller and very delicate food.

ACARA'AYA, a Brazilian sea fish, which is three feet long, resembles a carp, and is eaten both fresh and salted.

ACARAMU'CU, a very remarkable fish which inhabits the western ocean, and some other seas. It is about eight inches long, and three broad. In the fore part of its mouth, which is very small, there are sharp triangular teeth both above and below. On each side, just below the eyes there are two squarish fissures, which serve instead of gills; and on the ridge of the back just behind the eyes, there is placed a fine slender pointed horn, about three inches long.

ACARAPITA'MBA, a Brazilian sea fish resembling the mullet.

ACARAPU'CU, a Brazilian fresh water fish about eighteen inches long, which has lips which it can hide or display at pleasure.

ACARAU'NA, the name of two species o American fishes, one of which is called the old-wife, and is frequently preserved in the cabinets of the curious. The upper jaw has on each side four sharp thorns growing from it, and the lower two very large and sharp ones bending downwards, and in shape and structure resembling a cock's spur, and from these runs up a row of small thorns to the eye.

ACA'RUS, a kind of vermin which lodges in the skin and excites itching.

To ACCE'DE, v. n. [accedo, Lat.] to come to, to draw near to, to enter into, or to add one's self to something already supposed to take place.

To ACCE'LERATE, v. a. [accelero, Lat.] to hasten, to quicken, to spur on with superadded motion and expedition.

ACCELERA'TION, s. the act of quickening motion, &c. With philosophers, a continual increase of velocity in any heavy bodies, tending towards the centre of the earth by the force of gravity. With the ancient astronomers, a term used in respect to the fixed stars, which signified the difference between the revolution of the primum mobile and the solar revolution: it was computed at 3 minutes and 56 seconds.

To ACCE'ND, v. a. [accendo, Lat.] to set on fire.

ACCE'NSION, s. [accensio, Lat.] in philosophy, the kindling or setting any natural body on fire.

A'CCENT, s. [accentus, Lat.] the rising or falling of the voice; a tone and manner of pronunciation contracted from the country in which a person was bred, or resided a considerable time. With rhetoricians, a tone or modulation of the voice, used sometimes to denote the intention of the speaker, with regard to energy or force, and expressive of the sentiments and passions. Grave Accent, is this mark (`) over a vowel, to shew that the voice is to be depressed. Acute Accent, is this mark (´) over a vowel, to shew that the voice is to be raised. Circumflex Accent, is this mark (^) over a vowel in Greek, and points out a kind of undulation in the voice. The Long Accent, shews that the voice is to dwell upon the vowel, and is expressed thus (-). The Short Accent (in Grammar) shews that the time of pronouncing ought to be short, and is marked thus (˘). The two last, however, come properly under the head Quantity, and not Accent. In Music, it is a certain undulation or warbling of the voice, to express the passions either naturally or artificially.

To ACCE'NT, v. a. [from accentus, Lat.] to mark with an accent; to pronounce with regard to the accents.

To ACCE'NTUATE, v. a. [accentuer, Fr.] to place the proper accents in reading, speaking, or writing, on the vowels or syllables of any word.

ACCENTUA'TION, s. a pronouncing or marking a word, so as to lay a stress of the voice on the right word or syllable.

To ACCE'PT, v. a. [accipio, Lat.] to receive favourably or kindly; to take with particular approbation: used either with or without the particle of.

ACCE'PTABLE, a. [acceptable, Fr.] that may be favourably or kindly received; agreeable.

ACCE'PTABLY, ad. in an acceptable manner.

ACCE'PTANCE, s. [acceptance, Fr.] an accepting or receiving favourably or kindly; sometimes the meaning or manner of taking a word with the accent promiscuously on the first or second syllable. In law, it is the tacit agreement to some act done by another before, which might have been avoided, if such agreement or acceptance had not been made. In commerce, it is the subscribing or signing an inland bill of exchange, which makes the person debtor for the sum of its contents, and obliges him to discharge it at the time which it mentions.

ACCEPTA'TION, s. [acceptation, Fr.] the received meaning of a word, or the sense in which it is usually taken; reception of any person or thing, either agreeably or not; particular regard as to acceptableness and manner of reception.

ACCE'PTER, s. in commerce, the person who accepts a bill by signing it, and therefore obliges himself to pay the contents when due.

ACCE'SS, s. [accessus, Lat.] admittance, approach, or passage to a place or person; licence or means to approach any thing; accession to any thing; the return or fit of an ague or other distemper.

ACCE'SSIBLE, a. [accessibilis, Lat.] that may be approached, reached, or come to. It is used with the particle to before the object. Accessible height, is either that which may be measured mechanically, by applying a measure to it; or else it is a height whose base can be approached to, and from thence a length measured on the ground.

ACCE'SSION, s. [accessio, Lat.] addition or increase; the act whereby a thing is superadded to another; joining one's self to any thing else, coming to, as the coming of a king to the crown. In physic, the beginning of a paroxysm.

A'CCESSORY, or ACCESSARY, s. in civil law, any thing that of right belongs or depends on another, although it be separated from it; as if tiles be taken from an house to be laid on again, they are an accessary, if the house be to be sold. By statute, a person who commands, advises, or conceals an offender, guilty of felony by statute. In common law, a person guilty of felony, though not principally, as by advice, command, concealment; and this may be either before or after the fact.

A'CCIDENCE, s. [accidentia, Lat.] a little book, containing the first principles of the Latin tongue.

A'CCIDENT, s. [from accidens, Lat.] a casualty or chance; a contingent effect, or something produced casually, or without any foreknowledge or destination of it in the agent that produced it, or to whom it happens. A thing is also frequently stiled an accident in reference to its cause, or at least to our knowledge of it; and by this an effect either casually produced, or which appears to have been so to us is commonly understood. In grammar, the property of words, such as their division into substantives, and adjectives, their declensions, cases, numbers and genders of nouns; the conjugations, moods, tenses, numbers, persons, &c. of verbs. In physic it is analogous to the word symptom. In heraldry, accidents are additions, notes, or marks in a coat of armour which are not necessary to it, such as abatements and differences; and in astrology, the most extraordinary occurrences in the course of a man's life.

ACCIDE'NTAL, a. [accidentalis, Lat.] pertaining to accidents, happening by chance.

ACCIDE'NTALLY, ad. casually; fortuitously.

ACCI'DIOUS, a. [accidius, Lat.] slothful.

ACCI'DITY, s. [acciditas, Lat.] slothfulness.

ACCI'NCT, a. [accinctus, Lat.] girded, prepared, ready.

ACCI'PIENT, part. [accipiens, Lat.] receiving. Substantively, a receiver.

ACCLAMA'TION, s. [acclamatio, Lat.] a shouting for joy; expressing applause, esteem, or approbation.

ACCLI'VITY, s. [acclivitas, Lat.] the ascent of a hill; and among geometers, the slope of a line or plane inclining to the horizon upwards.

ACCLI'VOUS, a. [acclivus, Lat.] rising upwards with a slope.

To ACCLO'Y, v. a. to crowd, to overfil; to surfeit or satiate.

ACCLO'YD, part. with farriers, denotes a horse being pricked in shoeing.

To ACCOI'L, v. n. to bustle, crowd, or be in a hurry. See Coil.

A'CCOLENT, s. [accolens, Lat.] he who inhabits near, or a borderer on any place.

ACCO'MODABLE, a. [accommodabilis, Lat.] that may be fitted to another thing, in its primary signification; in its secondary, that may be reconciled to, is consistent with, or may be applied to.

To ACCO'MMODATE, v. a. [accommodo, Lat.] to provide or furnish with conveniences; to agree, compose, make up, or adjust a matter in dispute; to adapt, fit, or apply one matter or thing to another.

ACCO'MMODATE, a. [accommodatus, Lat.] when used with the particle for, it denotes convenient or proper; with the particle to, it implies suitable.

ACCO'MMODATELY, ad. suitably; fitly.

ACCOMMODATION, s. [accommodatio, Lat.] an adapting, fitting, adjusting, &c. the composing or putting an end to a difference, quarrel, &c. Convenience.

ACCO'MPANIMENT, s. the adding of one thing to another by way of ornament. In heraldry, the mantlings, supporters, &c. In music, the instrumental part playing or moving while the voice is singing.

To ACCO'MPANY, v. a. [accompagner, Fr.] to go or come with, to wait on, to keep company with; to join or unite with. To accompany a voice, i. e. to play to it with proper instruments.

ACCO'MPLICE, s. [complice, Fr.] one who has a hand in a matter, or who is privy to the same crime or design with another.

To ACCO'MPLISH, v. a. [accomplir, Fr.] to complete; to fulfil; to execute or bring a matter or thing to perfection; to complete a period of time; to obtain or acquire. A person well accomplished, one who has extraordinary parts, and has acquired great accomplishments in learning.

ACCO'MPLISHMENT, s. the perfecting, ending, fulfilling, or achieving of any matter or thing entirely or completely. Also an acquirement in learning, arts, sciences, or good behaviour.

ACCO'MPT, (acóunt) s. [compte, Fr.] all computations made arithmetically. In Commerce, all those books in which merchants and other traders register their transactions. Merchants' Accompts, are those which are kept by double entry. Accompt in Company, is between two merchants or traders, wherein the transactions relative to their partnership are registered. Accompt in Bank, is a fund deposited either at some banker's, or the Bank, by traders, as running cash, to be employed in the payment of bills. Accompt of Sales, is an information given by one merchant to another, or by a factor to his principal, of the disposal, net proceeds, &c. of goods sent for the proper account of the sender or senders who consigned the same.

ACCO'MPTANT, (akóuntant) s. [accomptant, Fr.] one who is not only well skilled in casting up accompts, but in bookkeeping.

ACCO'MPTANTSHIP, (akóuntantship) s. the qualifications necessary for an accomptant.

ACCO'RD, s. [accord, Fr.] agreement or compact; agreement of mind; mutual harmony or symmetry. Self motion; as, "It opened of its own accord." In common law, agreement between several persons or parties to make satisfaction for an affront or trespass committed one against another. In music, it is the production, mixture, and relations, of two sounds, of which the one is grave, the other acute.

To ACCO'RD, v. n. [accorder, Fr.] to agree; to hang together. Actively, to tune two or more instruments, so as they shall sound the same note when touched by the hand or bow; to harmonize.

ACCO'RDANCE, s. friendship, conformity, consistence, or agreement with.

ACCO'RDING, prep. agreeable to; in proportion; with regard to.

ACCO'RDINGLY, ad. conformably; consistently. In the beginning of a sentence it refers to what went before, and implies a deduction from it.

ACCO'RPORATED, part. [accorporatus, Lat.] joined or put to; embodied.

To ACCO'ST, v. a. [accoster, Fr.] to make or come up to a person, and speak to him.

ACCO'UNT, s. a computation of the number of certain things; a reckoning. The total or result of computation; estimation of value; rank, dignity, or distinction; regard, consideration, for the sake of; as, "Sempronius gives no thanks on this account." Reason or cause; narrative or relation; opinion or belief; review or examination; explanation, or assignment of causes; the reasons of any thing collected; profit, gain, or advantage. In a law sense, a particular detail or enumeration delivered to a court or judge, &c. of what a man has received or expended for another, in the management of his affairs. Also, in common law, a writ or action that lies against a man, who by his office is obliged to give an account to another (as a bailiff to his master) and refuses to do it. Upon no account, or by no means. Upon all accounts. By all means. In every respect.

To ACCOUNT, v. a. to compute; in the passive voice, to be reckoned or esteemed. With the particle for, it denotes to explain by assigning the cause and reasons. With the particle to, it implies to be charged, applied, appropriated, or assigned to. With the particle of, to estimate, or to be valued. Lastly, to be imputed.

ACCOUNTABLE, a. liable to give an account, answerable.

ACCOUNTANT, s. an officer appointed to keep or make up the accounts of a company, office, or court. The Accountant general is an officer belonging to the court of chancery, appointed by parliament to receive all money lodged in court, and to convey it to the bank of England.

To ACCOUPLE, v. a. [accoupler, Fr.] to link or join together.

To ACCOUTRE, v. a. [accoutrer, Fr.] to dress, attire, trim, especially with warlike accoutrements.

ACCOUTREMENT, s. dress; equipage, furniture, or habiliments of war; ornaments.

ACCRE'TION, s. [accretio, Lat.] the act of growing to another, so as to augment it. With naturalists, an addition of matter to any body externally; but it is frequently applied to the increase of such bodies as are without life; and it is also called apposition.

ACCRE'TIVE, a. [from accretio, Lat.] that by which growth is increased; that by which vegetation is augmented.

A'CCRINGTON, a populous village near Blackburn, Lancashire. Messrs. Peels and Co. carry on a very extensive cotton manufactory here, in spinning, weaving, bleaching and printing; supposed to be the most extensive of the kind in the kingdom.

To ACCRO'ACH, v. a. [accracher, Fr.] a law term, to encroach, to draw away another's property.

ACCRO'ACHMENT, s. the act of encroaching the property of another.

To ACCRUE, v. n. [accroitre, Fr.] to be increased, or added to. In a Commercial sense, to arise or proceed from.

ACCUBA'TION, s. [from accubo, Lat.] a posture of the body between sitting and lying. It was the table-posture of the Greeks and Romans.

ACCU'MBENT, a. [accumbens, Lat.] leaning.

To ACCU'MULATE, v. a. [accumulo, Lat.] to heap on or pile one thing upon another; to gather or amass together in great quantities.

ACCUMULA'TION, s. [accumulatio, Lat.] repeated acquisitions and additions; an amassing; the state of a thing amassed.

ACCU'MULATIVE, a. that which increases, or that which is added to; additional.

ACCU'MULATOR, s. he that accumulates; a gatherer or heaper together.

A'CCURACY, or A'CCURATENESS, s. [accuratio, Lat.] exactness, justness, or nicety.

A'CCURATE, a. [accuratus, Lat.] done with care; exact either as to persons or things.

A'CCURATELY, ad. exactly; nicely.

To ACCURSE, v. a. to blast or load with a curse; to doom to destruction; to imprecate curses upon.

ACCU'RSED, part. lying under a curse, or excommunicated; execrable; that which deserves execration.

ACCU'SABLE, part. [accusabilis, Lat.] that which is liable to be found fault with, censured, or blamed.

ACCUSA'TION, s. the charging with some defect or crime. In law, the preferring a criminal action against any one before a judge.

ACCU'SATIVE, a. [accusativus, Lat.] a case in grammar which denotes the relation of the noun or pronoun, on which the action of the verb terminates. In English grammar it is called the objective case, and is easily distinguished in the pronouns; but in the substantives there is no difference but that the nominative precedes and the accusative follows the verb. In Latin and Greek it is the fourth case.

ACCU'SATORY, a. [accusatorius, Lat.] of or belonging to accusation.

To ACCU'SE, (akéuze) v. a. [accuso, Lat.] to charge with a crime; to inform against, indict, or impeach; to censure. It has the particle of, and sometimes for, before the matter of censure or accusation.

ACCU'SER, (akéuzer) s. the person who accuses.

To ACCU'STOM, v. a. [accoûtumer, Fr.] to inure or use one's self to any thing. It has the particle to before the thing accustomed to.

ACCU'STOMABLE, part. that which a person has practised or been used to for a continuance.

ACCU'STOMABLY, ACCU'STOMARILY, ad. according to use or custom.

ACCU'STOMARY, a. commonly practised, customary, usually done

ACCU'STOMED, a. according to custom; frequent; usual.

ACE, s. a single point or speck on cards or dice. Figuratively, the least quantity, or the smallest distance, i. e. with not an ace of it.

ACEPHALI, [from a and kephale, Gr.] certain ecclesiastics so called, who making profession of extreme poverty would not acknowledge any chief, whether layman or ecclesiastic; also certain sects which refused to admit the authority of the councils of Ephesus and Chalcedon.

ACE'PHALOUS, a. (akephalos, Gr.) without a head; figuratively, without chief or leader.

ACE'RB, a. [acerbus, Lat.] that has a compound taste, consisting of sour and astringent, such as most unripe fruits have.

ACE'RBITUDE, or ACE'RBITY, s. the rough sour taste of unripe fruit; severity of temper, roughness of manners.

ACE'RO'SE, a. [acerosus, Lat.] chaffy; full of, or mixed with chaff.

To ACE'RVATE, v. a. [acervo, Lat.] to raise up in heaps.

ACE'SCENT, a. [acescens, Lat.] tending to sourness.

ACE'TATES, in chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with the acetic acid.

ACE'TIC, a. in chemistry, derived from an acetate as the acetic acid.

ACE'TOUS, a. [from acetum, Lat.] having the nature of vinegar. The acetous acid is principally obtained from saccharine liquors which have undergone the vinous fermentation.

ACE'TUM, s. [Lat.] vinegar in general; any sharp liquor, as spirit of salt, nitre, vitriol, &c.

ACHA'IA, (akaia) now Livadia, a province of Turkey in Europe, which formerly contained the celebrated cities of Athens and Thebes, the oracle of Delphos, and several other remarkable places. Also a district in Peloponnesus.

ACHE, (ake) s. [ace, Sax.] a continual pain or smart in any part of the body. With farriers, a disease in horses, causing a numbness in the joints.

To ACHE, (ake) v. n. to be affected with pain.

A'CHERON, (ákeron) a river of Epirus, over which the poets feigned departed souls were ferried. Also a stinking fen or lake in the Terra di Lavora of Naples, between Cuma and Miseno, named Tenebroso Palus by Virgil, on account of the blackness of the waters. Figuratively, it is used for the state of departed souls, or the grave.

To ACHI'EVE, v. a. [achever, Fr.] to finish; to accomplish; to perform some notable exploit with success; to gain or procure.

ACHI'EVEMENT, s. the finishing of a notable action; the ensigns armorial of a family.

ACHI'EVER, s. he who acquires, or obtains, or performs some great exploit.

A'CHING, s. pain; uneasiness.

ACHROMA'TIC, a. [from a privative and chroma colour, Gr.] want of colour. Achromatic telescopes are contrived to remedy the aberrations in colours.

ACHRO'NICAL, a. [from akros highest, and nux night, Gr.] a term used in astronomy, signifying the rising of a star when the sun sets, or the setting of a star when the sun rises; in which cases the star is said to rise or set achronically.

A'CID, a. [acidus, Lat.] sour, sharp.

ACI'DITY, or A'CIDNESS, s. [aciditas, Lat.] keenness, sharpness; that taste which acid or sharp bodies leave in the mouth. With chemists, the acidity or keenness of any liquor that consists in sharp particles of salts dissolved, and put into a violent motion by means of fire.

A'CIDS, s. all things that affect the organs of taste with a pungent sourness. The chemists, however, call all substances acids that change the blue, green, and purple juices of vegetables to red, and combine with alkalies, earths, or metallic oxides, so as to form those compounds called salts. They are distinguished into two classes: the first comprehending those which are formed of not more than two principles, and the second composed of a greater number. They are compounds of oxygen with certain substances, and their names terminate with ic or ous according to the quantities of oxygen with which they are combined. Thus sulphuric acid contains more oxygen, and of course less sulphur than sulphurous acid.

ACI'DULATED, a. applied to medicines that have been mixed or tinctured with some acid.

ACI'DULES, s. a term applied by the modern chemists to the natural combination of some acids with a quantity of potash.

To ACKNO'WLEDGE, v. a. to confess or own; to be grateful or thankful for any benefit; to own or profess a former acquaintance with a person; to approve.

ACKNO'WLEDGMENT, s. concession of any thing; thankfulness, gratitude; confession of a fault; belief, attended with open profession. It supposes a question asked, whereas confession savours a little of self-accusation. We acknowledge what we had an inclination to conceal: we confess that which we were blameable in doing.

A'CME, s. [Gr.] with physicians, is used to denote the third degree or height of distempers, of which many have four periods. 1. The arche, or beginning. 2. Anabasis, or growth. 3. The acme, when the distemper is at the height. 4. The paracme, or declension of the disease.

ACO'LOTHIST, s. [from akolouthos, a companion Gr.] certain young persons among the ancient Christians who attached themselves to the company of the bishops. In the Roman church, one of the lowest order, whose business it is to prepare the elements, light the church, &c. The same term differently derived was applied to stoics, and other persons who were immoveable in their resolutions.

A'COLYTE, s. the same with acolothist.

A'CONITE, s. [aconitum, Lat.] properly the herb wolfsbane; but commonly used in poetical language for poison in general.

A'CORN, s. [acorn, Sax.] the fruit or seed of the oak.

ACOU'CHY, an animal of the cavy kind, much resembling the agoriti. It is a native of South America.

ACOU'STIC, a. [from akouo to hear, Gr.] that belongs to the organ of hearing. Acoustic nerve in anatomy, the same as auditory nerve.

ACOU'STICS, s. the doctrine of sounds. Either instruments or medicines that help the sense of hearing.

To ACQUAI'NT, v. n. [accointer, Fr.] to inform; to be accustomed, or be habituated to; to know perfectly; to make one's self agreeable to, to insinuate one's self into the favour of; to acquire a perfect and intimate knowledge of.

ACQUAI'NTANCE, s. [accointance, Fr.] applied both to persons and things, and followed by the particle with. Application productive of knowledge; personal knowledge arising from familiarity; an intimate friendship and alliance; a familiar and constant companion. Without the preposition, something to which one has been accustomed, when applied to things; applied to persons, a slight or superficial knowledge.

ACQUAI'NTED, part. informed; accustomed or habituated; familiar, or having perfect knowledge of; when followed by the particle with, it signifies perfect knowledge by application.

To ACQUIE'SCE, v. n. [acquiesco, Lat.] to yield to, to comply with, to rest satisfied with, used with the particle in.

ACQUIE'SCENCE, s. a tacit consent, submission, or yielding to; approbation, excluding all repining.

ACQUI'RABLE, a. that may be acquired or obtained; attainable.

To ACQUI'RE, v. a. [acquiro, Lat.] to attain, to purchase by one's labour.

ACQUI'RER, s. a gainer.

ACQUI'REMENT, s. gain; attainment.

ACQUISITION, s. [acquisitio, Lat.] an obtaining, the thing obtained.

ACQUI'SITIVE, a. [acquisitivus, Lat.] that is acquired, or gained.

A'CQUIST, s. [from acquérir, Fr.] additional increase, something acquired or gained; acquisition. In law, goods not held by descent or inheritance, but obtained by purchase. In polities, something gained by conquest.

To ACQUIT, v. a. [acquitter, Fr.] to discharge or free from; to clear from guilt, not to condemn, with of or from, before the crime; to discharge from any obligation.

ACQUI'TMENT, or ACQUI'TTAL, s. in law, a setting free from the suspicion of guilt, or an offence; also a tenant's discharge from or by a mesne landlord, from doing service to, or being disturbed in, his possession by any superior lord, or paramount.

ACQUI'TTANCE, s. a discharge or release given in writing for a sum of money, or other duty paid or done; the writing itself.

A'CRA, ACRE, or ST. JEAN D' ACRE, a sea-port of Palestine, called in scripture Accho, and by the Greeks Ptolemais; it underwent, in the time of the crusades, many sieges, as well by the Christians as Saracens; and lately, it has successfully sustained a memorable siege against Bonaparte. The bay, or harbour, which extends in a semicircle of 3 leagues as far as Mount Carmel, is open to the N. W. winds; yet the port is reckoned one of the best, and the town is one of the principal ones upon this dreary coast. It was here that our king Edward I. when prince, receiving a wound from a poisoned arrow, was cured by his wife Eleanor, who sucked out the poison. The Armenians and European merchants have their respective places of worship here, and carry on a pretty profitable trade with the Arabs. It is 28 miles S. of Tyre. Lat. 32. 30. N. lon. 35. 24. E.

A'CRE, s. [acre, Sax.] a measure of land containing forty perches in length, and four in breadth; or four thousand eight hundred and forty square yards. Such is, in general, the English acre. The French acre, or arpent, is one-fourth more; the Welch acre, commonly two English ones; the Irish, one acre, two roods, and 19 perches English. The number of acres in England, has been computed at 46 millions and 80,000. The territory of the United States of America, according to calculations made by order of Congress, contains 589 millions of acres, exclusive of water, which is computed at 51 millions more.

A'CRID, a. [acridus, Lat.] tasting hot and sour.

ACRIMO'NIOUS, a. abounding with sharp or corrosive particles, when applied to things. Figuratively, sharp and austere, applied to behaviour.

A'CRIMONY, s. [acrimonia, Lat.] sharpness, tartness, corrosive quality; severity of disposition; sharpness of temper.

A'CRITUDE, s. [acritudo, Lat.] a quality in a body, which affects the taste with a sensation of rough, pungent, and hottish sour.

ACROAMA'TICAL, a. [from akroaomai, to hear, Gr.] profound, abstruse, belonging to some secret doctrine. Several of the ancient philosophers had certain doctrines which they taught publicly, and others which they communicated to their most intimate disciples only.

A'CROSPIRE, s. [from akros highest, and speiro to sow, Gr.] a shoot or sprout from the end of seeds before they are sown.

A'CROSPIRED, part. and a. having sprouts.

ACRO'SS, ad. [SEE CROSS] crosswise, thwartwise.

ACRO'STIC, s. [from akros highest, and stichos a verse, Gr.] a poetical composition, the initial letters of which when added together, form a particular name.

ACROTERIA, s. [from akros, Gr.] in architecture: 1. little pedestals, commonly without bases, placed at the middle and both extremes of frontispieces or pediments, which serve to support statutes. 2. Those sharp pinnacles, or spiry battlements, standing in ranks about flat buildings, with rails and balusters. 3. The figures, whether of stone or metals, which are placed as ornaments, or crownings, on the tops of temples and other edifices.

To ACT, v. a. [ago, Lat.] to be active, to exert one's active powers; to exercise its active powers; to perform its proper functions; to perform the functions of life; to be excited to action; to perform, in allusion to the theatre; to counterfeit, in allusion to the office of a player; to be impelled, forced, or incited to or by action; to exert action, or produce effects upon a subject; to actuate, or be incited to action; to perform a character in a play.

ACT, s. [actum, Lat.] a deed, a performance; a part in a play; the power of producing an effect; a deed, or decree of parliament, or other court of judicature. In Physics, an effective application of some power or faculty. With metaphysicians, that by which a being is in real action. In law, an instrument or other matter in writing, to declare or justify the truth of a thing: in which sense records, decrees, sentences, reports, certificates, &c. are called acts. Matters of fact, transmitted to posterity in certain authentic books and memoirs. At the university of Oxford, the time when degrees are taken. The word act signifies something done which is remarkable. The word action is applicable indifferently to every thing we do, whether common or extraordinary. An elegant speaker will not say a virtuous act, but an act of virtue; whereas to say a virtuous action, is proper and elegant. Act of faith, in the Inquisition, is a solemn day held by the inquisitors, for the punishment of such as they declare heretics, and the absolution of the innocent accused, called by them auto da fé.

A'CTIAN, a. belonging to Actium. Actian games, games instituted according to some by Augustus, in memory of the victory obtained over Anthony, near the promontory and city of Actium; though others say, that Augustus only restored them. Actian years, or Actiac æra, in chronology, a series of years beginning from the conquest of Egypt, by Octavius, called also the æra of Augustus.

ACTI'NIA, a genus of sea animals of a cylindrical shape, and variable figure. Their mouth is placed at one of the extremities of the body, and furnished with many tentacula like those of insects, which are constantly in motion, and with which they catch their food. They lodge in the cavities of rocks on the coasts of the American islands.

A'CTION, s. [actio, Lat.] the exerting or employing any active powers in opposition to rest; something done or performed, a deed; power, influence, agency, or operation. In metaphysics, the exercise of an ability, which a being has to begin or determine a particular train of thought or motion. In ethics, the voluntary motion of a reasonable creature. In painting, or sculpture, the posture or attitude expressive of the passion the painter or carver would convey to the mind of a spectator. In horsemanship, the action of the mouth, the motion of the tongue and champing on the bit, which is discovered by an abundance of white foam, and is a token of mettle. With orators, actors, &c. it is the accommodating the person, voices, and gesture, to the subject. In poety, an event or series of occurrences, mutually connected and depending on each other, either real or imaginary, which makes the subject of a dramatic or epic poem. In law, a legal demand of, or the form of, a suit given by law, for the recovery of a person's right. Actions are either criminal or civil. Criminal are such as have judgment of death. Under this head are included, 1st, Actions penal, which lie for some penalty, corporal or pecuniary. 2. Actions upon the statute, brought on breach of any statute, and which did not lie before as an occasion of perjury. 3. Actions popular, given on breach of some penal statute, for which any person has a right to sue. In the plural number, actions, in commerce, imply the moveable effects; thus, a merchant's creditors have seized upon all his actions, i. e. they have seized upon all the debts owing to him. Action upon the case, in law, a general action given for redress of wrongs done without violence, and not provided against by a law. Action on the case of words, is where a person is injured in his reputation by words maliciously spoken. Action of a writ, in law, is when it is pleaded that the plaintiff has no cause to have it brought, though he may have another for the same.

A'CTIONABLE, a. [action and able, Sax.] in a law sense, that admits an action to be brought against it; punishable, blameable, or culpable.

A'CTIVE, a. [activus, Lat.] that has the power of acting, as opposed to passive; busy in acting, as opposed to idle; practical, not merely speculative, or in theory; nimble, quick, apt, or forward to act. Active principles, in chemistry, are spirit, oil, and salt; so named, because when their parts are briskly in motion, they cause action in other bodies. Active verbs, are such as not only signify doing, or acting, but have also nouns following them, to be the subject of the action. Thus, to love, to teach, are verbs active; because we can say, to love a thing, to teach a man. Verbs neuter also denote an action, but cannot have a noun following them. Such are, to sleep, to go, &c. In medicine, it implies such a dose as operates quick and with some force, as emetics, cathartics, and cordials.

A'CTIVELY, ad. busily; nimbly. In an active signification, as, "The word is used actively."

ACTIVITY, s. propensity, readiness, nimbleness to do a thing. Applied both to persons and things, a power of acting, operation, influence, continual exertion of the active powers, in opposition to indolence.

A'CTON BURNEL, Shropshire, 8 miles from Shrewsbury; so named from the Burnels, who formerly had a castle in it. A parliament was held here in the reign of king Edward I. wherein a statute, called the Statute Merchant, was made for the assurance of debts. The lords sat in the castle, and the commons in a barn, which is yet standing. A great part also of the castle, a very magnificent structure, still remains, its walls being exceedingly strong, and adorned with fine battlements, and rows of windows curiously carved.

A'CTOR, s. [actor, Lat.] he that does any thing; he that practises, in opposition to theory. A player.

A'CTRESS, s. [actrice, Fr.] a woman who personates a character on the stage. A female who performs any thing.

ACTS, s. in dramatic poetry, the divisions or principal parts of a play.

A'CTUAL, a. [actuel, Fr.] that includes or implies action; really in act, not merely in speculation.

ACTUA'LITY, s. the power of exerting action, or operating; activity; reality, or certainty.

A'CTUALLY, ad. in effect; really.

A'CTUALNESS, s. a quality which denotes the reality of the operation, existence, or truth of a thing.

A'CTUARY, s. [actuarius, Lat.] in law, the register or clerk who compiles the minutes of the proceedings of a court, particularly the clerk that registers the acts and proceedings of the convocation.

To A'CTUATE, v. a. [from ago, Lat.] to excite to action, to move, to quicken.

To A'CUATE, v. a. [acuo, Lat.] to sharpen.

ACULEATE, a. [aculeatus, Lat.] prickly; that terminates in a sharp point.

ACU'MEN, s. [Lat.] sharpness; applied either to material objects, or the faculties of the mind.

ACU'MINATED, part. [acuminatus, Lat.] sharp-pointed.

ACUPUNCTURE, a method of curing many diseases by pricking several parts of the body with a needle; much practised by the inhabitants of China and Japan, and not unknown to the ancients.

ACU'TE, a. [acutus, Lat.] sharp-pointed, sharp-witted, subtle, ingenious, vigorous in operation or effect. Acute, in geometry, that which terminates in a sharp point. Acute angle, that which is less than ninety degrees. Acute-angled triangle, that whose three angles are acute. Acute-angular sections of a cone, the same as an ellipsis. Acute, in music, shrill, sharp, or high in respect of some other note, opposed to grave. Acute, in grammar, an accent which teaches to raise or sharpen the voice, and is written thus (′). In physic, applied to diseases, are those that are very violent, and terminate in a few days.

ACU'TELY, ad. sharply.

ACU'TENESS, s. sharpness, applied to matter. Sagacity, or quickness of discernment. Capacity of distinguishing, or receiving impressions. Vehement, productive of a speedy crisis in a disease. Shrillness, applied to sound.

AD, at the beginning of English proper names, signifies the same with ad or apud amongst the Latins. So Adston signifies at or near some stone; Adhill, at or near some hill.

A'DAGE, s. [adagium, Lat.] a maxim or principle received as self-evident. A proverbial saying.

ADA'GIO, s. [Ital.] slow, grave, solemn. In music, a slow movement or time; when it is repeated twice, as adagio, adagio, it implies a very slow motion or movement.

A'DAMANT, s. [adamas, Lat.] a stone imagined of impenetrable hardness. The diamond, the loadstone. Figuratively, something that has any strong attraction.

ADAMA'NTINE, a. [adamantinus, Lat.] made of adamant; endued with the properties of adamant, not to be broken.

A'DAMITES, a sect of heretics, who imitated the nakedness of Adam during his residence in Paradise, and contemned marriage, because he is not said to have known Eve before the fall.

ADAM'S-APPLE, s. in anatomy, a prominent part of the throat.

To ADA'PT, v. a. [adapto, Lat.] to fit one thing to another, to proportion; to make one thing correspond with another, to suit.

ADAPTA'TION, s. the art of fitting one thing to another; or the fitness, suitableness, or correspondence of one thing with another.

ADA'PTION, s. the act of fitting, or suitableness.

A'DAR, in scripture chronology the twelfth month of the Jewish ecclesiastical year. It contains only twenty-nine days, and answers to the moon of February; so that it sometimes extends to March.

To ADD, v. a. [addo, Lat.] to increase by joining something new; to enlarge, to aggrandize. To perform the operation of joining one number to another.

A'DDABLE, or A'DDIBLE, part. [from addo, Lat.] that may be added.

A'DDER, s. [æther, Sax.] the kind of serpent commonly called the viper.

A'DDER'S-GRASS, or A'DDER'S-TONGUE, s. a plant without any flower; its fruit is oblong, and of an oval shape. It is esteemed a vulnerary, and applied internally or externally; the juice of it is given for internal wounds, and the ointment that is made of it is applied to those that are external.

A'DDER'S-WORT, s. an herb, so named on account of its virtue, real or supposed, of curing the bite of serpents.

A'DDICE, or A'DZE, s. [from adese, Sax.] a cooper's instrument to chop or cut with.

To ADDI'CT, v. a. [addico, Lat.] to give up one's self wholly to a thing; to apply one's mind wholly to it. It is mostly used in a bad sense.

ADDITAMENT, s. [additamentum, Lat.] a thing added, or addition.

ADDITION, s. [additio, Lat.] the act of adding or joining one thing to another, in order to increase its quantity or dimensions; the thing which is added; increase; interpolation, or the corrupting of writings, or tenets, by inserting something new or spurious. In arithmetic, one of the five principal rules. In law, a title given to a man, besides his christian, or surname, implying his estate, degree, occupation, age, or place of residence.

ADDITIONAL, a. that is added; that increases. With respect to arguments, a greater number, or more forcible ones.

A'DDLE, a. [from adel, Sax.] empty, rotten; commonly said of eggs that produce no chicks, though laid under the hen; and hence it is applied to a brain that produces nothing.

To ADDRE'SS, v. a. [addresser, Fr.] to prepare for use; to make ready, to prepare one's self for any action; to present a petition to; to make application to a person; to direct one's speech to a person, or body of men.

ADDRE'SS, s. [addresse, Fr.] an application in order to persuade; the suit or application of a lover; behaviour, or genteel carriage; quickness of understanding, presence of mind; an application from an inferior to a superior: the direction of a letter, or the method in which a person is directed to.

ADDRE'SSER, s. the person who carries the petition and delivers the address.

ADDU'CENT, part. [adducens, Lat.] that which draws to, or closes. In anatomy, applied to muscles that bring forward, close, or draw together, the parts of the body to which they are fixed.

A'DEL, a fruitful province in Africa, called also Zeilah, from a rich trading town of that name, seated near the Red Sea. In the centre of the country is Adela, where the king resides; and there is another place of note, called Barbora, near the sea-coast, an ancient town, of some trade. This country stretches along the S. coast of the Strait of Babelmandel, near to the Red Sea. It was formerly a part of Abyssinia.

ADE'MPTION, s. among civilians, is the privation or evocation of some donation or favour.

ADE'PT, s. [from adeptus, Lat.] one that understands all the secrets of his art, originally appropriated to chemists, but now applied to persons of any profession.

ADE'PT, a. thoroughly skilled in any thing; well versed in any matter.

A'DEQUATE, a. [adequatus, Lat.] equal or proportionate to; full, perfect, proper, sole, and entire.

A'DEQUATENESS, s. equality, perfect resemblance; justness of correspondence, exactness of proportion.

ADE'SSENARII, s. those who hold the corporeal presence of Christ at the sacrament, but in a manner different from the papists.

To ADHE'RE, v. a. [adhæreo, Lat.] to stick to, like any glutinous matter. Figuratively, to hold together, join, or unite with. To persist in, or remain firm to a party, person, or opinion.

ADHE'RENCE, or ADHE'RENCY, s. the quality of sticking to, strong attachment, steady perseverance.

ADHE'RENT, part. or a. clinging or sticking to. In logic, something added, or not essential to a thing.

ADHE'RENT, s. one who is firmly attached to any person, party, or opinion.

ADHE'RER, s. one who is tenacious of any tenet, or firmly attached to any person, party, or profession.

ADHE'SION, s. [adhæsio, Lat.] the act of cleaving or sticking to. Adhesion, to a natural body is used, and adherence to a party; but sometimes promiscuously.

ADHE'SIVE, a. remaining closely attached; sticking, or keeping to without any deviation.

ADJA'CENCY, s. [from adjaceo, Lat.] state of lying near to; the thing itself so lying.

ADJA'CENT, part. or a. [adjacens, Lat.] lying near or bordering upon; contiguous, or touching each other.

ADIA'PHORISTS, s. [adiaphoroi indifferent, Gr.] the followers of Melacthon, who in the fifteenth century was disposed to give up several points to the catholics for the sake of peace.

A'DJECTIVE, s. [adjectivum, Lat.] a word which denotes the qualities of a subject, as a great minister; the word great is an adjective, as denoting only the qualities of the minister. It derives its name from its being joined or added to another word, either expressed or understood, in order to limit the sense.

A'DJECTIVELY, ad. after the manner of an adjective.

ADIEU' ad. [Fr.] farewel. God be with you.

To ADJOI'N, v. a. [adjungo, Lat.] to join, to unite to, to add to; also, to be contiguous to, to lie so near as to touch or join to.

To ADJOU'RN, v. a. [adjourner, Fr.] to appoint a day to put off to another time; used chiefly of juridical proceedings, and the meeting of parliament.

ADJOU'RNMENT, s. the putting off a court or meeting, and appointing it to be kept at another time or place.

A'DIPOUS, a. [adiposus, Lat.] fat, greasy.

A'DIT, s. [aditus, Lat.] a passage, or entry; the shaft or entrance into a mine.

ADITION, s. [aditio, Lat.] a going or coming nigh to.

To ADJU'DGE, v. a. [adjudico, Lat.] to give judgment or sentence in a court of justice, with to before the person; to award, to sentence; simply, to determine or judge.

To ADJU'DICATE, v. a. [adjudico, Lat.] to determine any claim at law; to give or assign the right of something controverted to one of the claimants.

ADJUDICA'TION, s. [adjudicatio, Lat.] the act of judging, or giving to a person by a judicial sentence.

A'DJUNCT, a. and s. [adjunctum, Lat.] something united, but not essential; one joined to another, as a companion, or assistant. In philosophy, something added to a thing not essentially belonging to it: a mode that may be separated from its subject. Adjuncts, in grammar and rhetoric, are adjectives or epithets added to enlarge or augment the energy of a discourse.

ADJU'NCTION, s. [adjunctio, Lat.] the act of joining things together; or state of a thing joined.

ADJU'NCTIVE, s. [from adjunctivus, Lat.] he that joins; that which is joined.

ADJURA'TION, s. [adjuratio, Lat.] the form of an oath taken by any person; or an oath administered to any person, whereby he is under a necessity of speaking the truth without disguise.

To ADJU'RE, v. a. [adjuro, Lat.] to bind a person to do or not do any thing, under the penalty of a dreadful curse. To entreat earnestly by the most pathetic topic. To swear by. To oblige a person to declare the truth upon oath.

To ADJU'ST, v. a. [adjuster, Fr.] to make consistent, to regulate. To settle, to reduce to a standard, or criterion. To reconcile.

ADJU'STMENT, s. [adjustement, Fr.] a just description, an explication and obviation of difficulties in a subject. A just disposition of parts, wherein they conspire to promote and assist each other's motion.

A'DJUTANT, s. [from adjutans, Lat.] in the military art, an helper, or assistant. More particularly an officer in the army who assists a superior, particularly the major, in distributing the pay, and overseeing the punishment of the inferior men. Adjutant General, is one who attends the General, assists in council, and carries the orders from one part of the army to the other.

A'DJUTOR, s. [Lat.] a helper; one who gives assistance.

ADJUTRIX, s. [Lat.[a female helper, or a woman who assists.

ADLEGA'TION, s. a right claimed by the States of the German Empire of adjoining plenipotentiaries, in public treaties and negociations, to those of the emperor.

ADMEA'SUREMENT, s. the measuring or finding the dimensions and quantity of a thing by the application of a standard or rule. In law, a writ brought against such as usurp more than their due.

ADMENSURA'TION, s. [from ad and mensura, Lat.] the act of determining or finding out the length and other dimensions, by a standard, rule, or measure.

To ADMI'NISTER, v. a. [administro, Lat.] to afford, including the idea of help or service: to give. In politics, to manage, or conduct the affairs of government, including the idea of subordination. In judicial courts, to tender or apply to a person to take his oath. "To administer an oath." In church government, to perform the office of a minister, or priest, in giving the elements of bread and wine, &c. in the sacrament. "To administer the sacrament." In physic, to dispense medicines, prescribe and apply remedies. "Administering physic." To be subservient to; to contribute to; with the particle to. In law, to take possession of the goods and chattels of a person dying without will, to give in an inventory thereof on oath at the commons, and oblige one's self to be accountable for them.

To ADMI'NISTRATE, v. a. [administro, Lat.] to apply or make use of. "Inwardly administrated." A term peculiar to physic.

ADMINISTRA'TION, s. [administratio, Lat.] the act of enforcing, or applying, or giving sentence according to the sense of a law. The discharge of one of the chief offices of state, which respects the direction of public affairs. The active or executive part of government. Those who are entrusted with the care of public affairs. The due discharge of an office. The performance of the necessary rites, the act of distributing bread and wine, &c. in the eucharist. In law, the act or state of a person, who takes charge of the effects of one dying intestate, and is accountable for them, when thereto required. The bishop of the diocese, where the party dies, is to grant administration; but if the deceased has goods in several dioceses, termed in law bona notabilia, it must then be granted by the archbishop in the prerogative court. The persons to whom administration may be granted, are, 1st, to the husband, of his wife's goods and chattels; 2d, to the wife, of the husband's; but in default of either of these, 3dly, to the children of either sex; in case there be none, 4thly, to the father and mother; after them, 5thly, to a brother or sister of the whole or half blood; in default of these, 6thly, to the next of kin, as uncle, aunt, or cousin; and for want of all these, 7thly, to any other person at the discretion of the ordinary, &c. Administration cum testamento annexo, (with a testament or will annexed) in law, is where an executor refuses to prove a will, and on that account, administration with the will annexed to it, is granted to the next of kin.

ADMI'NISTRATIVE, a. that aids, supports, or assists.

ADMINISTRA'TOR, s. [Lat.] the person who officiates as a minister or priest in a church. He that has the chief management of national affairs. In law, he who has the goods of a man dying without will committed to his charge and is accountable for them, when required by the ordinary. The office of administrator is the same as that of executor, with regard to the burial, discharging funeral expenses, and payment of the debts, &c. of the deceased; but as this power is communicated by administration, he can do nothing before that is granted.

ADMINISTRA'TORSHIP, s. the office of administrator.

ADMINISTRA'TRIX, s. [Lat.] a female who has the goods and chattels of a person dying intestate committed to her charge.

A'DMIRABLE, a. [admirabilis, Lat.] worthy of admiration.

A'DMIRABLY, ad. so as to raise wonder; in an admirable manner.

A'DMIRAL, s. [amiral, Fr.] an officer who has the chief command of a fleet. According to Du Cange, the Silicians were the first, and the Genoese the next, who gave this name to the commander of their naval forces. The first mention of this name among us was in the reign of Edward I. Lord high-admiral, one invested with power to determine by himself or deputies, all crimes committed on the sea and its coasts. James, duke of York, and afterwards king, bore this office; but at present it is divided among several persons who are styled lord's commissioners of the admiralty. Under the admiral is a rear-admiral, who commands a third squadron of men of war, and carries his flag, with the arms of his country, in the mizzen-top of his ship; and a vice-admiral, who commands the second squadron, and carries his flag on the ships fore-top. Vice-admiral, also denotes one who is invested with the jurisdiction of an admiral within a certain county or district upon the sea-coast; who is to aid and assist persons that are shipwrecked within his jurisdiction, and to save and secure their goods. They are authorized to hear and determine disputes relating to maritime affairs arising within their limits; but an appeal lies from their sentence to the admiralty-court in London. There are upwards of twenty such vice-admirals in Great Britain.

A'DMIRALSHIP, s. the office of an admiral.

A'DMIRALTY, s. [amirauté, Fr.] the office or power of the lord high admiral, or lords commissioners. It usually consists of a first commissioner, who presides at the board, and six others, which take place in the order their names are set down in the commission. They have the chief direction of the affairs of the navy: their jurisdiction is over Great Britain, Ireland, Wales, and the dominions and isles thereto belonging. All warrants for building and providing ships with warlike stores, are signed by them. Court of Admiralty, is a sovereign court held by the lord high admiral, or commissioners of the admiralty; and has cognizance in all maritime affairs, civil as well as criminal. All crimes commited on the high seas, or in great rivers, below the bridge next the sea, are cognizable in this court only, which, by statute, is obliged to try the same by judge and jury. Civil actions are determined according to civil law, because the sea is without the jurisdiction of the common law. Under this court is also a court of equity, for determining differences among merchants. The Court of Admiralty was first erected by king Edward III.

A'DMIRALTY ISLANDS, a cluster of islands to the N. of New Britain, and nearly in parellel W. from New Ireland, They are between 20 and 30 in number, and were first discovered by captain Cartaret. He describes them as clothed with a beautiful verdure of lofty luxuriant woods, interspersed with spots that have been cleared for plantations with groves of cocoa-nut trees and houses of the natives, who appeared to be very numerous. The largest of the islands is about 18 leagues long, in the direction of E. and W. The inhabitants are a fierce intractable people, going quite naked, except that they have shells on their legs and arms, by way of ornament. They are of a dark copper-colour, nearly black, with woolly heads, which they profusely powder; they also paint their cheeks with white streaks. Lat. about 2. S. and lon. from 146. to 152. E.

ADMIRATION, s. [admiratio, Lat.] a passion excited, when we discover a great excellence in an object. In such a manner as to excite wonder. Surprise, including the secondary idea of something culpable. In grammar, a point or stop, which denotes that the sentence before it implies wonder or astonishment; marked thus (!)

To ADMI'RE, v. a. [admiror, Lat.] to look upon with some wonder, including esteem; and arising from the discovery of unexpected and inexhausted excellence.

ADMI'RED, part. that occasions great surprise and astonishment.

ADMI'RER, s. the person who feels the passion of admiration arising at the sight, or contemplation of any thing surprisingly excellent. He who wonders, or regards with admiration.

ADMI'RINGLY, ad. with admiration.

ADMI'SSIBLE, a. [from admitto, Lat.] that may be granted or admitted.

ADMI'SSION, s. [from admissio, Lat.] liberty or permission of entering. Access or liberty of approaching. A power of entering. The granting a proposition not fully proved. In law, is when the bishop, after examination, allows a priest to enter into a benefice to which he is presented, saying, Admitto te habilem: "I admit you as a person properly qualified."

To ADMI'T, v. a. [admitto, Lat.] to grant access to. To permit or suffer a person to enter upon an office. To grant, in a general sense; to allow.

ADMI'TTABLE, a. that may be admitted, applied both to persons and things.

ADMI'TTANCE, s. a permission of a person to take and exercise the functions of any office. Access, passage, or power of entering. A prerogative, or right of finding a ready access to the great. The acceding to, granting, or concession of, any position.

To ADMI'X, v. a. [admisceo, Lat.] to join to, or mingle with something else.

ADMI'XTION, s. the joining, blending, or incorporating one body or fluid with another by mixing.

ADMI'XTURE, s. the blending or mingling one body with another.

To ADMO'NISH, v. a. [admoneo, Lat.] to exhort, to give advice, with the preposition against. To reprove; to give a person a hint; to warn; to put in mind of a fault.

ADMO'NISHER, s. the person who reminds another of his duty, and reproves him for his faults.

ADMO'NISHMENT, s. admonition; notice of faults or duties.

ADMONI'TION, s. [admonitio, Lat.] a hint of duty. A reminding a person of his duty, or reproof for the neglect of it. In the ancient church, this was a part of discipline which preceded, and often prevented excommunication.

ADMONI'TIONER, s. a general adviser. A ludicrous term.

ADMO'NITORY, a. [admonitorius, Lat.] that exhorts and excites us to the performance of a duty.

To ADMO'VE, v. a. [admoveo, Lat.] to move towards, to approach, or bring nearer to. Not in use.

ADO', s. difficulty, when following much. With the preposition about, bustle, noise, or tumult. With the words great or more, it signifies a great appearance or show of business than what is real, and is taken in a ludicrous sense.

ADOLE'SCENCE, or ADOLE'SCENCY, s. [adolescentia, Lat.] the state of a growing youth, commencing from his infancy, and ending at its full growth: and lasting as long as the fibres continue to increase in dimensions or firmness: commonly computed to be between 15 and 25, if not 30 years of age. The Romans computed it from 12 to 25 in males, and to 21 in females.

ADO'NAI, one of the names of the Supreme Being in the scriptures. The Jews read Adonai in place of Jehovah, wherever they meet with it.

ADO'NIS FLOWER, s. a plant, the same with the red morocco, or red maithes.

To ADO'PT, v. a. [adopto, Lat.] to substitute another person's son instead of one's own, and make him capable of inheriting, as if so by nature. To acquire, in opposition to what is inherent by nature. To rely or confide in, and make use of as if our own.

ADO'PTER, s. he who gives some one by choice the right of a son.

ADO'PTION, s. [adoptio, Lat.] the act by which a person takes the child of another for his own son. In theology, an act of God's grace, whereby those who are regenerated are admitted into his kingdom and family.

ADO'PTIVE, a. [adoptivus, Lat.] that is adopted, in opposition to a son by procreation.

ADO'RABLE, a. [adorable, Fr.] that ought to be adored; worthy of divine honours.

ADO'RABLENESS, s. the quality which renders a being worthy of divine honours.

ADO'RABLY, ad. in a manner worthy of divine worship.

ADORA'TION, s. [adoratio, Lat.] the act of worshipping, including in it reverence, esteem, and love. The external act of homage paid to God, distinguished from mental worship. The act of prostration in honour of eastern monarchs.

To ADO'RE, v. a. [adoro, Lat.] to reverence, to honour with divine worship. To pay a high degree of regard, reverence, esteem, and homage.

ADO'RER, s. one who pays divine honours to the Deity. One who has a great and reverential regard. In common conversation, a lover, who almost idolizes the object of his affections.

To ADO'RN, v. a. [adorno, Lat.] to set off with dress, to deck with ornaments. To convey splendour, or pomp, To be embellished or graced with oratory and elegance of language.

ADO'RNMENT, s. the advantage of ornament, applied both to dress and the faculties of the mind.

ADO'WN, prep. towards the ground, downwards, or down.

A'DRAGANTH, s. in medicine, gum dragon. It distils by incision from the trunk or great roots of a plant, which is small and thorny, with thin slender leaves, and grows in several parts of the Levant. The gum is of different colours, as white, red, and black. It must be chosen clear, smooth, and twisting. It is of great use in medicine. Skinners and curriers use great quantities of it in preparing their leather, and prefer the red and black, though all others use the white or grey.

ADRE'AD, ad. in a state of fear.

A'DRIANOPLE, a considerable city of Romania, and the see of an archbishop, under the patriarch of Constantinople. It is about 7 or 8 miles in circumference, including the old city and some gardens. The houses are low, mostly built of mud and clay, and some of brick; and the streets are exceedingly dirty. The public buildings are the mosques, and a beautiful bazar, or exchange, called Ali Bassa, which is a vast arched building, with 6 gates, and 365 rich well furnished shops, extending half a mile in length, and kept by Turks, Greeks, Armenians, and Jews. The inhabitants are estimated at about 100,000. Adrianople is pleasantly situated on a beautiful plain, and is watered with three rivers, the largest of which, called the Mariza, is navigable. It is 115 miles N. W. of Constantinople. Lat. 41. 45. N. lon. 26. 27. E.

ADRIFT, ad. [adrifan, Sax.] driven at the pleasure of a torrent. In a figurative sense, at random, without restraint, or following the first impulse.

ADROIT, a. [Fr.] dexterous; active; skilful.

ADROITNESS, s. dexterity;, readiness, activity; assiduity. Johnson observes, that neither this nor the preceding word seem to be perfectly naturalized.

ADRY', ad. in want of drink; thirsty.

ADSCITITIOUS, a. [adscititius, Lat.] taken in to supply or complete; added unnecessarily. Spurious; interpolated, and not genuine; borrowed or counterfeit.

ADSTRICTION, s. [adstrictio, Lat.] the act of binding together; contracting into a lesser compass; applied to medicines which have the power of contracting the parts.

To ADVA'NCE, v. a. [avancer, Fr.] to bring forward, with relation to place. To raise to a higher post; to prefer. To exalt, by improvement. To adorn, heighten, to communicate honour. To hasten the growth, applied to vegetables. To propose: to offer to the public; to produce. In a mercantile sense to pay the charges of an undertaking before the time of reimbursement arrives. To give or lend a person money or commodities, before he begins the business which is to reimburse it.

ADVA'NCE, s. the act of coming forwards; to approach. Gradation, or gradual increase. Raising to a higher degree of dignity or perfection. Advance guard, is the first line of an army in battle array next to the enemy.

ADVA'NCEMENT, s. the act of gaining ground, progress. Promotion to a higher station; preferment. Raising to a greater pitch of perfection; improvement.

ADVA'NCER, s. he that promotes or forwards. Among sportsmen, one of the starts or branches of a buck's attire, between the back antler and the palm.

ADVA'NTAGE, s. [avantage, Fr.] used with of or over before the person, the better of a person, or superiority. Used with make, take, or get, it implies superiority acquired by stratagem or cunning. A favourable opportunity. In mercantile affairs, a premium, or profit, greater than what can be obtained by law.

To ADVA'NTAGE, v. a. to benefit. To improve, promote, or forward. To acquire profit; to profit.

ADVA'NTAGED, a. possessed of advantages; commodiously situate or disposed.

ADVANTA'GEOUS, a. that conduces to profit. Useful, or serviceable.

ADVANTA'GEOUSLY, ad. in a manner conducing to convenience or profit.

ADVANTA'GEOUSNESS, s. service or convenience.

To ADVE'NE, v. a. [advenio, Lat.] to become a part of a thing, including the idea of something superadded, and not essential.

ADVE'NIENT, part. [adveniens, Lat.] advening; coming from outward causes; superadded.

A'DVENT, s. [adventus, Lat.] signifies coming, particularly the coming of Christ, and in the calendar denotes the time immediately preceding Christmas, or the nativity of our Saviour. It includes four Sundays or weeks, which begin either on St. Andrew's day, if it be Sunday, or on the nearest one before or after it. During advent, and to the end of the octaves of epiphany, the solemnizing of marriage is forbid without a special licence.

ADVE'NTIVE, a. [from advenio, Lat.] that is acquired, in opposition to natural.

ADVENTITIOUS, a. [adventitius, Lat.] that is superadded or acquired, in opposition to natural. That is not of the same nature. Additional, or increased.

ADVE'NTUAL, a. relating to the season of advent.

ADVE'NTURE, s. [aventure, Fr.] an incident which is not under our direction; a hazard. Hazarding all dangers. An incident or occurrence. In commerce, a parcel of goods, sent by sea, at a persons own risque, to foreign parts. Bill of adventure, in the mercantile way, is a bill or writing signed by a merchant, testifying that the goods mentioned in it to be shipped on board such a vessel, belong to another person who is to run the hazard; the merchant being only to account for the produce of them, be it more or less.

To ADVE'NTURE, v. n. to stand the chance; to run the risque. In an active sense, to endanger.

ADVE'NTURER, s. [aventurier, Fr.] one who seeks occasions of hazard; one who exposes himself to danger; a knight errant.

ADVE'NTUROUS, a, that is ready to expose himself to the greatest dangers.

ADVE'NTUROUSLY, ad. in a hazardous, daring, and bold manner.

A'DVERB, s. [adverbium, Lat.] is a word joined to verbs, to express the manner, time, &c. of an action; as, he fought bravely; here bravely is an adverb. Adverbs are likewise added to nouns, and even to other adverbs, in order to modify or ascertain their meaning. Thus, he did the business extremely well: the word well qualifies the action of doing, and the word extremely does the same in regard to well.

ADVE'RBIAL, a. [adverbialis, Lat.] that is used in the sense of an adverb.

ADVE'BIALLY, ad. [adverbialiter, Lat.] like, or in the manner of, an adverb.

ADVERSA'RIA, s. [Lat.] a sort of common place book, used by students, to enter any remarkable observation or occurrence they meet with in reading or conversation.

A'DVERSARY, s. [adversarius, Lat.] one who sets himself in opposition to another. An enemy, or one who seeks to do another an injury.

ADVE'RSATIVE, a. [adversativus, Lat.] a word which makes some opposition or variety. In grammar, it expresses some difference between what goes before and what follows; as in the phrase, he loves money, but takes no pains to get it, the word but is an adversative conjunction.

A'DVERSE, a. [adversus, Lat.] contrary. Acting in opposite directions. Figuratively, contrary to the wish or desire. Applied to condition, unsuccessful; calamitous, in opposition to prosperous.

A'DVERSELY, or A'DVERSLY, ad. in an adverse or unhappy manner; disagreeably.

ADVE'RSITY, s. [adversitas, Lat.] a state which is opposite to our wishes, and the cause of sorrow.

To ADVE'RT, v. n. [adverto, Lat.] to take notice of; to regard, observe, to attend to; with the participle to before the object.

ADVE'RTENCE, or ADVE'RTENCY, s. attention to; regard to; consideration of; heedfulness.

To ADVERTISE, (advertize) v. a. [advertir, Fr. now accented on the last, but by Shakespeare on the second syllable] to determine a thing in suspense. To give a person notice or information. To publish a thing lost, found, or wanted, in the newspapers, or by hand-bills, with a description of its peculiarities; now practised instead of crying it.

ADVERTISEMENT, (advertizement, accented sometimes on the second syllable) s. [advertissement, Fr.] admonition; instruction; advice. Publication, a notice of a thing in a newspaper; or an article, containing the description of a thing lost.

ADVERTISER, (advertizer) s. he that brings or gives intelligence or information. The paper which contains advertisements.

ADVERTISING, or ADVERTISING, (advertizing) part. active in giving intelligence, advice, or admonition.

ADVICE, s. [avis, Fr.] opinion or counsel; instruction; the result of judicious reflection; prudence, or discretion. Followed by the participle with, consultation, deliberation. Used with the word receive or have, information, news, or intelligence.

ADVISABLE, (advizable) a. that may, or is fit to be advised; prudent.

ADVISABLENESS, (advizableness) s. the quality which renders a thing proper to be advised; fitness; propriety.

To ADVISE, (advize) v. a. [aviser, Fr.] to recommend a thing as useful. To give a person an idea or hint of; to remind. To inform, or give intelligence of an action transacted at a distance.

To ADVISE, (advize) v. n. [adviser, Fr.] used with the particle with before the person, to consult. To consider; to examine; to give one's opinion.

ADVISED, (advized) part. deliberate; guided by prudence after a due examination of the nature and consequences. Done on purpose.

ADVISEDLY, (advizedly) ad. in a deliberate manner; with due consideration; prudently. With any peculiar design; on purpose.

ADVISEDNESS, (advizedness) s. a state wherein a person has taken the advice and counsel of others; deliberation, caution.

ADVISEMENT, (advizement) s. [avizement, Fr.] advice, or counsel. Prudence and circumspection.

ADVISER, (advizer) s. he that gives advice, or counsel; an adviser, or counsellor.

ADULATION, s. [adulation, Lat.] the act of bestowing more praise upon a person than is due; including in it too high a commendation of his virtues and excellences, and an entire neglect of his defects.

ADULATOR, s. [adulator, Lat.] a flatterer; one who pays a higher compliment to another than he deserves.

ADULATORY, a. [adulatorius, Lat.] in a flattering or complimental manner.

ADULT, a. [adultus, Lat.] grown up; arrived to the age of discretion.

ADULT, s. one who is arrived at the years of manhood: in civil law, a youth between fourteen and twenty-five years of age.

ADULTERANT, s. [adulteráns, Lat.] the person who is guilty of adultery; or thing which debases by admixture.

To ADULTERATE, v. a. [adultero, Lat.] to violate the bed of a married person by unlawful knowledge. To corrupt or debase by some foreign mixture.

ADULTERATE, a. flowing from, or owing to the crime of adultery. Counterfeit; though resembling in appearance, yet inferior in value. Debased by mixture.

ADULTERATENESS s. the quality or state of being adulterate; counterfeit

ADULTERATION, s. [adulteratio, Lat.] the act of corrupting by a foreign mixture; or endeavouring to make things to pass for more than their intrinsic value, by their resemblance to something better.

ADULTERER, s. [adulter, Lat.] the person guilty of lying with his neighbour's wife.

ADULTERESS, s. a woman guilty of the crime of violating her husband's bed, by lying with another man.

ADULTERINE, s. [adulterine, Fr.] in canon law, a child born of an adulteress.

ADULTEROUS, a. [adulter, Lat.] guilty of adultery. Base and corrupted; idolatrous.

ADULTERY, s. [adulterium, Lat.] in its primary signification, the crime of being false to the marriage bed. Figuratively, idolatry.

To ADUMBRATE, v. a. [adumbro, Lat.] to shadow; to give a slight resemblance or faint likeness, alluding to that of shadows, with respect to the bodies by which they are formed.

ADUMBRATION, s. the act of giving a slight representation, or illustration. An imperfect resemblance, like that of a shadow. A faint glimmering, a distant and confused likeness. In heraldry, when any figure in a coat is so obscured, that nothing but the bare profile, or outline, is visible.

ADUNATION, s. [from ad and unus, Lat.] union; the junction of two or more bodies.

ADUNCITY, s. [aduncitas, Lat.] crookedness; flexure inward; hookedness.

ADUNQUE, a. [aduncus, Lat.] crooked.

ADVOCATE, s. [advocatus, Lat.] among the Romans, a person skilled in their law, and who undertook the defence of causes at the bar. Advocate is still used in countries and courts where the civil law obtains for those who plead and defend the causes of their clients. In common use it means one who manages the cause of another, or answers objections brought against it. In these senses the term is applied in scripture to Christ. In Scotland there is a lord Advocate, who is one of the officers of state, and gives his advice in all cases about making, or executing laws; defends the king's right in all public meetings; prosecutes all capital crimes before the justiciary; concurs in all pursuits wherein the king has interest; and is at liberty to plead all causes, unless when acting as an ordinary lord of sessions; in which case he plead only the king's: as also a college or faculty of advocates, 180 in number, who are appointed to plead in all actions before the lords of session.

ADVOCATION, s. the office of an advocate.

ADVOWE', s. [advoué, Fr.] he that has the right of advowson.

ADVOWSON, or ADVOWZEN, s. a right to present to a benefice, in the canon law, because those who had obtained the right of presenting to a living were generally great benefactors to it.

To ADURE, v. n. [aduro, Lat.] to consume by fire.

ADUST, a. [adustus, Lat.] burnt up, scorched, and thereby rendered brittle. Able to burn, scorching hot. In medicine and philosophy, those humours and that habit of body which arises from a fermentation of choler and bile, and betokens warmth of temper; choleric.

ADUSTED, part. [adustus, Lat.] burnt or set on fire. Warm, with respect to the humours of the body or temper.

ADUSTIBLE, a. that may be burnt or scorched up.

ADUSTION, s. the act of burning up, or drying. Applied to the blood, is the evaporating its most subtile particles by heat, and leaving the grosser as half parched. In physic, an inflammation about the brain and its membranes, attended with a hollowness in the eyes, a pale colour, and a dryness of the body.

ADY, s. the palm-tree of the island of St. Thomas.

ADZE, or ADDICE, s. a cutting tool of the axe kind, having its blade made thin and arching, and its edge at right angles to the handle, used by carpenters, but more by coopers, as being convenient for cutting the hollow sides of boards, &c.

Æ, a diphthong, wherein the sound of the A is very obscure, used by the Romans and Saxons, but seems now quite out of use among modern writers, being changed for the simple e, as in equator, equinoctial, and even in Eneas.

ÆDILE, s. [ædilis. Lat.] a Roman magistrate, deriving his name from being surveyor of the buildings, both public and private; such as baths, aqueducts, bridges, and roads; he inspected the weights and measures, took cognizance of disorderly houses; revised all plays before their being exhibited; had the care of the acts of the senate, and the examination of all books which were intended for publication.

Æ'GILOPS, s. [Gr. goat-eyed,] that animal being subject to this ailment a tumor or swelling in the corner of the eye next the nose, either with or without an inflammation: also a plant, so called for its supposed virtues against such a distemper.

Æ'GIS, s. mythology, the name given to the shield or buckler of Jupiter or Pallas. It derives its name from Jupiter covering his shield with the skin of the goat Amalthea, which he is reported to have sucked. This buckler he afterwards gave to Minerva, whose shield is called by this name.

ÆGYPTIA'CUM, s. a corrosive ointment, of which there are several kinds.

ÆNEID, s. the name of Virgil's celebrated epic poem, from Æneas the hero.

ÆNI'GMA, s. [Gr.] a proposition put in obscure, and often contradictory terms, in order to exercise the sagacity of a person; or an obscure description of a thing, delivered in such terms as render the explication difficult, and the meaning not intelligible at first sight.

ÆO'LIC, or ÆO'LIAN, a. in grammar, one of the five dialects of the Greek tongue. It was first used in Bœotia, whence it passed into Æolis, and was that which Sappho and Alcæus wrote in. Æolian harp, is a musical instrument played by the wind.

ÆOLI'PILE, s. in hydraulics, an instrument used to demonstrate the possibility of converting water into an elastic vapour by heat. It consists of a hollow metalline ball, with a slender neck, which being filled with water and exposed to the fire, produces a vehement blast of wind. It is so called from æolus, and pila a ball.

ÆO'LUS, in heathen mythology god of the winds.

Æ'RA, s. [Lat.] in chronology, a series of years, commencing from a certain fixed point of time, called an Epocha. Thus the Christian Æra, is the number of years computed to have elapsed since the birth of Christ. It is however generally admitted by chronologers that Christ was born four years before its commencement.

AE'RIAL, a. [aërius, Lat.] consisting of air. Produced by the air. Inhabiting the air. Placed in the air; lofty, high.

Æ'RIANS, s. a branch of the sect called Arians, who added some peculiar doctrines of their own, as that there is no difference between bishops and priests: from Ærius, an Armenian priest, in the fourth century.

AE'RIE, s. [aire, Fr.] a nest appropriated to hawks, and other birds of prey.

ÆRIFORM, a. found in the state of the air.

ÆROGRAPHY, s. [aër air, and grapho to describe, Gr.] a description of the air, its limits, dimensions, properties, &c.

ÆRO'LOGY, s. [aër air, and logos wisdom or discourse, Gr.] the science which teaches the nature and properties of the air.

ÆRO'MANCY, s. [from aër air, and manteia divination, Gr.] the art of divining by the air.

ÆRO'MATRY, s. [from aër air, and metreo to measure, Gr.] the art of measuring the air, comprehending the laws of motion, gravitation, pressure, elasticity, rarefaction, condensation, &c. See PNEUMATICS.

ÆRONAUT, s. [from aër air, and nautes a sailor, Gr.] a person who ascends in and guides an air balloon.

ÆROSCOPY, s. [from aër air, and skopeo to observe, Gr.] the observation of the air.

AEROSTA'TION, s. [aër and statio, Lat.] a new science, signifying aërial navigation. The machines employed are called aerostats, or aerostatic machines, and from their globular shape air-balloons. Some hints respecting such machines occur in ancient authors; but the science was announced in France, in 1782, by two brothers, John and Stephen Montgolfier, who were successful in sending up silk bags, filled with rarefied air, and afterwards larger balloons were constructed, by which sundry persons, both in France, England, and other countries, have made aerial excursions. These last-mentioned balloons were filled with inflammable air, as being considerably lighter than heated atmospheric air. During the wars in Germany, the French generals sent up balloons of observation; but in any other respect this invention has hitherto contributed only to the amusement of the spectators, and the profit of the adventurers.

ÆRU'GINOUS, a. [from ærugo, Lat.] resembling or belonging to the rust of copper. Applied to colour, it is by some described as a green, and by others as a brown.

ÆRU'GO, s. [Lat.] rust, particularly that of copper; verdigrease.

Æ'STUARY, s. [æstuarium, Lat.] in pharmacy, a vapour bath. In geography, an arm of the sea, which runs a good way within land; as the Bristol Channel.

Æ'THER, s. [Gr.] in physics, a thin subtile matter, finer and rarer than air, commencing from the limits of our atmosphere, and expanded through all the regions of space. In chemistry, the lightest, most volatile, and most inflammatory of all liquids; produced by the distillation of acids with rectified spirit of wine.

ÆTHE'RIAL, a. [ætherius, Lat.] formed of æther; celestial, heavenly. Ætherial space, or region, is that space in the heavens where the pure unmixed æther is supposed to be found; and figuratively is used for heavenly. Ætherial oil, in chemistry, named likewise essential, is a fine, subtile, essential oil, approaching nearly to the nature of a spirit. The pure liquor, which rises next after the spirit, in distilling turpentine, is termed the ætherial oil of turpentine.

ÆTHIOPS-MINERAL, s. [a compound word, deriving its name from its colour, which is black, and supposed to resemble the complexion of the Ethiopians] in pharmacy, a preparation of equal quantities of quicksilver and flour of brimstone, ground in a stone or iron mortar, till they become black, and no particles of quicksilver remain visible.

Æ'TITES, or eagle-stone, a flinty or crustated stone, hollow within, and containing a substance which shakes when it is rattled. It was formerly used for magical purposes, and was believed to be found in an eagle's nest.

ÆTNA, now MONTE GIBELLO; a volcano or burning mountain of Sicily, situated in lon. 15. 0. E. Lat. 38. 0. N. This mountain, renowned from the earliest ages for its magnitude and terrible eruptions, is on the eastern coast, near Catania, in an extensive plain, called Val Demoni, from its being the supposed habitation of devils, who, in this mountain, torment the spirits of the damned. According to Mr. Brydone its height is 12,000 feet. Faujas de St. Fond states it at 10,036, and its circumference at the base is 180 miles. Over its sides are 77 cities, towns, and villages, the number of the inhabitants of which is about 115,000. The distance from Catania to its summit is about 30 miles. At the very top it is perpetually covered with snow; which is an article so necessary in this hot climate, that the bishop's revenues arise from the sale of Mount Ætna's snow; and he is said to draw 1000l. a year from one small portion lying on the north side of the mountain. In the dreadful eruption of Ætna in 1669, the lava, or fiery stream, was not less than 14 miles long, and in many places six in breadth; and in its course destroyed the habitations of 30,000 persons. The two last great eruptions happened in July and October, 1787; in the latter the lava issued to the distance of three miles, in a stream a quarter of a mile broad, and from five to eighteen feet deep.

AFAR, ad. at a distance. Figuratively, foreign or strange. Distant, in opposition to intimate friendship.

AFFABILITY, s. [affabilitas, Lat.] a quality which renders a person easy to be spoken to; including modesty, good-nature, and condescension; generally applied to superiors.

A'FFABLE, a. [affabilis, Lat.] easy to be spoken to, on account of complaisance, good-nature and condescension.

AFFABLENESS, s. courteousness; civil and complaisant behaviour. See AFFABILITY.

AFFABLY, ad. in an affable manner; courteously; civilly.

AFFAIR, s. [affaire, Fr.] something done, or to be done. Employment. The concerns and transactions of a nation. Circumstances, or the condition of a person. Business.

To AFFE'CT, v. a. [afficio, Lat.] to produce an effect; to cause, used with the particle with. To act upon. To excite, stir up, or work upon the passions. To aim at, to endeavour after, applied to persons. To have a tendency; to assume; to tend to. To be fond of, or long for. To assume a character not real, or natural, and to support it in an awkward manner.

AFFECTA'TION, s. [affectatio, Lat.] an artful or hypocritical assuming of a character, or appearance, which is not our own, and to which we have no claim.

AFFE'CTED, part. having the affections excited. To be peculiarly fond of. Disposed, with the word ill. Personated, or appearing unnatural.

AFFE'CTEDLY, ad. in a manner which has more of appearance than reality.

AFFE'CTEDNESS, s. the quality of assuming an unnatural or false appearance. Distinguished from hypocrisy by its object; that being religion, and this politeness, grandeur, learning, &c.

AFFE'CTION, s. [affectio, Lat.] state of being affected, or wrought upon by any cause. Passions in general. Love, fondness, regard, or good-will. Zeal; a desire of obtaining. In logic, an attribute peculiar to some subject, and arising from the very idea or essence of it; styled by the schoolmen, praprium quarto modo. Affections of the body, in physics, are certain modifications occasioned by motion. In medicine, it implies a morbid or preternatural state of the body, or some of its parts.

AFFE'CTIONATE, a. [affectionné, Fr.] zealous, or a strong and longing desire; warm. Strongly inclined, or disposed to. Fond, tender, with all the glowings of paternal love.

AFFE'CTIONATELY, ad. in an affectionate, fond, endearing, and benevolent manner.

AFFE'CTIONATENESS, s. the quality or state of exercising the social, benevolent, kind, and endearing passions.

AFFE'CTIONED, a. full of affectation, conceited, affected; mentally disposed.

AFFE'CTIVE, a. that acts upon, or excites a disagreeable or painful sensation.

AFFE'RORS, or AFFEE'RORS, s. in law, persons appointed to tax, assess, and confirm such fines as are set in inferior courts; in courts leet, to settle the fines of those that are guilty of faults, which have no express penalty assigned by the statute; in courts baron, to moderate amerciaments.

AFFI'ANCE, s. [affiance, Fr.] confirming one's own by plighting of faith; betrothing. Figuratively, trust or confidence, the effect of the mutual vows persons make to each other; a firm trust, an unshaken reliance.

To AFFI'ANCE, v. a. [affiancer, Fr.] to bind one's self to marry. Figuratively, to give confidence.

AFFIDA'VIT, s. [Lat.] an oath in writing, sworn before an authorised person; which contains the time, residence, and addition of the person who makes it.

AFFI'ED, part. a. joined by contract; affianced.

AFFILIA'TION, s. [from ad and filius, Lat.] adoption, or the making a son.

AFFI'NED, part. [from affinis, Lat.] joined by affinity or marriage to another; related to.

AFFI'NITY, s. [affinitas, Lat.] relation by marriage, in opposition to that which is by blood. Connection; resemblance to, applied to things. In chemistry, is that peculiar propensity which different species of matter have to unite and combine with certain other bodies exclusively, or in preference to any other connection: called also elective attraction.

To AFFI'RM, v. a. and v. n. [affirmo, Lat.] to confirm a thing as truth; to declare; to assert; to tell confidently. It is synonymous with the following words: To declare signifies to tell any thing simply, but seriously; to protest implies a solemn affirmation; to aver signifies a positive declaration; to assert, that declaration defended; to maintain, implies a support of such assertion; to swear, is to ratify it by an oath.

AFFI'RMABLE, a. that may be affirmed or asserted.

AFFI'RMANCE, s. in law, confirmation; opposed to repeal.

AFFI'RMANT, s. [from affirmans, Lat.] the person who affirms, or makes a positive declaration.

AFFIRMA'TION, s. [affirmatio, Lat.] the act of strengthening or supporting any opinion; confirmation. Assertion; or tenaciousness of any thing or position asserted. Confirmation, in opposition to repeal. In grammar, what is otherwise called a verb, because it expresses what we affirm or assert of any subject. In a legal sense, the method allowed by law to the quakers as a pledge of their truth in judicial courts, instead of an oath. If they make a false affirmation, they are subject to the penalties of the law; but this is only with regard to oaths of allegiance, and on public occasions; for in criminal cases their affirmation is not taken in evidence.

AFFI'RMATIVE, a. that positively affirms or asserts a thing. Applied to persons, positive; obstinate in opinion; dogmatical; or one that would affirm any thing. Affirmative, in Algebra, applied to quantities, are those which express a real magnitude, in opposition to those which are negative, or less than nothing. Affirmative sign, in Algebra, is that which shews that the quantity it is prefixed to is affirmative, and is marked thus +

AFFI'RMATIVELY, ad. in an affirmative or positive manner, in opposition to negative.

AFFI'RMER, s. that person who asserts a thing to be true; he that affirms; he who takes the affirmative side of a question in dispute.

To AFFI'X, v. a. [affigo, Lat.] to be fixed or united to. To connect with, to subjoin, to establish.

AFFI'X, s. [affixum, Lat.] in grammar, some letter or sentence joined to a word.

AFFI'XION, s. the art of affixing, or state of a noun that has an affix.

AFFLATION, s. [from afflatum, Lat.] the act of breathing upon any thing.

AFFLA'TUS, s. [Lat.] divine inspiration. In physic, a vapour or blast, which is prejudicial to the health.

To AFFLI'CT, v. a. [affligo, Lat.] to use with such barbarity as may occasion a deep sorrow; to mortify, or practise all the duties of sincere repentance; to punish; to be in adversity, or involved in temporal unhappiness.

AFFLI'CTION, s. [afflictio, Lat.] that which causes a sensation of pain; a very disagreeable circumstance; calamity.

AFFLI'CTIVE, a. that occasions torment, misery, or a sensation of pain on account of its disagreeableness; that which concerns; sorrow.

AFFLUENCE, or AFFLUENCY, s. [affluentia, Lat.] in its primary sense, the flowing to any place; resort, or concourse. It is almost always used figuratively. Abundance of wealth; plenty.

AFFLUENT, a. [affluens, Lat.] in its primary sense, flowing to any part. In its secondary, abundant in wealth; plentiful; exuberant; wealthy.

AFFLUENTNESS, s. the quality of being wealthy, or abounding with all the conveniences of life.

AFFLUX s. [affluxus, Lat.] the act of flowing, or thing which flows.

AFFLUXION, s. [affluxio, Lat.] the act of flowing to a particular place; that which flows from one place to another.

To AFFO'RD, v. a. [affourrer, Fr.] to yield or produce. To supply, cause, or grant. To be able to sell without losing.

To AFFOREST, v. a. to turn ground into a forest.

AFFRAID, part. [from affrayer, Fr.] to be timorous; to be affected with fear, either by a present object which may endanger our safety, or by the prospect of a distant or future evil. It it generally spelt with a single f; but this is more consistent with analogy.

To AFFRANCHISE, v. a. [affranchir, Fr.] to make free.

To AFFRAY, v. a. [affrayer, Fr.] to strike with terror or fear; to fright.

AFFRAY, or AFFRAYMENT, s. in law, formerly an affright caused to one or more, by persons appearing in unusual armour. At present, a skirmish or fighting, wherein some blow is given, or some weapon drawn. It differs from an assault, as this is a public, but that a personal wrong.

AFFRICTION, s. See FRICTION.

To AFFRIGHT, v. a. [from a and frihtaa, Sax.] to affect with fear, including in it the idea of something dangerous and mischievous, something that can deprive us of pleasure, or affect us with pain; and that the impression of this passion is sudden. To intimidate and dishearten.

AFFRIGHT, s. terror; fear, denoting a sudden impression, in opposition to fear, which implies a long continuance.

AFFRIGHTFUL, a. abounding in such qualities as may cause fear.

To AFFRONT, v. a. [affronter, Fr.] in its primary signification, to meet face to face, to confront. Figuratively, to injure a person before his face, including in it the secondary ideas of contempt, disdain, and entire neglect of decorum.

AFFRONT, s. an insult or injury offered to the face; including the ideas of contempt and rudeness. Indecent behaviour; outrage.

AFFRONTEE, s. in heraldry, an appellation given to animals facing one another on an escutcheon.

AFFRONTER, s. the person who offers the affront.

AFFRONTING, or AFFRONTIVE, part. a. that occasions or causes an affront.

AFFUSION, s. [affusio, Lat.] the act of pouring one thing upon another.

AFIELD, ad. to the field.

AFLOAT, ad. [from flotter, Fr.] borne up by the water; floating. Figuratively, fluctuating.

AFOOT, ad. walking, in opposition to riding. Figuratively, in agitation; commenced.

AFORE, prep. See BEFORE.

AFORE, ad. applied to time, that which is past; antecedent to a thing mentioned.

AFORETIME, ad. in times past, or those which have preceded that in which they are referred to.

AFRESH, ad. anew; again; a second time.

AFRICA, one of the four principal parts of the world; bounded on the N. by the Mediterranean sea; on the W. and S. by the Ocean; on the E. by the Red Sea and the Isthmus of Suez. It is in the form of a pyramid, whose base, from Tangier to the Isthmus of Suez, is about 2000 miles. From the top of the pyramid, that is to say, from the Cape of Good Hope to the most northern part, is 4800 miles; and in the broadest part, that is, from Cape Verd to Cape Guard-a-fui, it is 3500. The greatest part of it is within the torrid zone, which renders the heat almost insupportable in many places. However, the coasts in general are very fruitful, the fruits excellent, and the plants extraordinary. The flesh of the animals is in general very good; and there are more wild beasts than in any other part of the world; such as lions, tigers, leopards, panthers, rhinoceroses, and elephants. There are also some animals peculiar to this country; such as the hippopotamus, or river-horse, whose teeth are so large that they serve instead of ivory, and are much better; the rhinoceros with two horns on its nose; and the most beautiful striped zebra, which is esteemed a fine present to the greatest princes. As for the crocodiles, which were thought formerly to be peculiar to Africa, they are now found in other places, or at least creatures so much like them, that it is hard to know the difference. Besides these they have ostriches, camels, various sorts of monkeys, and many other animals not to be met with in Europe. There are several deserts, particularly one of a large extent, which is almost without water; and whose sands are so loose, that by means of a strong wind, they will sometimes bury whole caravans at a time. However, this is not quite without inhabitants, for there are wild Arabs, and other people, who rove from place to place, partly in search of pasture, and partly to lie in wait for the rich caravans that travel from Barbary and Egypt to Negroland and Abyssinia. There are many large rivers; but the principal are the Nile and the Niger. There are very high mountains in divers parts, particularly in Abyssinia and Barbary; in which last country is mount Atlas, that separates Barbary from Biledulgerid, and runs from E. to W. Their religion is Mahometanism and Paganism, though there are Christians in some parts, as in Abyssinia, and among the European settlements. Africa is variously divided, according to different geographers; however, the best distinguish them by the names of Egypt, Barbary, Guinea, Congo, Caffraria, Abyssinia, Nubia, and Nigritia, with the island that surround it. Africa, in painting, is represented by a black woman, almost naked, with frizzled hair, and an elephant's trunk for a crest, a fierce lion on one side, and a viper and serpent on the other; with other emblems of the produce of the country.

AFTER, prep. [after, Sax.] is applied both to time and place. Applied to time, it denotes that something had been done before. Joined with verbs it has a referrence to time, with succeeding or following. Applied to place, behind, or following. Concerning. According to; agreeable to, in imitation of.

AFTER, ad. [it is distinguished from the preposition, because it has a relation to that which goes before it; but not to the sentence which follows it] succeeding or following in time. Second or following in place, in opposition to before.

AFTER-AGES, s. ages which are to come, or future.

AFTER-CLAP, s. some unexpected incident after an affair is supposed to be ended.

AFTER-COST, s. expenses which are incurred after the original bargain or plan is finished.

AFTER-CROP, s. the second crop or produce of a ground in one year.

AFTER-GAME, s. an expedient after the original plan or first attempt has miscarried.

AFTER-MATH, s. second crop of grass mown in autumn.

AFTERNOON, s. that space, or interval, which is from twelve at noon till the evening. Figuratively, the decline. "The afternoon of life."

AFTER-PAINS, s. pains after birth.

AFTER-PROOF, s. evidence posterior to the thing in question; qualities known by subsequent experience.

AFTER-TASTE, s. a taste remaining upon the tongue after the draught, which was not perceived in the act of drinking.

AFTER-THOUGHT, s. an expedient formed too late; reflection, or thought arising after the finishing of a thing; repentance.

AFTER-TIMES, s. [seldom used in the singular] future ages; in time to come.

AFTERWARD, or AFTERWARDS, ad. in succeeding or future time, referring to something which preceded, and which it is supposed to follow.

AFTER-WIT, s. an unseasonable expedient, or a contrivance which is too late.

AGA, s. the title of a Turkish military officer.

AGAIN, ad. [agen, Sax.] a second time, implying the repetition of the same action. On the other hand, denoting a correspondence or reciprocation of action. After ask, a return of a thing given. Return by way of recompence; or reimbursement. After much, or words implying dimension, a repetition of the same quantity which preceded.

AGAINST, prep. [ageon, Sax.] used to persons, in opposition, alluding to the position of two armies ready to attack each other. After speak, to be represented in a bad light. Applied to motion, contrary direction; or that in which one body meets with another.

A'GAPE, (ágga-pay) s. [Gr.] love-feasts, exercised by the primitive Christians, and revived by the Methodists.

AGA'PE, ad. a stupid kind of admiration; wondering, as expressed by the ignorant, with open mouths.

A'GARICK, s. [agaricum, Lat.] in Botany, an excrescence growing in the shape of a mushroom upon the trunk and great branches of the oak and other trees, but the larch-tree especially. Mineral agarick, is a kind of stone found in the clefts of rocks in Germany.

A'GATE, s. [agate, Fr.] a precious stone of the flint kind, much harder than jasper, and receives a better polish. Its colours are various, and in some of them represents such figures as are very surprising. In 1760, the emperor of Germany, being desirous to know the length of time necessary to complete a petrifaction, obtained leave of the Sultan to take up one of the timbers that support Trajan's bridge over the Danube, some miles below Belgrave. The outer part of this timber to the depth of half an inch, was found to be converted to an agate; the inner parts were slightly petrified, and the central were still wood.

A'GAVE, s. the common American aloe.

AGA'ZED, part. struck with a sudden terror; terrified to stupidity.

AGE, s. [age, Fr.] the time of a man's life; a succession of generations of men; a century, or the space of an hundred years.

A'GES, OF THE WORLD, s. The time preceding the birth of Christ has generally been divided into six ages; the first comprehends the time from the beginning of the world to the deluge, and consists of 1656 years: the second, from the deluge to the time of Abraham's coming into the land of promise in 2082, comprehends 426 years: the third age of the world, from Abraham's entrance into the promised land to the deliverance of the Hebrew's out of Egypt, in the year of the world 2513, includes 430 years: the fourth age from their going out of Egypt to the laying the foundation of the temple, in the year of the world 2992, comprehends 479 years: the fifth age of the world, from laying the foundation of Solomon's temple to the Babylonish captivity, in the year of the world 3416, contains 424 years: the sixth age of the world comprises the time from the Babylonish captivity to the birth of Jesus Christ, which happened in the year of the world 4000, and four years before the vulgar æra, including 584 years. Another division of the ages of the world, is, the age of the law of nature, which comprehends the whole time between Adam and Moses; the age of the Jewish law, which takes in all the time from Moses to Christ; and lastly, the age of grace, or the number of years elapsed since the birth of Christ. Ancient historians have likewise divided the duration of the world into certain periods, called Ages; the first reaching from the creation to the deluge, which happened in Greece, during the reign of Ogyges, is called the obscure or uncertain Age; the history of mankind, during that period, being very uncertain: the second, called the fabulous or heroic Age, terminates at the first olympiad; where the third, or historical Age, commences. The poets have likewise made four divisions of the ages of the world, namely, the golden Age, the silver, the brazen, and the iron Age. There are also four degrees or periods in human life, namely, infancy, youth, manhood, and old age: the first extends to the 14th year, the second to the 25th year, the third to the 40th, and the fourth to the 75th year; or, rather, as long as a man lives. In law, a man at twelve years of age ought to take the oath of allegiance to the king in a leet; at fourteen, which is the age of discretion, he may marry, choose his guardian, and claim his lands held in soccage. His full age is twenty-one, in man or woman. A woman is dowable at nine years of age, may marry at twelve, and at fourteen choose her guardian. At fourteen, a man may dispose of his personal estate by will, but not of lands; and at this age a man or woman is capable of being a witness.—Age of the Moon, the space of time, or interval, since her last conjunction with the sun.

A'GED, a. that has lived a long course or series of years, generally applied to animals. Figuratively, that which has stood for many years; decayed by length of time, applied to inanimate things.

A'GEDLY, ad. after the manner of a person advanced in years, or in the decline of life.

A'GEN, ad. SEE AGAIN.

A'GENCY, s. the quality of acting; action; the state of being in, or exerting action.

A'GENT, a. [agens, Lat.] that which acts, or is active, in opposition to patient or passive.

A'GENT, s. a being endued with the power of action. In physics, that which is endued with power to act on another, and to produce a change or alteration by such action. The schools divide agents into natural or free. Natural, are those which are determined by the great Author of nature to one sort of effect, with an incapacity to perform any other, as fire to heat only, not to cool. A free agent is that which may do or not do any action, and has the conscious perception that his actions are caused by his own will, without any external necessity or determination whatever. In commerce, an agent is a person entrusted with transacting business for another at a distance, or the negotiation of the affairs of a state or corporation. Agent and Patient, in law, is a person who does or gives something to himself, being both the doer of a thing, and the party to whom it is done. Thus a creditor being left executor, he may retain so much of the estate of the deceased as will pay his debt, and by that means becomes both agent and patient, i. e. the party to whom the debt is due, and the person who pays it.

A'GGERHUYS, a very mountainous province of Norway, in the south of that kingdom, with a capital of the same name.

To AGGLO'MERATE, v. a. [agglomero, Lat.] to gather up in a ball; to gather together.

AGGLUTINANTS, s. [from agglutino, Lat.] in its primary signification, those substances which have a quality of glewing, or sticking any bodies together. In physic, strengthening medicines, which, adhering to the solids in the human body, recruit and supply what is wasted in the animal action.

To AGGLUTINATE, v. a. to unite one part to another, as it were with glue; to make one part stick to another. Used with the participle to.

AGGLUTINATION, s. in its primary signification, to join two bodies fast together.

AGGLUTINATIVE, a. in medicine, that which has the power of thickening the animal juices, so as to render them fit for nourishing.

AGGRANDISEMENT, s. the act of promoting to a high place in a state; or the act of conferring power, honour, and wealth on a person.

To AGGRANDIZE, v. a. [aggrandiser, Fr.] to exalt, prefer, or to make considerable by the addition of posts and pensions. To enlarge, exalt, or ennoble, applied to the faculties and sentiments of the mind. It is applied to persons generally, sometimes to things.

AGGRANDIZER, s. the person who confers honour and riches on another.

To A'GGRAVATE, v. a. [aggravo, Lat.] to increase the weight of a thing, in its primary sense. In its secondary or figurative sense, to add to the enormity, applied to crimes.

AGGRAVATION, s. the act of making worse, applied to the demerit of actions. Some circumstance which heightens the guilt of any crime, &c

A'GGREGATE, a. [aggregatus, Lat.] an assemblage or collection of the particles into one mass.

AGGREGATE, s. [from aggrego, Lat.] an assemblage formed of several particulars. The sum total or result of several things added together.

To A'GGREGATE, v. a. [aggrego, Lat.] to collect together several particulars into one sum, or several parcels or particles into one mass.

AGGREGA'TION, s. a whole made up of several parts added together. In arithmetic, the sum total, formed by the addition of several units together. In physics, an assemblage of several things which have no natural connection with each other.

To AGGRE'SS, v. n. [aggredior, Lat.] to commit the first act of hostility; to make the first attack; to occasion or begin a quarrel.

AGGRE'SSION, s. [aggressio, Lat.] the act of beginning a quarrel, or being guilty of the first attack.

AGGRE'SSOR, s. the person who commits the first act of hostility or injury.

AGGRIEVANCE, s. an action which causes pain or uneasiness in the person to whom it was done, and includes in it the secondary idea of injury, or something undeserved.

To AGGRIEVE, v. a. [from gravis, Lat.] to do or say something which shall make a person uneasy. To offer an injury, which shall occasion vexation.

To AGGROUP, v. o. [aggropare, Ital.] to bring together into one figure; to crowd together; a term of painting.

AGHA'ST, a. [from a and ghast, Sax.] having all the signs of a person terrified by an apparition; like one who had seen a ghost.

A'GILE, a. [agilis, Lat.] active; acting with great speed and readiness; nimble. Applied to the mind, alert, vigorous, in opposition to slow and stupid.

A'GILENESS, s. the quality of performing without pain or any other impediment.

A'GILITY, s. [agilitas, Lat.] a capacity of moving without pain, or any other impediment.

AGI'LLOCHUM, s. aloes-wood. A tree in the East Indies, brought to us in small bits, of a very fragrant scent. It is hot, drying, and accounted a strengthener of the nerves in general. The best is of a blackish purple colour, and so light as to swim upon water.

A'GINCOURT, a village in the county of St. Pol. in the department of the straits of Calais, rendered famous to all posterity by a battle fought near it, Oct. 25, 1415, wherein Henry V. of England, with an army variously stated at from 22 to 10,000 men, obtained a complete victory over an army of French, consisting of 60,000 men, by the lowest accounts; but according to some contemporary writers, of 100, or even 140,000 men. The French left dead 92 barons, 1,500 knights, and 8,000 gentlemen of family, and several thousand private men, without including 14,000 prisoners, among whom were the duke or Orleans, and many others of great distinction: while the loss of the English, including the duke of York and the earl of Suffolk, who were killed did not exceed one hundred men. Lat. 50. 31. N. lon. 2. 10. E.

A'GIO, s. [Venet, aid or assistance] in commerse, the exchange or difference between bank and current money, or cash. Thus, if a bargain be made to pay either 100 livres bank or 105 cash, the agio is said to be 5 per cent. The agio varies almost every where; at Amsterdam it is usually from 3 to 5 per cent. at Rome near 25 per 1500; at Venice 10 per cent. fixed; and at Genoa from 15 to 16. It likewise signifies the profit which arises from money advanced, and is the same as premium.

AGI'STMENT, s. in common law, the feed of other people's cattle, taken into any ground, at a certain rate per week. In a large sense it extends to all manner of common or herbage, or the profit arising from thence.

A'GITABLE, a. [agitabilis, Lat.] that may be put in motion.

To A'GITATE, v. a. [agito, Lat.] to move by repeated actions. To actuate, act upon, or give motion to. To disturb, or disorder by the distractions of different motives. To toss from one to another, to discuss or controvert with great warmth.

AGITA'TION, s. [agitatio, Lat.] the act of shaking or putting the particles of a body into motion. Disorder of the mind arising from the violence of different passions. Consideration, or deliberation of several persons.

AGITA'TOR, s. the person who projects any scheme, occasions any disturbance, or causes any motion. He who manages and conducts the affairs of another.

A'GLET, s. a tag of a point carved into some representation of an animal. The pendants at the ends of the chives of flowers, as in tulips.

A'GNAIL, s. [Sax.] a whitlow.

AGNA'TI, s. [Lat.] in the Roman law, the male descendants from the same father, distinguished from cognati, which includes the female descendants.

AGNA'TION, s. [from agnatus, Lat.] in the civil law, the relation between the descendants from the same father, including only males.

AGNI'TION, s. [agnitio, Lat.] an acknowledging.

To AGNI'ZE, v. a. [from agnosco, Lat.] to own; to avow; to acknowledge.

AGNOE'TÆ, s. [from a priv. and ginosko, to know, Gr.] in church history, a sect of heretics, who held that Christ, with respect to his human nature, was ignorant of some things, and especially the day of judgment.

AGNO'MEN, s. [Lat.] an addition of name added to the surname of a person on account of some peculiar action or circumstance; as the addition of Africanus to the name of Scipio, on account of his exploits in Africa; and of Cicero to that of Tully, on acount of a protuberance on his nose, like a vetch, which Cicero signifies.

AGNOMINA'TION, s. [agnominatio, Lat.] the resemblance or allusion of one word to another both in sound and sense.

A'GNUS CASTUS, s. [Lat.] the name of the tree commonly called the chaste tree, from an imaginary virtue of preserving chastity.

A'GNUS DEI, s. [Lat. the Lamb of God] in the Roman church, a flat piece of white wax of an oval form, stampt with the figure of a lamb, and consecrated by the pope.

AGO', ad. [from agan, Sax. past; whence some counties still pronounce it agone] past. When we reckon past time, towards, or ending with the present, we use since; as, "It is a year since it happened." But when we reckon from the present, and end with the past, we use ago; as, "It happened three nights ago." This is a nicety which foreigners ought particularly to attend to.

AGO'G, ad. [à gogo, Fr.] eager for the possession of something; longing. To set one's fancy or affections on.

AGO'NE, ad. [agan, Sax.] past, with respect to time; formerly.

AGONI'STES, s. [Gr.] one who used to exhibit at the public games of Greece and Rome, being a candidate for the prizes awarded for superiority of strength, &c.

AGONI'ZE, v. n. [agonizomai, to strive, Gr.] to be affected with acute and excessive pain. It is also sometimes used in the sense of the Greek word.

A'GONY, s. [agon, Gr.] excessive pain, wherein all the powers of nature are convulsed, and she struggles as it were with death for the mastery.

AGORI'TY, s. an American animal, which bears some resemblance to a rabbit, but is more fierce and voracious. For a curious account of its manners, see Natural History of Quadrupeds, vol. ii. p. 16.

A'GRA, s. the capital of a province of the same name in Hindoostan, was, in the last century, a most extensive and opulent city, where the great Mogul sometimes resided. His palace was prodigiously large, and the seraglio contained above 1000 women: the places of the Omrahs and others were numerous. Here were above 60 spacious caravansaries, 800 baths, 700 mosques, and 2 magnificent mausoleums. The Persians, Chinese, and English resorted here, and the Dutch had a factory: the inhabitants dealt in scarlet, looking-glasses, silver, gold, lace, hardwares, cloth of Jelapour, and spices. It was fortified in the Indian manner, and had a wall and fine citadel, built of red freestone.

Agra has since rapidly declined. It is seated on the river Jemna, 100 miles S. by E. of Delhi. Lat. 27. 12. N. lon. 78. 12. E.

AGRA'RIAN, a. [agrarius, Lat.] in the Roman law, a term applied to such laws as relate to the division and distribution of lands.

To AGREE', v. a. [agreer, Fr.] to be friends, or in concord, i. e. a state wherein the sentiments of one person are similar to, or the same as those of another. To consent to do a thing upon certain conditions: to bargain. To resemble; to be like. To match, applied to colour. To tally with; to be consistent with.

AGREE'ABLE, a. [agreable, Fr.] suitable; conformable to or consistent with. Pleasing; grateful; as suitable to our inclinations or faculties.

AGREE'ABLENESS, s. the quality which renders a thing grateful to the taste. The quality which renders a thing pleasing, below rapture, and less than admiration. Likeness; affinity; resemblance.

AGREE'ABLY, ad. in a manner consistent with, or conformable to. In a manner which affords a pleasing satisfaction.

AGREE'D, part. settled by mutual consent.

AGREE'MENT, s. [in law Latin, agreeamentum] friendship; alliance; concord. A contract, bargain, or compact. Resemblance.

A'GRICULTURE, s. [agricultura, Lat.] the art of tilling and manuring the ground, so as to make it fruitful and bear plants; consisting in manuring, fallowing, sowing, harrowing, reaping, mowing, &c. The management of the productions of different soils, and planting; together with the culture of forests, timber, &c. The highest encomium that could be given to a man in Rome, was, that he cultivated his own spot of ground well; the most illustrious senators applied themselves to it, and their dictators were taken from the plough. Agriculture, or husbandry, is the original source of most of our treasures, and the great fountain of all materials for commerce.

A'GRIMONY, s. [agrimonia, Lat.] a sweet scented English plant.

AGRO'UND, ad. a marine term, stranded; stuck fast upon shore, so as not to be got off, and pursue a voyage: hindered by the ground from passing further. Figuratively, meeting with some impediment or obstacle, which renders it impossible to advance in, or go on with an affair.

A'GUE, s. [aigu, Fr.] a periodical species of fever, beginning with a cold shivering, which is succeeded by heat, and terminates in a sweat. When the cold fit is scarcely perceptible, and there is a return of the hot one only, it is called an intermitting fever. According to the returns of the fit, it is differently denominated. If it returns every day, it is then called a quotidian; if every third day, a tertian; and if every fourth day, a quartan.

A'GUED, part. struck or affected with an ague. Figuratively, cold, shivering, trembling, in allusion to the effects of this disorder.

A'GUE-FIT, s. the cold, shivering, trembling fit which affects people in the ague.

A'GUE-TREE, s. a name given sometimes to sassafras.

A'GUISH, (agu-ish) a. like or having the properties of an ague.

A'GUISHNESS, (agu-ishness) s. the quality which resembles an ague.

AH! interj. a word made use of to denote some sudden dislike, and occasioned by the apprehension of evil consequences.

AHA', an interjection denoting the triumph of contempt; intended to express joy at the calamities of others, and to increase the uneasiness which they themselves experience.

AHE'AD, ad. a sea term; beyond; implying a greater degree of swiftness. Applied to persons, to contract an inveterate habit, which is not to be easily surmounted by advice or instruction.

AHEIGHT, ad. on high; a great distance above us.

AHOUAI, s. a poisonous plant.

A HULL, ad. a sea term, the situation of the ship when all her sails are furled on account of the violence of the storm, and when, having lashed her helm on the lee-side, she lies nearly with her side to the wind and sea.

AIATA, a Brazilian bird which resembles the spoonbill.

A'JAN, or AJEN, a country on the east coast of Africa, south of Abyssinia and the straits of Babelmandel; it extends about 1500 leagues in length, from Magadoxa to Cape Guardafui. The eastern coast is sandy and barren, but to the N. the country is more fertile, producing, more particularly, an excellent breed of horses, which the Arabian merchants, who come to trade in their ports, take, together with ivory, gold, Abyssinian slaves captured in war, &c. in exchange for silks, cottons, and other cloths. The inhabitants are not so dark complexioned as those on the west coast, and their hair is rather long. They are accounted good Musselmen. Farther from the sea, there are negroes, who, marrying with the Bedouins, a kind of Arabs, have children that are mulattoes.

AICHSTADT, or EICHSTADT, capital of an extensive bishopric of the same name in Franconia. Here are several hospitals, an alms-house, a seminary for students, a cathedral, and other churches, one of which is built after the model of that called the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem; here is also a curious piece of workmanship, called the Sun of the Holy Sacrament; it is of massy gold, of great weight, and is enriched with 350 diamonds, 1400 pearls, 250 rubies, and other precious stones. Aichstadt is seated in a valley, on the river Altmul, 30 miles S. of Nuremberg.

To AID, v. a. [aider, Fr.] to give assistance or succour to; to deliver a person in danger, or distress, out of it, by giving him all the assistance, help, or succour in one's power. To support, when applied to the means used to free a person from want.

AID, s. [aide, Fr.] that which contributes to render a thing more easy. Assistance. Support given to a person. In polities, a subsidy, or money given to support the necessities of the state.

AID-DE-CAMP, s. in the army, an officer who receives and carries the orders of a general officer to the rest of the army.

AI'DER, s. one who assists or helps; one who takes part with a person, and endeavours to promote his undertaking.

AI'DLESS, ad. deprived, or in want of help or assistance to render an undertaking successful, or a misfortune supportable. Without aid, or assistance from another.

AI'GULET, s. [Fr.] a point with tags; points of gold at the end of fringes.

To AIL, v. a. [eglan, Sax.] to disturb; to affect with a disagreeable sensation.

AIL, s. a distemper.

AI'LEROUS, s. [Fr.] two small shelly substances resembling small wings found at the root of the wings of two-winged flies.

AI'LING, part. one of a weak constitution, subject to disorders; valetudinary.

AI'LMENT, s. indisposition; disorder: diminution of health.

To AIM, v. a. to put a weapon in such a direction or position as to hit any object; to throw a thing at an object, in such a manner, as to render the striking of it possible. Figuratively, to direct the edge of satire against a particular person.

AIM, s. the position or direction of a weapon, in order to strike an object. The point which is intended to be hit; or the object designed to be struck. Figuratively, an endeavour to obtain any thing; intention; purpose; or design.

AIR, s. [aër, Lat.] in philosophy, a thin elastic fluid, surrounding the globe of the earth; imperceptible to all our senses, except feeling. Mr. Boyle supposes it to be made up of three different kinds of corpuscles, namely, 1. Of those numberless and minute particles which, in the form of vapours, or dry exhalations, ascend from the earth, water, minerals, vegetables, animals, &c. in short, of whatever substances are elevated by the celestial or subterraneous heat, and thence diffused into the atmosphere. 2. Of a still more subtile matter, consisting of those exceedingly minute atoms, the magnetical effluvia of the earth, with other innumerable particles sent from the bodies of the celestial luminaries, and causing, by their impulse, the idea of light in us. 3. Of an elastic substance, which is the basis of all the other parts, and constituting the true essence of air, concerning the structure of which various hypothesis have been framed. Some have resembled these elastic particles to the springs of watches coiled up, and endeavouring to restore themselves; others to flocks of wool, which being compressed, have an elastic force; and others to slender wires, of different substances, &c. yet all springy, expansible, and compressible. In music, it is the melody of the tune, light or grave. In poetry, a song, catch, &c. In painting, it denotes the manner and very life of action, and expresses the disposition of the agent. Also the mein or manner of a person; a clownish or genteel air. In a figurative sense, a discovery made of a thing not known before. Posture, attitude, mein, manner of behaviour. "He gave himself airs." An affected, or laboured and awkward manner of address, or behaviour.

To AIR, v. a. to expose to the air. To enjoy the benefit from the air. To expose to the fire, in order to free from the inconveniences of damp and stagnating air.

AIRBLADDER, s. a bladder found among the entrails of fish, which serves, by its contraction or dilatation, to enable them to rise or dive in the water.

AIRBALLOON, s. a bag of any light substance filled with inflammable air. See AEROSTATION.

AIRDRAWN, a. chimerical; imaginary.

AIRGUN, s. an instrument invented to shoot with, purely by means of compressed air.

AIRINESS, s. applied to situation, exposed to a free current of air, in opposition to confined; openness. Figuratively, applied to a person's manner, or behaviour; levity, gaiety.

AIRING, s. a short walk or ride abroad; so called, because we then enjoy the fresh and open air.

AIRLING, s. a youthful, light, gay, and thoughtless person.

AIRPUMP, s. in philosophy, an instrument or machine used for extracting air, consisting of two brass cylinders or pistons to extract the air with; a gage to determine the rarefaction of the air during any experiment; a tube called the swan's neck, communicating with the receiver and the pistons; and a winch that gives motion to the whole.

AIRSHAFT, s. in mining, a passage made for the air by digging.

AIRY, a. [aëreus, Lat.] the subtile parts of bodies. On high, or in that space of the system above the earth assigned to the air. Figuratively, chimerical, wanting solidity or foundation. Applied to dress, that which exposes to the weather, in opposition to warm, close, or confined. Applied to temper or behaviour, gay, sprightly, full of vivacity.

AISLE, s. (ile) the side-walks or paths of a church, running parallel to the greater in the centre, called nef; representing, in that respect, the wing of a building erected on each side the centre.

AIT, or EYGHT, s. a small island in the river.

AIX, a city in the department of the mouths of the Rhone in the south of France. It derives its name from its hot baths which were known to the Romans, is populous and adorned with several beautiful squares and fountains. Its principal trade is in oil. It is 17 miles E. of Montpellier.

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, lately a free imperial city of Juliers, Westphalia. There are hot baths in it, and some mines near it. The castle stands upon a hill, from which it is said that 60 cities or towns, the sea, and even England, can be seen on a clear day. This city, which has 30 parochial churches, and a very spacious market-place, was known to the Romans by the name of Aquæ Grandi. It was destroyed by the Huns in 451, but repaired, beautified, and enlarged by the emperor Charlemagne, who made it the capital of his empire. He lies interred in the church of Notre Dame, where his sword and belt are kept to this day. Two celebrated treaties of peace were concluded here, in 1668 and 1748. It was twice taken by the French in the late wars, viz. in 1792 and in 1794; and it is now included in the French empire. It is 17 miles N. of Limburg, 22 N. E. of Liege, and 40 W. of Cologne. Lat. 50. 48. N. lon. 6. 3. E.

To AKE, v. n. to feel a dull and continual pain, in opposition to smart, which is an acute one, and of a short continuance.

AKIN, a. related by blood or descent. Figuratively, resembling; having the same properties; having a near relation to.

A'LABASTER, s. [alabastron, Gr.] a kind of soft marble which cuts very easily, and is much used for little statues, vases, and columns. It is sometimes calcined and used as plaster. The most common sort is white and shining; but there are other sorts which are reddish or tawny.

A'LABASTER, a. made of alabaster.

ALA'CK, interj. an expression of sorrow, or something which causes it.

ALA'CK-A-DAY, interj. a sudden cry on feeling present, or seeing approaching calamity; and signifies that the person labours under the burden of misery.

ALA'CRIOUSLY, ad. [from alacer, Lat.] with great cheerfulness.

ALA'CRITY, s. [alacritas, Lat.] cheerful, activeness.

A-LA-MODE, ad. according to the fashion; a French phrase, used to imply that a thing is the reigning taste or fashion.

AL-A-MODE, s. [Fr.] a thin, light, glossy, black silk.

ALA'RM, s. [from à l'arme, Fr.] a military signal, either by beat of drum or sound of trumpet, by which men are now called to arms; but before the invention of those instruments it was done by a loud cry or shout. It generally includes in it an idea of approaching or sudden danger. Figuratively, the notice signifying the approach of any sudden danger. Tumult, or disturbance, causing fear, or apprehension of danger.

To ALA'RM, v. a. to give an army the signal of arming, or preparing themselves to encounter any sudden danger. In a secondary sense, to cause fear or apprehension of some approaching mischief.

ALA'RMING, part. that which occasions terror, fear, or apprehension, from the idea of approaching danger.

ALA'RMPOST, s. the place appointed for the several companies of an army to repair to, in case of any sudden and unforeseen danger, which occasions an alarm to be beat or sounded.

ALA'RUM, s. a clock, calculated to give notice to a person of any particular time it is set to, by the running down of its weight, which is attended in its descent by a continual striking of its hammer on the bell.

ALAS! interj. when used of ourselves, it implies lamentation, occasioned by the idea of some calamity. When applied to others, it implies pity, caused from an idea of their distress.

ALAY, s. in hunting, the adding fresh dogs into the cry.

ALB, s. [albus, Lat.] a vest or garment of white linen, reaching down to the feet, worn by priests; a surplice.

ALBA'NIA, a province of European Turkey, comprehending the ancient Epirus and a small part of Illyricum. Its inhabitants have a considerable trade in tapestry, flax, cotton, wax, honey, wine, and rock salt. It was formerly an independent kingdom, and long resisted the Turks.

ST. ALBANS, a town in Hertfordshire, with the title of a duchy, and two markets, on the Wednesday and Saturday. It is seated on the river Colne, arose from the ruins of the ancient city of Verulam, and receives its name from a monastery dedicated to St. Alban, a Roman martyr. The monastery is now used as a parish church, and in it were buried several persons of royal blood, particularly the famous duke Humphrey, whose body was discovered not many years since. It is 12 miles S. E. of Dunstable, and 21 and three quarters N. W. of London. It sends two members to parliament.

ALBA'TROSSE, a large sea bird, common about the Cape of Good Hope, Cape Horn, and several other places. It principally feeds on the prey which another sea bird, called the booby, provides for itself.

ALBETT, ad. although; notwithstanding; granting.

ALBIGE'NSES, an early sect of protestants, who were much persecuted in the south of France, in the thirteenth century.

A'LBION, s. the ancient name of England.

ALBUGI'NEOUS, a. [from albugo, Lat.] something belonging to that part of an egg which is called its white; or something which resembles it.

ALBU'GO, s. [Lat.] a disease in the eye.

A'LBUM, s. anciently, a kind of white table, or register, in which the names of certain magistrates, public transactions, &c. were entered; now, a kind of common-place book, placed in some part of a house for strangers and visitors to write their names, with a motto accompanying them.

AL'BUMEN, s. coagulable lymph. That peculiar animal substance which forms the serum of blood, and the white of eggs.

A'LCAHEST, s. See ALKAHEST.

ALCA'ID, s. [from al Arab. and kadkad, Heb.] the governor of a castle. In Spain, the judge of a city.

A'CALI, or A'LCALY, s. See ALKALY.

ALCALIZA'TION, s. See ALKALIZATION.

ALCA'NNA, s. [Arab.] a drug used in dying, which comes from the Levant. In powder it is green, but the tincture it makes differs according to the difference of the liquor in which it is steeped; when soaked in water, it is yellow; but when in vinegar, citron juice, or alum water, it is red.

A'LCARRAZA, s. a vessel, employed in Spain in cooling wine by evaporation.

ALCHY'MICAL, a. according to the process or method made use of by alchymists.

A'LCHYMIST, s. one who professes or pursues the science of alchymy.

A'LCHYMY, s. [from al, Arab. and chémi, Gr.] the more sublime chemistry, which proposes the transmutation of metals. The principal objects of alchymy are these: 1. The making of gold. 2. An universal dissolvent, or alkahest. 3. An universal medicine, or panacea. As to the making of gold, it has been attempted three several ways; by separation, maturation, and transmutation; which last they pretend to effect by the philosopher's stone. Alchymy is likewise a mixed metal, used in making some sort of spoons.

A'LCOHOL, s. [Arab.] in chemistry, the purest spirit of wine, rectified by frequent distillations to its utmost subtilty. Likewise, a very fine impalpable powder.

ALCOHOLIZA'TION, s. the act of rectifying spirits; or of reducing bodies to an impalpable powder.

To ALCOHOLIZE, v. a. to make an alcohol; or to rectify spirits by frequent distillation; so that, when set on fire, they shall consume away, without leaving any moisture or dregs behind them.

A'LCORAN, s. [from al and koran, Arab.] the book of the Mehommedan law, composed by Mahomet, with the assistance of Batiras a Jacobin, Sergius a Nestorian monk, and some Jews: it is divided into four parts, called by the name of some animal, as the cow, the emmet, the spider, and the fly. Though written by a person of no learning, it is by the Mehommedans extolled for the elegance of its style, and, on that account, urged to have been a divine composition. It abounds not only in absurdities but contradictions, which last they vindicate by saying, that it was three and twenty years in composing, and that the circumstances of things altering in that interval, the Deity himself repealed and altered several precepts, to suit them with the nature of things. It was originally in loose sheets, which Mahomet reported he received singly from God. This book is held in such veneration by its professors, that it is death for a Christian or a Jew to touch it; and equally fatal to a Mussulman himself, if he handles it with unwashen hands.

ALCO'VE, s. [alcoba, Span.] among builders, a recess, or part of a chamber, separated by an estrade, or partitions of columns and other ornaments, in which is placed a bed of state, or seats for the repose of company. Also, small open summer-houses or seats in gardens, with a circular dome or covering.

A'LDBOROUGH, (Aldboro) a sea-port town in Suffolk, with a market on Saturday. It is pleasantly seated in a dale, between a high hill to the westward and the sea to the east; a river runs to the S. W. and the old church stands on a hill. It is 93 miles and a half from London. It sends two members to parliament, and is governed by a bailiff, 12 aldermen, and 24 common-council. The harbour is tolerably good, but small. The town was formerly much longer; but the sea has taken away whole streets.

A'LDBOROUGH, or O'LDBOROUGH, a town in the W. riding of Yorkshire, on the Ouse, was the Isuriam Brigantium of the Romans, though not so much as the ruins are now to be seen, except some remains of the wall, pavements, and baths. It is 8 miles from Rippon, 15 miles N. W. of York, and 205 N. by W. of London.

ALDE'BARAN, s. a star of the first magnitude, in the constellation of Taurus, vulgarly called the Bull's Eye, whose longitude in the beginning of 1806, was in 7° 4′ 25″ of Gemini, and latitude 5° 28′ 49″,6 S. The annual increase of its longitude is 50″, 204, and annual decrease of lat. 0″, 317.

A'LDER, s. a genus of English trees. The wood is much used for making household furniture, &c.

A'LDERMAN, s. [elderman, Sax.] in its original signification it implied a person, who, on account of his years and experience, was proper to preside over the affairs of a nation, and to assist a prince with his counsel; in this respect it signified the same as privy-counsellor, or parliament-man. But this will appear more plain, if we recollect, that the three states of the kingdom were divided into Atheling, which included the nobility; Alderman, the second rank; and Thane, the last: till Athelstan's time, the term was used for an earl or count, which after his reign were substituted instead of it. In the time of Edgar it implied a judge or justice. But the term is now appropriated to the twenty-six persons who preside over the twenty-six wards into which the city of London is divided: out of which the lord-mayor is generally chosen by rotation. They are all qualified to act as justices of the peace at present; though formerly only such aldermen as had been lord-mayors, and the three eldest, or next to the chair, were invested with that honour. But they have not only the management of the civil, but likewise the military government of the city, are officers in its militia, and members of the artillery company. Aldermen preside in other cities besides London.

A'LDERNEY, a pleasant and healthy island, on the coast of Normandy, fruitful in corn and pasture, and remarkable for a fine breed of cows. It is about 8 miles in compass, 2 leagues from Cape la Hogue, and about 30 from the nearest part of England, which holds possession of it. On the S. there is a harbour, called Crabbs, which only admits small vessels, and in the centre stands the town of Alderney, which consists of at least 200 houses, and 1000 inhabitants. This island is separated from France by a strait, called the Race of Alderney, which is a dangerous passage in stormy weather, when the two currents meet; otherwise it is safe, and hath depth of water sufficient for the largest ships. To the W. lie the range of rocks, called the Caskets, where the son of Henry I. was shipwrecked in his passage to France; and here, October 5, 1744, the Victory, a first-rate man of war, the finest in the world, Sir John Balchen commander was lost.

ALE, s. [eale, Sax.] a liquor, the common drink of the English; made of an infusion of malt and hops in boiling water; afterwards fermented with yeast or barm. It is distinguishable from beer in respect of its strength and age; owing to its having a greater quantity of hops and malt than beer has, in proportion to the same quantity of water.

ALE, (GILL) s. a liquor made of ground-ivy leaves, steeped in ale.

A'LE-CONNER, s. [from ale and con, of connan, Sax.] an officer of the city of London, whose business it is to inspect the measures of the public-houses.

A'LEGAR, s. sour ale.

A'LEHOOF, s. [from ale and hof, Sax.] in botany, the ground-ivy; so called by the Saxons, because a chief ingredient in their malt liquors, instead of hops.

A'LEHOUSE, s. [ealhuse, Sax.] a house where ale is sold. Distinguished from a tavern, because that is appropriated to wine.

ALE'MBIC, s. a chemical vessel, usually made of glass or copper, formerly used for distillation. Retorts, and the common worm-still, are now more generally employed.

ALE'NGTH, ad. at full length, along; stretched upon the ground.

ALE'NTEJO, a fruitful province in the S. of Portugal.

ALE'PPO, or HALEB, the principal town of Syria, in Asia. It was taken by the Arabs in 1637, and is inhabited by Turks, and four sorts of Christians, who have each a bishop, a church, and the free exercise of their religion. There are 16,000 Greeks, 12,000 Armenians, and 10,000 Jacobites, besides Maronites, or Roman catholics. The city and suburbs may contain 200,000 persons in all. Next to Constantinople and Cairo, it is the most considerable town in the Turkish empire. It stands on four hills, in the middle of a pleasant fruitful plain, being of an oval figure, and about three miles in circumference. The castle stands on the highest hill, in the middle of the city: and the houses are better than in other places in Turkey. They have a great many stately mosques and caravansaries, with fountains and reservoirs of water, and vineyards and gardens well planted with most kinds of fruits. The Christians have their houses and churches in the suburbs, and carry on a very considerable trade in silks, camblets, and Turkey leather. Several European nations have factors here, and the English live in a quadrangle resembling a college, having their chaplain and chapel; and at leisure hours divert themselves with hunting and fowling. The beglerbeg of Aleppo commands all the country between the Levant sea and the river Euphrates; but the governor of the castle is independant of him.

ALE'RT, a. [alerte, Fr.] watchful, active, diligent; ready on any emergence; brisk, pert, sharp.

ALE'RTNESS, s. the quality of being alert, sprightly, pert, active, or vigilant.

A'LESBURY, AYLESBURY, or AILSBURY, the largest and best borough town in Buckinghamshire, as ancient as the times of the Saxons, who took it by force in 571. In the time of William the Conqueror it was a royal manor; and he gave several yard lands, on condition that the owner should find litter or straw for his bed, whenever he came that way. William of Aylesbury held it by this charter, with this addition, that he should likewise straw the king's chamber, and provide him three eels if he came in the winter; but if in summer, besides straw for the bed, he was to provide two green geese. This he was to repeat three times a year, if the king came thither so often. It has given the title of earl to the noble family of the Bruces, Charles II. having conferred that title in 1664 on Robert Bruce, earl of Elgin in Scotland, descended from the kings of that country; to which their motto, fuimus, "we have been," seems strongly to allude. It was made a town incorporate by Queen Mary, in 1553; consisting of a bailiff, ten aldermen, and twelve capital burgesses: at present, its chief officer is termed a constable. It has a market on Saturday, sends two members to parliament, and is 40 measured miles N. W. of London.

A'LESHAM, or AYLSHAM, a town in Norfolk, much inhabited by knitters. It is a clean well paved town, about 12 miles from Norwich, and 121 from London. Market on Tuesday.

A'LEVAT, s. the tub in which ale is fermented.

A'LEW, s. clamour; outery. Not in use.

ALEXA'NDERS, s. in botany, the smyrnium. It is an umbelliferous plant found upon rocks on the sea-coast, and about Nottingham, and flowering in May and June. It was formerly cultivated in our gardens; but its place is now better supplied by celery.

ALEXA'NDRIA, or SCANDERIA, once a magnificent, rich, and celebrated city of Egypt, built by Alexander the Great, near the most westerly branch of the Nile, soon after the overthrow of Tyre, about 333 years before the Christian æra. It was long esteemed the finest city in the world after Rome; we may form some idea of its inhabitants from the account of Diodorus Siculus, who relates that it had on its rolls in his time (44 years before the Christian æra) 300,000 free-men. The celebrated library which was founded here by Ptolemy Soter, and placed in the temple of Serapis, containing, in his time, 400,000 volumes, and by addition of his successors 700,000, was, it is said, in 642, destroyed by order of the Saracen khaliff, who became master of the city. The Saracen general who took it, said, in his letter to the khaliff, that he found in it 4000 palaces, 4000 baths, 40,000 Jews who paid tribute, 400 royal circi, and 12,000 gardeners, who supplied the city with all kinds of herbs in great plenty. At present it does not contain above 12,000 or 14,000 inhabitants; a mixture from different nations, as well as from various parts of the Turkish empire. The Christian Copti, Greeks, and Armenians, are very numerous here; the Europeans all pass under the name of Franks. Although Alexandria is now so much decayed, that the rubbish in some places overtops the houses, yet there are still some remains of its ancient splendor, particularly Pompey's pillar, and two obelisks of hieroglyphics. The ancient Pharos, a watch-tower, so famous in antiquity that it was numbered among the seven wonders of the world, is now turned into a castle, called Pharillon, and is still used to direct vessels into the harbour. This city was a place of great trade, before the Portuguese discovered the passage to India by the Cape of Good Hope, the commodities of the East Indies being deposited here on their way to Europe by the Red Sea. Lat. 31. 11. N. lon. 30. 5. E.

ALEXA'NDRINE, s. [from Alexander Paris, the inventor of this metre] a kind of verse borrowed from the French, consisting among them of twelve or thirteen syllables in alternate couplets, and among us of twelve. They were formerly very much used by our poets to clinch their verses, and generally were the last of three ending in the same rhyme; but are now discarded on account of their want of harmony, and their suspending the mind too much by their extraordinary length.

ALEXIPHA'RMIC, a. [from alexo, I expel, and pharmacon, poison, Gr.] in its primitive sense, something which has the virtue of expelling poisons taken internally; and is the same as an antidote. Used substantively, by modern practitioners, it means remedies adapted, or proper to expel that malignancy with which the animal spirits are affected in acute distempers, through the pores of the skin by sweating.

ALEXITE'RIAL, or ALEXITE'RICAL, a. [from alexo, to expel, Gr.] that expels poison, or the malignant humours of fevers.

ALFORD, a town in Lincolnshire, 20 miles N. of Boston, 133 N. of London. Market on Tuesday.

A'LFRED the Great, son of Ethelwulf, succeeded his brother Etheldred, though that prince left several children. His virtues and distinguished bravery had been shewn in his brother's life-time, and now endeared him to his subjects. He was crowned in 871, when the Danes were in the very heart of his dominions, and all the sea-ports were filled with their fleets. After several battles, with various success, Alfred was obliged to dismiss his very attendants; and having committed his wife and children to the care of some trusty subjects, disguised himself, and lived concealed in the little island of Athelney, in Somersetshire; at length the Danes finding that they had no enemies to oppose them, grew negligent. This incited Alfred's friends to repair to their prince, who resolving to be satisfied, boldly entered the Danish camp in the disguise of a musician, and even staid there several days; then returning to his friends, his troops were secretly assembled, and he came up with, attacked, and routed the Danes with incredible slaughter. Those who escaped fled to a castle, but were soon compelled to submit. Alfred agreed to let them depart, on condition that their leader, Guthrun, should embrace Christianity. This they readily complied with, and Alfred gave Guthrun the government of East Anglia, in Essex. Alfred now increased his navy, grew formidable at sea, and beat many of the Danish fleets. He fortified his kingdom with walled towns and castles, propagated the civil arts, encouraged polite learning, made many excellent laws, instituted juries, and established the plan of a civil constitution in England, and in his reign justice was so strictly observed, that we are told bracelets of gold being hung in the highways over night would be found safe in the morning. He was an excellent scholar; he wrote books for the instruction of his people; and was one of the greatest, wisest, and most pious princes, upon earth. After a glorious reign of 28 years, he died on the 28th Oct. A. D. 909.

ALFRE'TON, a town in Derbyshire, 13 miles from Derby, and 141 from London. Market on Friday.

ALGA'ROTH, s. [Arab.] an emetic powder, the white oxyde of antimony.

ALGA'RVA, the most southern province of Portugal. It is mountainous but fertile, and produces excellent wines.

ALGA'ZEL, s. a species of antelope.

A'LGEBRA, s. [from al and geber, Arab.] the reduction of broken numbers to whole; a branch of arithmetic, which takes the quantity sought, as if granted; and by means of one or more quantities given, proceeds by consequences till the quantity at first only supposed to be known, or some power of it, is found to be equal to some quantity or quantities known, and consequently, itself known likewise.

ALGEBRA'IC, or ALGEBRA'ICAL, a. something relative or belonging to Algebra.

ALGEBRA'IST, s. a person conversant in the operations of algebra.

A'LGENIB, s. a star of the second magnitude, in the constellation of Perseus.

A'LGID, a. cold; chill.

ALGIERS, a country of Africa, extending about 500 miles in length from E. to W. and from 40 to 100 in breadth, along the Barbary coast; has mount Atlas on the S. Tunis on the E. and Morocco on the W. The Turks, who are not above 7,000 in number, have the government in their hands, and the Moors, or natives, have no share in it. It is a kind of republic, under the protection of the Grand Seignior, and is governed by a sovereign, or dey, who seldom undertakes any thing of importance without the counsel of the Janizaries. The Arabs, who live in tents, are a distinct people, governed by their own laws, though the Turks interfere when they think fit. The dey is absolute in some respects, although he is elected by the Turkish soldiers, and frequently deposed and put to death by them. The revenues of the government arise from the tribute paid by the Moors and Arabs; and the prizes they take, or the piracies they commit at sea, sometimes equal the taxes they lay upon the natives. The stems of the vines here are so large, that a man can hardly grasp them with his arms, and the bunches of grapes are a foot and half long. The natives are strong, and of a tawny complexion; their religion is Mahometanism, and their language a dialect of the Arabic; they also use that jargon, composed of the French, Italian, and Spanish, languages, called Lingua-Franca, which prevails along the shores of the Mediterranean. Algiers, the capital of this kingdom, is so very populous, that the foreign merchants amount to at least to 3000 families, and the Jews to no less than 8000: almost the whole trade passes through their hands. It stands on the sea-side over against Minorca, 300 miles W. of Tunis, lon. 2. 7. E. lat. 36. 49. N.

A'LIAS, ad. [Lat.] otherwise; used in law to specify the different names of a man, as Frith alias Wortley, alias Smith; that is, Frith otherwise Wortley, otherwise Smith.

A'LIBLE, a. [alibilis, Lat.] that nourishes; or that may be nourished.

A'LICANT, a small rich city of Valencia, in Spain, well known for its fine wines (particularly that called Tent or Alicant) excellent fruits, &c. It has a good harbour, and an extensive trade. The English, Dutch, Italians, &c. have consuls here. It is seated on the Mediterranean, on a bay of the same name, 75 miles S. of Valencia. Lat. 38. 24. N. lon. 0. 0.

A'LIEN, a. [alienus, Lat.] not of the same kind. Inconsistent with; estranged from; at enmity with.

A'LIEN, s. [from alienus, Lat.] something adverse to, or at enmity with. A foreigner, or one of another country. Not of the same profession, party, or sect.

To A'LIEN, v. a. [alieno, Lat.] to transfer our own property to another. To grow averse to, to dislike.

A'LIENABLE, a. [from alien and abal, Sax.] that may be transferred to, and become the property of another.

To A'LIENATE, v. a. [alieno, Lat.] to transfer property to another. To grow averse to, by transferring our affections to some other person or thing.

A'LIENATE, a. [alienatus, Lat.] averse, or inimical to.

ALIENA'TION, s. [alienatio, Lat.] in law, the act of transferring property to another. Change of affection from approbation to dislike.

To ALI'GHT, v. a. [alightan, Sax.] to descend from a higher situation to a lower. To descend from, or get off an horse.

ALI'KE, ad. equally, or in the same manner. Both; without difference or distinction. Resembling.

A'LIMENT, s. [alimentum, Lat.] food, or that which nourishes, or satisfies the calls of hunger.

ALIME'NTAL, a. that can increase the dimensions of plants or animals by being taken in food.

ALIME'NTALLY, ad. so as to serve for nourishment.

ALIME'NTARINESS, s. the quality which renders a thing capable of affording nourishment.

ALIME'NTARY, a. that has relation, or belongs to aliment; that nourishes, or is eaten for diet. Alimentary Ducts, the intestines, so called on account of the food passing through them. It is sometimes used for the thoracic duct.

ALIMENTA'TION, s. the quality, action, or power of affording nourishment; or the increasing of the dimensions of a body, by converting food into its own substance.

A'LIMONY, s. [alimonia, Lat.] in its primary sense, nourishment; but now appropiated to the law, wherein it implies that allowance which a married woman sues for, and is entitled to, upon any occasional separation, provided it be not for elopement or adultery.

A'LIQUANT, a. [aliquantus, Lat.] in arithmetic, is that part of a number, which, however repeated, will not make up the exact number, but will leave a remainder; as 3 is an aliquant part of 10, 3 times 3 is 9, and 1 remaining.

A'LIQUOT, a. [Lat.] in arithmetic, such part of any number or quantity as will exactly measure it without any remainder; as, 3 is an aliquot of 12, and 6 of 18.

A'LITURE, s. [alitura, Lat.] nourishment.

ALI'VE, a. [from a and liban, Sax.] in animals, denotes sense and feeling; in vegetables, when the sap circulates; in liquors, when they taste brisk on the palate. Figuratively, cheerful, sprightly, gay, and full of spirits; without diminution or lessening.

A'LKAHEST, s. [Arab.] a pretended universal menstruum, asserted by the ancient chemists to be capable of resolving all bodies into their first matter, and which should yet retain its seminal power, and natural form entire.

ALKALE'SCENT, a. that which resembles the qualities of an alkali.

ALKALI, s. [from kali, Arab.] in chemistry, a name originally given by the Arabians to a salt extracted from the ashes of a plant called by them kali, and by us glasswort, because used in the making of glass. In its modern extensive sense it denotes a class of substances, of which various definitions have been given. Some have defined an alkali to be any substance, which, when mixed with an acid, occasions an ebullition and effervescence. Others have described them as having an acrid and urinous taste, changing the blue juices of vegetables to a green, and a yellow to a brown, and have the property of rendering oils mixible with water. The alkalis are reckoned three, potash, soda, and ammonia.

ALKALINE, a. that has the qualities of alkali.

To ALKALIZATE, v. a. to make bodies alkaline by chemical process; or to draw out the latent alkaline virtues of a body, by reducing it to a different form.

ALKALIZATE, a. that has the powers and qualities of a body which is termed an alkali by medical writers.

ALKALIZATION, s. in chemistry, the act of impregnating or mingling a fluid with an alkaline salt, either to make it a better dissolvent, or to load the phlegm so that it may not rise in distillation.

ALKANET, s. [anchusa, Lat.] a plant used in medicine.

ALKE'RMES, s. [Arab.] in medicine, a term borrowed from the Arabs, denoting a rich cardiac electuary, consisting of several warm and aromatic ingredients, of which kermes is the basis.

ALL, ad. entirely, completely; exclusive of any other.

ALL, a. [all, Sax. alle, Teut.] applied to a number, it sometimes is used collectively for the whole or every one of the parts without exception. Applied to quantity, every parcel, or every particle. Applied to time, the whole space or interval. Applied to place, its whole extent.

ALL, s. the whole, opposed to a part, or nothing.

A'LLA, s. the name by which mahometans call God. In Arabic, it is derived from the verb alah, to adore; and is the same with the Hebrew eloah, which signifies the adorable Being.

ALLANTOIS, or ALLANTOIDES, s. [from allas and eidos, Gr.] the urinary tunic placed between the amnion and chorion, which, by the navel and urachus, or passage by which the urine is conveyed from the infant in the womb, receives the urine that comes out of the bladder.

To ALLAY, v. a. [alloyer, Fr.] to mix one metal with another, to render it fit or proper for coinage. In this sense some spell it alloy, in order to keep it more closely to the French, from whence it is borrowed. To abate, or lessen any quality. To quiet, pacify, or reduce a boisterous temper into a calm.

ALLAY, or ALLOY, s. [alloy, Fr.] in its primary sense, a mixture of divers metals, or of divers particles of the same metal of different fineness. Minters never strike any gold or silver without allay; brass coin is made of an allay of copper. Jewellers, wire-drawers, and gold-beaters, are obliged to use an allay in the gold they work; the brass-founders have their allay of copper. Alloy is used, in a secondary sense, for something which lessens or diminishes the properties of the thing with which it is mixed. That which depreciates, or renders base, by diminution or lessening.

ALLA'YER, s. the person or thing which is endued with the power of allaying, lessening, debasing, corrupting, or diminishing.

ALLA'YMENT, s. a diminishing, or lessening, applied to the passions.

ALLEGANY, or APALA'CHIAN MOUNTAINS, a chain or range of mountains in North America, which extend north-easterly and south-westerly, nearly parallel with the coast of the southern states, through which they run. They occupy a space of about 900 miles in length, and from 60 to 200 in breadth, eastward of the Mississippi and the five lakes; that is, from Hudson's River to Georgia. They are not confusedly scattered and broken rising here and there into high peaks, over-topping each other; but stretch along, in uniform ridges, scarcely half a mile high, spreading towards the south. Some of them terminate in high perpendicular bluffs; others gradually subside into a level country, giving rise to the rivers which run southerly into the Gulph of Mexico. In the back parts of Pennsylvania, scarce one acre in ten of this range is capable of culture; in other parts, extensive tracts of fine arable and pasture land intervene between the ridges, having generally a rich, black soil, and some of the mountains will admit of cultivation almost to their tops.

ALLEGATION, s. affirmation, declaration, excuse, plea. In law, the producing instruments, deeds, or vouchers, to authorize or justify proceedings.

To ALLEGE, v. a. [allego, Lat.] to declare, or affirm; to plead in excuse; to produce in defence.

ALLEGEABLE, a. that may be charged; that may be pleaded in excuse.

ALLEGER, s. he that asserts or declares any thing.

ALLEGIANCE, s. [allégeance, Fr.] in law, that natural, sworn, or legal obedience every subject owes to his prince, and is an incident inseparable, or that which follows a person wheresoever he goes. Oath of allegiance, is that which is taken to the king in quality of a temporal prince, and is distinguished from that of supremacy, which is taken to him in quality of supreme head of the church.

ALLEGO'RIC, a. something which must be understood figuratively, in opposition to literal.

ALLEGO'RICAL, a. that consists of expressions purely figurative, where something else is meant than what is expressed.

ALLEGO'RICALLY, ad. figuratively, in opposition to literally.

ALLEGO'RICALNESS, s. the quality of being figurative.

To ALLEGORIZE v. a. to turn into allegory; to talk in a sense not literal.

ALLEGORY, s. [allegoria, Gr.] a figurative speech, in which something else is contained than what the literal meaning conveys. Thus the Roman commonwealth is addressed by Horace under the figure of a ship. The Fables, of Æsop, the Iliad and Odyssey of Homer, and the Æneid of Virgil, may be included under this species of writing.

ALLE'GRO, s. [Ital.] in music, one of the six distinctions of time, expressing the quickest motion, excepting presto. If it be preceded by poco, it must be played in a slower or graver manner than when allegro stands alone; if by più, it must then be fastest of all. It will not be improper to add, that the six divisions of time are as follow: grave, adagio, largo, vivace, allegro, presto.

ALLELU'JAH, s. [a corrupt spelling, instead of hallelujah] a Hebrew word signifying praise the Lord, to be met with at the beginning or end of some psalms. So much energy has been observed in this term, that the ancient church thought proper to preserve it, without translating it either into Greek or Latin, for fear of impairing the genius or softness of it.

ALLEMA'NDA, or ALLEMAND, s. [Ital.] in music, a grave air, composed in common time, consisting of two parts or strains.

To ALLEVIATE, v. a. [allevo, Lat.] figuratively, to lighten, to make lighter or less, in allusion to the diminishing the pressure of a heavy load. To lessen, mitigate, or diminish the enormity of a fault.

ALLEVIATION, s. the act of making a thing lighter; ease from pain; extenuation of a fault.

A'LLEY, s. [allée, Fr.] in gardening, a strait walk bounded on each side with trees or shrubs. Alleys are distinguished from paths, as being broad enough for two people to walk abreast. The word is in towns applied to narrow passages, to distinguish them from streets, which are wider. Alley, in perspective, is that which is larger at the entrance than at the opposite extremity, in order to make it seem long.

ALL-FOURS, s. in gaming, a particular play, wherein the whole sum a person gains each deal is limited to four, which are the highest, lowest, the knave of trumps, and the game, or the greatest number to be made from tens and court cards; the latter of which are reckoned four for an ace, three for a king, two for a queen, and one for the knave; and he who has all these particulars, is said to have all fours.

ALL-HAIL, interj. a salutation or invocation made use of in acknowledgment of benefits, or in testimony of gratitude and good-will.

ALL-HALLOW-TIDE, s. [compounded of all, hallow, and tide, from tid. Sax. a week; hence Whitsun-tide, or Whitsun-week] that space of time which is near All-Saints-day, or the 1st of November.

ALLIANCE, s. [alliance, Fr.] the union or connection of two persons or two families by marriage. In a political sense, the leagues or treaties between different states for their mutual defence.

ALLICIENCY, (allishiency) s. [from allicio, Lat.] the quality of attracting, or drawing to; attraction.

ALLIGATION, s. the act of uniting, or the state of things united, linked, or joined together. In arithmetic, the rule wherein questions are resolved relating to the mixtures of different commodities, with their value, effects, &c. when so compounded.

ALLIGATOR, s. an American animal resembling the crocodile.

ALLIGATURE, s. the link, or ligature, by which two things are joined together.

ALLINGTON CASTLE, a town of Kent, near the Medway. Market on Tuesday.

ALL-JUDGING, part. exercising judgment without control or partiality.

ALLISION, (allizyon) s. [allisio, Lat.] the act of striking one thing against another.

ALLITERATION, s. [from ad and litera, Lat.] an ornament in poetical language, consisting in the repetition of the same letter at certain intervals, as, "*w*eave the *w*arp, and *w*eave the *w*oof." It is apt however to run into the absurd, and critics in general disregard it.

ALL-KNOWING, part. intimately acquainted with every thing that is the object of knowledge; that is endued with absolute, perfect, or infinite knowledge.

ALLOCATION, s. [from alloco, Lat.] the act of putting one thing to another. In commerce, the admission or allowance of an article to an account, and the passing it as such. In the exchequer, it is an allowance made upon an account.

ALLODIAL, a. [from allodium, Teut.] in law, that of which a person has an absolute property, without paying any acknowledgment or service, and is opposed to feudal.

ALLODIUM, s. [Teut.] a possession which a man holds in his own right, without any dependence, charge, service, or homage to be paid to a superior lord.

To ALLOO', or HALLOO', v. a. [pron. halloo, or haller, Fr. to make a noise] to set a dog on; or excite his courage so as to seize one of his own, or any other species.

To ALLOT, v. a. [hlot, Sax.] to distribute by lot; to assign a share; to grant.

ALLOTMENT, s. the parcel, share, lot, office, or condition, assigned to any one.

ALLOTTING, s. in commerce, is when a ship's goods are divided into different parcels, to be purchased by persons whose names are written on pieces of paper, which are indifferently affixed to each of such lots, and the goods thus divided without any partiality.

To ALLOW, v. a. [allouer, Fr.] to confess, to yield, admit, grant, acknowledge, or assent to a principle, in opposition to contradiction; to yield, or permit; to confer an honour on a person; to approve as just, or consistent with one's duty; to give, to bestow, to pay as a debt.

ALLOWABLE, a. that may be granted, or permitted; that may be admitted without contradiction; that may be suffered, as repugnant or inconsistent with no laws; lawful; not forbidden.

ALLOWABLENESS, s. the quality of a thing, which denotes it to be lawful, proper to be granted or permitted, and no ways inconsistent with the rules of reason, or the customs of a place.

ALLOWANCE, s. the granting, concession, or yielding assent to any doctrine, opinion, or principle. Permission, licence, or consent, applied to superiors. Liberty, freedom from restraint, used with the word give. Concession.

ALLOWED, part. [from allow] universally acknowledged; established with respect to character. In commerce, it is written in the margin of an account of expenses, opposite to such articles as are granted.

ALLOY, s. See ALLAY.

ALL-POWERFUL, a. capable of operating without defect or control, and of producing every thing that is consistent with infinite wisdom.

ALL-SAINTS-DAY, s. the 1st day of November, set apart by the church to commemorate the exemplary lives and noble fortitude of all the saints and martyrs: added as a supplementary day to the rest of the festivals, that those who were worthy of remembrance might not be passed over without notice, and that the human mind might be more strongly excited to exemplary piety, or pious martyrdom, by considering the number of those who have preceded in those shining paths.

ALL-SEED, s. a plant, called also least rupture wort, and little flax.

ALL-SEEING, a. endued with the power of seeing every thing.

ALL-SOULS-DAY, s. a festival observed by the church of Rome, on the 2d of November, with a particular service relating to the souls supposed to be in purgatory.

ALL-SUFFICIENT, (all-suffishient) a. capable of procuring every thing which is the object of power or wisdom; absolutely perfect in himself.

To ALLUDE, v. n. [alludo, Lat.] to have a distant respect to a thing, without mentioning it expressly; to hint at.

To ALLUMINATE, v. a. to beautify, decorate, adorn. Before the invention of printing, certain persons called Alluminors, made it a trade to paint the initial letters of manuscripts in all sorts of colours, and to gild them with silver and gold.

To ALLURE, v. a. [leurer, Fr.] to entice, or attract, either in a good or bad sense: to persuade or draw, by the addition of something besides the intrinsic value and advantages of the object.

ALLURE, s. originally some artificial bird, made use of by bird-catchers, to entice birds into their traps. Figuratively, any thing that entices, or draws a person into the power of another.

ALLUREMENT, s. that which has the power of enticing by its charms; temptation; enticement.

ALLURER, s. the person who tempts, or seduces by fair speeches, enticements, or inveiglements.

ALLURINGLY, ad. in a manner proper to entice, tempt, inveigle, or seduce.

ALLURINGNESS, s. the quality whose charms have such effect upon the mind, as to prevail upon it to engage in any action either good or bad.

ALLUSION, (alluzyon) s. [allusio, Lat.] something spoken with reference to a thing already known, and on that account not expressed. A reference; hint, or implication.

ALLUSIVE, a. that does not mention a thing expressly, but comprehends it by implication; that hints at something not fully expressed.

ALLUSIVELY, ad. in a manner wherein a reference is made to something not expressed, but implied.

ALLUSIVENESS, s. the quality of expressing a thing by reference, opposed to expressly, or directly.

ALLUVIAL, a. belonging to alluvion. By alluvial depositions, is meant, the soil which has been found by the destruction of the mountain, and the washing down of their particles by torrents of water.

ALLUVION, s. [alluvio, Lat.] the carrying of any thing to something else by the motion of water; the thing carried by water to something else. In law, a gradual increase of land along the sea-shore, or the banks of large rivers. The civil law places alluvion among the lawful means of acquisition; and defines it be to a latent imperceptible accretion.—But where any considerable portion of ground is torn away at once, by an inundation, and joined to some neighbouring estate, this is not acquired by right of alluvion, but may be claimed again by the former owner.

ALLUVIOUS, a. [from alluvio, Lat.] that is washed away from one place and carried to another.

ALL-WISE, a. that is endued with absolute, perfect, or infinite wisdom.

To ALLY', v. a. [allier, Fr.] to join together, or unite by kindred, friendship, or interest. To resemble, or be like in the passive.

A'LLY, s. in the plural allies; [allié, Fr.] one who is joined to or has connections with another, owing to some contract, whether that of marriage or treaty; and is applied both to persons and kingdoms.

ALMACA'NTER, s. [Arab.] in astronomy, a circle drawn parallel to the horizon. It is generally used in the plural, and signifies a series of parallel circles drawn through the several degrees of the meridian. Almacanter's staff, a mathematical instrument made of pear-tree or box-wood, with an arch containing 15 degrees, formerly used to find the altitude of the sun at its rising, in order to discover its amplitude, and the variation of the compass.

A'LMAGEST, s. [Arab.] the name of a celebrated work of Ptolomy, containing a collection of geometrical problems and astronomical observations made by the ancients.

A'LMANAC, or A'LMANACK, s. a table, or calendar, wherein the days of the week, fasts, festivals, changes of the moon, variation of time between clocks and the sun, &c. eclipses, time of high water, beginnings and endings of terms, are noted for the year.

ALMANDINE. s. [Fr. almandina, Ital.] a ruby, coarser and lighter than the oriental, and nearer the colour of the granite.

ALMA'NZA, a town of Murcia, in Spain, famous for a defeat sustained here by the English and Portuguese, April 25th, 1707, in which they lost 6000 prisoners, beside a great number of killed and wounded.

ALMI'GHTINESS, s. that attribute of the Deity, wherein he is considered as able to perform every thing that is the object of absolute, perfect, uncontrolable, and infinite power.

ALMI'GHTY, a. [formerly spelt allmighty ; ælmightig, Sax.] that is possessed of perfect, absolute, uncontrolable, or unlimitted power; that can do every thing that infinite wisdom can dictate, or infinite power can execute.

A'LMOND, s. [amandola, Ital.] a fruit contained in a stone full of little cells, which is inclosed in a tough skin. They are divided into sweet and bitter, on account of their different tastes. The French lapidaries give the name Almonds, or Amandes, to those pieces of rock crystal which are cut with a wheel into forms resembling this fruit, and are used to adorn chandeliers of glass, and other pieces of furniture made of glass or crystal.

A'LMOND FURNACE, or A'LMAN-FURNACE, called also the Sweep, is a peculiar kind of furnace used in refining, to separate metals from cinders and other foreign substances.

A'LMONDS OF THE THROAT, or TONSILS, improperly stiled Almonds of the ears. See TONSILS.

A'LMONER, s. an officer appointed to distribute alms to the poor. The lord Almoner or lord high Almoner of England, is usually a bishop, who has the forfeiture of all goodands, and the goods of Felos de se, which he is to distribute among the poor.

A'LMONRY, s. the place wherein the almoner keeps his office, or distributes the alms to the poor.

ALMOST, ad. [al-meest, Belg.] applied to action, near performing it. "They be almost ready to stone me." Exod. xvii. 3. Applied to number or multitude, a considerable majority, little less than the whole. "Came almost the whole city together." Acts xiii. 44. Applied to time, very near the period mentioned. "When seven days were almost ended." Acts xxi. 27. Applied to the effect of an argument, not far from persuading or conviction. "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." Acts xxvi. 28.

ALMS, s. [never used but in the plural, alms; elmesse, Sax.] money, or other necessaries, given to relieve the necessities of the poor and distressed, including in it a tender sympathy in their afflictions, and a pious readiness to relieve them.

A'LMSDEED, s. an act of charity; something done out of compassion, to relieve the distresses and wants of others.

A'LMS-GIVER, s. one who is charitable, or fond of relieving the necessities of the poor.

A'LMSHOUSE, s. a house endowed by legacies, or other donations, for the lodging and support of the poor.

A'LMSMAN, s. a man who is supported by charity or alms; one who belongs to an alms-house.

A'LMUG-TREE, s. a tree mentioned in scripture, supposed to be the same with the shittim-wood spoken of by Moses. It is probably the same as the Indian pine-tree.

A'LNAGE, s. the measuring of woollen manufactures by the ell. Alnage was first intended as a proof of the goodness of the commodity, and a seal was invented, the affixing of which to a commodity was a sign that such commodity was made according to law. But now these seals may be bought, and affixed to any goods, at the buyer's pleasure, to the great prejudice of our trade with foreigners.

A'LNAGER, s. a public officer, whose business is to examine into the assize of all woollen cloths made throughout the kingdom, and fix seals upon them; likewise to collect an alnage duty to the king. There are now three officers relating to the alnage, namely, a searcher, measurer, and alnager, all which were formerly comprised in the last, till, by his own neglect, it was thought proper to separate them into three offices.

A'LNEWICK, or ALNWICK, the county town of Northumberland, 306 miles from London, on the road to Berwick, from which it is distant 26 miles, and from Newcastle 30; is seated on the little river Alne, and is populous and well built. It has handsome shambles, surrounded with piazzas, has likewise 3 gates, and it was formerly surrounded with a wall. Here is an old stately Gothic castle, the seat of the duke of Northumberland, which has continued in the possession of the Percy family ever since the year 1309: it has lately been repaired and beautified. It has a market on Saturday.

A'LNEY, a little island near the city of Gloucester, famous for the single combat fought on it between Edmund Ironside and Canute the Dane, for the whole kingdom, in sight of both their armies; in which the latter being wounded, he proposed an agreement: accordingly the kingdom was divided between them; the S. part falling to Edmund, the N. to Canute.

A'LOES, s. [aloes, Lat.] This word is applied to a tree, a plant, and a medicinal juice extracted from the plant. The wood grows in China, in the kingdom of Lao, and in Cochin China. It is a large tree, or at least about the size of the olive, resembles it likewise in its leaves, and its fruit is red, like a cherry. The wood of the trunk is of three colours: under the bark it is black and heavy; the next wood is of a tanned colour, light, and resembles rotten wood; but the heart is the tambac, or calembac, which is dearer in the Indies than gold itself, and was reckoned by the Siamese the most valuable present they could make to Louis XIV.

ALOETIC, a. that consists of aloes.

ALOFT, ad. [from loffter, Dan.] in the air, in opposition to the ground; on high; above.

A'LOGY, s. [alogos, Gr.] unreasonableness: absurdity.

ALONE, ad. [alleen, Belg.] without a companion. Without any assistance. Exclusively of all others; solely.

ALONG, ad. [au longue, Fr. or al lunge, Ital.] at full length; prostrate on the ground. Motion, or progression, measured lengthwise. Used with all, for a continuance, or during a whole space of time. Throughout, or from one end to the other, applied to writings. After come, it implies attendance and encouragement to proceed.

ALOOF, ad. [from at and off, Sax.] used with the participle from, at a distance which is within sight. When applied to persons, it implies a distance occasioned by caution and circumspection. At a distance, so as not to appear as a principal, or party in any design. Not connected with, having no relation to.

ALOPE'CIA, s. [from alopex, Gr.] a distemper wherein all, or a great part of the hair falls off.

ALOU'D, ad. loudly; with a strong voice, with a great noise.

ALOW, ad. in a low place; near the ground, in opposition to aloft, or above.

A'LPHA, s. the first letter in the Greek alphabet, answering to our A; therefore used to signify the first, as omega the last; both together denote the eternity of God.

ALPHABET, s. [from alpha and beta, the two first letters of the Greek alphabet.] the several letters of a language arranged in their accustomed order. The English alphabet has 26 letters, the French 23, the Hebrew, Chaldee, Syriac, and Samaritan, 22 each; the Arabic 28, Persian 31, Turkish 33, Georgian 36, Coptic 32, Muscovite 43, Greek 24, Latin 22, Sclavonic 27, Dutch 26, Spanish 27, Italian 20, and the Bengalese 21. The Ethiopic has no less than 202 letters, there being 7 vowels which they combine with each of their 26 consonants, to which they add 20 other aspirated syllables. The Chinese have no alphabet, but have characters which are the signs, not of words, but ideas, and are in number about 80,000.

ALPHABE'TIC, or ALPHABE'TICAL, a. placed in the order of the alphabet.

ALPHABE'TICALLY, ad. in the same order as in the alphabet.

ALPHÆNIX, s. white barley-sugar, which is made of common sugar, boiled to a proper consistence, and poured upon a marble slab greased with salad oil; after which it is moulded into various figures with a brass crotchet.

A'LPINE, a. [Alpinus, Lat.] that may be met with on the Alps.

ALPS, a range of mountains, the highest in Europe, which divide Italy from France, Switzerland, and Germany. Some of these mountains are two miles in perpendicular height. They have but few passes, and those difficult of access, as was experienced by Hannibal when he invaded Italy. The prospect from many parts of this enormous range of mountains is extremely romantic. The Glaciers of the Alps are immense masses of ice lodged upon the gentler declivities of the mountains, and exhibiting the most grotesque and fantastic representations. From the valley of Chamouni, there is a view of a vast chain of mountains, inaccessible, and covered with ice; and of Mont Blanc, above the rest, whose top seems to pierce the highest region of the clouds. The chain upon which this mountain seems to look down like a giant, is composed of masses of rocks, which terminate in pikes or spires, called the Needles, and which seem ranged like tents in a camp. Their sides are covered with fretted streaks of ice and snow.

A'LQUIFOU, or A'RQUIFOU, a sort of mineral lead, very heavy, easily reduced into powder, and hard to melt. In England, it is commonly called potter's ore; because the potters use it in varnishing or glazing their wares.

ALREADY, (pronounced as if the a was dropped) ad. [from all and ready, Sax.] at the time present even now.

A'LRESFORD, a town in Hampshire, with a market on Thursday, 18 miles E. N. E. of Southampton, and 57 W. S. W. of London. It is governed by a bailiff, has one church, about 200 houses, two principal streets, which are large and broad, and a small manufacture of linseys.

ALRUCCABAH, s. the north-pole star.

ALSA'CE, Upper and Lower, late provinces of France, having the Rhine and Switzerland on the E. and S. E. and Strasburg being the capital of the whole; they are now included in the departments of the Upper and Lower Rhine.

A'LSINE, s. the same with chickweed.

A'LSO, conjunct. [alswa, Sax.] used to shew that what had been affirmed of one sentence or person holds good of the succeeding part of the period, and of another person. In the same manner; likewise.

A'LSTON-MOOR, a town in Cumberland, with a market on Saturday. It is seated on a hill, at the bottom of which runs the river Tyne, with a stone bridge over it, and near it is plenty of lead ore. It is 20 miles E. by S. of Carlisle, and 303 N. N. W. of London.

ALT, a. in music, a term applied to the highest notes in the scale.

A'LTAISCH, an immense range of mountains running cross Siberia.

A'LTAR, s. [altare, Lat.] a kind of table or raised place, whereon the antient sacrifices were offered. Since the establishment of Christianity that place in the church where the communion is received, or the table on which the vases and the elements of bread and wine are placed. Figuratively, Christ himself, to whom we bring all our offerings and services. Among the antient Romans the altar was a kind of a pedestal, either square, round, or triangular, adorned with sculptures and inscriptions. In astronomy, a constellation of the southern hemisphere, consisting of seven stars.

A'LTARAGE, s. [altaragium, Lat.] denotes the profits arising to the priest from the oblations on the altar.

A'LTAR-THANE, or A'LTARIST, in old law-books, the priest or parson of a parish.

A'LTAVELA, a fish found in the Mediterranean sea, whose flat sides bear some resemblance to wings. It is sold in the markets at Rome.

To A'LTER, v. a. [altérer, Fr.] to change; to make a thing different from what it is; used both of a part and the whole of a thing, and applied both to a good and bad sense. Used neuterly, to change; to become different from what it has been.

A'LTERABLE, a. [from alter, and abel, Sax.] that may be changed or be made to appear different from what it is.

A'LTERABLENESS, s. the quality of being changed; or liable to have its present properties and appearance changed by external or internal causes.

A'LTERABLY, ad. in a manner that may be altered.

A'LTERAGE, s. [from alo, Lat.] the breeding, nourishing, or fostering of a child.

A'LTERANTS, or A'LTERATIVES, s. such medicines as correct the bad qualities of the blood, and other animal fluids, without occasioning any sensible evacuation.

ALTERATION, s. [alteration, Fr.] the act of changing the form or purport of a writing; the shape and other qualities of a body; the properties and faculties of the mind, and making them different from what they were.

To A'LTERCATE, v. n. [from altercor, Lat.] to wrangle, or contend with another; to dispute.

ALTERCATION, s. [altercatio, Lat.] a debate or dispute on any subject between friends, including a warm espousal or defence of the contrary side of a question, but not so great as what is involved in the idea of a quarrel.

ALTERN, a. [alternus, Lat.] that succeeds another by turns; successive, or alternate; that follows by succession.

ALTERNACY, s. the succession or following of one action after another in its turn.

ALTERNATE, a. [alternus, Lat.] that succeeds or follows one another by turns. In botany, applied to the position of the leaves of a plant, it implies that the leaves on each side of the stalk, or branch, do not stand directly opposite, but between, or a little higher, than each other. In geometry, applied to angles, it signifies the internal one, and is made by a line cutting two parallels, and lying on opposite sides of it. Alternate, in heraldry, is applied to the situation of the quarters of a coat; thus in quarterly, ecartelé, the first and fourth are alternate, and of the same nature.

ALTERNATELY, ad. in such a manner that the thing which precedes shall follow that which comes after it.

ALTERNATENESS, s. the quality of being alternate; the reciprocal succession of things.

ALTERNATION, s. in arithmetic, the different changes, alterations of place, or combinations, that any proposed numbers are capable of; which is found by a continual multiplication of all the numbers, beginning at unity, and ending with the last number of the things to be varied.

ALTERNATIVE, s. [alternatif, Fr.] a choice of two things, whereby if one be rejected, the other must be accepted.

ALTERNATIVELY, ad. by turns; reciprocally.

ALTERNITY, s. a state wherein there is a continual succession, change, or vicisitude.

ALTHOUGH, conjunc. [pron. as if written altho'; from all and theah, Sax.] used to imply that a thing or conclusion may be allowed or maintained, notwithstanding something seemingly inconsistent had been allowed, admitted, or granted notwithstanding.

ALTIMETRY, s. [altimetria, Lat.] the art of taking or measuring heights, whether accessible, or inaccessible.

ALTITUDE, s. [altitudo, Lat.] in geometry, one of the three dimensions of body, namely, height. In optics, it is the height of an object above a line, drawn parallel to the horizon from the eye of the observer. In astronomy, it is the arch of a vehicle circle, intercepted between a star and the horizon. Also, the elevation of any of the heavenly bodies above the horizon. This Altitude is either true or apparent, according as it is reckoned from the rational or sensible horizon, and the difference between these is called by astronomers the parallax of altitude. Near the horizon this altitude is always increased by means of refraction.

ALTO RELIEVO, s. See RELIEVO.

ALTOGETHER, ad. [all and togædere, Sax.] completely; without restriction; without exception, applied to number and quality. In all respects; perfectly.

ALTON, a town in Hampshire, consisting chiefly of one pretty broad street. It has manufactures of baragons, corded druggets, and serges; and a large market on Saturdays for cattle and provisions. In the neighbourhood are extensive plantations of hops. It is on the road from Southampton to London, 28 miles from the former, and 50 from the latter.

ALTRINGHAM, a town in Cheshire, 7 miles from Manchester, and 180 from London; market on Tuesday.

ALUDEL, s. in chemistry, a range of earthen pots without bottoms, fitted into each other without luting.

ALUM, s. [alumen, Lat.] a kind of mineral salt of an acid taste, leaving in the mouth a sense of sweetness, accompanied with a considerable degree of astringency. The principal species are: —Native alum, or fossil alum, that formed by nature, without the assistance of art. Plumose alum, or plume alum, a kind of natural alum, composed of a sort of threads, or fibres, resembling feathers; whence it has its name. Prepared or purified alum, that which is dissolved in hot rain water, and afterwards made to crystallize by evaporating the water. Roche alum, or Rock alum, named from Rocca, now Edessa, in Syria, where it abounds, is such as is found native in large crystallized masses, but not very pure; in this country alum was first discovered and manufactured, according to the best accounts. Roman alum, a sort of rock alum, of a reddish colour, made in the country near Rome. Saccharine alum is a composition of common alum with rose-water and the whites of eggs, which being boiled to the consistence of a paste, is formed in the shape of a sugar-loaf; hence it obtained its name; it is used as a cosmetic.

ALUMINE, s. in chemistry, pure clay, which is also the basis of alum.

ALUMINOUS, a. that has the properties of alum, or is mixed with alum. Waters of this kind are prepared by dyers, to make their stuffs take their colours the better, and those which are to be crimson, must be steeped in water made very strong with this ingredient. In modern chemistry it means, belonging to clay, thus the aluminous fossiles are Corundum, Hornblende, Basaltes, Slate, &c.

ALUM-STONE, s. a stone of calx of a corrosive nature, used to consume the proud flesh of wounds.

ALWAYS, ad. [allewaga, Sax.] applied to action, without ceasing or intermission.

AM, v. s. [eam, Sax.] when used singly, it implies existence; following what, it implies nature; "Knowing what I am." Prior. Applied to place, it signifies presence; "Where I am, there shall my servants be." John xii. 26. Applied to truths, it implies affirmation: "Jesus said, I am the bread of life." John vi. 35. When repeated, it implies self and independent existence, or a Being which is the uncreated source of the existence of all other beings.

AMADABAT, a large and populous trading city, the capital of Guzerat, in the East Indies. It is subject to a rajah, or native prince. It is frequented by Armenians, Abyssinians, Jews, and Europeans, and has an extensive trade in fine chintz, calicoes, and other Indian merchandize. It lies 120 miles N. of Surat, and 40 N. E. of Cambaya. Lat. 23. 10. N. lon. 72. 22. E.

AMADETTO, s. a sort of pear; so called, according to Skinner, from the name of him who cultivated it.

AMAIN, ad. [a and maegn, Sax.] with all one's force, or strength, applied to action. Applied to the voice, extremely loud, or as loud as possible. Also a sea-term, importing to lower or let fall the top-sails; to let down any thing into the hold, as a word of command to do it gently and by degrees.

AMALGAM, or AMALGAMA, s. [from ama, with, and gameo, to marry, Gr.] a substance produced by incorporating quicksilver with another metal; which is expressed by the chemists thus, A. A. A.

To AMALGAMATE, v. n. to incorporate metals with quicksilver.

AMALGAMATION, s. [from ama, with, and gameo, to marry, Gr.] the incorporating quicksilver with other metals.

AMANUENSIS, s. [Lat.] a person who writes down what is dictated by another; likewise a person who copies writings, or writes extracts from books.

AMARANTH, s. [amaranthus, Lat. from a not, and marainomai, I wither, Gr.] among the ancients a flower, which was imagined never to fade; among the moderns, prince's feather, a beautiful flower.

AMARANTHINE, a. [amaranthinus, Lat.] relating to amaranths; consisting of amaranths.

To AMASS, v. a. [amasser, Fr.] to gather together, so as to form a mass or heap.

AMASSMENT, s. a collection of things heaped together.

AMATORY, a. [amatorius, Lat.] relating to love; causing love.

AMAUROSIS, s. [from amauroo, to obscure, Gr.] in medicine, a dimness of sight, wherein the eye to external appearance seems to be unaffected.

To AMAZE, v. a. [from mase, Sax.] to strike with astonishment. To be confused, or thrown into perplexity, by some sudden change or address.

AMAZE, s. astonishment, or perplexity, caused by an unexpected object, whether good or bad; in the former case it is mixed with admiration, in the latter with fear.

AMAZEDLY, ad. in a manner expressive of surprise or astonishment on the appearance of something unexpected.

AMAZEDNESS, s. the state of a person's mind when affected with surprise, astonishment, confusion, or perplexity.

AMAZEMENT, s. confusion; perplexity; admiration; surprise.

AMAZING, part. that causes surprise, astonishment, or admiration.

AMAZINGLY, ad. in a manner capable of exciting astonishment, wonder, or admiration; prodigiously; surprisingly A'MAZON, or ORELLANA, a river of South America, which has its source among the Andes, in Peru, not far from the S. Sea, from whence running eastward, it pours into the ocean, directly under the equinoctial line. This largest of all rivers is, at its mouth, 150 miles broad; and 1500 miles from its mouth, 30 or 40 fathoms deep. It runs at least 3000 miles, forms during its course many islands in itself, receives near 200 other rivers many of which have a course of 500 or 600 leagues, some of them not inferior to the Danube or the Nile; and, in pouring itself into the ocean, repels the waters of the sea to the distance of many leagues from the land.

A'MAZONS, [from a and mazos, Gr.] a supposed race of warring women, in antiquity, living in Amasia, on the banks of the Euxine, and maintaining themselves as a nation of women, on their own separate territory, distinctly from the men. Perhaps, in the ruder ages of antiquity, companies of women following their husbands to battle, and sometimes fighting their enemies, may have given rise to the romantic descriptions of the Amazons by the ancients; as in later times, the Amazons of S. America seem to have had a similar origin, with the wonder-stricken Spaniards. It is certain, however, that the spirit of these heroines is sometimes seen in a solitary individual: in the late Irish rebellion, Peggy Munro fought along with her brother, who commanded the rebel army at Ballinahinch.

AMAZO'NIA, a country in S. America, bounded on the N. by Terra Firma and Guiana; on the E. by the Atlantic and Brazil; on the S. by Paraguay and Peru; and on the W. by Peru. It was first traversed in 1539, by Francisco Orellana, who, coming from Peru, sailed down the great river to the Atlantic Ocean. Observing companies of women (or perhaps of men, for the Indians have a custom of plucking out the beard by the roots) in arms, on its banks, he called the country Amazonia, or the land of the Amazons, and gave the name of Amazon to the river, which had formerly been called Maragnon. Condamine, who afterwards went into those parts, to measure a degree on the meridian, could perceive no such appearance of hostile women. The soil is very rich and fertile; the trees, fields, and plants, are verdant all the year round. The rivers and lakes are infested with crocodiles, alligators, and serpents. Their banks are inhabited by different tribes of Indians, governed by petty sovereigns, distinguished from their subjects by coronets of beautiful feathers. The Spaniards have made many attempts to settle in this country; but difficulties and disasters have hitherto rendered their designs abortive. On a part of the coast, between Cape North and the mouth of the Amazon, the Portuguese indeed have made some settlements.

AMBA'GES, s. [Lat.] a round-about way of expression. Circumlocution.

AMBA'SSADE, s. [Fr.] the office of a person who is commissioned to negociate the affairs of a state in foreign parts.

AMBA'SSADOR, s. [ambassadeur, Fr.] a person sent in a public manner from one sovereign power to another, and supposed to represent the power from which he is sent. The person of an ambassador is inviolable. Ambassadors are either ordinary or extraordinary. Ambassador ordinary, is he who constantly resides in the court of another prince, to maintain a good understanding, and look to the interest of his master. Till within these 200 years, ambassadors in ordinary were not heard of. All, till then, were ambassadors extraordinary; that is, such as are sent on some particular occasion, and who retire as soon as the affair is dispatched. By the law of nations, none under the quality of a sovereign prince can send or receive an ambassador.

AMBA'SSADRESS, s. [ambassadrice, Fr.] in its primitive sense, the wife or lady of an ambassador; in a secondary one, a woman sent on a message.

A'MBASSAGE, s. [ambassage, Fr.] the employ or office of a person acting as an ambassador.

A'MBER, s. [ambar, Arab.] a kind of gum, or resin, found most plentifully in the Baltic, on the coast of Prussia. The physical qualities of this substance have recommended it in fumigation to remove defluxions, and in powder as an alterative, absorbent, sweetener, astringent, lithontriptic, diuretic, &c. Being susceptible of a fine polish, it is cut into necklaces, bracelets, snuff-boxes, &c. and also constitutes the basis of several kinds of varnish. It is highly endowed with the property of electricity.

A'MBERGRIS, s. a fragrant drug, that melts almost like wax, commonly of a gravish or ash colour, used both as a perfume and a cordial. Ambergris is found on the sea coasts, particularly those of Africa, from the Cape of Good Hope to the Red Sea, sometimes in very large lumps, in the middle of which we frequently meet with stones, shells, and bones.

A'MBERSBURY, a town in Wiltshire, which has a market on Friday. Distance from London 78 miles.

A'MBER-TREE, s. a shrub, whose beauty is in its small evergreen leaves, which grow as close as heath, and, being bruised between the fingers, emit a very fragrant odour.

AMBIDE'XTER, s. [Lat.] one who has equally the use of both hands, or who can use both hands with the same facility, and for the same purpose; also, one who is ready to engage on either side in party disputes.

AMBIDEXTERITY, s. the power of being able to use both hands equally. Double-dealing.

AMBIDE'XTROUS, a. applied to one who can make use of either hand indifferently.

AMBIDE'XTROUSNESS, s. the quality of being able to use either hand with equal ease, or the engaging with different parties without scruple; double-dealing.

A'MBIENT, a. [ambiens, Lat.] that covers every part; that encompasses or surrounds.

A'MBIGU, s. [Fr.] an entertainment, wherein the dishes are set on the table in a promiscuous manner, without any regard to order, so as to perplex the guests.

AMBIGUITY, s. [ambiguitas, Lat.] the quality of a word or expression, received in different senses; words whose significations are doubtful or uncertain. We make use of an equivocation to deceive, of an ambiguity to keep in the dark from all, and of a double entendre to conceal from some.

AMBI'GUOUS, a. [ambiguus, Lat.] applied to expressions having more senses than one, which are not easily determined.

AMBI'GUOUSLY, ad. uttered in equivocal terms, or words having two senses.

AMBI'GUOUSNESS, s. the quality which renders the signification of a word uncertain.

AMBILOGY, s. [from ambo, Lat. and logos Gr.] discourse of an ambiguous signification.

AMBILOQUOUS, a. [from ambo and loquor, Lat.] using ambiguous expressions.

A'MBIT, s. [ambitus, Lat.] a term in geometry, signifying the boundary, outline, or circumference of any figure, regular or irregular; the compass or circuit of any thing.

AMBITION, s. [ambitio, Lat.] is generally used in a bad sense, for an immoderate and illegal pursuit of power, a vehement desire of greatness or fame; a restlessness that cannot bear any competitor either in government or honour.

AMBITIOUS, a. [ambitiosus, Lat.] desirous, longing after, and industrious to obtain a greater degree of power, an advancement in honour, or a more extensive dominion. Proud, lofty, aspiring; elegantly applied to inanimate things and implying their being not contented with their present dimensions, or situation.

AMBITIOUSLY, ad. in a manner which shews a desire or thirst after greater dignity, power, riches, dominion, or preferment.

AMBITIOUSNESS, s. the quality of being desirous of a greater degree of honour, riches, or power.

To A'MBLE, v. n. [ambulo, Lat.] to move upon an amble to move with a gentle motion; to move with an affected motion.

A'MBLE, s. in horsemanship, a pace wherein the two feet of a horse on the same side move at the same time, or together.

A'MBLER, s. a horse that has been taught to amble, sometimes called a pacer.

AMBLESIDE, a pretty little town in Westmoreland, situated among lofty mountains at the upper end of Winandermere, and near a remarkable waterfall. It is 13 miles from Kendal, and 271 from London. Market on Wednesday.

A'MBLINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to perform that pace by jockies called the amble.

AMBO'YNA, the chief of the Molucca Islands, remarkable for the quantity of cloves and nutmegs it produces. The natives wear large whiskers, and their dress is only a piece of slight stuff wrapped round their middle. The Dutch having established factories on this island in the beginning of the seventeenth century, perfidiously massacred the English settlers, and seized the whole island for themselves. It was taken by the British in the course of the present war.

A'MBRESBURY, or A'MESBURY, an ancient town in Wiltshire, 1 mile from Stonehenge, and 80 from London. Market on Friday.

AMBRO'SIA, (ambrozia) s. [Gr.] the imaginary food of the heathen deities, which preserved them immortal. Figuratively, applied to any delicious fruit, by way of hyperbole, and signifying, that it was fit for the gods, or that it would communicate immortality.

AMBRO'SIAL, (ambrozial) a. [ambrosialis, Lat.] heavenly, delicious, or beyond the possession of mortals.

A'MBS-ACE, s. in gaming, when two aces are thrown at one time.

AMBULATION, s. [ambulatio, Lat.] the act of walking.

A'MBULATORY, a. [from ambulo, Lat.] having the power of walking; moveable; a term applied to courts that were not fixed, but held sometimes at one place, and sometimes at another.

A'MBURY, or A'NBURY, a name given by our farriers to a kind of soft and spungy swelling, growing on the bodies of horses, somewhat sore to the touch, and full of blood.

AMBUSCA'DE, s. [embuscade, Fr.] a place wherein men are hid in order to surprise an enemy. Applied with great elegance to luxurious food, which teem with latent diseases.

AMBUSCA'DO, s. [emboscada, Span.] a private place wherein men are hid to surprise an enemy.

A'MBUSH, s. [embusche, Fr.] a place wherein soldiers are hid, in order to surprise an enemy. A snare laid by a private person to assassinate.

A'MBUSHED, a. lying in wait, hid in order to surprise.

A'MBUSHMENT, s. a concealment in order to surprise.

AMBU'STION, (pron. as spelt) s. [ambustio, Lat.] in medicine, the effect which fire, or bodies heated by it, have on the flesh: when caused by fire immediately, termed a burn; when by boiling liquors, a scald.

A'MEL, s. [email, Fr.] See ENAMEL.

AME'N, ad. in Hebrew signifies true, faithful, certain. It is also understood as expressing a wish, as Amen, so be it; or an affirmation, Amen, yes, I believe it.

AME'NABLE, a. [amenable, Fr.] in law, responsible, or subject to inquiry and examination. Likewise tractable or easily governed.

To AME'ND, v. a. [amender, Fr.] to alter something faulty for the better. Applied to writings, to correct. To reform, applied to manners or behaviour. To grow from a more infirm state to a better; to recover

AME'NDABLE, a. capable of amendment, or possible to be amended.

AME'NDE, s. [Fr.] a fine by which a compensation is made for a fault committed.

AME'NDER, s. the person who makes the changes or alterations in a thing for the better.

AME'NDMENT, s. [amendement, Fr.] an alteration which makes it better; a correction. A change from vice to virtue. It signifies a change from sickness towards health; a recovery.

AMENDS, s. [amende, Fr.] something paid to make good a damage done. Atonement, or satisfaction.

AME'NITY, s. [amœnitas, Lat.] a situation or prospect which affects the mind with pleasure or delight.

To AME'RCE, v. a. [amercier, Norm.] in law, to inflict a pecuniary punishment, or fine a person a sum of money for an offence.

AME'RCER, s. the person who sets the fine upon an offender; or settles the value of the satisfaction or fine which is to be paid.

AME'RCEMENT, or AME'RCIAMENT, s. in law, the fine imposed on an offender against the king, or other lord, who is convicted, and therefore stands at the mercy of either.

AME'RICA, the largest of the four grand divisions of the globe, is bounded on all sides by the ocean, and stretches, in its extensive range, through every inhabited latitude or climate in the world; and the waters on its northern extremity seem to be bound up in everlasting frost. The parts that have a vertical sun are so near the sea, or the lofty Andes, constantly covered with snow, that they experience not the excessive heats of Africa; and the complexion of the natives, or aborigines, is by no means very dark; it is generally of a reddish or copper colour, from the straits of Magellan to the borders of Hudson's Bay. This immense continent is divided into N. and S. America, which are joined by the Isthmus of Darien. Its mountains, rivers, and lakes, are the largest in the world. America took its name from Americus Vespucius, a Florentine, who having accompanied Ojeda, a Spanish adventurer, thither, and drawing up an amusing history of his voyage, insinuated therein that he had first discovered that continent. The discovery of America was made so lately as 1491, by Christopher Columbus, a Genoese, a bold adventurer, a patriot, and a man of humanity. At that time, the authority of the pope, over the whole world, was generally acknowledged throughout Europe. He had granted to the Portuguese all the lands, islands, &c. they had discovered, or might discover, to the eastward of the Azores; hence the other Europeans were deprived of the advantages of the trade to the East Indies, by the Cape of Good Hope, which the Portuguese had but lately discovered. The costly articles of the East, which had heretofore come through the Red Sea and Mediterranean, and afforded to the Genoese a lucrative trade, were now brought by the Cape of Good Hope. Columbus saw, with concern, the loss his country had sustained, and concluding the earth to be round, proposed to evade the force of the pope's bull, by sailing to India by a western course. His countrymen were not better geographers than the bishop of Rome. They treated his schemes as the reveries of a mad man; he tried other courts of Europe with similar success, till at length Isabella, queen of Spain, sold even her jewels to fit him out for the expedition. America furnishes most of the vegetable and mineral productions to be found in the other parts of the world, together with a variety of valuable drugs and other commodities which were unknown here before its discovery. The animals on the north are much the same all round the pole, but in the southern parts of America they are generally more diminutive and feeble; and some tribes there are, which, if ever they existed in the old world (as Europe, Asia, and Africa are called) have there become extinct, while the most strong and savage quadrupeds seem not to have ever arrived here. Nearly the same variety of birds is found in the new world as in other parts, and some there are that are peculiar to the climate. America may be divided into Indian Nations, United States, and European Colonies. The countries possessed by Great Britain are, Labrador, or New Britain, Upper and Lower Canada, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick. The thirteen United States comprehend New Hampshire, including the province of Main, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut in New England, New York, New Jersey

Pennsylvania, Deleware, Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina, and Georgia. Vermont in New England, Kentucky, and Louisiana, have been lately added; and all the country to the N. of Ohio, extending from Pennsylvania to the E. the lakes on the N. and Mississippi on the W. is intended by Congress to be divided into ten new states, to be called Washington, Metropotamia, Pesilippi, Michigania, Illionia, Chersonesus, Saratoga, Sylvania, Assenipi, and Polopotamia. In North America the Spaniards possess East and West Florida, New Mexico, California, and Old Mexico, or New-Spain. In South America, they hold Terra Firma, or Castile del Oro, Peru, Chili, and Paraguay, or La Plata. The French have Cayenne, and the Dutch Surinam; and the Portuguese have Brasil. America extends a distance of nearly 10,000 miles, from lat. 56. 0. S. to the impenetrable depths of the northern frigid zone, where it nearly extends through every degree of western longitude from London; and varies in its breadth from its narrowest part, 60 miles at the Isthmus of Darien, to 3690, its greatest breadth across the northern part of North America.

AMERICIMA, a small Brazilian lizard, reckoned poisonous by the inhabitants.

A'MERSHAM, an ancient town in Buckinghamshire, consisting of a long street, intersected in the middle by a short one. It stands in a pleasant situation, 12 miles from Aylesbury, 26 from Buckingham, and 29 from London. It sends two members to parliament, and has a market on Tuesdays.

A'METHYST, s. [from amethystos, Gr.] a gem of a purple colour, which seems composed of a strong blue and deep red; and, according as either of these colours prevail, affording different tinges of purple, sometimes approaching to violet, and sometimes even fading to a pale rose-colour. In heraldry, it is a term for a purple colour in the coat of a nobleman, in use with those who blazon by precious stones instead of metals and colours. This in a gentleman's escutcheon is called purpure, and in those of sovereign princes Mercury.

AMETHY'STINE, a. of a fine violet purple colour, resembling that of an amethyst.

AMI'A, a large sea-fish in the Mediterranean. It resembles the salmon, but will grow to five feet in length.

A'MIABLE, a. [aimable, Fr.] that is an object of love. That is able to attract the affection of love or delight.

A'MIABLENESS, s. the quality which renders a person or thing an object of delight, pleasure, or love.

A'MIABLY, ad. in such a manner as to gain love

AMIA'NTHUS, s. a sort of stone like alum, by some called earth flax, and by others salamander's hair; a fibrous, flexile, and elastic mineral substance, composed of short and abrupt filaments. It has these surprising properties, that it will neither give fire with steel, nor ferment with aqua fortis; if thrown into the fire, it will endure the most extreme heat without the least injury to its texture. It is found in Egypt, Tartary, Siberia, Anglesey in Wales, Scotland, and other parts.

A'MICABLE, a. [amicabilis, Lat.] endowed with all the qualities, kindness, and social benevolence which can knit the tie of friendship.

A'MICABLENESS, s. that quality which is exerted in performing acts of kindness, and in exercising the offices of friendship.

A'MICABLY, ad. in such a manner as is consistent with the warmest affection.

A'MICE, s. [from amictus, Lat.] the first or undermost of the six garments worn by priests, and next to the alb.

AMID, or AMI'DST, prep. [a and mid, Sax.] in the middle, with respect to situation; applied to things, placed in a straight line, between or in the centre.

AMI'DA, a god, worshipped by the Japanese with so great reverence, that they hope to obtain eternal felicity by the frequent invocation of his name.

A'MIENS, a handsome, large, and ancient city, in the department of Somme. It has three bridges over as many branches of the Somme, five gates, and contains 35,000 inhabitants. It has large manufactures of linen and woollen cloth, and is famous for the peace signed here between England and France in 1801. It is in the road from Calais to Paris, 14 miles from the latter. Lat. 49. 54. N. lon. 2. 22. E.

AMI'SS, ad. [from a and miss, Sax.] wrong, or contrary to any law, divine or moral. Improperly, or inconsistent with the dictates of reason.

A'MITY, s. a state wherein there is the greatest concord, harmony, or mutual intercourse, between two or more persons. Applied to nations, peace, wherein states are employed in promoting the good of each other.

A'MMON, in antiquity, a name given to Jupiter, in Lybia, where was a celebrated temple to that deity.

AMMO'NIA, in chemistry, the volatile alkali.

AMMO'NIAC, (GUM) s. with physicians, a gum, or more properly a gum-resin, extracted from a ferulaceous plant growing in some parts of Asia and Africa.

AMMO'NIAC, (SAL) s. a volatile salt of two kinds. The ancient was a native salt, generated in inns, where pilgrims travelling from the temple of Jupiter Ammon used to lodge; whose camels, urining in the stables, a salt arose out of it, denominated Ammoniac. The modern Sal Ammoniac is entirely factitious, and made in Egypt with soot, a little sea salt, and the urine of cattle. This our chemists imitate, by adding one part of common salt to five of urine; with which some mix that quantity of soot.

AMMO'NIACAL, a. that has the properties of ammoniac, as above described.

AMMO'NIUM, in chemistry, a new metal discovered by sir Humphrey Davy, in an experiment performed on Ammonia.

AMMUNI'TION, s. [probably from munitia, Lat.] such arms, instruments, and stores, as are necessary to carry on a war; military stores.

AMMUNI'TION-BREAD, s. bread provided for an army or garrison.

A'MNESTY, s. [amnestia, Gr.] an act wherein a prince promises pardon to criminals for offences past; an act of oblivion.

A'MNION, or A'MNIOS, s. [probably from amnos, a lamb, Gr.] the innermost membrane with which the foetus in the womb is most immediately covered, and with the rest of the secundines, the chorion, and alantois, are ejected after birth.

AMNIO'TIC, a. belonging to the amnios. The amniotic acid is found in the amnios of a cow.

AMO'NG, or AMO'NGST, prep. [among, Sax.] present, or residing with.

A'MORIST, s. [from amor, Lat.] one who is captivated with the charms of a female; one who is in love; a lover.

A'MOROUS, s. [amoureux, Fr.] fond; smitten with love at the sight of an amiable object; naturally inclined to love.

A'MOROUSLY, ad. with great appearance of affection or love; in a fond or loving manner.

A'MORT, a. [à la mort, Fr.] spiritless.

AMORTIZA'TION, AMO'RTIZEMENT, s. [amortisse ment, Fr.] in law, a transferring of lands to a corporation, &c. to remain in their possession for ever; called an alienation or tenements in mortmain.

To AMO'RTIZE, v. a. [amortir, Fr.] to alien or transfer lands to any corporation, guild, or fraternity, for ever.

A'MOS, or the prophecy of Amos, a canonical book of the Old Testament. This prophet boldly remonstrates against the crying sins which prevailed among the Israelites, and reproves the people of Judah for their sensuality and injustice. He terrifies them both with frequent threatenings and pronounces that their sins will at last end in their ruin. He begins with denunciations of destruction against the enemies of the Jews, and concludes with promises of erecting the kingdom of Christ.

To AMO'VE, v. a. [amoveo, Lat.] in law, to move a person from his post or station.

To AMO'UNT, v. n. [monter, Fr.] applied to arithmetical process, to make up, to come to, when all the svparate parts or figures are added together; to compose when united.

AMOUNT, s. in arithmetic, the sum produced by the addition of several numbers or quantities; the product of several quantities, added together; the consequence, result, or value.

AMOUR, (amóor) s. [amour, Fr.] a love intrigue; including the secondary idea of something vicious.

AMPELITES, s. See CANNEL COAL.

AMPHIBIA, in natural history, the third class of animals comprehending reptiles and serpents.

AMPHIBIOUS, a. [from amphi in both places, and bios life, Gr.] that can live both upon land and in water, as the beaver, otter, frog, &c.

AMPHIBOLOGY, s. [amphibologia, Gr.] an abuse of language wherein words are so placed in a sentence as to admit of a different sense, according to the different manner of combining them.

AMPHICTYONS, s. in Grecian antiquity, an assembly composed of deputies from the different states of Greece; and resembling in some measure the diet of the German empire.

AMPHISBÆNA, s. [Lat.] a kind of serpents which can move with equal ease backward or forward.

AMPHISCII, s. [from amphi in both parts, and skia shadow, Gr.] those people who live between the tropics, so called, because according to the suns coming up to the two solstices the shadow changes and falls sometimes on the right and sometimes on the left hand.

AMPHITHEATRE, s. [from amphi around, and theaomai to see, Gr.] in antiquity, a large edifice either round or oval, with seats rising one above another, upon which the people sat to behold the combats of gladiators, of wild beasts and other sports; they were at first only built of wood, but in the reign of Augustus there was one erected of stone.

AMPHITRITE, s. in heathen mythology, the wife of Neptune, and goddess of the sea.

AMPLE, a. [amplus, Lat.] applied to extent, wide or spacious. Applied to bulk, large, great, or big. Applied to permission, or liberties granted, full; without restraint. Applied to gifts, large, liberal. Applied to writings, full, minute, containing all the circumstances.

AMPLENESS, s. largeness, splendor.

To AMPLIATE, v. a. [amplio, Lat.] to enlarge, extend, to make additions to.

AMPLIATION, s. [amplatio, Lat.] applied to rumours, increasing their sense by additional circumstances; an exaggeration or enlargement. Enlargement, or dwelling long upon a subject.

To AMPLIFICATE, v. a. [amplifico, Lat.] to enlarge, to dwell long upon a subject.

AMPLIFICATION, s. [amplificatio, Lat.] enlargement, or increase of dimensions, applied to a body; but, generally speaking, it is used for whatever consists in a heightening of a description, commendation, definition, or the blame of a thing, by such an enumeration of particulars as most forcibly affects the passions. Hyperbolical expression.

AMPLIFIER, s. one who enlarges.

To AMPLIFY, v. a. [amplus and fio, Lat.] to increase the dimensions, or number of parts applied to matter or body. To increase or heighten, applied to quality. To extend, or enlarge, applied to power or dominion. To render complete, or increase by additions, applied to writings. To expatiate, to treat fully, or enlarge upon. To represent in a pompous, heightened, and hyperbolical manner.

AMPLITUDE, s. [amplitudo, Lat.] compass, or extent. Greatness or largeness. Capacity, endued with powers sufficient. Amplitude, in astronomy, is an arch of the horizon, intercepted between the east or west part thereof, and the centre of the sun, star, or planet, at its rising or setting; at the rising it is called ortive, at the setting occasive.

AMPLY, ad. largely, liberally; at large; copiously.

AMPTHILL, a market town in Bedfordshire, where Catharine of Arragon, wife of Henry VIII. at one time resided. It is 44 miles from London; and has a market on Thursday.

To AMPUTATE, v. a. [amputo, Lat.] in surgery, to cut off a limb.

AMPUTATION, s. [amputatio, Lat.] in surgery, the cutting off a limb of the body.

AMSDORFIANS, a sect of protestants in the sixteenth century, who took their name from Amsdorf their leader. They were charged, but probably without sufficient evidence, with maintaining that good works were not only unprofitable, but hurtful to salvation.

AMSTERDAM, a large, rich, populous, trading, and handsome city of Holland, and the capital of the whole kingdom. It was formerly a lordship belonging to the lords of Amstel; was ruined in 1300, but afterwards rebuilt. The walls are high, and well fortified; and the bridge which joins the rampart, is built over the river Amstel, one of the finest pieces of architecture in those parts. Few cities have their public buildings so fine, numerous, and well kept. Here are many handsome churches and hospitals for persons of all ages, sexes, religions, and countries. The Exchange is one of the principal ornaments of the city, and the harbour is one of the largest and finest in Europe, where a vast number of merchant ships may always be seen; though there is a bar at its entrance, which is, however, a very great security against foreign enemies. The foundation of this town is laid upon piles, driven into a morass, and under the stadthouse alone are 13,000. The houses are brick and stone, the streets spacious and well-paved, and most of them have canals, with rows of trees on each side. With regard to its magnitude, it is computed to be about half as big as London, and none of the inhabitants are idle. Before the revolution, (See HOLLAND) it was governed by a college of 30 senators, who held their places for life, and 12 burgomasters, four of whom were always sitting. It is seated at the confluence of the rivers Amstel and Wye, 65 miles N. of Antwerp, 175 E. by N. of London, 240 N. by E. of Paris, 330 W. of Copenhagen, 560, N. W. of Vienna, and 870 N. W. of Rome. Lat. 52°. 21'. 56". N. lon. 4° 46'. E.

AMULET, s. [amulette, Fr.] something worn round the neck as a defence against mischief, or as a cure from some disease. Some of these were expected to operate as charms, but others probably produced some effect through the pores of the skin.

To AMUSE, (amúze) v. a. [amuser, Fr.] to employ a person's thoughts on some object that may engage them from wandering to any other, including the idea of something trifling. To entertain with something agreeable, which has not force enough to divert, and wants importance to please.

AMUSEMENT, (amúzement) s. an employment, in order to avoid the tediousness of inaction. Any thing which engages the mind, or is the subject of the senses: an entertainment. SYNON. The general idea of diversion and amusement is innocent recreation; but that of amusement implies tranquil entertainment; that of diversion, tumultuous merriment: card-playing, concerts, plays, &c. are amusements; cricket, cudgel-playing, horse-races, &c. are diversions.

AMUSER, (amúzer) s. one who deludes; or engages the attention of another, by specious or false promises.

AMUSIVE, a. that engages the attention to something trifling, specious, and delusive.

AMYGDALINE, a. [from amygdala, Lat.] resembling almonds.

AMYRALDISM, s. a name given by some writers to the doctrine of universal grace, as explained and asserted by Amyraldus and his followers, about the middle of the 17th century.

AMZELL, or OUZEL, a name given to certain birds of the blackbird kind.

AN, article, [ane, Sax.] an indefinite article put before nouns of the singular number, which begin with a vowel, or h, when not sounded or aspirated, as an eye, an hour but if aspirated, the h then is looked on as having the power of another consonant, and a is used, as a hand, a hare. Applied to number, it signifies one, in a loose and undetermined sense.

ANA, s. [Gr.] a term used by physicians to denote an equal quantity of ingredients to be used in compounding a medicine; and in their recipes is thus abbreviated, ä or aa.

A'NA, Anas, or books in Ana, are collections of the memorable sayings of persons of learning and wit, such as Casaubonana, or the sayings of Causaubon, &c.

ANABAPTISTS, s. [from ana, again, and baptizo, Gr.] a religious sect, whose distinguishing tenet is that persons are not to be baptized before they come to years of discretion, and are able to deliver a profession of their faith. In Holland they are called Mennonites, and in England Baptists.

ANACAMPTIC, a. [from anakampto, to turn back, Gr.] reflected or beat back again. Anacamptics is a term synonymous with Catoptrics, and means that part of optics which treats of reflection.

ANACATHARTIC, a. [anacathartikos, Gr.] in medicine, that operates as an emetic.

ANA'CHORET, s. See ANCHORITE.

ANACHRONISM, s. [ana, again, and chronos, time, Gr.] in chronology, the misplacing an action with respect to the time in which it was performed; a mistake in computing the time when an event happened.

ANACLA'STIC glasses, a kind of phials, chiefly made in Germany, which have the property of being flexible, and emitting a vehement noise by the human breath.

ANACLA'TICS, s. [from anaklaa, to refract, Gr.] the doctrine of refracted light; dioptrics.

ANACREO'NTIC, s. verses in imitation of Anacreon, a famous poet, who flourished in the 60th Olympiad, about 400 years before Christ, wrote in the jovial or bacchanalian strain. In English, they consist of seven syllables; and in Latin, of three feet and a half.

ANADIPLO'SIS, s. [Gr.] reduplication; in rhetoric, a figure in which the last word of a foregoing member of a period becomes the first of the following: as, "He retained his virtues amid all his misfortunes, misfortunes which only his virtues brought upon him." In medicine, the return of a proxysm of a fever, chiefly of a semi-tertian.

ANA'GNI, a city in the neighbourhood of Rome.

ANAGO'GICAL, a. [from anagoge, Gr.] mysterious, transporting. The term is principally used in speaking of the different senses of scripture. Thus the rest of the sabbath in the anagogical sense, signifies the repose of everlasting happiness.

ANAGRAM, s. [ana, backward, and gramma, a letter, Gr.] the transposition of the letters of some name, by which a new word or motto is formed, either to the advantage or disadvantage of the person or thing to which the name belongs.

ANALE'CTA, or A'NALECT, s. the remains or fragments taken off the table. In literature, it is used to denote a collection of small pieces, as Essays, Remains, &c. A miscellany.

ANALE'MMA, s. [Gr.] in geometry, a projection of the sphere on the plane of the meridian, orthographically made by straight lines and ellipses, the eye being supposed at an infinite distance, and in the east or west points of the horizon; likewise an instrument of brass or wood, upon which this kind of projection is drawn.

ANALE'PTICS, s. [from analeptikos, Gr.] in physic, medicines proper to restore the body when emaciated either by the long continuance of a disorder, or want of food.

ANALO'GICAL, a. [analogikos, Gr.] applied to words, a term which signifies any particular idea as attributed to several others, not by way of resemblance, but on account of some evident reference to the original idea.

ANALO'GICALLY, ad. in a manner wherein there is some resemblance to the thing compared, though it may not hold good with respect to all its properties.

ANA'LOGISM, s. [analogismos, Gr.] reason. In logic, an argument drawn from the cause to the effect, and importing an unanswerable necessity.

To ANA'LOGIZE, v. a. to turn into analogy; to form a resemblance or run a parallel between things which differ; to interpret a thing as if it had a reference or resemblance to something else.

ANA'LOGOUS, a. [analogia, comparison, Gr.] that bears a resemblance to a thing in some particulars, but not all.

ANA'LOGY, s. [analogia, Gr.] a resemblance which one thing bears to another in some of its properties or qualities, though not in all. When we speak of the Divine Being, we are obliged to have recourse to this method of expressing ourselves, because divine matters are not the object of our senses, and cannot be conceived any other ways than by their similitude, proportion, or connection with sensible things: so that analogy means a resemblance in kind or sort, but a difference with respect to manner. Among geometricians, it denotes a similitude of ratios. In medicine, it is the similitude observable among several diseases, which, accordingly, are treated in nearly the same manner. By grammarians, it is used to signify the agreement of several words in one common mode; as love, loved; hate, hated. In rhetoric, it is a figure of speech, otherwise called comparison.

ANA'LYSIS, s. [Gr.] a separation of a compound body into several parts. Among logicians, it is a method of tracing things backward to their source, and resolving knowledge into its original principles. With mathematicians, it is the art of discovering the truth or falsehood of a proposition; or its possibility or impossibility: by supposing the proposition, as it stands, to be true; and examining what follows from thence, until we arrive at some evident truth, or some impossibility, of which the first proposition is a necessary consequence; and from thence establish the truth or impossibility of that proposition. In chemistry, it is the reduction of a mixed body into its principles; which is done principally by fire. The ancient chemists admitted only three principles or elements, salt, sulphur, and mercury; to which the moderns have added water and earth; into these all bodies are resolvable by a chemical analysis, though no operation, no human art, can exhibit them pure and elementary. In anatomy, it is the dissection of an animal. In grammar, it is the explaining the etymology, construction, and other properties of words. In rhetoric, it is the stripping an oration of all its flowery dress of tropes and figures, or, shewing what use the orator has made of them, to embellish and set off every thing to the best advantage.

ANALYTIC, s. [analytikos, Gr.] the manner of resolving a thing into its primary, elemental, or constituent parts; the reducing a book into the several topics which it treats of.

ANALYTICAL, a. that pretends to resolve things into their first principles.

ANALYTICALLY, ad. in such a manner as to separate a thing into the parts of which it is composed; to resolve a subject into its first principles.

To ANALIZE, v. a. [analya, Gr.] in chemistry, to resolve a compound into its first principles. To investigate or trace a thing to its first principles or motives.

ANALYZER, that which can reduce a thing into its first principles.

ANAMORPHO'SIS, s. [Gr.] in perspective, the describing a figure, which in one point of view shall appear to be deformed, and monstrously mishapen, but in another regular, and in due proportion; or a delineation of an object which shall appear monstrous to the naked eye, but when viewed in a cylindrical mirror, shall appear regular and harmonious. There are several pieces of this kind in the Ashmolean museum at Oxford.

ANA'NA, s. in botany, the pine-apple, so called from its resemblance to the cones of pines.

A'NAPÆST, s. in ancient poetry, a foot, consisting of two short syllables and one long; just the reverse of the dactyl.

ANA'PHORA, s. [Gr.] a figure when several clauses of a sentence are begun with the same word or sound; as, "Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world?"

ANAPLERO'SIS, [Gr.] repletion; that part of surgery which supplies deficiences.

ANAPLEROTIC, a. [from anapleroo to fill up, Gr.] that fills up a wound with flesh.

A'NARCH, (ánark) s. [a not, and archos a prince, Gr.] one who is the author or promoter of confusion or sedition, a rebel.

ANA'RCHICAL, (anárkikal) a. that is not subject to rule, law, or government; rebellious, or seditious.

A'NARCHY, (ánarkey) s. [anarchia, Gr.] a state wherein there is not, or no one will acknowledge a supreme magistrate; a state wherein people are without the enforcement of laws, or will not submit to them; sedition; confusion.

ANARSA'RCA, s. [from ana upon, and sarx flesh, Gr] a kind of universal dropsy, wherein the skin appears bloated, and yields to the impression like dough.

ANASTOMO'SIS, s. [Gr.] in anatomy, the inosculation, or opening of two vessels into each other.

ANA'THEMA, s. [Gr.] among the Jews signified, First, something dedicated to the service of the Deity; Secondly, something devoted to destruction; Thirdly, a person who was the object of universal aversion; and Fourthly, one who, on account of some offence, was denied the privileges of society, and banished from the synagogue.

ANATHEMA'TICALLY, ad. in the manner of an anathema, or sentence of excommunication.

To ANA'THEMATIZE, v. a. to pronounce the sentence of excommunication against any person.

ANA'TOCISM, s. [ana again, and tokos usury, Gr.] the accumulation of interest upon interest; a species of usury generally forbidden.

ANATO'MICAL, a. that is used in anatomy to separate the parts of an animal or substance to be dissected; that is discovered by anatomy, or in the dissection of a body; that is separated, applied to the small and constituent particles of a body.

ANA'TOMIST, s. [anatomiste, Fr.] one who dissects the body of human creatures, brutes, or plants; dividing every one of the parts from each other; inquiring into their several uses and properties; their various affections; the wonder of their structure, &c.

To ANA'TOMIZE, v. a. [anatemno to cut up, Gr.] to dissect or separate by means of instruments every part of the body, to discover all the properties of a truth or thing; to lay open the secret motives, affections, or dispositions of a persons mind.

ANA'TOMY, s. [anatome, Gr.] the dissecting or separating the parts of an animal or vegetable body in order to discover its structure, and the different uses of its several parts.

A'NCESTOR, s. [ancestre, Fr.] the person from whom one is descended by birth. SYNON. It is distinguished from predecessor, because that is used to signify those whom we succeed in dignity and office; but ancestors, those whom we follow by natural descent, and as men, whether by father or mother's side.

A'NCESTRAL, a. in law, that may be claimed in right of our ancestors, or that which has been done by them.

A'NCESTRY, s. such persons of a family from whom a person is descended; family, lineage, progenitors; pedigree, descent, or birth.

A'NCHOR, (ánkor) s. [anchora, Lat.] an instrument formed of a strong piece of iron, with a double hook or two barbs at one end, and a ring to hold a cable with in the other, used to keep ships or other vessels from driving with the wind, tide, or currents. It is used with the following verbs, to drop, or cast, which imply the letting down; and to weigh which signifies the pulling up of the anchor. There are several kinds of anchors, 1. The sheet anchor, which is the largest, and never used but in violent storms. 2. The two bowers, used in a harbour. 3. The stream anchor. 4. The grapnel. In heraldry, it is the emblem of hope, and taken for such in a spiritual as well as in a temporal sense.

To A'NCHOR, (ánkor) v. n. to be secured from danger; to be kept from driving, by means of an anchor. Figuratively, to fasten, to stop.

A'NCHORAGE, (ánkorage) s. the effect which an anchor has, so as to hold or keep a ship from driving; the anchors themselves, the duty paid for anchorage in a port; ground fit to hold a ship's anchor so that she may ride safely.

A'NCHORET, or A'NCHORITE, (ankoret or ankorite) s. [from anachoreo to retire, Gr.] one who goes into deserts and unfrequented places in order to practise the greatest austerities, and put himself out of the reach of temptation.

ANCHO'VY, s. [anchova, Span.] a small fish, much used for sauce, fished for on the coast of Provence, generally in the night time, with a light at the stern of the vessel.

A'NCIENT, or A'NTIENT, s. the flag or streamer of a ship, or the bearer of a flag. Also, old men who have served the several offices of their parish, and are usually called upon to give their opinions on public occasions. Also, those that lived in old times. Among the lawyers in the temple, such as are passed their reading are called Ancients; and in Gray's Inn, it is one of the four classes that compose the society, which consists of ancients, barristers, benchers, and students.

A'NCIENT, a. [ancien, Fr.] that has endured for some time; that has been formerly, or some time ago; opposed to modern, but not to new. Applied to life, or the duration of things.

A'NCIENTLY, ad. in former times, in times long past, or before the present instant.

A'NCIENTRY, s. a pedigree which can be traced a great many years backwards; or a family which has been noted for a long course of years.

ANCO'NA, a considerable sea-port in that part of Italy which was formerly under the dominion of the pope. It is situated 116 miles from Rome. Lat. 43. 38. N. lon. 13. 35. E.

AND, conjunct. [and, Sax.] a particle, by which sentences are joined together, signifying that what was affirmed or denied of the sentence before it, holds good, or may be affirmed, likewise of that which comes after it.

ANDALU'SIA, the most rich and fertile province of Spain. It abounds in fruits, corn, wine, oil, honey, sugar, cattle, and very beautiful horses. The capital is Seville.

ANDA'NTE, s. a musical term, signifying that every note must be played very distinctly, especially in thorough basses.

A'NDES, otherwise called CORDILLERA, a great chain of mountains, which run almost the whole length of South America, parallel to the sea-shore, and terminating at the Straits of Magellan. They are the highest and most remarkable mountains in the world; for those within the torrid zone are always covered with snow; and in passing over the lowest part of them, you are in danger of being starved with cold. There are a great many volcanoes, which break out sometimes in one place and sometimes in another; and by melting the snow, occasion such a torrent of water, that numbers of men and cattle have perished.

ANDIRONS, s. irons placed at each end of a grate on which a spit turns; or irons on which wood is laid to burn instead of a grate.

A'NDOVER, a large well built populous town in Hampshire, on the great western road, 10 miles from Winchester, and 65 from London. It sends two members to parliament, and has a market on Saturday.

A'NDREWS, ST. a royal borough in the county of Fife, formerly the capital of the kingdom of the Picts. It is seated by the side of a bay on the level top of a small hill, commanding a view of the German ocean. It is a decaying town, chiefly celebrated for its university. Here is a manufactory of golf-balls. It is 30 miles N. E. of Edinburgh.

ANDRO'GYNOUS, a. [from aner a man, and gune a woman, Gr.] an epithet given to those animals or persons which have the distinction of both sexes in the same individual.

ANDROI'DES, an automaton, in the figure of a man, which by virtue of certain springs, performs the actions of a man. The word is compounded of aner, a man, and eidos form [Gr.]

ANDRO'MEDA, a constellation in the northern hemisphere, representing the figure of a woman chained to a rock.

ANDU'JAR, an ancient, large, and populous city of Andelusia. It has several fine buildings, a strong castle, and a stately bridge, and vends great quantities of silk. It is 25 miles from Cordova.

A'NECDOTE, s. [anekdoton, Gr.] an article of secret history; a relation of detached and interesting particulars.

ANEMO'GRAPHY, s. [from anemos, the wind, and grapho, to describe, Gr.] a description of the winds.

ANEMO'METER, s. [from anemos, the wind, and metreo, to measure, Gr.] an instrument to measure the force of the wind.

ANE'MONE, s. [Gr.] wind-flower, a genus of plants of which there are many species, some of which are accounted beautiful. Sea anemonies are a kind of zoophytes, which are found in oyster-beds. Some of them are of an uniform colour, and others striped or spotted. They are capable of reproduction when cut in pieces, like plants, while they resemble animals in moving in the pursuit of their prey, which are principally muscles.

ANEMO'SCOPE, s. [from anemos, the wind, and skopeo, to see, Gr.] an instrument for determining the course and velocity of the wind.

ANE'NT, prep. a Scotch word signifying about, concerning; over against, opposite to.

ANES, or AWNS, s. the beards or spires of corn.

A'NEURISM, s. [from aneurevo, to dilate, Gr.] a soft red tumour, occasioned by the weakness of an artery, or by blood spread under the flesh, in consequence of a wound, or rupture of an artery.

ANE'W, ad. [neowe, Sax.] again; over again; once more.

A'NGEL, s. [angelus, Lat.] a name given to those spiritual beings who are employed by God in the government of the world. The word signifies a messenger. We read of evil angels, the ministers of God's wrath; as the destroying angel, the angel of death, the angel of Satan, the angel of the bottomless pit. Angel is likewise the name of an ancient gold coin in England, having the figure of an angel engraved on it, of the value of 10s. Figuratively, a person of exquisite beauty, and superior to the common run of mortals.

ANGE'LIC, a. resembling, belonging to, or partaking of, the nature of angels

ANGE'LICA, s. [Lat.] a plant of great esteem among physicians, being reputed stomachic, cordial, alexipharmic, and of great use in pestilential fevers, and contagious distempers; but now chiefly regarded as a carminative.

ANGE'LICAL, a. [angelicus, Lat.] that resembles angels; that belongs to, or partakes of the property or nature of angels.

ANGE'LOS, the second city of Mexico. It has a fine cathedral, and some other beautiful buildings; a mint glass-house, and other manufactures; and the country round it is very fertile, but the inhabitants, both priests and people, are extremely profligate in their manners. Angelos is 62 miles S. E. of Mexico. Lat. 19. 30. N. lon. 99. 22. W.

A'NGER, s. [anger, Sax.] a desire of thwarting the happiness of another, on account of an injury received. SYNON. The word anger implies a passion more internal and lasting; whereas the expression of in a passion, carries in its idea a sudden external gust of anger, short but violent.

To A'NGER, v. a. to injure or offend a person, so as to provoke him to resentment, or to desire to thwart one's happiness.

A'NGERLY, ad. in the manner of, or like a person who resents an injury.

ANGI'NA, s. [Lat.] a disease or swelling of the throat, called the quinsey.

ANGIO'GRAPHY, s. [from angeion, a vessel, and grapho, to describe, Gr.] a description of the vessels or tubes of the human body.

ANGIO'LOGY, s. [from angeion, a vessel, and logos, a description, Gr.] a treatise or discourse of the vessels of the human body.

A'NGLE, s. [angulus, Lat.] in geometry, the meeting of two lines which incline to each other, and meet in a point.

A'NGLE, s. [angel, Sax.] an instrument to catch fish with, consisting of a line, hook, and rod.

To A'NGLE, v. a. to fish with a hook, line, and rod. Figuratively, to entice by some allurements or artifice.

A'NGLE-ROD, s. the rod to which the line and hook are fastened in angling.

A'NGLER, s. he that fishes with a rod, hook, and line.

A'NGLES, an ancient German nation, originally a branch of the Suevi; who, after various migrations, settled in that part of Denmark, and duchy of Sleswick, which to this day is called Angel, and of which the city of Flensbourg is the capital. Here they were known, even in the time of Tacitus, by the name of Angli. To this nation the Britons applied for succours against the Scots and Picts. The Angles therefore came over in great numbers, and had the honour of giving the name of Anglia to England.

A'NGLESEA, or ANGLESEY, Isle of, the most western county of N. Wales, through which the packets regularly pass between London and Dublin. It is called by the ancients Mona, and was the seat of the Druids, of whom there seems to be some monumental remains, in the erections of huge stones, as at Stonehenge. Anglesea is separated from Carnarvonshire by a long and narrow strait, called Menai, or Menu, which, in some places, however, is fordable at low water. It is about 24 miles long, and 18 broad; contains 74 parishes, and about 11,000 inhabitants. It is a fertile spot, has some valuable quarries, and a very rich copper mine on Pary's mount. The chief town is Beaumaris, which is about 250 miles distant from London.

A'NGLICISH, s. [from anglus, Lat.] a method of expression peculiar to the English language.

A'NGLING, verbal noun. the diversion of fishing by a rod, line, and hook, armed with a bait.

ANGO'LA, a kingdom on the western coast of Africa, bounded on the N. by the river Danda, which separates it from Congo; and on the S. by the Coanza. The soil produces Indian corn, beans, oranges, lemons, grain of various kinds, and great variety of fruits. Although the Portuguese preserve their superiority in Angola, yet the English, Dutch, and other European nations, carry on trade with the natives for various commodities.

ANGO'RA, a town of Natolia, in Asiatic Turkey, remarkable for its antiquities, and for a breed of goats, whose hair, which is almost as soft as silk, is exported to Holland, France, and England, and manufactured into camblets, and other fine stuffs.

A'NGRILY, ad. in a manner which bespeaks resentment on account of some injury.

A'NGRY, a. desirous of revenge, on account of some affront; highly displeased.

ANGUI'LLA, or Snake Island, the most northern of the English Carribee Islands. It is a woody, fertile, level tract, about 30 miles long, and 10 broad, with good anchorage on the south side.

A'NGUISH, s. [angoisse, Fr.] excessive pain, applied to the body. Immoderate, or the highest degree of sorrow, anxiety, and torture, applied to the mind.

A'NGUISHED, a. affected with the profoundest anxiety, torture, and sorrow, on account of some calamity.

A'NGULAR, a. [from angulus, Lat.] that has corners or angles.

ANGULA'RITY, s. the quality of having angles or corners.

A'NGULARLY, ad. with angles and corners; like an angle.

A'NGULATED, a. [from angulus, Lat.] that has angles or corners.

A'NGULOUS, a. [from angulus, Lat.] that has corners or angles.

ANGUS, a shire on the east of Scotland, north of the Frith of Tay, which has many lakes and hills. Its hills have quarries of slate and free-stone, and mines of lead and iron; the lower grounds are fertile in corn and pasture, and along the coast the salmon fishery is very extensively carried on.

A'NHALT, a principality of Upper Saxony, which abounds in corn and hops, and has some rich mines.

ANHELA'TION, s. [from anhelo, Lat.] a shortness of breath, or quickness of breathing, occasioned by running, or going up any high and steep place.

ANHI'MA, a Brasilian bird, which bears some resemblance to the crane. It is distinguished by a long single horn on its head, which is inserted a little above the origin of the beak, is of a bony substance and about two inches long. The Anhima is a longer bird than the swan, frequents the water, and makes a very loud noise often repeating the notes, vyhu, vyhu.

ANHI'NGA, a very elegant Brasilian water-fowl, about the size of our common duck. The bill is furnished with hooked prickles, its head and neck are yellowish, covered with extremely soft feathers; its breast, belly, and thighs are of a silvery white; the upper parts of its back is brown, spotted with yellow; and the rest of the bird is black. It feeds upon fish.

A'NI, a noisy Brasilian bird, which has some resemblance to the jay.

ANIGHTS, ad. in the night-time, or every night.

ANILITY, s. [anilitas Lat.] old age, considered as it respects a woman.

ANIMADVERSION, s. [animadversio, Lat.] a taking notice of a fault with some degree of anger, severity, or dispatch.

ANIMADVERSIVE, a. [from animadversio, Lat.] that has power to make the mind attend to, or consider, any particular object; that has the power of judging.

To ANIMADVERT, v. n. [animadverto, Lat.] to censure, to blame, including the secondary idea of defect in a person animadverted on, together with authority, displeasure, and severity in the animadverter.

ANIMADVERTER, s. he who inflicts punishment or passes censure on crimes.

A'NIMAL, s. [animal, Lat.] a being, consisting of a body and a soul; distinguished from pure spirit, with respect to its corporeal part, and from mere matter by its spiritual. Animal secretion, is the act whereby the juices of the body are separated and secreted from the common mass of the blood by means of the glands. Animal spirits, are a fine subtile juice, supposed to be the great instrument of muscular motion and sensation. Animal system, denotes and includes the whole class of beings endowed with animal life; or, in general, the animal kingdom.

ANIMA'LCULE, s. [animalculum, Lat.] an animal so small as to be invisible to the naked eye. Animalcules are seen only by the assistance of the microscope, and are vastly more numerous than any other part of the creation; but the species, on examination, are found to be extremely few. The most obvious distinction among them is, that some have, and some have not tails; that some have, and others have not any visible limbs. Animalcules are discovered by microscopes in most liquors, as water, wine, vinegar, &c. in several chalybeate waters, in oats, barley, &c.

ANIMALITY, s. [from animal, Lat.] the state of existence.

To A'NIMATE, v. a. [animo, Lat.] to give life to; to quicken; to join, or unite a soul to a body. Figuratively, applied to musical instruments, to enliven, to make vocal, to inspire with the power of harmony; to communicate boldness to; to encourage to excite.

A'NIMATE, a. [animatus, Lat.] that is endued with a soul; that has life, or the properties of an animal; possessing animal life.

A'NIMATED. part. that has a great deal of life; vigorous, spirited.

ANIMATION, s. [animatio, Lat.] the act of bringing into existence, or enduing with life both vegetable and animal. The state wherein the soul and body are united.

A'NIMATIVE, a. that has the power of communicating a soul, or principal of life; that has the power of enlivening, encouraging, or making vigorous.

ANIMA'TOR, s. that which enlivens or confers the principle of life.

ANIMO'SE, a. [animosus, Lat.] full of spirit; violent; courageous; vehement.

ANIMO'SITY, s. [animositas, Lat.] a disposition of mind wherein a person is inclined to hinder the success, thwart the happiness, or disturb the tranquillity of another; it includes in it a degree of enmity, and is opposite to friendship or benevolence.

ANI'NGA, a root growing in the West Indies, used in the refinement of sugar.

A'NISE, s. is a small seed of a hot nature, good to expel wind out of the bowels and stomach, and is used by confectioners in sugar-plums, &c. By distillation there is extracted from it an oil, which, as well as that expressed from it when bruised, answers all the purposes of the seed itself: and during the distillation there comes off a water called aniseed water, a well known cordial and carminative.

A'NKLE, s. [ancleow, Sax.] the joint which unites the leg to the foot. Ankle-bone, the protoberant bone at the ankle.

A'NNALIST, s. one who writes or composes annals.

A'NNALS, s. it has no singular, [annales, Lat.] a narrative wherein the transactions are digested into periods, consisting each of one year; or relations which contain the public occurrences of a single year.

A'NNANDALE, a fertile district of Dumfries-shire, in Scotland.

ANNA'POLIS, the capital of Maryland, in North America, seated at the mouth of the Severn river. The houses are generally large and elegant. The plan of the city is a circle, with the stadthouse, a very elegant building, in the centre, and the streets like rays diverging thence in different directions. It is 30 miles S. of Baltimore, lat. 39. 0. N. lon. 77. 20. W. Also a town in Nova Scotia, with a very fine harbour.

A'NNATES, s. [Lat.] it has no singular: first-fruits; or a year's income of a spiritual living. In ancient times they were given to the pope throughout all Christendom, on the decease of a bishop, abbot, or parish clerk, and paid by his successor. In England the pope claimed them first of such foreigners as he conferred benefices upon, by way of provision; but afterwards they were demanded of all other clerks, on their admission to benefices. At the reformation they were taken from the pope, and vested in the king; and lastly, queen Anne restored them to the church, for the augmentation of poor livings.

ANNE, queen of Great Britain. This amiable and illustrious princess was descended from a race of kings, the most ancient of any in Europe. She was second daughter of James duke of York, afterwards king James II. by Mrs. Anne Hyde, eldest daughter of Edward earl of Clarendon. The duke was privately married to this lady during his first exile, in 1659. In 1660, she was, by an order of council, declared duchess of York, and to have the precedency of the princess of Orange and the queen of Bohemia. The duchess died at the palace of St. James's, March 15, 1671: she had issue by the duke four sons and four daughters; Charles, born Oct. 22, 1660; Mary, born April 30, 1662; James, born July 12, 1663; Anne, born Feb. 6, 1664; Charles, born July 4, 1665; Edgar, born Sept. 14, 1667; Henrietta, born Jan. 30, 1669; and Katherine, born Feb. 9, 1670; of whom Charles, James, Charles, and Henrietta, died in her life-time; and Edgar and Katharine did not survive her a year; but Mary and Anne lived to be queens of England. Princess Mary was about nine years old, and princess Anne about seven, at the death of their mother. On the death of K. William III. who died on Sunday, March, 8, 1702, about 8 in the morning, princess Anne was, about 3 the same afternoon, proclaimed queen of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, in the cities of London and Westminster, and was crowned April 23, following. The most remarkable events in her reign were, War declared against France and Spain, May 4, 1702. Prince George made lord high admiral. The Earl, afterwards duke of Marlborough, generalissimo. An unsuccessful attempt on Cadiz. Vigo taken by the English and Dutch, Oct. 12, 1702. Admiral Bembow betrayed. The great storm, Nov. 1703. Order of the thistle revived. Victory of Shellenburgh. The great battle at Hochstet or Blenheim, wherein the French lost 30,000 men, had 10,000 men taken prisoners, and marshal Tallard their general, August 1704. The sea fight off Malaga, in the same year, August 13. The battle of Ramilies, May 12; the union between England and Scotland, signed July 22; and the battle of Turin, all in 1706. The battle of Almanza, April 14, 1707. Sir Cloudesly Shovel wrecked on the rocks of Scilly. The battle of Oudenard, June 30; Minorca taken by general Stanhope, Sept. 18; the action of Wynnendale, Sept. 28; the city of Lisle taken, Oct. 12, 1708. The battle of Malplaquet, Sept. 14, 1709. Dr. Sacheverel sentenced, March 2; queen Anne changes her ministry, Aug. 3; the battle of Saragossa, Aug. 9; general Stanhope taken prisoner at Brihuega, Nov. 26; and the battle of Villa Viciosa, Nov. 29, 1710. The duke of Ormond separates the British forces from the allies, July 5; and the action of Denain, July 13, 1712. The peace of Utrecht signed March 30, 1713. Sunday, a little after 7 o'clock in the morning, Aug. 1, 1714, the queen died, having lived 49 years, 5 months, and six days, and reigned 12 years and 5 months, wanting 7 days. There had been a new vault made on the S. side, and towards the E. end of Henry VIIth's chapel, to deposit the body of K. Charles II. in which the prince, queen Mary, K. William III. and prince George of Denmark, were laid. Here the remains of Q. Anne were likewise deposited; and there being no more room left, the vault is closed with brick-work. She had been married to his royal highness prince George, brother to the then K. of Denmark, July 28, 1683, by whom she had a daughter still born, May 12, 1684; lady Mary, born June 2, 1685, died Feb. 1690; lady Anne Sophia, born May 12, 1686, died Feb. following; William duke of Gloucester, born July 24, 1689, and lived till eleven years of age; Mary, born Oct. 1690, and lived long enough to be baptized; and George, who died soon after he was born. Prince George, her husband, died Oct. 28, 1710. This princess was the glory and happiness of her people, and famous for her piety and unlimited charity.

To ANNE'AL, (annoel) v. a. [from ælan, Sax.] to render substances tough, that are naturally hard and brittle. Glass and iron are annealed by gradual cooling, brass and copper by heating and then suddenly plunging them in cold water. Glass is annealed to make it retain the colours laid on it.

To ANNE'X, v. a. [annecto, Lat.] to join or subjoin as a supplement; to connect; to unite with. To belong to; to join as a property.

ANNEXA'TION, s. a law term used to imply the uniting of lands or rents to the crown.

ANNE'XION, s. the adding of something as an enforcement, supplement, or aid.

ANNE'XMENT, s. something that is joined to another.

To ANNI'HILATE, v. a. [annihilo, Lat.] to reduce to nothing; to deprive of existence. To put an end to; to extinguish; to destroy utterly.

ANNIHILA'TION, s. the act by which the very existence of a thing is entirely destroyed.

ANNIVE'RSARY, s. [from anniversarius, Lat.] the return of any remarkable day in the calendar. Some public rejoicing performed in honour of the anniversary day.

ANNIVE'RSARY, a. [anniversarius, Lat.] that falls but once in the regular course of every year; annual or yearly.

A'NNO DO'MINI, [Lat.] expressed by abbreviature, A. D.—thus, A. D. 1812, i. e. in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twelve.

ANNOTA'TION, s. [annotatio, Lat.] explanation of the difficult passages of an author, written by way of notes.

ANNOTATOR, s. [Lat.] a person who explains the difficult passages of an author; a commentator.

ANNO'TTO, a kind of red dye brought from the West Indies. It is used in tinging double Gloucester cheese.

To ANNOU'NCE, v. a. [annoncer, Fr.] to proclaim; to reveal publicly; to pronounce; to sentence.

To ANNO'Y, v. a. [ennuyer, Fr.] to disturb; to vex; to make a person uneasy.

ANNO'Y, s. an attack. Trouble, misfortune, or any state which is productive of anxiety.

ANNO'YANCE, s. that which occasions any trouble, inconvenience, dislike, injury, or hurt; the state wherein a person is affected with the sight, hearing, seeing, &c. of a disagreeable object.

ANNO'YER, s. the person who causes any annoyance, dislike, trouble, or loathing.

A'NNUAL, a. [annuel, Fr.] occuring every year, or yearly. Continuing the year; that endures only one year.

A'NNUALLY, ad. every year, yearly.

ANNUITANT, s. [from annus, Lat.] he that possesses or receives an annuity.

ANNUITY, s. [annuité, Fr.] a yearly revenue, paid every year during a person's life, or certain term of years; a yearly allowance.

To ANNU'L, v. a. [from nullus, Lat.] applied to laws, to deprive them of their force; to abrogate; to abolish. Made imperceptible, or as if deprived of their existence, and annihilated.

A'NNULAR, a. [annulus, Lat.] round, circular, having the form of a ring; also an appellation in anatomy, given to several parts of the body; thus the annular is the second cartilage of the larynx or throat; the annular ligament, that which encompasses the wrist, and binds the bones of the arm together; annular process, or protuberance, a part of the medulla oblongata. The fourth or ring finger is likewise called annular.

A'NNULARY, a. [from annulus, Lat.] being in the form of rings.

A'NNULET, s. [from annulus, Lat.] a small ring. In heraldry, used for a mark that the person is the fifth brother. Sometimes indeed a part of the coat of several families, reputed a mark of dignity. In architecture, the small square member in the Doric capital, under the quarter round, likewise a flat moulding common to the other parts of the column, which derives its name from its surrounding the column.

ANNU'LLING, part. noun. the revoking, abolishing, or repealing of an act, &c.

To ANNU'MERATE, v. a. [annumero, Lat.] to reckon or count a person or thing into a list, a part of a number.

ANNUMERATION, s. [annumeratio, Lat.] something added to a number.

To ANNU'NCIATE, v. a. [annuncio, Lat.] to bring tidings; to declare something unknown before.

ANNUNCIA'TION, s. the tidings brought by the angel Gabriel to the Virgin Mary of the incarnation of Jesus Christ, in memory of which, a festival has been instituted by the church, and solemnized the 25th of March, then called Lady day.

A'NODYNE, s. [from a not, and odyne pain, Gr.] a remedy which abates the force of pain, and renders it more tolerable.

To ANOINT, v. a. [aindre, Fr.] to rub with some fat or greasy preparation. To consecrate by unction.

ANOI'NTER, s. the person who anoints.

ANOMALI'STICAL, a. irregular. Anomalistical year, in astronomy, the space of time wherein the earth passes through her orbit, and differing from the common year, on account of the precision of the equinoxes.

ANO'MALOUS, a. [from a not, and omalos, like Gr.] in grammar, applied to such words as are not consistent with the rules of declining, &c. In astronomy, applied to time which seemingly deviates from its regular motion.

ANO'MALOUSLY, ad. in a manner not consistent with established laws or rules; in an irregular, uncommon, or extraordinary manner.

ANO'MALY, s. [anomalie, Fr.] a deviation from the established rules and laws, whether those of nature, societies, or particular branches of science. In astronomy, that portion of the ecliptic moved through by the moon or any planet; since it was last in its apogee or aphelion.

ANOMOE'ANS, in church history, ancient heretics, who held that the Son was of a different nature from, and in no sort like that of, the Father. This was the name by which the Pure Arians were distinguished, in contradistinction to the Semi-Arians, who acknowledged a likeness of nature in the Son, at the same time that they denied, with the Pure Arians, the consubstantiality of the Word.

ANON, ad. soon after any time expressed; quickly. When applied to vicissitude, revolution, or change of action, it signifies then, afterwards, or sometimes.

ANO'NYMOUS, a. [from a not, and onoma a name, Gr.] that has not yet received a name. Applied to books or publications, it means that has not the name of the author.

ANO'NYMOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to be without a name.

ANORE'XY, s. [anorexia, Gr.] among physicians, a loathing of food, or want of appetite, proceeding from indigestion.

ANO'THER, pron. applied to things, something not like that which is mentioned; different. Applied to number or succession, one more; an addition; besides. Applied to identity, not the same. Joined with one, it signifies a thing mutually performed; something reciprocal.

ANO'TTA, or ARNO'TTA, s. in dying, an elegant red colour, formed from the pellicles or pulp of the seeds of the Bixa, a tree common in South America.

A'NSATED, a. [ansatus, Lat.] having handles; resembling handles.

A'NSPACH, a principality of Franconia, which is beautifully interspersed with woods; produces corn and tobacco, and has several iron mines, and medicinal springs.

To A'NSWER, (in pron. the w is dropped) v. a. [andswarian, Sax.] to speak in return to a question. To reply to an objection; to obviate, or give a solution; to assign reasons; to be accountable for, or satisfy any claim or debt; to pay; to bear a proportion; to be proportionate to. To vindicate; or be received as a witness, or voucher in a person's behalf.

A'NSWER, s. [answare, Sax.] an information, or reply to a question; a solution of any difficulty, or objection.

A'NSWERABLE, a. that will admit of a reply.

A'NSWERABLY, ad. in proportion; in a manner which corresponds with, or is suitable to.

A'NSWERER, s. one who gives such information as a question requires; he that solves, obviates, or clears up the objections of an adversary. He who writes against another in any controversy.

ANT, s. [æmett, Sax.] a small insect, remarkable for its industry, tenderness, and economy.

ANTA'CID, s. medicines to correct acidity in the stomach.

ANTA'GONIST, s. [from anti against, and agonizo I strive, Gr.] applied to a person who contends with another. Applied to writers, it means, one who opposes the opinions or sentiments of another.

To ANTA'GONIZE, v. a. [from anti against, and agonizo to strive Gr.] to stive or contend against another.

ANTA'LGIC, a. [from anti against, and algos pain, Gr.] in medicine, that softens or mitigates pains.

ANTA'RCTIC, a. [from anti against, and arktos a bear, Gr.] that is opposite to the arctic, applied in astronomy to the southern pole and circle. The antarctic pole in astronomy is the south pole, or that part of the heavens to which the south end of the earth's axis points. The antarctic circle is one of the lesser circles of the sphere, parallel to the equator, and 23 deg. 28 min. distant from the south pole. The antarctic pole in geography, is the southern extremity of the earth's axis.

A'NTE, [Lat.] a particle signifying before, and frequently, used in composition; as, antediluvian, that which existed before the flood.

A'NTEATER, s. a quadruped that feeds upon ants. The anteaters are a genus, of which there are seven different species. They have no teeth, but have long tubular mouths, and their tongues, which are long, wormlike, and covered with a kind of glutinous moisture, are the only instruments by which they seize their food. The great anteater is more than five feet long, and when closely pursued by an adversary will make a desperate resistance with its claws.

To ANTECE'DE, v. n. [antecedo, Lat.] to have a prior existence; to precede, or go before.

ANTECE'DENCE, s. priority of existence; existence before some period or being.

ANTECE'DENT, a. [antecedens, Lat.] prior; before; or existing before. Used substantively, it implies the thing which is prior in time, or which must have gone before. "It is indeed the necessary antecedent." South. In grammar the noun which, in the order of construction, goes before a relative; as, "Christ who redeemed us." The word Christ is the antecedent which goes before the relative who. In logic, the first part, or proposition, of an enthymeme, or syllogism, consisting of two propositions only; as, "Christ is risen from the dead; therefore we are redeemed;" the words in italic are the antecedent.

ANTECE'DENTLY, ad. in the state of antecedence; or going before; previously.

ANTECE'SSOR, s. [Lat.] one who precedes, or is before another in the order of time.

A'NTECHAMBER, s. [often falsely written antichamber] a chamber which leads to a state-room, or chief apartment.

To A'NTEDATE, v. a. [ante and do, datum, Lat.] to place too early, or before its real period. To enjoy a thing in imagination before it exists.

ANTEDILU'VIAN, a. [from ante and diluvium, Lat.] that existed, or had a being before the flood. Used substantively for the persons who lived before the flood.

A'NTELOPE, s. a beautiful tribe of animals, which bears some resemblance to the goat from which, and from the deer they differ, in having their horns annulated or ringed round at the same time that there are longitudinated depressions running from the bottom to the point. The antelope has the finest eye of any animal in the world. They live in large flocks, and inhabit Asia and Africa.

ANTEMERI'DIAN, a. [from ante and meridies, Lat.] being before noon.

ANTEMU'NDANE, a. [from ante and mundus, Lat.] that was before the creation of the world.

ANTE'NNÆ, s. the horns like processes, projecting from the heads of insects.

ANTEPENU'LT, or ANTEPENU'LTIMA, s. [antepenultima, Lat.] in grammar, the last syllable but two of a word; as the syllable nul in the word antepenultima.

ANTEPILE'PTIC, a. [from anti against, and epilepsis the epilepsy, Gr.] an epithet applied to a medicine against convulsions.

ANTEQUE'RA, a handsome and populous city of Granada, the upper part of which is seated on a hill, and has a castle, and the lower stands in a fertile plain, and is watered by a great number of brooks. Here are still to be seen some ancient mines whence the Romans drew immense quantities of the precious metals. It is 26 miles N. W. of Malaga. Lat. 37. 1. N. lon. 4. 40. W.

ANTE'RIOR, or ANTE'RIOUR, a. [Lat.] that is before another with regard to time or place.

ANTERIO'RITY, s. [from anterior, Lat.] the state of being before another, with respect to time or place.

A'NTES, s. [Lat.] large pillars that support the front of a building; also a term used by gardeners for the foremost or lowest ranks of vines

ANTHE'LION, s. a mock, or spurious sun, a meteor of a luminous appearance, somewhat resembling the sun seen through clouds, sometimes four or five times larger than the sun's disk. In its most refulgent state it is as yellow as the sun, but the lucid tract surrounding it is of a paler yellow, or whitish cast, interspersed sometimes with a few reddish spots. This kind of meteor, which is by no means common, is attributed to a multitude of minute icy or snowy particles suspended in the air, and either refracting or reflecting the solar rays in such a manner, as to multiply the image of the sun.

ANTHELMI'NTHIC, a. [from anti, against, and elmins, a worm, Gr.] that has the quality of killing worms.

A'NTHEM, s. [anthumnos, Gr.] a hymn performed in two parts, by the opposite members of a choir. Socrates says, Ignatius was the inventor of it among the Greeks, and St. Ambrose among the Latins. Anthems were first introduced in the reformed service of the English church, in the beginning of the reign of queen Elizabeth.

A'NTHERA, s. in botany, that part of the stamen which is fixed on the top of the filamentum within the corolla; it contains the pollen or fine dust, which, when mature, it emits for the impregnation of the plant, according to Linnæus.

ANTHO'LOGY, s. [from anthos, a flower, and lego, to collect, Gr.] a treatise of flowers, a collection of the most beautiful passages of one or more authors, whence the collection of Greek epigrams is styled anthologia.

ST. A'NTHONY'S FIRE, s. See ERYSIPELAS.

ANTHRA'COLITE, in chemistry, coal blend, a species of coal which burns without flame.

A'NTHRAX, s. [Gr.] a burning coal; a carbuncle, encompassed with fiery, sharp, and painful swellings.

ANTHROPO'LOGY, s. [from anthropos, a man, and logos, a discourse, Gr.] a discourse or treatise upon men, or human nature, considered as in a state of health, including the consideration of both body and soul, with the laws of their motion.

ANTHROPO'MANCY, s. [from anthropos, man, and manteia, divination, Gr.] a species of divination, from inspecting the entrails and viscera of a human body.

ANTHROPOMO'RPHITES, s. [from anthropos, man, and morphe, form, Gr.] a sect of antient heretics, who taking every thing spoken of God in the scripture in a literal sense, particularly that passage in Genesis, "God made man after his own image," maintained that God had a human shape. They are likewise called Audeans, from Audeas their leader.

ANTHROPOMO'RPHOUS, a. [Gr.] an appellation given to whatever resembles the human form; thus the mandrakes, among the plants; the monkey, among animals, &c.

ANTHROPO'PHAGI, s. never used in the singular, [from anthropos, a man, and phago, I eat, Gr.] savages who eat human flesh.

ANTHROPO'PHAGY, s. [from anthropos, a man, and phago, I eat, Gr.] the quality of eating human flesh.

ANTHROPO'SCOPY, s. [from anthropos, a man, and skopeo, to see, Gr.] that part of physiology which judges of a man's character from his complexion, the lineaments of his face, features, &c.

ANTIHYPNOTICS, s. [from anti, against, and upnos, sleep, Gr.] medicines given to prevent sleeping.

A'NTI, [Gr.] a particle, which in composition signifies contrary or opposite; and in works of literature is prefixed to the answers wrote in opposition to an author; as, Anti-Catones, the names of the answers Julius Cæsar wrote to the objections made against him by Cato.

ANTIARTHRI'TICS, s. [from anti, against, and arthritikos gouty, Gr.] remedies against the gout.

A'NTIC, s. [from antiquus, Lat.] one who plays tricks, and makes use of odd and uncommon gestures; a merry andrew, a buffoon.

A'NTICHAMBER, s. See ANTECHAMBER.

A'NTICHRIST, s. [from anti, against, and Christos, Christ, Gr.] a name given by way of eminence, by St. Paul, to the man of sin and son of perdition, who it was predicted should precede the second coming of our Saviour, and who is represented in the scriptures as the epitome of every thing that is the most cruel, impious, and abominable. Protestants have generally given this name to the pope.

ANTICHRI'STIAN, a. [from anti, against, and Christianos a Christian, Gr.] contrary, or opposite to Christianity.

ANTICHRI'STIANISM, s. any doctrine or opinion contrary to Christianity.

ANTICHRO'NISM, s. [from anti, against, and chronos, time, Gr.] contrary to the right order of time.

To ANTI'CIPATE, v. a. [anticipo, Lat.] to be beforehand with another in taking, so as to disappoint him that comes after; to do or enjoy a thing before its fixed period.

ANTICIPA'TION, s. the dating a thing earlier than its due period; the enjoyment of a thing in imagination, before its real existence; a foretaste.

ANTICLI'MAX, s. [from anti, opposite to, and climax, Gr.] a sentence in which the last part is lower than the first.

A'NTICKLY, ad. in the manner of an antic or buffoon; with odd gesticulations and grimaces.

ANTICONVU'LSIVE, a. good against convulsions.

A'NTICOR, s [from anti, opposite to, Gr. and cor, heart, Lat.] among farriers, an inflammation in a horse's throat, the same as quinsey with us.

ANTICOU'RTIER, s. one who opposes the measures of the court.

ANTIDO'TAL, s. that has the quality of preventing the effects of any contagion or poison.

A'NTIDOTE, s. [from anti, against, and didomi, to pine, Gr.] a medicine given to expel poison, or prevent its effects, and to guard against contagion.

ANTIEPILE'PTIC, a. [from anti, against, and epilepsis, the epilepsy, or falling-sickness, Gr.] good against convulsions.

ANTI'GUA, one of the English Caribbee Islands, about 20 miles in length, and nearly the same in breadth. The inhabitants, from the want of springs, are obliged to save the rain-water in cisterns, and fetch it from the other islands. It is very rocky, but has excellent harbours, and contains about 60,000 acres, 6 towns and villages, 6000 whites, and 3600 negroes. The chief produce is sugar. The capital, St. John's has a royal navy yard, and arsenal, with conveniences for careening ships of war. It is 60 miles S. E. of St. Christopher's. Lat. 17. 5. N. lon. 62. 5. W.

ANTIGU'GLAR, s. a tube of metal, so bent as easily to be introduced into the neck of the bottle, with a view of decanting liquors without disturbing them. The bottle should be a little inclined, and about half a spoonful of the liquor poured out, so as to admit an equal quantity of air. One end of the bent tube must then be stopped with the finger, while the other is thrust into the body of the liquor, near to the bubble of air already admitted. When the finger is taken off, the bottle will have vent, and the liquor will run out steadily and undisturbed.

ANTI'LLES, s. (properly Antisles, from their smallness) a small cluster of islands in the West Indies, extending from 18 to 24 degrees N. lat. and distinguished into Windward and Leeward Islands. The French name for the CARIBBEES.

ANTILO'GARITHM, s. [anti, Gr. and logarithm] the complement of a logarithm, or its difference from one of 90 degrees.

ANTI'LOGY, s. [antilogia, Gr.] contradiction; in its primary sense, applied to those passages of an author wherein there seems to be, or really is, a manifest contradiction.

ANTI-MONA'RCHIAL, a. [from anti, against, and monarchia, monarchy, Gr.] that is contrary to monarchy.

ANTIMO'NIAL, a. that consists of, or has the qualities of antimony.

A'NTIMONY, s. a brilliant brittle metal, of a dusky white colour, and destitute of ductility. Though seemingly hard, it may easily be cut with a knife. It is principally procured from Hungary and Norway. Antimony is combined with some other metals in making printer's types, and specula for telescopes. Its oxydes are employed in medicine, and in colouring glass. In times of remote antiquity it was used by females as a black paint for the eye-brows, as it is now in eastern countries.

ANTINEPHRITICS, s. [from anti, against, and nephritis, a disorder in the kidneys, Gr.] medicines for diseases in the reins and kidneys.

ANTINO'MIANS, s. [from anti, against, and nomos, the law, Gr.] certain heretics asserted to reject the law, as of no use under the gospel dispensation, and to hold that good works do not farther, nor evil works hinder, salvation; that the child of God cannot sin, and other tenets of a similar kind. These doctrines were charged on Agricola, a German divine, of the sixteenth century, and have been since objected against many others. There is, however, reason to believe, that though strong and even rash expressions may have been used by persons of high Calvinistic sentiments, which have given occasion for much misrepresentation, no sect has ever maintained that Christians were at liberty to live in sin.

ANTINOMY, s. [from anti, against, and nomos, law, Gr.] a contradiction between two laws, or two parts of the same law.

ANTIOCH, now Anthakia, an antient and celebrated, but now ruinous city of Syria, where the disciples of Jesus were first called Christians. It is 40 miles S. W. of Aleppo. Lat. 35. 17. N. lon. 36. 45. E.

ANTI-PÆDO-BAPTISTS, [from anti, against, and pais, a child, and baptizo, to baptize, Gr.] a distinguishing denomination given to those who object to the baptism of infants.

ANTIPARALY'TIC, a. [from anti, against, and paralytikos, paralytic, Gr.] good against the palsy.

ANTIPATHY, s. [from anti, against, and pathos, passion, Gr.] a natural aversion to any particular object, which operates so strongly, as neither to be controlled by the will nor reason.

ANTIPERISTASIS, s. [Gr.] in philosophy, the action of two contrary qualities, whereby the force of the one is increased by the opposition of the other. This doctrine was espoused by the Parapatetics; but is exploded by Mr. Boyle in his history of cold.

ANTIPHONARY, s. a service book belonging to the catholics, which contained whatever was to be sung or said in the choir, except the lessons.

ANTIPHONY, s. [from anti, opposite to, and phone, voice, Gr.] the answer made by one side of the choir to the other, when a hymn or anthem is sung alternately, or between them.

ANTIPHRASIS, s. [from anti, opposite to, and phrasis, a speech, Gr.] a figure in rhetoric, whereby the use of words is applied in a sense opposite to their true meaning.

ANTIPODAL, a. relating to those persons or places that are antipodes with respect to their situation.

ANTIPODES, s. [from anti, against, and pous, foot, Gr.] in geography, those who live on the contrary side of the globe, with their feet directly opposite to ours, so that if a right line were continued through the earth, each of its extremities would touch the feet of one of the parties.

ANTIPOPE, s. a false or pretended pope, one that is, or is pretended to be irregularly elected in opposition to another. More than twenty antipopes are mentioned in history.

ANTIQUARY, s. [antiquarius, Lat.] one who applies himself to the study of antiquities; whether they be mottos, inscriptions, or antient manuscripts; and makes collections for that purpose.

To ANTIQUATE, v. a. [antiquo, Lat.] to render useless, in the passive, to be grown out of use.

ANTIQUATEDNESS, s. the state of being out of vogue or use; the being obsolete.

ANTIQUE, (antike, or anteek) a. [Fr.] that was in vogue in antient times, in opposition to modern. That is really old: whose antiquity is genuine and indisputable. Old fashioned; out of fashion; uncouth and ridiculous for its antiquity. Used substantively, for a genuine piece of antiquity, or the relic of the antients. SYNON. A fashion is old, when it ceases to be in use; antient, when it has been some time past; antique, when it has been a long time antient.

ANTIQUITY, s. [antiquitas, Lat.] that time or period which has long preceded the present. Antient writers, those who lived in former times; the histories wrote at a great distance before the present period. Long life, or old age.

ANTISCII, s. [from anti, opposite to, and skia, a shadow, Gr.] the people who have their shadows projected opposite ways. The people of the northern hemisphere are Antiscii to those of the southern, the shadows of the one projecting at noon towards the north, and those of the other towards the south.

ANTISCORBU'TIC, or ANTISCORBUTICAL, a. [from anti, against, Gr. and scorbutus, in medicine, Lat. the scurvy.] good against the scurvy.

ANTISEPTICS, s. [from anti, against, and septikos, putrefying, Gr.] all substances that resist putrefaction. They are of use in all putrid, malignant, and pestilential cases.

ANTISPASIS, s. [Gr.] the revulsion of any humour.

ANTISPASMO'DIC, a. [from anti, against, and spasmas, the cramp, Gr.] that has the power of giving relief in the cramp.

ANTISPA'STIC, s. [from anti, against, and spastikos, plucking, Gr.] that causes a revulsion of the humours.

ANTISPLENE'TIC, a. [from anti, against, and splen, the spleen, Gr.] efficacious against the spleen.

ANTI'STROPHE, s. [Gr.] the second stanza in every three, in an ode sung in parts. Also a figure in grammar, by which two things mutually dependant on one another are reciprocally converted; as, the servant of the master, and the master of the servant.

ANTISTRUMA'TICS, s. [from anti, against, Gr. and struma, supposed to mean the king's evil, Lat.] remedies against a scrophulous humour, or the king's evil.

ANTITHESIS, s. [Gr.] in the plural antitheses; in rhetoric, a figure, wherein opposite qualities are placed in contrast, or compared with each other, in order to illustrate, amplify, and adorn the speech of an orator, or piece of an author; a beautiful instance of this is in the following verse in Denham—"Tho' deep, yet clear; tho' gentle, yet not dull." &c.

ANTITRINITA'RIANS, s. [anti, Gr. and trinitarians] persons who deny the Trinity, otherwise called Socinians and Unitarians.

ANTITYPE, s. [from antitypon, Gr.] in divinity, that which is formed according to a model or pattern; a general similitude, or resemblance of circumstances.

ANTITYPOCAL, a. that answers to some type.

ANTIVENEREAL, a. [anti, Gr. and venereal] in medicine, good against venereal complaints.

ANTLERS, s. [andoullier, Fr.] among hunters, the first pearls which grow about the bur of a deer's horns; sometimes used in a more general sense for any of the branches.

ANTŒCI, s. has no singular [from anti, against, and oikeo, to dwell, Gr.] in geography, those who live under the same semi-circle of the meridian, but in different parallels, the one being as far distant from the equator south, as the others are north. Their longitude is the same, as are also their noon, midnight, and all their days, but their seasons are contrary, it being autumn with the one, when it is spring with the other, &c. The inhabitants of Peloponnesus are the antœci to those of the Cape of Good Hope.

ANTONOMA'SIA, s. [from anti, against, and onoma, a name, Gr.] a figure of rhetoric, by which the proper name of one thing is applied to several others. Thus we say, the orator, for Cicero; a man extremely cruel, we call a Nero; and we say the philosopher, to denote Aristotle.

A'NTRIM, a county of Ulster, in Ireland, which is pretty fertile, and has an extensive linen manufactory. The inhabitants are computed at 160,000, and its capital is a trading town of the same name, 84 miles N. of Dublin. It has two remarkable natural curiosities, the Giant's Causeway, and the petrifying waters of Lough Neagh.

ANTWERP, a large handsome city of Brabant, seated on the Scheldt, and having a strong citadel. It was formerly a place of the greatest trade in Europe, but for more than 200 years past has been on the decline. The streets of Antwerp are large and regular, besides which are twenty-two public squares; the harbour is very commodious, the river being 400 yards wide, and at the time of high water 22 feet deep, so that large vessels may come up to the quay, and by the canals from the river to the doors of the houses. The public buildings are very handsome, and at least 200 in number. The exchange cost 300,000 crowns, and served as the model for those of London and Amsterdam. The town house is a grand piece of architecture, and stands in the great market place. The house of the Hans towns built for the accommodation of the eastern merchants from the Baltic, is a square building of stone. In the middle story, which has a gallery quite round the square there are 300 lodging rooms; the cellars serve for stables. It is 22 miles N. of Brussels, 22 NE. of Ghent, and 65 S. of Amsterdam.

ANVIL, s. [æenfille, Sax.] in its primary signification, a smith's utensil, serving to place the work on, which is to be hammered or forged. In a secondary sense, it implies any thing which is subject to blows. Figuratively used with the particle upon it implies that a thing is in agitation, is in readiness, or under consideration.

ANUS, s. [Lat.] in anatomy, the orifice of the intestines, through which the excrements are discharged by stool; likewise a small hole in the left ventricle of the brain. In botany, the posterior or back opening of a monopetalous flower, or that which has but one petal.

ANXIETY, s. [anxietas, Lat.] an uneasiness of the mind, caused by its apprehension of the consequence of some future event.

ANXIOUS, a. [anxius, Lat.] uneasy on account of the uncertainty of some event. Very solicitous about any future event.

ANXIOUSLY, ad. in an anxious manner; solicitously; unquietly; carefully; with painful uncertainty.

ANY, a. [ænig, Sax.] applied to time, it denotes either of the parts of which it is composed. Applied to space, either of its parts without restriction. One, in opposition to none.

ANZICO, or MACOKO, a kingdom of Lower Guinea, the country of the Jagas, divided from Congo by the river Zaira. The inhabitants are strong, active, and intrepid; they are described as cannibals, publicly exposing human flesh on their shambles for sale. They do not till the ground, but like the Arabs, wander from place to place. They pay some reverence to the sun and moon, and have other idols, and they carry off slaves to barter at Angola, for the commodities of Europe.

AORIST, s. [from aoristos, Gr.] indefinite, a tense in the Greek grammar.

AORTA, s. [Gr.] the great artery rising immediately out of the left ventricle of the heart; the trunk out of which all the other arteries spring, and the great canal from whence the blood is conveyed to every part of the human body.

APACE, ad. applied to things in motion swiftly; applied to time, quickly or speedily; and applied to the transition from one state to another, in haste, with speed.

APAGOGICAL, a. [from apagoge, a leading from, Gr.] an epithet given to a sort of demonstration, or indirect way of proof, by shewing the absurdity of the contrary.

APANAGE, s. in France, formerly a settled portion of lands assigned by the sovereign for the subsistence of his younger sons, which reverted to the crown in failure of male issue of that branch.

APART, ad. [apart, Fr.] separately, or at a distance; aside, or for a particular use.

APARTMENT, s. [apartement, Fr.] a part of a house. SYNON. By apartment is understood a set of rooms convenient to dwell in.

APATHY, s. [from a not, and pathos passion, Gr.] a freedom from all passion, a state of insensibility.

APATITE, s. in chemistry, a combination of lime with the phosphoric acid, the matter of bones.

APE, s. [Icelandic.] an animal resembling the human form, of which there are a variety of species. The toes of their feet are as long as their fingers; they have pouches on each side their jaws, which serve them as store-places. The females have but a single young one, which they carry on their back, and when they suckle it, take it in their arms, and give it the breast in the same manner as a woman does to her child; they are very remarkable for their mimicking the actions of human creatures; hence the word is used in a secondary sense, for one who uncouthly or affectedly imitates another. Apes are distinguished from baboons, monkeys, and sapajous by their having no tails.

To APE, v. a. to mimic or imitate.

APEAK, (apeék) ad. in a posture to pierce; atilt.

APEDALE, Staffordshire, near Stone, noted for its coarse iron ore, which, mixed with others of a better sort, is used for two-penny nails, and sheathing nails for ships.

APELITES, a sect of heretics in the second century, who held that Christ received a body from the four elements, which at his death he rendered back to the world, and so ascended into heaven without a body.

APEPSY, s. [apepsia, Gr.] in physic, that disorder in the stomach called indigestion; a loss of natural concoction.

APENNINES, a chain of mountains which divide Italy throughout its whole length, as far as the southern extremity of the kingdom of Naples. Hence proceed all the brooks and rivers which water Italy, and render the land fruitful.

APER, s. one who mimics or imitates the actions of another. An imitator; a mimic.

APERIENT, part. [from aperio, Lat.] in medicine, that has the quality of opening, applied to gentle purges.

APERTION, s. [from apertus, Lat.] an opening; a passage; a gap; an aperture; or the action of making an opening or passage.

APERTURE, s. [from aperio, Lat.] an opening, passage, gap, or hole. In geometry, the space between two right lines that form an angle. In optics, a round hole in a turned bit of wood, or plate of tin, placed within side of a telescope or microscope, near to the object glass, by means of which more rays are admitted, and a more distant view of the object is obtained. In the civil law, the loss of a feudal tenure by default of issue of him to whom the fee was first granted, is called apertura feudi; and the breaking up or opening the last will or testament of any person, that was sealed up, is called apertura tabularum.

APETALOUS, a. [from a not, and petalon a flower-leaf, Gr.] in botany, having no petals or flower-leaves.

APEX, s. [Lat. in the plural apices] the top point, or summit of any thing. In geometry, the angular point of a cone, or any like figure.

APHÆRESIS, s. [Gr.] in rhetoric, a figure wherein a word or syllable is taken away from the beginning of a word, as in the ingenious motto of Sir John Phillips Amore, more, ore, re, by love, by custom, by word, in reality.

APHELION, or APHELIUM, s. [aphelia plur from, apo from, and elios the sun, Gr.] in astronomy, that part of the orbit of a planet in which it is at its greatest distance from the sun.

APHION, a city of Natolia in Asiatic Turkey, which has its name from the great quantity of opium, by the Turks called aphium, produced here.

APHORISM, s. [aphorismos, Gr.] a maxim, general rule, a principle of a science, or a brief sentence comprehending a great deal of matter in a few words.

APHORISTICAL, a. that is composed in the manner of aphorisms or maxims.

APHORISTICALLY, ad. in the manner of an aphorism.

APHRONITRE, s. [aphros froth, and nitron salt-petre, Gr.] a kind of natural salt-petre, gathering like froth on old walls, now called salt-petre of the rock.

A'PIARY, s. [apiarium, Lat.] the place where bees are kept; which should be sheltered from high winds, and defended from poultry, whose dung is very offensive to them.

APIECE, ad. each; or separately taken.

A'PIS, an ox or bull worshipped by the Egyptians under this name. The god Osiris was worshipped under the form of this animal, whose whole body was to be black except a white square spot on the forehead; on his back there was to be the figure of an eagle, and on his tongue that of a beetle. When a calf was found with these marks, it was carried with great joy to the temple of Osiris, where it was fed, kept, and worshipped instead of the god, as long as it lived, and at its death was buried with great solemnity and mourning. This done, they looked out for another with the same marks. Sometimes it was many years before they found one, but when they had, there was a great festival kept all over the country. The calf which the children of Israel made at Sinai, appears to have been intended as an image of the Egyptian Apis. Apis is also the name of a southern constellation, otherwise called Musca, the bee or fly.

A'PISH, a. This word has various significations, on account of its being applied to the different qualities of an ape; thus it signifies mimicking, or imitative; affected or foppish; silly, insignificant, empty, specious.

A'PISHLY, ad. in an apish manner; foppishly; conceitedly.

APO'CALYPSE, s. [apokalypsis, Gr.] Revelation, the last book of the New Testament, and of canonical scripture, written by St. John, according to Irenæus, about the year of Christ 96, in the isle of Patmos, whither St. John had been banished by the emperor Domitian. But bishop Newton fixes the time of writing this book earlier, viz. previous to the destruction of Jerusalem. It is observed, that the Apocalypse of St. John has the same relation to the prophecies of Daniel, which they have to one another; so that all of them together make but one consistent prophecy, pointing out the various revolutions that would happen both to church and state; viz. the destruction of Jerusalem; great calamities in the Roman empire; the entire overthrow of the Western Roman empire by its division into ten kingdoms; the rise and fall of the Papal and Mahometan powers, the second coming of Christ, &c. &c.

APOCALY'PTICAL, a. that contains the revelation of any thing mysterious.

APO'COPE, s. [from Gr.] in grammar, a figure wherein the last letter or syllable of a word is cut off; as, thro' for through; hyp' for hypochondriac.

APO'CRYPHA, s. [from apokrupto to hide, Gr.] in its primary signification something which is not known. Applied to books, it denotes that their authors are not certainly known. In theology, books appended to the sacred writings of uncertain authority, and rejected as uncanonical.

APO'CRYPHAL, a. of doubtful and uncertain authority; not inserted in the canon of Scripture.

APO'CRYPHALLY, ad. in a manner which is in want of authority, or the marks of authenticity.

APODI'CTICAL, a. [from apodeiknumi to demonstrate, Gr.] demonstrative, or so plain and convincing that no person can refuse his assent to it.

APOGÆ'ON, A'POGEE, or APOGE'UM, s. [from apo from, and ge the earth, Gr.] a point in the heavens, in which the sun, or a planet, is at the greatest distance possible from the earth in its whole revolution. The ancients regarding the earth as the centre of the system, chiefly regarded the apogæon and perigæon, which the moderns, making the sun the centre, change for the aphelion and perihelion.

APOLLINA'RIANS, a sect in the fourth century, the followers of Apollinaris, bishop of Laodicea, who, after he had wrote many useful books, especially to younger Christians, fell into strange enthusiastic notions, and taught that the divinity of Christ was instead of a soul to him; that his flesh was pre-existent to his appearance on earth, and that it was sent down from heaven, and conveyed through the Virgin as through a channel; that there were two sons, one born of God, the other of the Virgin; that Jesus Christ was conceived a pure substance, and that afterwards the Word descended into him, and had such operation in him as in the prophets, but was not united to his nature; that it was only by his good works he became great and perfect; that God was crucified; and that Jesus Christ has now no body, &c. &c.

APO'LLO, s. [Lat.] in mythology, the son of Jupiter and Latona, born at Delos; one of the heathen deities, to whom they attributed the art of divination, and the patronage of physic, and is the sun. Said to have killed the serpent Python, because its heat exhales pestilential vapours; represented with long hair, in allusion to the sun-beams. The fable reported of his feeding Admetus's sheep, denotes that all creatures are sustained by his genial warmth; and his killing the Cyclops for forging Jupiter's thunderbolts, his dispersing those pestilential vapours which are fatal to mankind. He is called the Sun in heaven, Bacchus on earth, and Apollo in the infernal regions; and represented with an harp, to shew the harmony of our system; with a buckler, to denote his defending the earth; and with arrows, to signify his power of life and death.

APO'LLYON, a Greek word that signifies the Destroyer, and answers to the Hebrew Abaddon. It is used by St. John in the Revelation, chap. ix. 11.

APOLOGE'TICAL, a. [from apologeomai to speak in one's defence, Gr.] that is said or written in defence of any person or opinion.

APOLOGE'TICALLY, ad. in the manner of an answer, defence, or apology.

APO'LOGIST, s. the person who writes or speaks in vindication of the sentiments of another; one who endeavours to extenuate the faults of another.

To APO'LOGIZE, v. a. to plead in favour of a person or thing; to defend or excuse a person or thing.

A'POLOGUE, (ápológ) s. [apologos, Gr.] a story, or fiction, formed to convey some moral and interesting truth to the mind, under the image of beasts, and other irrational animals; a fable.

APO'LOGY, s. [apologia, Gr.] in its primary sense, implies a discourse made by a defendant, to clear himself from a charge of guilt brought against him. At present the term is used to imply rather an excuse than a vindication; and an extenuation of a fault rather than a proof of innocence.

APOMECO'METRY, s. [from apo from, mekos length, and metreo to measure, Gr.] the art of measuring things at a distance, to know how far they are from us.

APONEURO'SIS, s. [from apo from, and neuron a nerve, Gr.] the expansion of a nerve or tendon into a membrane; the cutting off a nerve.

APOPHLE'GMATISM, s. [from apo and phlegma, Gr.] a remedy which evacuates serous, or phlegmatic humours by the nostrils.

A'POPHTHEGM, (ápothem) s. apothegma, Gr.] a sententious expression uttered without deliberation; or a sentence containing some important truth, moral or divine, which bursts unexpectedly from the speaker.

APO'PHYSIS, s. in anatomy, a protuberance of bone, or a part eminent and jutting out beyond the rest.

APOPLE'CTIC, or APOPLE'CTICAL, a. that is of the nature of an apoplexy.

A'POPLEXED, a. affected or seized with an apoplexy.

A'POPLEXY, s. [from apoplesso to strike, Gr.] a sudden deprivation of all sensation, while a strong pulse remains, with a deep respiration attended with a stestor, and the appearance of a profound sleep. It is caused generally by repletion, the head being naturally large, and the neck short; the persons being corpulent and fat, or of a plethoric habit of body, and redundant in pituitous humours.

APOSIOPE'SIS, s. [from apo from, and siopao to be silent, Gr.] a form of speech by which the speaker through some affection, as sorrow, bashfulness, fear, anger, or vehemency, breaks off his speech before it be all ended.

APOSTASY, s. [apostasis, Gr.] the abandoning and renouncing a religion one has before professed; used always in a bad sense.

APOSTATE, s. [apostates, Gr.] one who has forsaken and renounced the religion or principles he formerly professed.

To APOSTATIZE, v. a. to abandon or renounce one's religion.

To APOSTEMATE, v. n. to turn to an aposteme; to form an abscess; to collect and swell with corrupt matter.

APOSTEMATION, s. in surgery, the forming an abscess.

APOSTEME, or APOSTUME, s. [Gr.] a hollow swelling filled with purulent or corrupt matter; an abscess.

APOSTLE, s. [from apo from, and stella to send, Gr.] in its most limited sense, one who was an attendant and disciple of Christ on earth, and commissioned by him after his resurrection to preach the gospel to the world. In a vaguer sense, the first or most successful preacher of the gospel in any country.

APOSTLESHIP, s. the dignity or office of an apostle, which consisted in preaching the gospel, baptizing, working miracles, and ordaining ministers.

APOSTOLIC, or APOSTOLICAL, a. that was taught or authorized by the apostles.

APOSTOLICALLY, ad. after the manner of an apostle.

APOSTOLICI, several sects of Christians who have arisen in different ages, and made profession of celibacy, poverty, and abstaining from wine and flesh.

APOSTROPHE, s. [from apo from, and stepha to turn, Gr.] in rhetoric, a figure by which the orator, in the vehemence of his passion, turns himself on all sides, and applies to the living and dead, to angels and men, rocks, groves, &c. Thus Milton, in Paradise Lost,

O woods, O fountains, hillocks, dales, and bowers,
With other echo, &c.

In grammar, it is a comma placed over a letter, to shew that the word is contracted by the cutting off a vowel; as esteem'd for esteemed, th' employment for the employment. It is also a sign of the possessive case of a noun.

To APOSTROPHIZE, v. a. to interrupt the head of a discourse, in order to introduce some foreign subject.

APOTHECARY, s. [from apotheca, Lat.] one who practises the art of pharmacy, prepares and sells medicines. In London, the apothecaries are one of the city companies, and by an act which was made perpetual, 9 Geo. I. are exempted from serving on juries, or in ward or parish offices. They are obliged to make up their medicines according to the formulas prescribed in the College Dispensatory, and are liable to have their shops visited by the censors of the College, who are empowered to destroy such medicines as they think not good.

APOTHEOSIS, s. [Gr.] deification, a ceremony by which the ancient Romans complimented their emperors and great men after their death. It is thus described; after the body of the deceased had been burnt with the usual solemnities, an image of wax representing him was placed on an ivory couch, where it lay for seven days, was visited by the senate, and ladies of the highest quality, in mourning, and then the young senators and knights bore the bed of state through the Via Sacra to the old Forum, and from thence to the Campus Martius, where it was deposited upon an edifice of a pyramidical form. The bed being thus placed amidst a quantity of spices, and other combustibles, and the knights having made a procession in solemn measure round the pile, the new emperor, with a torch in his hand, set fire to it; whilst an eagle, let fly from the top of the building, and mounting in the air with a fire-brand, was supposed to convey the soul of the deceased to heaven, and from that time he was ranked among the gods.

APOTOME, s. [from apotemno to cut off, Gr.] in mathematics, the difference between a rational line, and one only commensurable in power to the whole line. In music, the remaining part of an entire tone, after a greater semi-tone has been taken from it. Its proportion in numbers is that of 2048 to 2187.

APOZEM, s. [from apo from, and zeo to boil, Gr.] in pharmacy, a medicine made by boiling roots, plants, &c. in water, called likewise a decoction.

To APPAL, (appáull) v. n. [appalir, Fr.] to strike with terror or fear; to affright; to damp a person's courage; to dishearten, including, in its secondary idea, the sudden appearance of some terrible object.

APPALEMENT, (appáullment) s. a sudden affright, which robs a person of his courage, and renders him inactive.

APPARATUS, s. [Lat.] a collection of instruments necessary to accomplish any design, and applied to the tools of a trade; the instruments used in philosophical experiments; the bandages, &c. of a surgeon; the furniture of a house; the ammunition for war.

APPAREL, s. [it has no plural; appareil, Fr.] the clothing wore for ornament or decency; dress. Figuratively, appearance, or ornament.

To APPAREL, v. a. to clothe; to dress; to adorn; to set out or embellish.

APPARENT, part. [apparent, Fr.] applied to truth, plain and indubitable. Applied to shape or form, seeming, in opposition to real. Applied to actions, or qualities, visible; manifest or known, opposed to secret. Apparent time, in astronomy, is that shewn by a true sun-dial.

APPARENTLY, ad. plainly; evidently; manifestly.

APPARITION, s. [apparitio, Lat.] the appearance of a thing, so as to become visible to the eyes, or sensible to the mind; a visible object; a spectre; a ghost, which is the most common acceptation at present. In astronomy, a star's becoming visible, which before was below the horizon.

APPARITORS, s. [from apparco to appear, Lat.] messengers who cite men to appear in the spiritual courts; the beadle who carries the mace, &c. before the masters in our universities.

To APPEACH, (appéoch) v. a. to accuse; to censure.

APPEACHMENT, (appéachment) s. an information made against a person; an accusation.

To APPEAL, (appeél) v. a. [appello, Lat.] to transfer a cause or dispute from one to another.

APPEAL, (appéel) s. the removal of a cause from an inferior to a superior court or judge, when a person thinks the inferior has not done him justice. Also a call upon any as witness. In ecclesiastical causes, if an appeal is brought before a bishop, it may be removed to the archbishop; if before the archdeacon, to the court of arches, and thence to the archbishop, and from thence to chancery. Appeal also means, a private accusation of a murderer by one who held interest in the murdered party, as his wife, or son, or of any felon by one of his accomplices in the fact.

APPEALER, (appéeler) s. one who makes an appeal.

To APPEAR, (appeér) v. n. [appareo, Lat.] to become an object of sight, or visible to the eye; to make its appearance, like a spirit or ghost; to be in the presence of another, so as to be seen by him; to answer a summons by attending a court of justice.

APPEARANCE, (appeérance) s. the exterior surface of a thing, or that which immediately strikes the senses or imagination, which, on a nearer inspection, may appear in a different light. In law, it signifies a defendant's filing common, or giving special bail, or any process issued out of a court of judicature. In perspective, it denotes, the projection of a figure or body on the perspective plane. In optics, direct appearance is the sight of an object by direct rays, without refraction or reflection. In astronomy, it imports the same as phenomena or phases: and in physiology, the same as phasmata. See those articles.

APPEASABLE, (appéezable) a. that may have the violence of passion lessened or softened; that is reconcileable.

To APPEASE, (appéeze) v. a. [appaiser, Fr.] to bring a person that is angry to a calm and even temper; to pacify; to allay the ravings of a disordered mind. Figuratively, to quiet any noise, outrage, or violence; beautifully applied to inanimate things.

APPE'ASEMENT, (appeézement) s. a state of reconciliation; a state of peace and calmness.

APPE'ASER, (appeézer) s. one who prevails on another to stifle his anger; or brings about a reconciliation between parties.

APPE'LLANT, s. [from appello, Lat.] in law, the party who brings an appeal against another; one who appeals from a lower to a higher court.

APPELLATION, s. [appellatio, Lat.] the name, dignity, or title, by which one man is distinguished from another.

APPE'LLATIVE, s. [appellativum, Lat.] in grammar, applied to those words which stand for universal ideas, or a whole rank of beings, whether general or special, as man, horse, or dog; and stand opposed to proper names, which belong to one only, as, Thomas, Robert, Charles.

APPE'LLATIVELY, ad. after the manner of nouns appellative.

APPE'LLATORY, a. that contains an appeal.

APPELLEE', s. the person against whom an appeal is brought.

To APPE'ND, v. a. [appendo, Lat.] to hang on another; to join something as an additional, not as a principal part.

APPENDAGE, s. [Fr.] any thing that being considered as less principal, is annexed or added to the principal.

APPE'NDANT, a. [Fr.] hanging to something else; annexed. In law, any thing that is inheritable, belonging to some more worthy inheritance; as, an advowson, common or court, may be appendant to a manor, land to an office; but not land to land, both being corporeal inheritances.

APPENDICATION, s. any thing which is added as an ornament or conveniency, not as necessary to another.

APPE'NDIX, s. [Lat. its plural appendices] something added or appended to another, not as constituting a necessary part of it, but only as an embellishment or convenience. Applied to action, concurrent circumstances. Applied to books, a kind of supplement, or an addition, in order to supply some omissions, and render them complete.

To APPERTAI'N, v. n. [appartevir, Fr.] to belong to as of right; to belong to by nature or appointment.

APPERTAINMENT, s. that which relates, belongs to, or is a property of, any rank or dignity.

APPE'RTENANCE, s. [appartenance, Fr.] that which belongs or relates to another thing.

APPE'RTINENT, a. that is requisite, or has a relation to.

APPERTIBILITY, s. the quality which renders a thing the object of desire.

APPETITE, s. [appetitus, Lat.] a desire of enjoying something under the appearance of sensible good; a propensity to an object on account of the good it is imagined to possess; a violent longing after any thing.

APPETITE, a. that desires; that has the power of desiring.

To APPLAU'D, v. a. [applaudo, Lat.] to testify one's approbation by clapping of hands; to praise or shew esteem for a person's merits.

APPLAU'DER, s. one who publicly shews his approbation; or highly commends or praises the merits of another.

APPLAU'SE, (applâze) s. [applausus, Lat.] approbation expressed with all the sentiments of turbulent joy; praise bestowed on merit by public and private testimonies of approbation and rapture.

A'PPLE, s. [appel, Sax.] any kind of large fruit of a round form, but appropriated at present to that of the apple-tree. Apple of the eye, see PUPIL.

A'PPLEBY, the assize town of Westmoreland, pleasantly seated on the river Eden, by which it is almost surrounded. It was formerly a Roman station, named Aballaba; and, from the old English statutes, it appears, that parliaments have been holden here. It is 10 miles S. E. of Penrith, and 266 N. W. of London. Market on Monday.

APPLIANCE, s. the act whereby one thing is applied to another; or the thing applied. Application is the word now used.

APPLICABILITY, s. the quality of being fit to be applied to something.

A'PPLICABLE, a. [from applico, Lat.] that is agreeable, suits, or may be affirmed of a thing.

A'PPLICABLY, ad. in such a manner as to suit, agree with, or be conformable to, and consequently may be affirmed of, or applied to, any thing.

A'PPLICATE, s. in mathematics. See ORDINATE.

APPLICATION, s. [applicatio, Lat.] the act of applying one thing to another, either by making them touch, or bringing them nearer to each other. Intenseness of thought or study. The employment of a mean to produce a particular end; the address, suit, or request of a person.

A'PPLICATIVE, a. that applies or makes the application.

A'PPLICATORY, a. that exerts the art of applying.

To APPLY', v. a. [applico, Lat.] to put one thing to another; to lay remedies or emplasters on a wound; to use as relating or conformable to any person or thing; to employ; to put to a certain use; to use as a means to some end; to fix the mind or attention upon any particular object; to study; to have recourse to; to work upon; to address as a petitioner. In mathematics, to transfer a given line into any figure, particularly a circle; to fit quantities whose areas are equal, but figures different.

APPOGIATURA, a. in music, a small note inserted by the practical musician, between two others, at some distance.

To APPOI'NT, v. a. [appointer, Fr.] to authorize one person to act for another; to fix any thing; to set a person a task; to equip, to furnish a person in all points.

APPOINTER, s. he who settles or fixes any time, thing, or place.

APPOI'NTMENT, s. [appointement, Fr.] a thing settled between two or more; an agreement to perform something future.

To APPO'RTION, v. a. [from portio, Lat.] to allot or divide into two or more parts; to set out in just proportions.

APPO'RTIONMENT, s. a dividing into portions. In law, the division of a rent into parts, in the same manner as the land out of which it issues is divided. Thus, if a person leases three acres of land, and afterwards grants away one acre thereof to another, the rent shall be apportioned between them.

To APPO'SE, (appóse) v. a. [appono, Lat.] used by Chaucer to imply an examination of a scholar, by embarrassing or puzzling him with questions. For this we now use the word pose, which is a contraction of this word.

APPO'SER, s. an examiner. In the court of exchequer there is an officer called the foreign apposer.

A'PPOSITE, a. [appositus, Lat.] proper, fit, suitable, well adapted to the purpose for which it was intended. Applied to time, seasonable, or conformable. Applied to opinions or sentiments, proper, reasonable, or agreeable to the subject which they treat of.

A'PPOSITELY, ad. fitly, suitably, conformably, properly.

A'PPOSITENESS, s. fitness; propriety; suitableness.

APPOSI'TION, s. [appositio, Lat.] a comparing or laying things one by another. In grammar, the placing two or more substantives together, in the same case, without any copulative conjunction between them; as, her beauty has captivated my eyes, my heart, my reason, my understanding, my whole soul. Among naturalists, it is the same with accretion, or the external addition of matter to a subject.

To APPRAI'SE, (appráize) v. a. [apprécier, Fr.] to rate, value, or set a price on goods intended for sale.

APPRAISER, (appráizer) s. one who sets a value upon goods, who is sworn to do justice between party and party; whence he is termed a sworn appraiser, and is obliged to take the goods at the price which he appraises them at, provided no other will purchase them at that rate.

To APPRE'CIATE, v. a. to value, to estimate.

To APPREHEND, v. a. [apprehendo, Lat.] to lay hold on; to seize a person as a malefactor, in order to bring him to justice; to think on with some degree of anxiety or terror. Applied to the operations of the mind, to conceive superficially; to have an imperfect or inadequate idea of a thing.

APPREHE'NDER, s. one who conceives a thing imperfectly; one who seizes a malefactor in order to bring him to justice; a conceiver; a thinker.

APPREHE'NSIBLE, a. [apprehensibilis, Lat.] that may be apprehended or conceived, though not comprehended.

APPREHE'NSION, s. [apprehensio, Lat.] among logicians, the mere contemplation of things, without affirming or denying any thing concerning them; the faculty by which we perceive those ideas which are present to the mind; fear or anxiety; suspicion of something future. In law, the seizing of a malefactor, or taking him into custody, in order to bring him to justice.

APPREHE'NSIVE, a. that is quick to understand, or conceive; fearful, or suspicious. SYNON. Want of courage makes us fear; doubt of success makes us apprehensive; distrust of strength makes us dread; imagination itself will often make us afraid.

APPREHE'NSIVELY, ad. after the manner in which the apprehension exercises itself, with respect to its ideas.

APPRE'NTICE, s. [apprenti, Fr.] a young person bound by indenture to some tradesman, in order to be instructed in a mystery or trade. By the laws of England, a master may be indicted for not providing for, or for turning away, his apprentice: and upon complaint from a master, that he neglects his duty, an apprentice may be committed to Bridewell, or be bound over to the sessions. Apprentices may be bound to husbandmen, or even to gentlemen and clergymen, who, as well as tradesmen, are compellable to take the children of the poor, under a penalty of 10*l*. And the churchwardens and overseers, with the consent of two justices, may bind them till the age of 21 years. Justices may compel certain persons under age to be bound apprentices, and on refusal may commit them. Apprentices may be discharged on reasonable cause, either at their own request or that of their masters. If any, whose premium has been less than ten pounds, run away from their masters, they are compellable to serve out the time of absence, or give satisfaction for it, any period within seven years after the expiration of the original contract. Indentures are to be stamped, and are chargeable with several duties by act of parliament.

To APPRE'NTICE, v. a. to bind a person for a certain number of years to one who is to teach him his trade, &c.

APPRE'NTICESHIP, s. the time for which a person is bound to continue with another, in order to learn and practise his trade; the office of an apprentice.

To APPRI'ZE, v. a. [from appris, Fr.] to give a person notice of what he is a stranger to.

To APPRO'ACH, (in the pronunciation the a is dropt, and the o sounded long) v. n. to shorten the distance between objects; to draw nearer, or go towards. Applied to time, to be nearer its completion; to be nearer at hand. Figuratively, to come near; to resemble; to bring nearer to; to lessen the distance between objects.

APPRO'ACH, s. the act of coming nearer to any object; access; means used to come nearer to a distant object. In fortification, used in the plural, works thrown up by the besiegers, in order to advance nearer to the place besieged. Lines of approach, are trenches cut in the ground, the earth of which is thrown up in the form of a parapet, on the side towards the enemy, in order to approach the covert way, without being exposed to the cannon of the besieged. In mathematics, the curve of equable approach, is that wherein a body descending by the sole power of gravity, shall approach the earth equally in equal times.

APPRO'ACHER, s. that person who comes nearer to another, or advances towards a distant object.

APPRO'ACHMENT, s. the act whereby the object draws nearer to another.

APPROBA'TION, s. [approbatio, Lat.] the acknowledging a thing to be worthy of assent, and of esteem, either by a tacit consent or public confession; the act of approving, liking, or esteeming any thing; the confirmation or support of a thing.

To APPRO'PRIATE, v. a. [appropero, Lat.] to quicken a thing, with respect to motion; to hasten action, applied to the time in which it is expected.

To APPROPI'NQUE, (appropink) v. n. [appropinquo, Lat.] to draw near to. Not in use.

APPRO'PRIABLE, a. that may be confined or restrained to something particular.

To APPRO'PRIATE, v. a. [approprier, Fr.] to dedicate, or confine to a particular use; to claim an exclusive right to. In law, to annex as a property.

APPRO'PRIATE, a. peculiar; confined, restrained, or limited to some peculiar sense or use.

APPROPRIA'TION, s. applied to things, the application of them to some peculiar use. Applied to qualities, the claiming as belonging to one's self, in an extraordinary if not exclusive manner. Applied to words, the restraining them to a particular sense, or confining them to signify a particular idea. In law, the annexing a benefice to the proper and perpetual use of some religious house.

APPRO'PRIATOR, s. one who is possessed of an appropriated benefice.

To APPRO'VE, (approôve) v. a. [approuver, Fr.] to be pleased with; to be delighted with from a conviction of merit; to make worthy of approbation.

APPRO'VEABLE, (approôveable) a. applied to that which, on account of its merits, appears worthy of approbation.

APPRO'VEMENT, (approôvement) s. consent, including liking or approbation.

APPRO'VER, (approôver) s. one who, confessing himself guilty of a felony, accuses one or more of his accomplices. Approvers also signify bailiffs or lords in their franchises, sheriffs, and likewise such persons as have the letting the king's demesnes in small manors.

APPRO'XIMATE, a. [from ad and proximus, Lat.] near; that approaches near to.

APPROXIMA'TION, s. the coming or approaching near to any thing. In arithmetic, a continual approach to a root or quantity sought, without being able ever to arrive at it exactly.

A'PRICOT, or APRICOCK, s. [from apricus, Lat.] a kind of wall-fruit.

APPU'LSE, s. [appulsus, Lat.] the act of striking against any thing. In astronomy, applied to the moon when she approaches any planet or fixed star, so as to seem to touch or strike against it. If a very small portion of apparent space is between the two bodies at their nearest approach, it is called a near appulse.

A'PRIL, s. the fourth calendar month in the year; but the second, according to the computation of astronomers. It contains thirty days. The word is derived from aperio, to open; because the earth in this month begins to open her bosom for the production of vegetables. In this month the sun travels through the sign Taurus.

A'PRON, s. [from aforan, Sax.] a part of dress consisting of cloth, &c. which hangs from the middle downwards, worn by the ladies for ornament, by artificers to keep their clothes clean. In a goose, it signifies the fat skin which covers the belly. In gunnery, a piece of lead which covers the touch hole of a great gun.

A'PRON-MAN, s. a man who wears an apron; a mechanic: a word of reproach.

A'PSIS, s. [plural apsides, Gr.] in astronomy, those two points in the orbits of the planets, or satellites, in which they are at their greatest and least distance from the sun or primary planet. The higher apsis of the planets is more particularly denominated aphelion, and the lower perihelion. The imaginary line connecting these two points is called the line of the apsides.

APT, a. [aptus, Lat.] fit; a relative term, implying the suitableness of a thing to procure some end; that has a tendency to. Ready or quick; applied to the mind.

A'PTITUDE, s. [aptitude, Fr.] fitness to bring about the desired end; tendency.

APTLY, ad. with great propriety; justly, or pertinently; readily, or quickly.

APTNESS, s. a relative term, implying the suitableness of any means to procure its end. Applied to bodies, tendency; to minds, disposition or inclination; to the understanding, quickness, facility, or ease in conceiving.

A'PUS, s. the Indian bird, or bird of paradise; in astronomy, a constellation near the south pole.

A'PYROUS, a. [from a, not, and pyr, fire, Gr.] in chymistry, that which will sustain the most violent heat, without any sensible alteration. A diamond was formerly believed to be apyrous.

A'QUA, s. [Lat.] water. Aqua fortis, or strong water, a corrosive liquor, made by distilling purified nitre with calcined vitriol, or rectified oil of vitriol, in a strong heat. Aqua marina, aqua marine, in natural history, a precious stone, which takes its name from its sea-green colour. Aqua mirabilis, or the wonderful water, is distilled from spices, infused in spirits of wine, and is a very good cordial. Aqua regia, the royal water, a strong corrosive spirit, which dissolves gold, and is composed of spirit of nitre and spirit of sea-salt. Aqua vitæ, or water of life, in a general sense, brandy or spirit of wine; but in a more confined sense, restrained to that spirit which is drawn from malt; the other term brandy being appropriated to that which is drawn from wine only.

AQUA'RIANS, a sect towards the close of the second century, who used water in the sacrament instead of wine.

AQUA'RIUS, s. [Lat.] in astronomy, a constellation that makes one of the 12 signs in the ecliptic, which the sun enters on the 20th day of January, and derives its name from the supposed quantity of rain which falls while the sun is in it; in allusion to which, it is described in the zodiac on globes, in the form of a man inclining on an urn flowing with water.

AQUA'TIC, or AQUA'TICK, a. [aquaticus, Lat.] applied to animals or vegetables which live and grow in the water.

AQUATI'NTA, s. a method of etching on copper, lately invented, and by which a soft and beautiful effect is produced, resembling a fine drawing in water-colours or Indian ink. It is a cheap mode of engraving, but it is kept a secret by those who practise it.

A'QUEDUCT, or A'QUÆDUCT, s. [aquæductus, Lat.] a channel formed of stone, bricks, or timber, to convey water from one place to another. In anatomy, the bony passage of the drum that reaches from the ear to the palate.

A'QUEOUS, a. [aqueus, Lat.] watery. Aqueous humour; see EYE.

AQUI'LA, the eagle; in astronomy, a constellation of the northern hemisphere, usually joined with Antinous.

A'QUILINE, a. [aquilinus, Lat.] resembling an eagle, Applied to the nose, hooked, or like an eagle's beak.

AQUO'SE, a. [aquosus, Lat.] watery; abounding with particles of water.

AQUO'SITY, s. waterishness; or the quality so named from its abounding with particles of water.

ARA, the altar; in astronomy, a southern constellation not visible in our hemisphere.

A'RABESQUE, or A'RABESK, a. after the manner of the Arabians; generally applied to a kind of paintings or architectural ornaments, which consist of imaginary objects.

ARA'BIA, a country of Asia, on the S. W. It may be accounted a peninsula, being joined on the N. to Syria; bounded on the N. E. by the river Euphrates, which divides it from Diarbeck, or Diarbekar, the ancient Mesopotamia; on the E. by the Gulfs of Persia and Ormus; on the S. by the Indian Ocean; and on the W. by the Red Sea, which separates it from Africa. It lies between 12 and 32 degrees N. latitude, and between 35 and nearly 60. E. lon. extending 1430 miles in length, and 1200 in breadth. It is divided by Europeans, into Petrea, Deserta, and Felix; or the Stony, the Desert, and the Happy. Arabia Petrea is the smallest of the three, and towards the N. very mountainous, having few inhabitants, because of its barrenness. This is the wilderness through which the children of Israel passed in their journeying from Egypt to Canaan. In Arabia Deserta, the plains of sand are so immense, that travellers, in crossing them, are obliged to make use of the mariner's compass, as if at sea; and the tempests are not less terrible here than on the ocean. The air is excessively hot; springs or streams are scarcely to be met with; a pestilential vapour sometimes passes along, which instantly kills those who happen to inhale it; and when the wind rises high, the desert assumes the appearance of the most rough and tempestuous sea. The sand is lifted up from its bed by the force of the winds, and driven along like waves, clouds, and rain; every thing that falls in its way is overwhelmed, and whole caravans of travellers, with their horses and camels, find one common grave in the deluge of sand. M. de Pages observes, that, in traversing the whole extent of Arabia Deserta, he saw "only 4 rabbits, 5 or 6 rats, 3 large, and 7 or 8 small birds." "Here, indeed, all our ideas of deserts, as found in the poetical language of oriental tales, fall short of the truth! A stillness, like the silence of night, the faint remains of a breeze still glowing with the fervour of the meridian sun, but sinking with his orb; around an unbounded waste, covered with dark gray sand, resembling the ashes of a furnace, and according with the raging heat of those regions; above, the vast canopy of heaven, across whose pale atmosphere no other object is seen but the reddish disk of the sun dipt in the horizon, are circumstances which conspire to impress the mind of a spectator with an unpleasing melancholy." Along the banks of the Euphrates, however, where the land is fertilized, there are great flocks of sheep, and large herds of cattle and camels. Ostriches also are found there in great numbers. The produce of Arabia Felix, which is by far the most considerable of the three provinces, is myrrh, aloes, cassia, frankincense, spikenard, manna, and other costly gums; cinnamon, dates, oranges, lemons, pomegranates, figs, and other fruits; honey and wax in plenty; and immense quantities of coffee. In a country so various, and of such vast extent, we may expect the manners of the inhabitants to vary. Those in the fertile parts have long been domesticated; to them we are indebted for many valuable discoveries; they have been our preceptors in chymistry and mathematical science; they first introduced into Europe the invention of the ten arithmetical figures, and taught us their use. On the other hand, the Arabs in the Desert have no houses, but tents; they lead wandering lives, removing from place to place, partly for the sake of pasture, and partly to lie in wait for the caravans, which they often rob, as they travel over the Desert from Bussorah to Aleppo, and from Egypt to Mecca, the place of Mahomet's nativity.

A'RABIC, s. the tongue of the Arabians, a branch of the Hebrew. Arabic is likewise applied to a gum, which distils from a thorny plant in Arabia.

A'RABIC, a. that belongs to, or is used in Arabia. Arabic characters, are the figures which we make use of at present in arithmetic.

A'RABISM, s. [arabismus, Lat.] a method of expression or idiom, peculiar to the Arabs.

A'RABLE, a. [from aro, Lat.] that is fit for ploughing, and to produce corn.

A'RAC, or A'RRAC, (rack) s. an excellent spirituous liquor, made by the Chinese from cocoa, rice, or sugar; the former of which is the best; there are two sorts imported into England, viz. the Goa and Batavia.

ARA'CAN, a fertile, but not populous country of Asia, on N. E. coast of the Bay of Bengal; subject to its own king. Its capital is of its own name, and is as large as Amsterdam. His palace is very large, and contains it is said 7 idols of cast gold two inches thick, each of a man's height, and covered with diamonds, rubies, and other precious stones; and in his stables he has horses, elephants, lions, tigers, &c. They have only two seasons, the rainy and the fair; the rainy season is, while the sun is on the N. side of the line, or during our spring and summer months; the rest of the year is their summer. Elephants, buffaloes, and tigers are numerous here. The articles of commerce are timber, lead, tin, and elephants' teeth; and sometimes traders meet with diamonds, rubies, and other precious stones. The inhabitants are idolatrous; polygamy is permitted among them: admiring broad and flat foreheads, they bind leaden plates on their children's foreheads, as soon as they are born, and accounting long ears as a beauty, they so load them with rings, as to make them at least hang down to their shoulders.

ARÆOMETER, s. [from araios rare, and metreo to measure, Gr.] an instrument used to discover the gravity of fluids.

ARÆOTICS, s. [from araioo to rarefy, Gr.] medicines which rarefy or thin the blood.

ARAIGNEE, s. [Fr.] in fortification, a branch, return, or gallery of a mine.

ARAL, a lake in Siberia, about 200 miles distant from the Caspian sea about 250 miles long, and in some places 150 broad.

ARANEOUS, a. [from aranea, Lat.] that resembles a cobweb.

ARARAT, the name anciently given to part of Mount Caucasus in Armenia, between the Black and Caspian seas, where Noah's ark is said to have rested after the flood.

ARBITER, s. [Lat.] a person chosen by mutual consent between two or more parties, to decide the subject of their disagreement; one who is invested with a power to decide any difference.

ARBITRABLE, a. [from arbitror, Lat.] arbitrary, voluntary; determined purely by the will, without regard to any other motives.

ARBITRAMENT, s. [from arbitror, Lat.] choice; or the exercise of the will in choosing or assenting to any thing.

ARBITRARILY, ad. in such a manner as implies a bare exertion of the will, without any regard to motives or consequences; in a despotic, tyrannical, or absolute manner.

ARBITRARIOUS, a. [arbitrarius, Lat.] depending entirely on the will; precarious.

ARBITRARIOUSLY, ad. arbitrarily; according to the mere and obstinate determination of the will.

ARBITRARY, a. [arbitrarius, Lat.] not restrained or determined by any law, or reasons; capricious, positive, despotic, and dogmatic.

To ARBITRATE, v. a. [arbitror, Lat.] to decide or determine a difference; to judge of. Used neuterly, to give judgment or pronounce sentence.

ARBITRATION, s. [from arbitror, Lat.] the determination of a cause by a judge chosen by the parties contending.

ARBITRATOR, s. [Lat.] a person chosen by contending parties to determine a difference between them; a determiner.

ARBITREMENT, s. [from arbitror, Lat.] decision or determination pronounced by an umpire; a compromise.

ARBOR, s. [Lat.] in botany, a tree. In mechanics, that part of a machine which supports the rest; likewise the spindle or axis on which a machine turns.

ARBORIST, s. [arboriste, Fr.] a naturalist, who applies himself peculiarly to study the nature and cultivation of trees.

ARBOUR, s. [from arbor, Lat.] a kind of a shady bower, or cabin formed of the branches of trees, and contrived so as to admit the air and keep off the sun and rain.

ARBURTHIE, a district in the shire of Kincardin or Mearns, Scotland.

ARC, s. [arcus, Lat.] a segment, or part of a circle.

ARCADE, s. [Fr.] a continued arch, or walk, consisting of several arches united together.

ARCANUM, s. [Lat. in the plural arcana] a secret; generally applied to the nostrum of a quack.

ARCH, s. [arcus, Lat.] the sky. In mathematics, part of any curve line, whether it be ellipsis, circle, &c. Arch, in architecture, is a vault or concave building, bent in the form of an arch or curve, and is divided into circular, elliptical, and straight. Circular arches, are either such as are exactly a semicircle, or whose centre is in the middle of a line drawn from one foot to the other, which are called semicircular arches. Elliptical arches, or those which consist of a semi-ellipsis, and were formerly used instead of mantle-trees in chimnies. Straight arches, have straight edges, both upper and under parallel; but both their ends and joints pointing towards a certain centre. Arch of a bridge, is the vaulted interval between its piers. A triumphal arch, is a gate built with stone, &c. and richly ornamented with trophies, &c.

To ARCH, v. a. [from arcus, Lat.] to build or form into arches; to cover with arches.

ARCH, a. [from archos chief, Gr.] used in composition, to express something of the first rank or order, applied to dignity, as, archbishop: but something superlative, applied to quality, as an arch-heretic, and is pronounced soft before a consonant, like ch in chaise; but hard before a vowel, like the letter k, as if the k was dropped. It sometimes implies a person endued with a great deal of low cunning; triflingly mischievous.

ARCHAIOLOGY, (arkaiology) s. [from archaios ancient, and logos a discourse, Gr.] a discourse on antiquity; or a treatise on the opinions, &c. of the ancients.

ARCHANGEL, a sea-port of Russia, seated on the Dwina, 4 miles from the White Sea, which is frozen up for three months in the winter, but the rest of the year is open. The passage to it, through the N. Sea was first discovered by Capt. Richard Lane, an Englishman, in 1533, his ship being separated from the fleet of Sir Hugh Willoughby, then on an expedition to discover a NE. passage to China. Sir Hugh, with 70 men perished in Lapland; Lane wintered here. On the English first entering the White sea, they found a fishing boat, the people in which, having never seen a ship before, fled before them; but on a nearer approach, fell at their feet, and though they could hardly be persuaded to sell any thing without their princes' leave, gave them plenty of victuals for nothing. The English, from Elizabeth's time, had the exclusive privilege of trading here, and in the other northern ports of Russia, from Wardhus to the river Oby, till the death of Charles I. when the czar was so exasperated at their conduct, that he wholly deprived them of it; and since that time it has been open to all nations. The trade here is yet considerable, though it is greatly diminished since the building of Petersburg, from which it is distant 400 miles NE. Lat. 64. 34. N. lon. 39. 0. E.

ARCHANGEL, (arkángel) s. [archangelus, Lat.] one of the superior order of angels. In botany, the deadnettle.

ARCHBISHOP, s. the chief or metropolitan bishop, who has several suffragans under him. This title was first introduced in the East, about the year 340, but then was only honorary, and given to some bishops of great cities. England is divided between two, him of Canterbury, and him of York, who are called primates and metropolitans. Canterbury is the first peer of England, and, next to the royal family, has precedence of all dukes and great officers of the crown. The archbishop of York has the same power in his province with that of Canterbury, has precedence of all dukes not of the royal blood, and all officers of state except the lord high chancellor.

ARCHBISHOPRIC, s. the state or jurisdiction of an archbishop

ARCHBUTLER, s. one of the great officers of the late German empire, who presented the cup to the emperor on solemn occasions. This office belonged to the king of Bohemia.

ARCHCHAMBERLAIN, s. an officer of the late German empire, not unlike the great chamberlain in England.

ARCHCHANCELLOR, s. in ancient times, presided over the secretaries of the court under the two first races of the kings of France; and when their territories were divided into Germany, Italy, and Arles, there were three archchancellors appointed.

ARCHCHANTER, s. the president or chief chanter of a church.

ARCHDE'ACON, s. [archidiaconus, Lat.] a priest vested with authority or jurisdiction over the clergy and laity, next to the bishop, either through the whole diocese or only a part of it. There are sixty in England, who visit every two years in three, wherein they inquire into the reparations and moveables belonging to churches, reform abuses, suspend, excommunicate, in some places prove wills, and induct all clerks into benefices within their respective jurisdictions.

ARCHDE'ACONRY, s. the jurisdiction, office, or province of an archdeacon.

ARCHDE'ACONSHIP, s. the office or dignity of an archdeacon.

ARCHDU'CHESS, s. [arch and duchesse, Fr.] the title of the sister or daughter of an archduke.

ARCHDU'KE, s. [archidux, Lat.] a duke invested with some greater privilege or authority than others.

A'RCHE, (árkee) s. [Gr.] in medicine, the beginning, first period, or first attack of a disease.

A'RCHED, part. crooked, or bent in the form of an arch.

A'RCHER, s. [archer, Fr.] one who shoots with a bow; or one who uses a bow in battle.

A'RCHERY, s. the art or exercise of shooting with a bow. The art of an archer.

A'RCHES COURT, s. [so called from Bow-church, in London, where it was kept; which likewise received its name from its top being raised upon pillars, built bow or archwise] the chief and most ancient consistory or court of the archbishop of Canterbury, for debating spiritual causes. The judge of the court is called the dean of the arches.

A'RCHETYPE, (árketype) s. [archetypum, Lat.] the original model or pattern of any thing.

A'RCHETYPAL, (árketypal) a. original; that has something which may serve as a pattern to copy from.

ARCHÆ'US, (arkéus) s. a word used by Paracelsus and other chemists to express a principle of motion, the cause of all the visible changes and operations of bodies.

ARCHIDIA'CONAL, (arkidiáconal) a. [from archidiaconus, Lat.] that belongs, or relates to an archdeacon.

ARCHIPELA'GO, s. in geography, a general term, implying a sea interrupted by a great number of islands; more particularly the Ægean sea.

ARCHIEPI'SCOPAL, (arkiepíscopal) a. [from archiepiscopus, Lat.] that belongs to, or is exercised by an archbishop.

A'RCHIL, s. a white moss which grows on the rocks on many parts of the Archipelago, and in the Canary and Cape de Verd islands, and is used in dying.

A'RCHITECT, (árkitect) s. [architectus, Lat.] a person skilled in building; who draws plans and designs, conducts the work, and directs the artificers in carrying it on.

ARCHITE'CTIVE, (arkitective) a. that relates to building or architecture.

ARCHITECTO'NIC, (arkitectónic) a. [Gr.] that has the skill and power of an architect.

A'RCHITECTURE, (árkitecture) s. [architectura, Lat.] the art of building; divided into three branches, civil, military, or naval. The Civil consists in erecting habitations for men, or temples for worship. The Military consists in strengthening and fortifying places, named fortification. Naval architecture is that which teaches the construction of ships or vessels floating on the water, and is named shipbuilding.

A'RCHITRAVE, (árkitrave) s. [from arche the beginning, Gr. and trabs a beam, Lat.] in architecture, the lowest member of the entablature, which lies immediately upon the capital. In timber-building, it is styled the reason-piece, or master-beam. In chimnies, the mantle-piece; and over jambs of doors or windows, the hyperthyron.

A'RCHIVES. (árkivz) s. [archiva, Lat.] the places wherein records or ancient manuscripts are preserved. Figuratively, the records and manuscripts themselves.

A'RCHON, (árkon) s. [Gr.] in antiquity, the chief magistrate of Athens.

ARCH-TRE'ASURER, s. formerly a great officer of the German empire.

A'RCHWISE, ad. in the shape or form of an arch.

A'RCTIC, a. [arktikos, Gr.] northern; lying under, or near the north star. Arctic Circle, a lesser circle of the sphere, parallel to the equinoctial, and 66 deg. 32. min. distant from it towards the north pole. Arctic Pole, the northern pole of the world, both of the heavens and the earth; so named of Arctos, or Bear a cluster or constellation of stars near it.

ARCTURUS, s. in astronomy, one of the fixed stars in the constellation of Bootes. It is mentioned in Job ix. 9. It is above the horizon of London 15h. 50m. 52s. out of every 23h. 56m. 4s.

A'RCUATE, a. [arcuatus, Lat.] bent in the form of an arch.

ARCUA'TION, s. [from arcuo, Lat.] the act of bending any thing; the state of being bent. In surgery, a bending of the bones, which appears in the case of the rickets; the protuberance of the foreparts of the body, with the bending of the bones of the sternum.

A'RDENCY, s. applied to the affections, warmth; applied to study, activity.

A'RDENT, a. [ardens, Lat.] applied to the qualities of body, hot, burning, inflaming; applied to those of the mind, fierce, vehement, violent, passionate, inflamed.

A'RDENTLY, ad. warmly, eagerly, passionately.

A'RDGLASS, now a decayed, but once a principal town of Down, in Ulster. Here is a long range of buildings, in the castle style, called by the inhabitants, the New Works, though they have no tradition of its design or use. Here are also the remains of several other castles, towers, and gates; and within the N. E. point of Ardglass harbour, is a very curious natural cave, with a large entrance on the shore. It is 7 miles N. E. of Down Patrick.

A'RDMEANAGH, a territory of Ross-shire.

A'RDOR, s. [ardor, Lat.] heat, applied to the quality of body; warmth, violence of affection, applied to the mind.

A'RDUOUS, a. [arduus, Lat.] applied to what is both lofty and difficult to ascend. Figuratively, something which is both important, sublime, and difficult to comprehend.

ARE, the third person plural of the verb am, used when we speak of two or more persons.

A'REA, s. [Lat.] the surface contained between any lines or limits. Any surface, such as the floor of a room, the vacant part or stage of an amphitheatre. In geometry, the space contained within the lines bounding it, reckoned in the square part of any measure.

AREFA'CTION, s. [from arefacio, Lat.] the act of making dry, or the state of drying.

ARENA'CEOUS, a. [arenaceus, Lat.] composed of sand; sandy.

ARENA'TION, s. [from arena, Lat.] in medicine, a dry bath, wherein the patient sits with his feet upon hot sand, and has it cast upon different parts of his body.

ARENO'SE, a. [arenosus, Lat.] sandy or abounding with sand.

ARE'NULOUS, a. [from arunela, Lat.] consisting of small sand.

ARE'OLA, s. [Lat.] in anatomy, the coloured circle surrounding the nipple.

AREO'PAGUS, s. a sovereign tribunal at Athens, famous for the justice and impartiality of its decrees, to which the gods themselves are said to have submitted their differences. Authors are divided as to the reason and origin of this name; nor are they more agreed about the number of judges that sat in it; some reckon thirty-one, others fifty-one, and others five hundred. In short, their number seems not to have been fixed, but to have been more or less in different years. At first, this tribunal consisted only of nine persons, who had all discharged the office of archons, had acquitted themselves with honour in that trust, and had likewise given an account of their administration before the Logistæ, and undergone a rigorous examination. Their salary was equal, and paid out of the public treasury; they had three oboli, that is, three half pence for each cause. The Areopagites were judges for life. They always sat in judgment in the open air, and in the night time, that their minds might be the more present and attentive, and that no object of pity or aversion might make any impression upon them; and all the pleadings before them were in the simplest and most naked terms. At first, they took cognizance of criminal causes only; but in course of time their jurisdiction became of great extent.

AREO'TICS, s. [from araiotikos, rarefying, Gr.] medicines that open the pores.

ARE'QUIPA, a populous city of Peru, seated near a dreadful volcano, 200 miles from Lima.

A'RGAL, or A'RGOL, s. the hard lees sticking to the sides of wine vessels, called Tartar.

ARGALI, a species of sheep, which lives wild in Siberia.

A'RGENT, a. [from argentum, Lat.] that resembles silver; silvered. In heraldry, the white colour in the arms of gentry, expressed by engravers by a total omission of lines in a shield.

A'RGIL, s. [argilla, Lat.] the white earth used by the potters in making their white ware.

ARGILLA'CEOUS, a. [argillaceus, Lat.] of the nature of potter's clay.

ARGI'LLOUS, a. [argillosus, Lat.] consisting of clay; of the nature of clay.

A'RGO, navis, or the ship, in astronomy, a large constellation in the southern hemisphere.

A'RGOSY, s. [from Argo, the name of Jason's ship] a large vessel for merchandise.

To A'RGUE, v. n. [arguo, Lat.] to evince the truth or falsehood of any thing by proofs. Figuratively, to persuade; to bring reasons for or against; to plead, to handle; to debate.

A'RGUER. s. one who makes use of reason in order to evince any truth, or raise conviction in the mind of another; a reasoner; a disputer.

A'RGUMENT, s. [argumentum, Lat.] a reason brought to prove or disprove any thing; the subject of any discourse or writing; a concise view of the heads of any discourse. In law, a cause; debate or suit; a controversy. In astronomy, an arch by which we seek another unknown arch, proportional to the first.

ARGUME'NTAL, a. that is formed upon the deductions of reason; belonging to argument; reasoning

ARGUMENTA'TION, s. the evincing the truth or falsehood of any proposition by reasoning; the act or effect of reasoning.

ARGUME'NTATIVE, a. consisting of argument, or the deduction of reason; containing reasons.

ARGU'TE, a. [argutus, Lat.] witty, sharp, subtile.

ARGYLESHIRE, or Inverary, a county of Scotland, bounded on the N. by Inverness-shire, on the E. by the counties of Perth and Dumbarton, on the S. and W. by the Atlantic ocean, by which it is broken into islands and peninsulas, with bays and inlets which afford good harbour for shipping; and the country is well watered with rivers and lakes, which yield abundance of fish. It is not quite 100 miles long, from the Mull of Cantyre to its N. E. extremity; its breadth is unequal, about 30 miles were greatest, and in some places 1 or 2. To the N. W. is a peninsula detached from the rest of the country; it contains the districts of Ardnamurchan, Morven, Sunart, and Ardgowar; the two last remarkable for numerous veins of lead, which, however, are not very productive. The peninsulas of Cantyre and Corvall, are likewise very large. A great part of the country abounds with rocks, frightful precipices, and stupendous mountains, apparently piled one upon another; yet even in the high grounds, the soil, though little fitted for cultivation, affords excellent pasture.

A'RIA, s. [Ital.] in music, an air, a song, a tune, or a lesson.

A'RIANS, s. in Church History, a sect of ancient heretics who denied the three persons in the Trinity to be of the same essence; and affirmed Christ to be a creature; that he was inferior to the Father as to his deity; that he was neither co-eternal nor co-equal with him; also that the Holy Ghost was not God, but a creature of the Son. Their leader Arius, lived at the beginning of the fourth century.

A'RIANISM, s. the principles maintained by the Arians.

A'RID, a. [aridus, Lat.] dry, parched up, withered.

ARI'DITY, s. [ariditas, Lat.] a want of moisture, or dryness. In divinity, a state of insensibility, or want of ardency in devotion.

A'RIES, s. [Lat.] in astronomy, a constellation of fixed stars, the first of the twelve signs of the zodiac, which the sun enters about the 21st of March; hieroglyphically represented by the ram, because it is then the teeming time for that kind of animal.

To ARIETATE, v. n. [arieto, Lat.] to butt; or to attack with the head, like a ram.

ARIETA'TION, s. [from arieto, Lat.] the act of butting like a ram; the attacking with a battering ram

ARIETTA, s. [Ital.] in music, a short air, song, or tune.

ARI'GHT, ad. [riht, Sax.] truly; justly, or consistent with law; properly, or in such a manner as to attain the desired end.

ARIMA'NIUS, the evil deity of the Persians.

ARIOLA'TION, s. [from hariolus, Lat.] soothsaying.

ARIO'SO, s. [Ital.] the movement of a common air, song, or tune.

To ARI'SE, (arize) v. n. [its pret. arose, part. arisen] to ascend; to move upwards from the earth; to get up as from sleep; to change the posture from sitting to standing; to come in view; to become visible; to come out of the grave; to flow or proceed from.

ARISTO'CRACY, s. [from aristos, best, kratco, to govern, Gr.] in politics, a form of government, wherein the supreme power is lodged in the nobility.

ARISTOCRA'TICAL, a. that partakes of aristocracy, or includes a government administered only by nobles.

ARI'THMANCY, s. [from arithmos, a number, and manteia, divination, Gr.] a sort of divination, of foretelling things by numbers.

ARI'THMETIC, s. [from arithmos, number, and metreo, to measure, Gr.] the science of numbers; the art of computation. The fundamental rules or operations of arithmetic, are four, namely, addition, substraction, multiplication, and division; the practise of which is given under their respective heads. Besides which, there are other rules contrived for the facilitating computations of all kinds; as will be seen in the course of this work.

ARITHME'TICAL, a. that is performed by numbers, or agreeable to some rule in arithmetic.

ARITHME'TICALLY, ad. according to the rules of arithmetic; in an arithmetical manner.

ARITHMETI'CIAN, s. a master of the art of numbers.

ARK, s. [from arca, Lat. a chest] a chest, or coffer; applied in scripture to the vehicle in which Moses was exposed to the Nile; the chest wherein the two tables of the covenant, the pot of manna, and Aaron's rod, were kept; but more particularly the vessel built by Noah, to preserve himself, family, and the whole race of terrestrial and aerial animals, from the flood.

A'RKLOW, a neat market town, and sea-port of the county of Wicklow, in Ireland, with a harbour for small vessels. It is 13 miles S. of Wicklow, and 26 of Dublin.

ARLES, a large, handsome and ancient city, in the dept. of the mouths of the Rhone. The adjacent country is very pleasant, and produces good wine, manna, oil, fruits, and vermilion, and the air is excellent, yet the city is not populous. Constantine, the Roman emperor, took great delight in this place, and made it the seat of the empire in Gaul; and here are some remains of their antiquities, of which the amphitheatre and obelisk are most remarkable. It is seated on the Rhone, 12 miles S. E. of Nismes, 35 N. W. of Marseilles, and 430 S. by E. of Paris. Lat. 43. 41. N. lon. 4. 43. E.

ARM, s. [earm, Sax.] a limb of the human body, reaching from the shoulder to the hand. Anatomists divide the arm into two parts, calling only that part the arm which is included between the shoulder and the elbow; the rest, from the elbow to the wrist, being taken into the greater hand, is called the fore-arm. The arm, in this acceptation, has only one large bone, called the os humeri, or the shoulder-bone. The other part consists of two bones, namely, the radius and cubitus, or ulna. In geography, it denotes a branch of the sea, or a river. It is also figuratively used for power; as, the secular arm. Likewise, for a large branch or bough of a tree.

To ARM, v. a. [armo, Lat.] to furnish with weapons; to cap, case, or cover with metal, applied to the loadstone, or the shoes of a horse.

To ARM, v. n. to take arms; to be provided against any attack, either of an enemy, or casualty.

ARMA'DA, s. [Span.] a fleet of men of war, applied by way of eminence to that great one fitted out by the Spaniards, with an intention to conquer this island, in 1588.

ARMADI'LLO, a South American quadruped, which is covered with a hard shell, and rolls itself up when attacked. They are accounted very delicate food.

A'RMAGH, a county of Ireland, in the province of Ulster, which is fertile, well cultivated, and has about 120,000 inhabitants who carry on a good trade in linen. Its county town of the same name, is the see of an archbishop, who is primate of Ireland.

A'RMAMENT, s. [armamentum, Lat.] any place wherein arms are placed: great provisions of military stores. Figuratively, an army, but most commonly applied to a fleet of men of war.

A'RMAN, s. a confection for restoring appetite to horses.

A'RMATURE, s. [armatura, Lat.] a military dress to defend the body from the attack of an enemy in battle; any thing to defend the body from external injuries.

A'RMED, a. in heraldry, applied to beasts and birds of prey, when their teeth, horns, feet, beak, talons, or tusks, &c. are of a different colour.

ARME'NIA, a large country of Asia, bounded on the W. by the river Euphrates, on the S. by Diarbeker, Curdistan, and Adirbijan, on the E. by Shirvan, and on the N. by Georgia. It was once governed by its own kings: but the Turks and Persians at present possess it between them. The inhabitants are much attached to commerce, and undertake long journeys to carry it on. They profess Christianity, but are charged with being Eutychians. They have patriarchs, archbishops, bishops doctors, preachers, and monks. Erzerum is the capital.

ARME'NIAN, (BOLE) s. a fatty medicinal kind of earth, of a pale reddish colour, which takes it name from the country of Armenia.

ARME'NIAN, (STONE) s. a mineral stone or earth of a blue colour, spotted with green, black, and yellow; anciently brought only from Armenia, but now found in Germany and the Tyrol.

A'RMHOLE, or A'RMPIT, s. the cavity under the shoulder.

A'RMIGER, s. [Lat.] an esquire; one that bears arms.

ARMI'LLARY, a. [from armilla, Lat.] something that is circular, in allusion to the surrounding of a bracelet. Armillary sphere, is composed of several brass circles, which represent those of the horizon, meridian, ecliptic, &c. drawn on the globe.

A'RMINGS, s. [plural] in a ship, are white or red cloths hung fore and aft on the outside of a ship; those on the tops are named top-armings.

ARMI'NIANS, [from Arminius] the followers of Arminius, a famous minister at Amsterdam; who, in the 16th century, separated from the calvinists, holding that predestination was not absolute, but conditional; that Christ has not only redeemed all, but that there is an universal grace given to all mankind; that grace is not an irresistible principle; that man is a free agent, always at liberty to obey all the motions of the Holy Ghost, or resist them; that with respect to perseverance, a man may, after justification fall into new crimes.

ARMIPOTENCE, s. [arma and potentia, Lat.] power, or powerfulness in war.

ARMIPOTENT, a. [armipotens, Lat.] powerful, or strong in the field, in arms, or at war.

A'RMISTICE, s. [armistitium, Lat.] a short truce or cessation from arms for a short time.

A'RMLET, s. a small arm of the sea. Figuratively, a bracelet, or some ornament worn on the arm.

ARMO'NIAC, s. [erroneously so written from Ammoniac.] See AMMONIAC

ARMO'NICA, s. an instrument of music constructed with drinking-glasses; invented by the late Dr. Franklin.

ARMO'RIAL, a. [armorial, Fr.] that belongs to the coat or escutcheon of a family.

A'RMORIST, s. a person skilled in heraldry.

A'RMOUR, s. [armure, Fr.] a cover for the body, to defend it from the instruments of war, like a harness.

A'RMOUR-BEARER, s. he that carries the arms of another.

A'RMOURER, s. [armurier, Fr.] one who makes, forges, or sells armour: one who dresses another in armour.

A'RMOURY, s. [armoire, Fr.] a place where arms are kept. Figuratively, arms.

ARMS, s. not used in the singular; [arma, Lat.] all kinds of weapons, whether offensive or defensive. Figuratively, a state of hostility between two nations: war. In heraldry, the badges of distinction, escutcheons, or other marks of honour, given by sovereigns, and borne on banners, shields, or coats.

A'RMY, s. [armée, Fr.] a collection of men armed, commanded by their proper officers. Figuratively, a great number.

ARNEE', s. an Indian animal of the ox kind, reported to have very large horns.

ARO'MA, in chemistry, the odour which arises from certain vegetables, or their infusions.

AROMA'TIC, or AROMA'TICAL, a. [from aroma, Lat.] spicy; fragrant; strong-scented, or smelling like spices.

AROMA'TICS, s. [not used in the singular] spices, or any strong-scented, fragrant, or high-tasted body.

To AROMA'TYZE, v. a. [from aroma, Lat.] to mix or scent with spices. Figuratively, to make any thing agreeable, which in its own nature would be loathsome.

AROUND, ad. [à la ronde, Fr.] in a circle: in a circular manner; on all sides. Used as a preposition, encircling; encompassing; round about

To AROU'SE, (arouze) v. a. [arisen, Sax.] to wake from sleep; to excite an indolent person to action; to raise up to stimulate.

ARPE'GGIO, s. [Ital.] in music, the making the notes of a chord to be heard distinctly one after another, by a purling or rolling of the hand on stringed instruments, beginning at the lowest note, and rising gradually upwards.

A'RPENT, s. an acre or furlong of ground. The arpent of France is 100 perches square, but some account it but half an acre.

A'RQUEBUSE, s. a large hand gun, somewhat bigger than our musket, and called by some a caliver.

A'RQUEBUSIER, s. one who carries, or makes use of, an arquebuse.

A'RRACH, O'RRACH, or O'RRAGE, s. one of the quickest plants both in growing and running to seed. Its leaves are very good in pottage.

A'RRACK, s. See ARAC.

A'RRAGON, a province in the N. of Spain. The air is pure and wholesome, and the country near the river is fertile in corn, wine, flax, and fruit; but in general, it is dry, sandy, mountainous, and stony. It produces saffron, and there are mines of salt. Saragossa is the capital.

To ARRAIGN, (arráin) v. a. [arranger, Fr.] in law, to set a thing in order, or fit it for a trial. Applied to writing, to indict; to accuse; to charge with crimes.

ARRAI'GNMENT, (arrainment) s. the act of trying a person upon an indictment, accusation, or charge.

ARRAN, a rocky and mountainous island of Scotland, in the Frith of Clyde, to the SW. of the island of Bute; about 23 miles long, and 12 broad. It abounds with cattle, sheep, goats, and fowl, and agriculture here is somewhat advancing. The streams are stored with fish, especially salmon. The climate is cold, but healthful; and invalids annually resort thither to drink the whey of goat's milk. Among the rocks are found iron ore, spar, and a great variety of beautiful pebbles, susceptible of polish. On the coast are many spacious and wonderful caverns, which used to afford shelter to smugglers; one of these occasionally serves the inhabitants to hold a religious meeting in. They were once the retreats, perhaps the habitations of ancient heroes. Tradition, in these parts, still preserves the memory of Fingal; and Robert Bruce took refuge in this island in the times of his greatest distress. Lat. 55. 40. N. lon. 5. 10. W.

To ARRA'NGE, v. a. [arranger, Fr.] to dispose or put in order, including the secondary idea of art or skill.

ARRA'NGEMENT, s. the act of putting or placing things into order, including the idea of skill or judgment.

A'RRANT, a. [errant, Fr.] notorious, infamous.

A'RRANTLY, ad. in a notorious, infamous, or shameful manner.

A'RRAS, the richest sort of tapestry, so called from Arras, formerly the capital of Artois, a province in the Netherlands.

ARRA'Y, s. the order in which an army is drawn up to give battle; dress, or external ornaments.

To ARRA'Y, v. a. [arroyer, Fr.] in military affairs, to place an army in proper order to engage. To deck, embellish, or adorn with dress.

ARRA'YERS, s. officers that had the care of soldiers, and saw that they were properly accoutred.

ARRE'AR, (arreér) s. [arriere, Fr.] that which remains unpaid. Applied to rent, it signifies that which has been due some time, and is not discharged.

ARRE'ST, s. [from arrester, Fr.] in law, the seizing or apprehending a man, thereby depriving him of his liberty by legal process, either for debt or any offence against the law; a stopping or restraint from proceeding in an undertaking. In horsemanship, &c. a mangey humour between the ham and pastern of the hinder legs of a horse.

To ARRE'ST, v. a. [arrester, Fr.] to apprehend by virtue of a writ from a court of justice; to seize any thing by law; to seize upon; to stop, withhold, or bind; to stop a body in motion.

ARRE'T, s. [Fr.] the decision of a sovereign court, or court of judicature; resembling our act of parliament.

ARRIE'RE-FIEF, s. [Fr.] a fief dependent on another.

ARRI'VAL, s. the coming to any place, either by sea or land. Figuratively, the attainment of any design.

ARRI'VANCE, s. company expected to come.

To ARRI'VE, v. n. [arriver, Fr.] to come to any place by water or land. Figuratively, to attain or come to.

A'RROGANCE, or A'RROGANCY, s. [arrogantia, Lat.] the assuming or claiming to one's self more honour or merit than is our due.

A'RROGANT, a. [arrogans, Lat.] self-conceited, haughty.

A'RROGANTLY, ad. in an arrogant, self-conceited, or haughty manner.

To A'RROGATE, v. a. [arrogo, Lat.] to lay claim to a thing or quality which does not belong to us.

ARROW, s. [areue, Sax.] a slender piece of round wood, pointed, barbed, and shot out of a bow; distinguished from a dart, because that was thrown by the hand. Arrow-head, is the sharp point of an arrow, which was usually armed with steel. Arrow-shaped, in botany, like the head of an arrow.

A'RROWHEAD, s. a water-plant, so called from the resemblance of its leaves to the head of an arrow.

ARSE, s. [earse, Sax.] the buttocks or hind part of an animal.

A'RSENAL, s. [arsenale, Lat.] a royal or public magazine; or place wherein all warlike stores are kept or forged.

ARSE'NIATE, a salt formed by the combination of any base with the acid of arsenic.

ARSE'NIATED, a. combined with the acid of arsenic.

A'RSENIC, s. [arsenikon, Gr.] a metallic substance which gives whiteness to metals by infusion, but destroys their malleability. It is exceedingly corrosive, and a very strong poison. It is principally imported from Saxony.

ARSE'NICAL, a. consisting, or having the properties of arsenic.

ARSE'NIOUS, belonging to arsenic.

A'RSESMART, s. a plant, called also lakeweed, and water-pepper.

A'RSON, s. in law, the malicious or wilful burning of the house of another man: it is felony at common law.

ART, s. [art, Fr. ars, Lat.] an abstract or metaphysical term, implying a collection of certain rules from observation and experience, by which any thing may be performed, or any end obtained; distinguished from science by its object. If the object be attained by the application of rules, or require practice, then it is an art; but if contemplated only with respect to its different appearances, the collection of observations relative thereto is a science. A trade; cunning; artfulness; speculation. We have likewise the division of arts into liberal and mechanic. The liberal arts are those which consist in the application or exercise of the mind; the mechanic, those which consist in the exercise of the body, or hand, and make use of machines to attain their ends.

ARTE'RIAL, a. that belongs to, or is contained in, an artery.

ARTERIOTOMY, s. [from arteria an artery, and temno to cut, Gr.] in surgery, the opening an artery with a lancet in order to draw blood. It is a very dangerous operation, and seldom performed.

A'RTERY, s. [arteria, Lat.] in anatomy, a membraneous, elastic, conical tube, internally smooth, without valves, which decreases in its dimension in proportion to the number of its branches, destined to receive the blood from the heart, and distribute it to the lungs and other parts of the body; that which has its origin from the right ventricle of the heart is called the pulmonary artery, and that which rises from the left, the aorta.

A'RTFUL, a. performed according to the rules of art, including the idea of skill, judgment, or wisdom.

A'RTFULLY, ad. in such a manner as shews a deal of cunning or skill.

A'RTFULNESS, s. the quality of performing any thing with skill, or the attaining an end by cunning.

ARTHRITIC, or ARTHRITICAL, a. [Gr.] gouty, or occasioned by the gout; that has something like joints.

ARTHRITIS, s. [Gr.] in physic, a disease which affects the joints; the gout.

A'RTHUR, king of the Britons, according to Rapin, was born in Cornwall, 452, or 453; mounted the throne of Danmonium, 467, after his father Gorlous, at 15 years of age; was created patrician by Ambrosius, 476; elected monarch of Britain, 508; assumed the imperial purple, 528; and was mortally wounded in a battle, 542; during which Modred and he happening to meet, rushed upon one another so furiously, that nothing but death could part them. Modred was slain on the spot, and Arthur, mortally wounded, was carried to Glastonbury, where he died aged 80 years, 76 of which he spent in the exercise of arms; for though he had reigned about 34 years, yet before he came to the crown he had long commanded the British armies under Ambrosius. Arthur was undoubtedly a great general. It is a pity his actions have served for a foundation to numberless fables, though worthy of being recorded by the greatest and most able pen. He is said to have instituted the order of the knights of the round table, so famous in romances. Some creditable historians assert, that king Henry the II. being at Pembroke, and hearing a Welsh bard singing to his harp the story of Arthur, concluding with his death and burial in the church-yard of Glastonbury, between two pyramids; the king ordered inquiry to be made, and the body dug up; at the depth of 7 feet a great stone was found, on which was fixed a leaden cross, with this inscription on the inside: 'Hic jacet sepultus inclytus rex Arturius in insula Avolonia:' i. e. 'Here lieth the famous king Arthur, buried in the isle of Avalon.' Digging lower, they found the king's body in the trunk of a tree, his beautiful queen lying by him, with long flowing hair, in colour bright as gold, which, however, sunk into dust when touched. The king's bones were very large, and 10 wounds, at least, in his skull, all cicatrized, except that of which he is supposed to have died. This was discovered, 1189, according to Giraldus Cambrensis, who says he saw and examined them: Camden's Britan. tit. Somersetshire.

A'RTICHOKE, s. a plant much like the thistle, but with large scaly heads, shaped like the cone of a pine tree. The Jerusalem artichoke is an agreably tasted root, now little cultivated.

ARTICLE, s. [articulus, Lat.] in English there are but two articles, a and the; a becomes an before a vowel, y and w excepted, or a silent h. A is used in a vague sense to point out one single thing of the kind, in other respects indeterminate; the determines what particular thing is meant. A substantive without any article to limit it, is taken in its widest sense; thus man means all mankind. A man means some one or other of that kind, indefinitely; the man means definitely, that particular man who is spoken of: the former therefore is called the Indefinite, the latter the Definite Article. It is the nature of both the articles to determine or limit the thing spoken of: a determines it to be one single thing of the kind, leaving it still uncertain which; the determines which it is, or, if many, which they are. The first therefore can only be joined to substantives in the singular number; the last may be also joined to plurals. There is a remarkable exception in this rule in the use of the adjectives few and many, (the latter chiefly with the word great before it,) which, though joined with plural substantives, yet admit of the singular article a: as, a few men, a great many men; the reason of it is manifest from the effect which the article has in these phrases; it means a small or great number collectively taken; and therefore gives the idea of a Whole, that is, of Unity. Thus likewise a hundred, a thousand, is one whole number, an aggregate of many collectively taken; and therefore still retains the article a, though joined as an adjective to a plural substantive: as, a hundred years. The definite article the is sometimes applied to adverbs in the comparative and superlative degree, and its effect is to mark the degree the more strongly, and to define it the more precisely: as, "The more I examine it, the better I like it. I like this the least of any." In commerce, a single transaction, thing, or parcel, in an account.

A'RTICLES of the established church, are 39 propositions, of which all clergymen are required to profess their belief.

To A'RTICLE, v. n. to make conditions or terms; to stipulate: to bind or oblige a person to serve another under certain conditions.

ARTICULAR, a. [articularis, Lat.] in physic, relating to a disease which affects the joints.

ARTICULATE, a. [from articulus, Lat.] in its primary sense, applied to bodies which are joined together, and may be bent without being pulled asunder. Applied to the voice, it implies, that its sounds are distinct and varied, but connected together so as to form words.

To ARTICULATE, v. a. [articuler, Fr.] to pronounce syllables or words in a distinct manner.

ARTICULATELY, ad. in such a manner as to pronounce the syllables of words distinctly.

ARTICULATION, s. in anatomy, the juncture of two bones in such a manner, that they may be bent without being pulled asunder. Applied to the voice, the modulations and variations of the voice, which are so connected as to form syllables or words.

A'RTIFICE, s. [artifice, Fr.] an indirect method of attaining one's end; a pretence, stratagem, or fraud. SYNON. Cunning is employed in using means; finesse insinuates insensibly, and must be accompanied by penetration; device surprises, and gives satisfaction; artifice generally makes use of studied dissimulation; a trick is commonly looked on as a fraud; and a stratagem is oftener illicit than otherwise.

ARTIFICER, s. a person employed in works of art, or to manufacture any commodity.

ARTIFICIAL, a. [artificiel, Fr.] applied to something made by art, in opposition to the productions of nature; counterfeit. Artificial lines, are those which are drawn upon a sector, or scale, to represent lines and tangents. Artificial numbers, are the same with logarithms.

ARTIFICIALLY, ad. in an artful, cunning, crafty, or skilful manner.

ARTILLERY, s. a plural noun, [artillerie, Fr.] the heavy engines of war, such as cannons, bombs, &c.

ARTISA'N, (artizan) s. [Fr.] properly applied to those professors of trades which require the least exercise of the understanding; a low mechanic, manufacturer, or tradesman.

A'RTIST, s. [artiste, Fr.] one who excels in those arts which require good natural parts; or one who understands both the theory and the practice of the art which he professes.

A'RTLESS, a. without art, design, craft, or cunning.

A'RTLESSLY, ad. in a simple, innocent, and undesigning manner.

ARUNDEL, a town in Sussex, with the title of an earldom; it has a good market on Wednesday, and a small one on Saturday. It is seated on the side of a hill on the river Arun, (over which it has a wooden bridge,) where small ships may ride. The ancient castle is seated on the summit of the hill, and is said to be a mile in compass. It is eight miles E. of Chichester, and 63 S. W. by S. of London; governed by a mayor and burgesses, and sends two members to parliament; it has two streets paved with stones.

ARUSPICES, s. an order of priesthood among the old Romans; soothsayers, who pretended to foretel things to come, by inspecting the entrails of beasts.

AS, conjunct. [als, Teut.] referring to an action or time past, in the same manner; when it answers so or such, it is used for that. "So uncertain, as they require a great deal of examination." Bac. In a particular respect; as far as a particular relation extends; like, or of the same kind. By an ellipsis, for as if. Referring to the present time, it implies something done, during that particular action, at the same time. "Whistled as he went." Dryd. According to, or in what manner. "As they please." Boyle. Answering to, like, or same, it is used as a relative, and implies which. "The same crime as he committed." When at the beginning of two sentences immediately following each other, it denotes a likeness or comparison between them. Answering so, it implies condition, or in the same manner. "Some peculiarity as well as his face." Locke.

ASAFOE'TIDA, or ASSAFOE'TIDA, s. a very stinking gum, which according to Kempfer, is drawn from a root of an umbelliferous plant, which grows in the province of Charasan in Persia. It has large thick roots, with few fibres, black without, and full of white fœtid juice; a medicine in all nervous complants.

A'SAPH, ST. a small city of Flintshire, in North Wales, seated on the river Elway, where it unites with the river Clwyd, and over both there is a bridge. It scarcely contains 50 houses, and is of note only for its cathedral. It has a small market on Saturday. It is 21 miles W. N. W. of Chester; and 211 N. W. of London.

ASBE'STINE, a. [from asbestinum, Lat.] that cannot be destroyed by fire.

ASBESTOS, s. [Gr.] a sort of native fossil stone, which may be split into threads and filaments, from one to ten inches in length, very fine, brittle, yet somewhat tractable; it has the wonderful property of remaining unconsumed in the fire, which only whitens it. It was made by the ancients into a cloth, in which they wrapped the bodies of their dead, who were to be Burned, that they might the better collect the ashes.

ASCARIDES s. [Gr.] a slender sort of worm, found frequently in the intestines of children.

To ASCEND, v. n. [ascendo, Lat.] to rise upwards from the earth. Figuratively, to advance from any degree of knowledge to another. In genealogy, to trace a pedigree backwards towards its first founders.

ASCENDABLE, a. that may be ascended.

ASCENDANT, s. [ascendant, Fr.] in morality, superiority or influence, whereby one man or thing unreasonably biasses or tirannizes over another. Figuratively, the greatest height or perfection. In genealogy, ancestors, or those nearest the root of a pedigree. In an astrological sense, that part of the ecliptic at any particular time above the horizon.

ASCENDENCY, s. a bias; an undue influence or superiority.

ASCENDING, part. [ascendens, Lat.] going upwards from the earth. In astronomy, an epithet given to those degrees or stars which are above the horizon. The ascending node of a planet is a point of its orbit intersecting the ecliptic; so called, because the planet ascends above it in its motion towards the north.

ASCENSION, s. [ascensio, Lat.] a motion upwards. Ascension, in astronomy, is either right or oblique. Right ascension of the sun, moon, or star, is that point of the equinoctial, counted from the beginning of Aries, which rises with it in a right sphere. Oblique ascension, is an arch of the equator, intercepted between the first point of Aries and that point of the equator which rises together with the celestial body in an oblique sphere. The difference between right and oblique ascension is what the astronomers mean by ascensional difference. Ascension-day, the day on which the ascension of our Saviour is commemorated, commonly called Holy Thursday, the Thursday but one before Whitsuntide.

ASCENSIVE, a. [from ascendo, Lat.] that is in motion upwards; that is in a rising state. Obsolete.

ASCENT, s. [ascensus, Lat.] motion upwards; the place by which an eminence may be climbed. Figuratively, a high place or eminence. In physics, the ascent of fluids is their rising above the level of their own surfaces, &c. In logic, a kind of argument, wherein we rise from particulars to universals.

To ASCERTAIN, v. a. [ascertener, Fr.] to determine the signification of any word; to take away all doubt.

ASCERTAINER, s. one who limits or determines the signification of a doubtful expression.

ASCERTAINMENT, s. the determining the signification of a doubtful expression; a settled rule or standard.

ASCETIC, a. [from asheo, to exercise, Gr.] employed only in exercises of devotion and mortification.

ASCETIC, s. [from asheo, to exercise, Gr.] one who practices a greater degree of austerity and mortification than others.

A'SCII, s. [from a not, and skia, a shadow, Gr.] in geography, those inhabitants of the torrid zone who have no shadow once or twice a year, because the sun is then vertical, or shines perpendicularly on their heads.

ASCITES, s. [from askos, a bottle, Gr.] in medicine, a kind of dropsy, which principally affects the abdomen, or lower belly, and is remedied by tapping.

ASCITIC, a. [from askites, Gr.] caused by an ascites; dropsical, or resembling an ascites.

ASCITITIOUS, (assitishious) a. [ascititious, Lat.] that is counterfeit or spurious.

To ASCRIBE, v. a. [ascribo, Lat.] to deduce from as a cause; to attribute to; to impute.

ASCRIPTION, s. [ascriptio, Lat.] the act of ascribing.

ASH, s. [æsc, Sax.] in botany, the fraxinus. It has pinnated leaves ending in a lobe. Its male flowers have no petals; and the germen has one seed like a bird's tongue.

ASHAMED, a. conscious of having done something which a person may find fault with.

A'SHBOURNE, a town in Derbyshire; with a market on Saturday. Distant 139 miles from London.

A'SHBURTON, a town in Devonshire, one of the four Stannery Towns, seated among the hills, where the mines of tin and copper are. It carries on a considerable trade in wool, yarn, and serges, and stands near the river Dart, 19 miles S. W. of Exeter, and 192 W. by S. of London. Market on Tuesday and Saturday, the former for wool, &c. the latter for provisions. It sends two members to parliament.

A'SHBY-DE-LA-ZOUCH, a populous town in Leicestershire, with a considerable manufactory of stockings and hats. It is 13 miles S. of Derby, and 115 N. N. W. of London. Market on Saturday.

A'SHEN, a. made of ash, or ash-wood.

A'SHES, s. has no singular, [asca, Sax.] that substance which bodies are reduced to by burning.

A'SHFORD, a town in Kent, which has a market on Saturday. It is 54 miles from London.

A'SHLAR, s. in masonry, free-stones as they come out of the quarry, of different lengths, breadths, and thickness.

A'SHLEERING, s. in building, quartering in garrets, about two feet and a half or three feet high from the floor, and reaching to the under side of the rafters.

A'SHORE, ad. to the shore, on land, or to the land.

ASH-WEDNESDAY, s. the first day of Lent, when, in the primitive church, notorious sinners were put to open penance, thus: They appeared at the church door barefooted, and clothed in sackcloth, where being examined, their discipline was proportioned according to their offences; after which, being brought into the church, the bishop singing the seven penitential psalms, they prostrated themselves, and with tears begged absolution; the whole congregation having ashes on their heads, to signify, that they were both mortal, and deserved to be burned to ashes for their sins.

A'SHWEED, s. a plant, the same with goutweed and herb gerald.

A'SHY, a. resembling the ash in colour; of a whitish gray.

A'SIA, one of the four great parts of the world, and the second in order. It is bounded on the N. by the frozen sea, on the E. by the Eastern Ocean, which is part of the South Sea, on the S. by the Indian Sea, and on the W. by Europe and Africa. It is of larger extent than any of the three parts in our continent; and it is generally said that the first man was created here; though many are of a different opinion, arising from the uncertainty where the garden of Eden was placed. But be that as it will, arts and sciences were early cultivated here; though they are thought to come originally from Egypt; but all the considerable religions now known had their first beginning in Asia; and there are still a great number of people who maintain the ancient tenets, which, according to them, are a hundred thousand years old. They have one sort of religion in China, and another in India, whose priests are the Bramins; not to mention the Jews, Christians, and Mahometans, whose beginnings are sufficiently known to all the world. This was the seat of several ancient empires, or monarchies; such as that of the Assyrians, Medes, Persians, and Greeks. It is 4740 miles in length from the Dardanels on the W. to the eastern shore of Tartary; and 4380 in breadth from the southern part of Malacca to the most northern cape of Nova Zembla. It may be divided into ten great parts, namely, Turkey in Asia, Arabia, Persia, the Mogul's empire, with the two Peninsulas of India, Thibet, China, and Corea, Great and Little Bocharia, with Charazm, Little and Great Tartary, Siberia, and the Islands. The governments of Asia are generally monarchial; and Turkey, Persia, the Mogul's empire, Thibet, and China, are subject to single monarchs; but the rest are divided among several sovereigns; so that there are reckoned seven emperors, thirty kings, besides petty princes, and the rajahs of India, which are very numerous. With regard to the extent of their religions, the Christian is but small in respect of the Mahometans, which comprehends one-third of Asia, and the pagan is about twice as much extended as the Mahometan. Besides these, some pretend there is the natural religion, which has about as many followers as the Christian. The languages are so many and so various, that it is impossible to enumerate them; but the chief are the Turkish, the Grecian, the Arabic, the Chinese, the Persian, and the Old Indian. In short, every country and island has almost a distinct language. From the richness of its soil, the deliciousness of its fruit, the fragrancy and balsamic quality of its plants, spices, gums, &c. the quantity, variety, beauty, and value of its gems, the fineness of its silks and cottons, and the richness of its metals, it has generally been considered as the finest quarter of the globe. Besides the animals we have in Europe, there are lions, leopards, tigers, camels, elephants, rhinoceroses, and many others. There are several great lakes; but the principal are the Caspian sea, which is 2000 miles in circumference, and the lake Aral, which is about half as much, and has not been long known to the Europeans. In painting, Asia is represented by a woman wearing a garland of various flowers and fruits, dressed in a rich embroidered vestment, holding in her right hand branches and roots of cassia, pepper, cloves, &c. and in her left a smoking censer; with a camel kneeling by her.

ASIDE, ad. applied to situation, that which is not straight. Opposed to perpendicular, out of, or deviating from its true direction; not directly towards; or from the company.

A'SININE, s. [from asĭnus, Lat.] partaking of the nature of an ass.

To ASK, v. a. [ascian, Sax.] to desire a thing; to demand; to put a question; to inquire; to require.

ASKA'NCE, ASKAUNCE, or ASKAU'NT, ad. with a look, wherein the pupils of each eye are turned to the corners of the eye-lid; obliquely, or with a leer, and is expressive of slyness or disdain.

ASKER, s. the person who makes a request or inquiry.

ASKEW, ad. aside, when the pupils are drawn to one corner of the eye, and generally bespeaks contempt or disdain.

A'SKRIG, a town in the N. riding of Yorkshire, 6 miles S. by E. of York, and 192 N. of London. Market on Thursday.

ASLANT, ad. on one side; obliquely.

ASLEEP, ad. in that state wherein all the senses are in a manner closed, the eyes shut, and a person enjoys that rest from animal labour called sleep.

ASLO'PE, ad. declining; obliquely.

A'SOPH, called also ZABAK, anciently the Palus Mæotis, a sea between Europe and Asia, about 210 miles in length, and from 40 to 60 in breadth. It lies N. of the Black Sea, with which it communicates by the strait of Caffa, the ancient Cimmerian Bosphorus.

ASP, or A'SPIC, s. [aspis, Lat.] a kind of serpent, whose poison is so dangerous and quick in its operation, that it kills without the possibility of a remedy. It is very small, and those who are bitten by it die by sleep and lethargy.

ASPA'LATHUS, s. [Lat.] a plant called the Rose of Jerusalem. The wood of a prickly tree, heavy, oleaginous, somewhat sharp and bitter to the taste, and anciently much in repute for an astringent, but now little used. An oil drawn from it is of an admirable scent, and very comfortable to the head to which perfumes are not offensive.

ASPA'RAGUS, s. [Lat.] a well-known garden plant, remarkable for communicating, very soon after being eaten, a strong smell to the urine; and for this reason it is proposed to be diuretic: notwithstanding this, it does not appear that asparagus contributes much either to the exciting of the secretion when suppressed, or facilitating its discharge.

A'SPECT, s. [aspectus, Lat.] the face; a peculiar cast of the countenance; look or appearance; the front situation of a building, or direction towards any point. In astrology, the situation of the sun, moon, or planets, with respect to each other.

To A'SPECT, v. a. [aspicio, Lat.] to look upon; to behold.

A'SPEN, or ASP, s. [espe, Sax.] a kind of poplar, whose leaves are supposed to be always trembling; used adjectively for things made out of its wood, or those which resemble it with respect to the trembling of its leaves.

A'SPER, a. [Lat.] rough or rugged. Spiritus asper, in grammar an accent in this form (ʽ), which shews that the letter under it is to be pronounced strong, and the breath to supply the place of an h.

To A'SPERATE, v. a. [aspero, Lat.] to roughen, or make rough.

ASPERIFO'LIOUS, a. [from asper and folium, Lat.] in botany, having rough leaves.

ASPE'RITY, s. [asperitas, Lat.] unevenness, or roughness, applied to the surface of bodies, and pronunciation. Moroseness, or roughness, applied to the behaviour or temper.

To ASPE'RSE, v. a. [aspergo, Lat.] to say any thing injurious to the character of another; to slander; to calumniate.

ASPE'RSION, s. [aspersio, Lat.] the action of casting water about, so as it may fall in small drops, not in full streams. Sprinkling, applied in Divinity to the mode of baptism commonly practised, opposed to immersion. Figuratively, an unmerited calumny or slander.

ASPHA'LTIC, a. [from asphaltos, Gr.] bituminous, or pitchy.

ASPHA'LTOS, s. [Gr.] a solid, brittle, black, bituminous, inflammable substance, resembling pitch, and chiefly found swimming on the surface of the lake Asphaltites, or Dead Sea, where anciently stood the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. It is used as a principal ingredient in the ground that engravers spread upon their plates, which they intend to etch, or eat in a figure with aqua-fortis.

A'SPHODEL, s. [asphodelus, Lat.] in botany, the day lily. There are six species; and were by the ancients planted near burying places, to supply the manes of the deceased with nurture.

To A'SPIRATE, v. a. [aspiro, Lat.] to lay a great stress of voice upon any syllable or letter. When used neuterly, to be pronounced with stress and vehemence, or a full breath.

A'SPIRATED, a. [aspiratus, Lat.] pronounced with some degree of roughness, stress, or vehemence of voice, or a full breath.

ASPIRA'TION, s. [aspiratio, Lat.] a sighing for, or longing after; an ardent desire, generally used in a spiritual sense. Among grammarians, it denotes the pronouncing a syllable with some vehemence; as these words beginning with the letter h, hear, heat, if pronounced softly would be ear, eat

To ASPI'RE, v. n. [aspiro, Lat.] to endeavour to attain something above our present circumstances, rank, or power. Used with the particles to and after.

ASQUI'NT, ad. [from seendan, Sax.] a position of the eyes, wherein they do not both seem to look the same way; obliquely.

ASS, s. [asinus, Lat.] in natural history, a domestic animal, remarkable for its sluggishness, hardiness, patience in labour, coarseness of diet, and long life. This animal is originally a native of Arabia and other parts of the East; its size and spirit decline as it advances into the colder regions. We find mention of it in the history of this country as early as the time of king Ethelred, and afterwards in the reign of Henry III. but it was lost in England during the reign of queen Elizabeth, and probably introduced again in the succeeding reign. Figuratively, the word implies a person of mean, abject spirit; basely patient under provocations; despicable and dull.

A'SSA, [in pharmacy, divided into assa dulcis, or benzoin, and assa fœtida] a gum or resin, of a brownish colour, a sharp taste, and very strong offensive smell; from whence it receives both the name above mentioned, and likewise that of devil's dung.

To ASSAIL, v. a. [assailler, Fr.] to attack, or fall upon, in order to subdue, as an enemy. Figuratively, to attack with arguments.

ASSAILABLE, a. that may be attacked.

ASSAILANT, s. [from assaillant, Fr.] he who makes an attack, opposed to one who defends.

ASSAILANT, a. using acts of violence against another; attacking.

ASSAILER, s. one who attacks another.

ASSAM, a country of Asia, west of Bengal, where gunpowder is said to have been invented before it was known in Europe.

ASSAPANIC, s. a little animal of Virginia, which is said to fly by stretching out its shoulders and its skin, and is called in English the flying squirrel.

ASSART, s. in law, an offence committed in a forest, by pulling or grubbing up by the roots those trees or bushes that form thickets or coverts for beasts.

ASSASSIN, or ASSASSINATOR, s. one who murders another, either for hire, or by treachery. The word Hassassin (from hass, to kill, to assassinate, to listen, to surprise,) in the vulgar Arabic, signifies robbers of the night, persons who lie in ambush to kill, and is very universally used in this sense at Cairo and in Syria.

To ASSASSINATE, v. a. to murder another treacherously, revengefully, or for hire.

ASSASSINATION, s. the act of murdering by treachery, or for hire.

ASSAULT, s. [assault, Fr.] in war, a general and furious attack of a camp, or fortified place, with an intention to carry, or become master of it. This has lately been styled a coup de main, or a strong and vigorous impression. In law, a violent injury offered to a man's person, which may be committed by offering a blow, or a terrifying speech.

To ASSAULT, v. a. in war, to make a general and furious attack, without any cover, on a camp or fortified place, in order to carry, or become masters of it; to offer violence to; to attack, or invade.

ASSAULTER, s. one who uses violence against another.

ASSAY, s. [essaye, Fr.] examination, trial, or attempt; attack. In metallurgy, the proof or trial of the purity of metals or metalline substances. It is of two kinds, one before metals are melted in order to bring them to their proper fineness, the other after they are struck to see that the species be the standard. In law, assay of weights and measures, is the examination of them by the clerks of markets.

To ASSAY, v. a. [essayer, Fr.] to put to trial; to try.

ASSAYER, s. an officer of the mint, who tries metals, in order to determine their fineness, and how much they are above or below standard.

ASSAYING, s. the art of separating metals, sulphurs, mineral salts, and other bodies, from each other.

ASSECUTION, s [assecutio, Lat.] in canon law, acquirement.

ASSEMBLAGE, s. [assemblage, Fr.] the collecting a number of individuals together, so as to form a whole. SYNON. It differs from assembly, because that is used of persons, and this of things.

To ASSEMBLE, v. a. [assembler, Fr.] to unite several things together, so as to form a whole; to bring several things together into one place. Used neuterly, with the preposition together.

ASSEMBLY, s. [assemblée, Fr.] a company met together for any fixed purpose, either of public worship, business, or diversion. In the military art, it is the second beating of the drum before a march, as a signal for the soldiers to strike their tents, roll them up, and stand to arms. Assemblies of the clergy are called convocations, synods, councils; the annual meeting of the church of Scotland is called a General Assembly.

ASSENT, s. [assensus, Lat.] that act of the mind whereby it takes, or acknowledges, any proposition to be true, or false. In a more loose sense, agreement, or consent.

To ASSENT, v. a. [assentio, Lat.] to receive a thing as true.

To ASSERT, v. a. [assero, Lat.] to affirm a thing as true; to claim a thing as one's due; to defend both by words and actions.

ASSERTION, s. the affirming a thing as true; a proposition conceived or delivered in positive terms.

ASSERTIVE, a. positive; obstinate; dogmatical.

ASSERTOR, s. he who affirms any proposition as true; the author or supporter of any opinion.

To ASSESS, v. a. [assessare, Lat.] to rate or tax; to fine a person.

ASSESSMENT, s. the sum, fine, or custom, levied upon any person or commodity; the act of levying a fine.

ASSESSOR, s. [Lat.] in law, one who sits on the bench with a judge, in order to assist him with advice; one who is next or equal to another in rank or dignity; an officer employed in collecting taxes.

ASSETS, s. [used only in the plural, from assez, Fr.] the goods of a person deceased, which are appropriated to the payment of his debts.

To ASSEVER, or ASSEVERATE, v. a. [asseverо, Lat.] to affirm or deny a thing, not only with an oath, but likewise with imprecations, execrations, or curses.

ASSEVERATION, s. [asseveratio, Lat.] the act of affirming a thing with great solemnity by an oath or imprecation.

ASSIDUITY, s. [assiduité, Fr.] a constant attention or application to business; unwearied diligence.

ASSIDUOUS, a. [assiduus, Lat.] unwearied; incessant; continual and unremitted.

ASSIDUOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to exercise diligence without weariness, and application without intermission.

ASSIENTO, s. [Span.] a Spanish word, signifying a contract or bargain, particularly a contract between the king of Spain and other powers, for furnishing the Spanish dominions in America with negro slaves.

To ASSIGN, (assīn, the i is pronounced long) v. a. [assigno, Lat.] to distribute; to allot; to appoint. In law, to transfer property to another.

ASSIGNABLE, (assīnable) a. that may be determined, settled, fixed, or marked out.

ASSIGNATION, s. [assignation, Fr.] the act of transferring property to another.

ASSIGNEE', (assinee') s. [assigné, Fr.] one appointed by another to do an act, or perform any business in his stead. Commonly applied to those persons who are entrusted with the estate of a bankrupt, and are by law empowered to collect his debts, and make a dividend of his effects to his several creditors.

ASSIGNER, (assīner) s. he who sets out, determines, or appoints.

ASSIGNMENT, (assīnment) s. the transferring by deed the interest one has in a lease, or other thing, to another person. Assignments may be made of lands in fee for life or years, of an annuity, rent charge, judgment, statute, &c.

ASSIMILABLE, a. [from assimilo, Lat.] that may be converted into the same nature, or be made like another.

To ASSIMILATE, v. a. [assimilo, Lat.] to convert to the same nature; to bring to a resemblance.

ASSIMILATION, s. in physics, that motion by which bodies convert other bodies related to them, or at least such as are prepared to be converted, into their own substance and nature. Thus flame multiplies itself upon oily bodies, and generates new flames; air upon water, and produces new air; and all the parts, as well similar as organical, in vegetables and animals, first attract with some election or choice, nearly the same common, or not very different juices for ailment, and afterwards assimilate or convert them into their own nature.

To ASSI'MULATE, v. a. [assimulo, Lat.] to put on a counterfeit appearance; to feign.

ASSIMULA'TION, s. [assimulatio, Lat.] a counterfeit or specious resemblance.

To ASSI'ST, v. a. [assister, Fr.] to relieve; to help.

ASSI'STANCE, s. [assistance, Fr.] the act of helping; help.

ASSI'STANT, a. that supplies the defect of another; that helps.

ASSI'STANT, s. one who helps another.

ASSI'SE, or ASSI'ZE, s. [assise, Fr.] is used for the court, place, or time, when and where the writs and processes, whether civil or criminal, are decided by judges and jury. Assize is either general, when judges take their respective circuits, with commission to take all assize; or special, where a commission is granted to particular persons for taking an assize for one or two causes only. All the counties of the kingdom, except Middlesex and Cheshire, are divided into six circuits, and the judges are assigned by the king's commission for every circuit, who now hold the assizes twice a year in every county, except the four northern ones, where the assizes are holden only once a year. The term is likewise applied to signify the whole process of a writ; a jury; a statute for regulating the weight of bread; and the bread itself, as prescribed in the statute.

To ASSI'ZE, v. a. to fix the price, weight, or assize of a commodity.

ASSI'ZER, or ASSI'SER, s. an officer who has the inspection into the weights and measures of commodities.

ASSO'CIABLE, a. [associabilis, Lat.] that may be joined or united to something else..

To ASSO'CIATE, v. a. [associer, Fr.] to join as a companion; to make one of a company. To join inseparately, applied to ideas. Neuterly, to unite or join himself.

ASSO'CIATED, a. [associatus, Lat.] confederated; joined as accomplices; making part of a society, or company.

ASSO'CIATE, s. one who is joined to another as assistant, companion, partner, confederate, or accomplice.

ASSO'CIATE, a. confederate; joined in interest or purpose.

ASSOCIA'TION, s. the act of uniting; union; society; a contract or treaty, by which two or more are united together for their mutual assistance, for the better carrying on any design. In physics, combination, or union.

To ASSOI'L, v. a. [assoudre, Fr.] in law, to deliver or discharge a person from excommunication.

A'SSONANCE, s. [assonance, Fr.] reference of one sound to another resembling it. In rhetoric or poetry, it is where the words of a phrase or verse have nearly the same sound or termination, but make no proper rhyme; these are accounted vicious in English, though an elegance among the Romans.

A'SSONANT, part. [assonant, Fr.] ranging things in classes, according to their resemblance with each other.

To ASSO'RT, v. a. [assortir, Fr.] to range in classes, as one thing suits with another.

ASSO'RTMENT, s. [assortement, Fr.] in trade, a stock of goods, consisting of various pieces of different sorts. In painting, the proportion and harmony between the several parts.

To ASSUA'GE, (asswáge) v. a. to cool, or lessen, applied to heat; to calm, applied to the wind; to pacify or appease, applied to passion or rage; to ease, applied to pain. In its general sense, it implies the lessening the violence of something furious. Neuterly, to abate or grow less.

ASSUA'GEMENT, (asswágement) s. that which lessens the violence of any thing.

ASSUA'GER, (asswáger) s. one who pacifies rage, appeases anger, or lessens pain.

ASSUA'SIVE, (asswásive) a. [from assuadeo, Lat.] that has a great influence; that assuages, mitigates, or pacifies

ASSUE'TUDE, s. [assuetudo, Lat.] the being accustomed to any thing; custom.

To ASSU'ME, v. a. [assumo, Lat.] to take; to represent a character; to take to one's self; to arrogate, or claim what is not one's due.

ASSU'MER, s. one who claims or arrogates more than his due; an arrogant person.

ASSU'MPSIT, (pron. without the p) s. [Lat.] a voluntary or verbal promise, whereby a man takes upon him to perform or pay any thing to another.

ASSU'MPTION, (pron. without the p) s. [assumptio, Lat.] the act of appropriating any thing to one's self; the supposing a thing true without any formal proof. The assumption of the Virgin Mary is celebrated on the 15th of August. In logic, the minor, or second proposition in a categorical syllogism; sometimes the consequence drawn from the major and minor.

ASSU'MPTION, a populous city, the capital of Paraguay, situated in a fertile country, on the river Paraguay. The air is wholesome and temperate, and the trees are always green. Lat. 26. 0. S. lon. 57. 40. W.

ASSU'MPTIVE, (pron. without the p) a. [assumptivus, Lat.] applied to that which a person may take or appropriate to himself. In heraldry, assumptive arms are those which a person may use as his own.

ASSU'RANCE, (the syllables assu, at the beginning of this and the four following words, are by some pronounced like asha) s. [assurance, Fr.] a certain expectation of something future; confidence; trust; conviction. In commerce, a contract by which a person subjects himself to make good the damages to be sustained by another in a voyage, or by fire. See INSURANCE.

To ASSU'RE, v. a. [assurer, Fr.] to persuade a person of the certainty of a thing; to make a person confident, by removing the causes of doubt or fear; to be betrothed.

ASSU'REDLY, ad. in such a manner as betrays no doubt; certainly; undoubtedly.

ASSU'REDNESS, s. the state of a person who is certain, or entirely free from doubt.

ASSU'RER, s. one who removes the doubts of another. In commerce, one who indemnifies another against hazards at sea.

ASSYRIA, a country in Asia, celebrated in ancient history. It was one of the earliest empires, and contained the provinces now called Diarbeck, Curdistan, and Irak: and involved, under its dominion, when at its greatest extent, many other provinces and kingdoms.

A'STERISK, s. [asteriskos, a little star, Gr.] a character used to render any particular passage in the author conspicuous, or to refer to some note in the margin, or at the bottom of the page marked thus, (*); when two or three are placed together in a line, thus (), they denote that some word is to be supplied, or is wanting.

A'STERISM, s. [asterismus, Lat.] the same with Constellation; which see.

ASTE'RN, ad. a sea-term, in the hinder part of a ship; or any thing situated behind the ship.

A'STHMA, (in pronunciation the h is dropped) s. [Gr.] in medicine, a difficulty of breathing, arising from a disorder in the lungs, attended with a great uneasiness in the diaphragm, or præcordia.

ASTHMA'TIC, or ASTHMA'TICAL, a. affected or troubled with an asthma.

A'STI, a city of Montserrat in Italy, 24 miles E. of Turin.

ASTO'NIED, part. a. used in the bible for astonished.

To ASTO'NISH, v. a. [estonner, Fr.] to occasion surprise by the immensity and novelty of an object; to amaze.

ASTO'NISHMENT, s. a surprise occasioned by an immense and new object; distinguished from admiration, both by the degree and the nature of the object.

ASTO'RGA, a small city of Leon, pleasantly situated in a plain on the little river Tuera, 28 miles W. of the city of Leon. It is strong both by nature and art, and is called the city of priests, from its cathedral being filled with ecclesiastics.

To ASTOUND, v. a. [astonner, Fr.] to astonish; to confound with wonder.

A'STRACAN, a large and populous city, seated on an island, formed by the river Wolga, 50 miles N. W. of the Caspian Sea. It is surrounded by strong walls, and has an excellent harbour, where the Europeans embark for Persia. It is noted for having excellent fish. It seldom rains here, but the river on which it stands overflows like the Nile; and when the water is run off, the grass grows in less than a month. From Astracan to Terki, on the side of the Caspian Sea, there are long marshes, which produce a vast quantity of salt, with which the Russians carry on a great trade. This city is supposed to have been, in very early times, the general staple for the productions of Persia, India, and Arabia. It is situated 800 miles S. E. of Moscow. Lat. 46. 22. N. lon. 47. 40. E.

ASTRADDLE, ad. so to sit on a thing, as that one of our legs should be on each side of it. See ASTRIDE.

A'STRAGAL, s. [astragalos, Gr.] in anatomy, a bone of the tarsus, with a convex eminence, articulated with the tibia, by a ginglymus, commonly called the ancle-bone. In architecture, a little round member, in the form of a ring or bracelet, serving as an ornament to the tops and bottoms of columns. In gunnery, the little moulding on a piece of ordnance, of which there are generally three on each piece.

A'STRAL, a. [from astrum, Lat.] that belongs to, or depends on, the stars. Astral year, is the time which the earth takes to make its revolution round the sun.

ASTRAY, ad. out of the right or direct path. Figuratively, wrong, or in an error.

ASTRE'A, according to the heathen mythology, was the daughter of Jupiter and Themis, and goddess of Justice; in the golden age; she came from heaven to dwell on earth; but the wickedness of the iron age was such, that she fled to heaven again, and was placed in the zodiac.

To ASTRI'CT, v. a. [astringo, Lat.] to lessen the distance between two objects; to make the parts of a thing come nearer to each other, opposed to relax. Constringe is most commonly used.

ASTRI'CTION, s. [astrictio, Lat.] the act or power of making the parts of a body approach to each other.

ASTRI'CTIVE, or ASTRICTORY, a. [astrictorius, Lat.] that has a styptic or binding quality.

ASTRI'DE, ad. with the legs placed at a distance from each other. In an open or wide manner, applied to the legs, opposite to close, or together.

To ASTRINGE, v. a. [astringo, Lat.] to press or close together; to force the parts closer to each other.

ASTRI'NGENT, part. [astringens, Lat.] in medicine, that contracts the dimensions of the vessels by its roughness and asperity, and thickens the fluids; when used internally, opposed to laxative: when externally, opposed to styptic.

A'STROLABE, s. [from astron, a star, and lambano, to receive, Gr.] in astronomy, a system or assemblage of the different circles of the sphere, resembling an armillary sphere, invented by Hipparchus; but being afterwards altered by Ptolemy to a plane surface, called a planisphere, the word is at present applied to a planisphere or stereographic projection of the sphere upon the plane of one of the great circles.

ASTRO'LOGER, s. [astrologus, Lat.] one who pretends to predict future events by the supposed influences of the stars.

ASTROLO'GIC, or ASTROLO'GICAL, a. relating or agreeable to the principles of astrology.

ASTROLO'GICALLY, ad. according to the principles of astrology, or after the manner of an astrologer.

ASTRO'LOGY, s. [astrologia, Lat.] the art of foretelling future events from the aspects, positions, and influences of the stars.

ASTRO'NOMER, s. [from astron, a star, and nomos, a law, Gr.] a person who applies himself to the study of astronomy.

ASTRONO'MIC, or ASTRONO'MICAL, a. that is founded upon the principles of astronomy.

ASTRO'NOMY, s. [astron, a star, and nomos, a law, Gr.] a science which teaches the knowledge of the celestial bodies, their magnitudes, motions, distances, periods, eclipses, and order, the conjunction and oppositions of the planets, and any other of their mutual aspects, with the time when any of them did or will happen. Astronomy is divided into the ancient and modern. Ancient astronomy is such as the art stood under Ptolemy and his followers, who supposed the earth quiescent in the centre, and that all the heavenly bodies performed their revolutions round it. The modern, or new astronomy, is that which has been cultivated since the time of Copernicus, who revived Pythagoras and Philolaus's opinion of the motion of the earth, and laid the foundation of the true Solar System. In painting, Astronomy is represented like a woman, with a silver crescent on her forehead, an azure mantle, and a watchet scarf, besprinkled with golden stars.

ASTROTHEO'LOGY, s. [astrum and theologia, Lat.] the proofs of a Deity drawn from an astronomical view of the heavens.

A'STURIAS, a province in the N. W. of Spain, which produces excellent horses, fruits, and wines, and has mines of gold, lapis-lazuli, and vermillion. The eldest son of the king of Spain, takes the title of prince of Asturias, and bears the arms of the province.

ASUNDER, ad. [assundran, Sax.] at a distance from each other; apart, or separate; an adverbial term importing the dissolution of the union of two or more bodies.

ASY'LUM, s. [Lat.] a sanctuary, a place of refuge, which sheltered a criminal, and secured him from falling into the hands of any officer of justice. In the times of popery this privilege belonged not only to churches, and church-yards, but to the houses of bishops.

ASY'MMETRY, s. [from a not, and symmetria, harmony, Gr.] a defect of proportion, harmony, or correspondence between the parts of a thing. In mathematics, the incommensurability of two quantities when they have no common measure.

ASY'MPTOTES, s. [from a not, syn, with, and pipto, to fall, Gr.] right lines which approach nearer and nearer to some curve; but which would never meet.

ASYNDETON, s. [Gr.] a figure in grammar, when a conjunction copulative is omitted.

AT, prep. [at, Sax.] before a place it signifies sometimes close to; and at other times in it. Before a word implying time, it denotes the very instant in which a thing was, or will be done; and sometimes is put without the word time in the same sense. Used instead of with, it implies cause, or on account of. "At this news he dies." Shak. Before an adjective of the superlative degree, it implies manner, or perfection. Before a substantive, it sometimes denotes a particular circumstance, and gives it an adverbial meaning; as, at ease, i. e. easy. After be, it implies design, intention, or employment. "She knew what he would be at." Hud. Used with command, it implies subject. "Thou art least at my command." Dryd. Sometimes at signifies from; as, "Endeavour to deserve something at our hands." Pope. At, joined with all, implies in any respect, degree, or manner. "Most women have no characters at all." Pope.

ATABA'L, s. a kind of tabor used by the Moors.

ATCHIEVEMENT, s. See ACHIEVEMENT.

ATHANA'SIAN CREED, a confession of faith supposed to have been drawn up by Athanasius, bishop of Alexandria, in the fourth century. It is appointed to be read in the English church on certain days.

ATE, the preter of EAT.

ATHA'NOR, s. [a chemical term, borrowed, as some think, from athanatos, immortal, Gr. because of its durable heat, or from the Arabic, altanor, a furnace, or oven] a digesting furnace to keep heat for some time; so that it may be augmented or diminished at pleasure by opening or shutting some apertures made on purpose with sliders over them, called registers.

A'THEISM, s. [athéisme, Fr.] the opinion of those who deny the existence and being of a God; the creator and preserver of the world.

A'THEIST, s. [from a not, and theos, God, Gr.] one who denies the existence of a God, the creator and preserver of all things.

ATHEI'STICAL, a. impious, or agreeable to the principles of an atheist.

ATHEI'STICALLY, ad. after the manner of an atheist.

A'THELNEY, a river isle of Somersetshire, formed at the junction of the Parret with the Thone, remarkable in antiquity as the hiding-place of the Saxon king Alfred, with a few of his nobles, when the Danes had overrun all the country to the forest of Sherwood.

A'THENS, an ancient town of Achaia, now Lividia, in Greece, belonging to Turkey in Europe, greatly celebrated for its antiquities, and the many learned men it has produced. This city is now called Athini; and is not inconsiderable either in extent or in the number of its inhabitants, (about 15,000) whose language is a mixture of Greek and Turkish. The town stands beneath the Acropolis, or citadel. The Barbary corsairs infesting it, the avenues were secured, and in 1676 the gates were regularly shut after sun-set. The Acropolis, which was built on a craggy rock, furnished a very ample field to the ancient virtuosi. It was filled with monuments of Athenian glory; and exhibited an amazing display of beauty, of opulence, and of art; each contending, as it were, for the superiority. Lat. 38. 5. N. lon. 23. 57. E.

ATHEOUS, a. [from a not, and theos, God, Gr.] opposite, or contrary to the belief of a Deity; atheistical.

ATHERO'MA, s. [Gr.] a tumor, a wen, which neither yields to the touch, discolours the skin, or causes pain.

ATHERO'MATOUS, a. having the qualities of an atheroma, or curdy wen.

A'THERSTONE, a town of Warwickshire, containing about 2500 inhabitants, chiefly employed in the manufactures of hats, ribbands, shalloons, &c. It is situated on, or near the river Anker, 13 miles N. of Coventry, and 103 N. W. of London. Market on Tuesday.

A'THERSTON on the Stour, a town of Warwickshire, situated on the Stour, a little above its junction with the river Avon, and 3 miles from Stratford. Market on Tuesday, and a cheese fair on Sept. 19, reckoned the largest in England.

ATHI'RST, ad. wanting drink, or adry.

ATHLETÆ, s. [Lat.] persons of strength and activity, exercised for the public games of Greece and Rome, and exhibited their skill in such exploits as required bodily strength.

ATHLETIC, a. [from athleta, Lat.] strong, vigorous, and active of body: robust.

ATHLONE, a town of Ireland, pleasantly situated on the large and beautiful river Shannon. Part of the town stands in Westmeath, on the Leinster side of the river; the other part in Roscommon, on the Connaught side; these are joined by a long bridge of many arches, which is a grand pass between the two provinces. Though Athlone is so advantageously situated for trade and improvement, it yet remains, in many parts, a poor, ruinous, dirty looking place. On the bridge are some badly executed figures, with inscriptions celebrating the success of queen Elizabeth over the rebels in her reign. It is 59 miles W. of Dublin.

ATHWART, prep. transverse; across; through. Used adverbially, it implies, in a manner vexatious and perplexing; wrong.

ATILT, ad. like one making a thrust.

ATLA'NTIC, [from Atlas] in geography, that part of the ocean which lies between Africa and America.

A'TLAS, s. [Lat.] a collection of maps, generally folio, in allusion to the fable of Atlas's bearing the world on his shoulders. In anatomy, the first vertebra of the neck, which lies next to, and supports the head. In architecture, those statutes, or half-statutes of men, used instead of columns or pilasters, to support any member of architecture such as a balcony, &c. They are likewise named Telamones. Also, a great chain of mountains, which separates Barbary from Biledulgerid, in Africa.

A'TMOSPHERE, s. [from atmos, vapour, and sphaira, a sphere, Gr.] air. In physics, that thin elastic fluid, which covers the earth to a certain height, gravitates towards its centre, and on its surface is carried along with it, and partakes of all its motions, both annual and diurnal: some confine the term only to that part of the air which is nearest the earth, receives its vapours and exhalations, and refracts the rays of light. Its whole weight is computed to be 14,931,308,800,000,000,000lb. troy, and its height, according to De la Hire, 16 leagues, or 48 miles.

ATMOSPHERICAL, a. that belongs to the atmosphere.

A'TOM, s. [atomus, Lat.] such a small particle of matter as cannot be physically divided.

ATO'MICAL, a. consisting of, or relating to, atoms.

A'TOMIST, s. one who professes the Corpuscular philosophy.

To ATO'NE, v. n. to agree, or accord. Actively, to make satisfaction for; to compensate; to expiate; to make a recompence.

ATO'NEMENT, s. reconciliation, agreement, concord; the uniting two persons at variance with each other.

A'TONY, s. [from a, not, and tenos, tone, Gr.] in medicine, wanting proper tension or tone, in the solids of a human body.

ATO'P, ad. on the highest part of a thing.

ATRABILARIAN, or ATRIBILARIOUS, a. [from atra and bilis, Lat.] that affects with a disorder flowing from a black adust state of the blood; called melancholy.

ATRABILARIOUSNESS, s. that quality which causes a person to be deemed melancholic.

ATRAMENTAL, a. [from atramentum, Lat.] that blackens, or has the qualities of ink.

ATRAMENTOUS, a. black, or having the qualities of ink.

ATRO'CIOUS, a. [atrox, Lat.] that argues a great, if not the highest, degree of wickedness in the committer: that is extremely, enormously, and flagrantly wicked.

ATRO'CIOUSNESS, s. that quality which argues a person to be extremely, obstinately, and enormously criminal.

ATRO'CIOUSLY, ad. in an atrocious manner.

ATRO'CITY, s. [atrocitas, Lat.] that which heightens the enormity of a crime, and makes it an object of horror.

A'TROPHY, s. [from a, not, and trophia, nourishment, Gr.] in physic, an universal consumption, proceeding from the whole habit of the body without any distemper of the lungs, or other entrails, or any remarkable fever.

A'TROPOS, in heathen mythology, one of the three fatal sisters, that cut the thread, or put a period to the life of man.

To ATTA'CH, v. a. [attacher, Fr.] in law, to seize either on a person or his goods; to have an affection, desire, or inclination towards a thing.

ATTA'CHMENT, s. [attachement, Fr.] in law, the taking, securing, or detaining a person or thing by virtue of a writ or precept. It differs from an arrest in this, that an arrest lies only against the body, whereas an attachment is often against the goods only, and sometimes against both body and goods. An arrest, likewise, issues out of an inferior court by precept only, but a detachment out of a higher court, either by precept or writ. By the custom of London, and several other places, a man can attach money or goods in the hands of a stranger to satisfy himself. Attachment also signifies the love, zeal, affection, one man has for another's interest or welfare.

To ATTA'CK, v. a. [attaquer, Fr.] in war, to make an effort or attempt upon a person, or a work, in order to conquer or subdue them. Figuratively, to set upon, invade, or treat any one as an enemy, either by actions or words.

ATTA'CK, s. [attaque, Fr.] in war, an attempt to conquer a body of troops, or master a fortified place. A false attack, is that which is made only to divert the attention of the enemy, and to conceal that of the main one. Figuratively, any hostile attempt, whether it consists in actions or words.

ATTA'CKER, s. the person who makes an attempt on a body of soldiers or a fortified place, in order to subdue or conquer them; any one who uses another with violence.

To ATTAIN, v. a. [atteindre, Fr.] to make one's own by labour or mental application; to procure, or obtain; to reach; to arrive at, or acquire.

ATTAI'NABLE, a. that may be obtained, acquired, or procured.

ATTAI'NABLENESS, s. the quality which renders a thing possible to be attained.

ATTAI'NDER, s. [attaindre, Fr.] is when a person has committed felony or treason, and judgment is passed upon him. The children of such a person are thereby rendered incapable of being heirs to him, or to any other ancestor, as if he was noble before, his posterity are thereby degraded, and made base; nor can his corruption of blood be taken away, but by an act of parliament, or by reversing the judgment by a writ of error.

ATTAI'NMENT, s. that which a person makes his own by labour or mental application; the act or power of attaining.

To ATTAINT, v. a. [atteinter, Fr.] to pass sentence against a person either for felony or treason, whereby he forfeits all his lands or hereditaments, his blood corrupted, and his children rendered base. Figuratively, to debase, corrupt, or make infamous.

ATTAINT, s. in law, a writ which lies against a jury for giving a false verdict in a court of record, in a real or personal action, if the debt or damages exceed 40*s.* In such case, the ancient law was, that the jurors meadows should be plowed up, their houses thrown down, their woods grubbed up, and their lands and tenements forfeited to the king; but if the person who brought the Attaint be cast, he shall be imprisoned, and ransomed at the king's pleasure. But by statute, the severity of the common law is mitigated, where the petty jury is attainted, and a pecuniary mulct imposed. Figuratively, a blot or stain, in allusion to the consequences of an attainder.

ATTAI'NTURE, s. See ATTAINDER.

To ATTE'MPER, v. a. [attempero, Lat.] to soften, applied to rigour; to render supportable, applied to heat; to lessen any quality by the mixture or addition of another. Figuratively, to suit, adapt, or fit, in allusion to the tempering metals.

To ATTE'MPERATE, v. a. [attempero, Lat.] to render agreeable to; to make suitable to.

To ATTE'MPT, v. a. [attenter, Fr.] to make a trial; to try, or endeavour.

ATTE'MPT, s. an undertaking; a trial to do a thing; sometimes applied to the attacks of an enemy.

ATTE'MPTER, s. the person who makes an endeavour; one who tries, tempts, or attempts.

To ATTE'ND, v. a. [attendre, Fr.] to fix the mind to an object, when applied to speculation; to listen; to wait upon; to accompany; to follow; to expect; to stay for; to lay wait for. Used neuterly, it implies to yield attention; to stay, or delay.

ATTE'NDANCE, s. [attendance, Fr.] the act of waiting upon as a servant; service; the person in waiting; a servant.

ATTE'NDANT, s. [attendant, Fr.] waiting on another as an inferior, including the idea of service.

ATTE'NDANT, s. one who accompanies another; a servant, or dependent of a nobleman; one who depends on another as a suitor; that which is inseparably united, as a concomitant or consequent.

ATTE'NDER, s. See ATTENDANT.

ATTE'NT, a. [attentus, Lat.] listening to, applying the mind to the consideration of any object: intent.

ATTE'NTATES, s. [attentata, Lat.] proceedings in a court of judicature, pending suit, and after an inhibition is decreed and gone out; those things which are done after an extra-judicial appeal, may likewise be styled attentates.

ATTE'NTION, s. [attention, Fr.] in logic, an operation of the mind which fixes it on any particular object, and engages it to consider it in such a manner, as to acquire a distinct idea thereof, absorbing, as it were, all other ideas which offer themselves to the mind.

ATTE'NTIVE, s. [attentus, Lat.] applying the mind or ear to one particular object.

ATTE'NTIVELY, ad. in such a manner as to consider, or listen to one particular object.

ATTE'NTIVENESS, s. that quality of mind wherein a person considers, or listens to a particular object, with a total disregard of all others.

ATTENUANT, part. and a. [attenuans, Lat.] that makes thin or dilutes. Used substantively, in medicine, for those medicines that resolve the viscosity of the humours in the human body, in order to promote their circulation, and discharge all noxious and excrementitious matter.

To ATTE'NUATE, v. a. [attenuo, Lat.] to liquify or make thin.

ATTE'NUATION, s. [atténuation, Fr.] in physics, applied to fluids, it is the act of rendering them more liquid and thinner than they were before; the effect of attenuating medicines, or certain efforts which nature itself makes to destroy the force of disorders. In a general sense, it implies the breaking or destroying the cohesion of the particles of any thing, and increasing their surface.

To ATTE'ST, v. a. [attestor, Lat.] to give a proof of the truth of a thing by evidence or writing.

ATTESTATION, s. [attestatio, Lat.] evidence, or proof of the truth of any fact, either by word or writing.

ATTIC, a. [Atticus, Lat.] in architecture, applied to a kind of building or shorter story over another, wherein no roof is to be seen, which is generally decorated with an order peculiar to itself, composed of the other five, but should resemble that most which is under it: the breadth of its pilasters should be equal to that underneath it, and just half its height. In literature, it implies a brilliant kind of wit, and an inexpressible elegance of style peculiar to the people of Attica. Thus Attic salt, in philology, is a delicate poignant sort of wit or humour peculiar to the Athenian writers; so Attic witness, means one that cannot be corrupted. Attic order, is a small order raised upon a large one, by way of crowning, or to finish the building. Attic of a roof, is a kind of parapet to a terrace, platform, or the like. Attic base, a peculiar kind of base used by the ancient architects in the Ionic order; and by Palladio and some others in the Doric. This is the most beautiful of all bases; and was used by Sir Cristopher Wren in building St. Paul's church, London.

To ATTIRE, v. a. [attirer, Fr.] to adorn with clothes or dress. Figuratively, to embellish or adorn.

ATTIRE, s. clothes or dress to adorn or embellish a person. Among sportsmen, the attire of a stag, consists of the bur, pearls, beam, gutters, antler, sur-antler, royal, sur-royal, and croches; of a buck, of the bur, beam, brow-antler, advancer, palm, and spellers. In botany, the third part of the division of a plant, including its generative parts; and divided into semi-form and florid.

ATTIRER, s. one who attires or dresses another.

ATTITUDE, s. [attitude, Fr.] in painting and sculpture, the posture of a statute, whereby it expresses some action, or passion of the mind. Applied likewise to the stage, to imply the posture of an actor to express the sentiments of the poet.

ATTLEBOROUGH, a town in Norfolk, 14 miles from Norwich and 93 from London, with a market on Thursday.

ATTOLLENT, a. [attollens, Lat.] that raises or lifts up.

In anatomy, applied to those muscles which raise the parts they belong to.

ATTORNEY, s. [attornatus, law Lat.] a person appointed by another to do something in his stead. Attorney at law, is one retained to prosecute, or defend a suit at law. In the civil law they are called Proctors. Attornies, by a late order of all the judges, are to be admitted of some of the inns of court or chancery (except housekeepers in London and Westminster, &c.) and no attorney shall put himself out of that society into which he is admitted, till he is admitted to some other society, and delivers a certificate thereof; and all attornies are to be in Commons in the times ordered by the society to which they belong, otherwise they shall be put out of the roll of attornies. Attorney General, is a great officer, created by letters patent, to exhibit informations, prosecute for the crown in criminal causes, and file bills in the exchequer for any thing concerning the king, in inheritance or profits. To him come warrants for making out all patents, grants, pardons, &c. His salary from the crown is 1000*l.* per annum.

To ATTORNEY, v. a. to perform or employ as proxy.

ATTORNMENT, or ATTOURNMENT, s. [attournement, Fr.] in law, the agreement of a tenant for life to the transferring of property to another.

To ATTRACT, v. a. [attraho, Lat.] to draw forwards itself; to allure or invite.

ATTRACT, s. attraction; the power of drawing. Obsolete.

ATTRACTICAL, a. that has the power of drawing something towards it.

ATTRACTION, s. [attraction, Fr.] in mechanics, the act of a moving power, by which a thing that may be moved is brought nearer or drawn towards it. In the Newtonian system, it is an indefinite principle, not implying a particular manner, nor physical cause of action, but only a tendency of approaching, whether it proceed from any external cause, or be inherent in bodies themselves, excluding the idea of impulse from its consideration. It is divided into the attraction of gravity, the attraction of cohesion, and the attraction of composition. The attraction of gravity, called the centripetal force by mathematicians, is that by which all bodies tend towards the centre, or act on each other at a distance; from hence proceed almost all the motions and changes in the system; it is by this principle, that light bodies ascend, that projectiles are regulated in their courses, that vapours ascend and the rain falls, that waves roll, the air presses, and the sea is swelled or decreased by the vicissitude of its flux and reflux. The attraction of cohesion, is that which unites the insensible particles of bodies together into the different masses, and causes the roundness we see in drops of water or quicksilver. The particles of all bodies are possessed of the inherent property of attracting each other, which causes them to adhere, and preserves the various substances around us from falling in pieces. The nature of this wonderful property is entirely unknown. The attraction of composition is that which the particles of every simple substance have to other simple substances with which they have an affinity, and which causes them to unite together and form a new compound. Figuratively, the power of alluring, enticing or engaging the affections of a person. SYNON. Attractions may be said to engage us, allurements to entice us, charms to seduce us.

ATTRACTIVE, s. [attractif, Fr.] that has the power of drawing another to itself; inviting, alluring, engaging.

ATTRACTIVE, s. that which can draw or engage the affections; differing from allurement, as that is used in a bad sense, but attraction generally in a good one. In physic, attractives are medicines externally applied, that by their warmth and activity penetrate the pores, mixing with, and rarefying all obstructed matter, so as to fit it for discharge, upon laying open the part. These are what we call drawers, ripeners, maturants, and digestives.

ATTRACTIVELY, ad. in the manner of a thing, or person, which draws or allures something.

ATTRACTIVENESS, s. the quality by which a thing attracts, or allures.

ATTRACTOR, s. that which draws towards itself.

ATTRAHENT, part. [attrahens, Lat.] that has the quality of drawing towards itself.

ATTRIBUTABLE, a. [from attribuo, Lat.] that may be affirmed as belonging to a thing; that may be ascribed or imputed to a thing or person.

To ATTRIBUTE, v. a. [attribuo, Lat.] to affirm as belonging to a thing; to ascribe as a property; to impute, or charge, applied to a cause.

ATTRIBUTE, s. [attribut, Fr.] the thing attributed to another; quality adherent. In a general sense, it is that which agrees with some person or thing; or a quality determining something to be after a certain manner. Thus understanding is an attribute of mind, and extension an attribute of body. That attribute which the mind conceives as the foundation of all the rest, is called its essential attribute; thus, extension is by some, and solidity by others, esteemed the essential attributes of body or matter. Attributes, in divinity, are the several qualities or perfections of the divine nature, and such as can be applied to God only; under which is included all that we can imagine to go to make up a perfect being, such as infinite goodness, power, justice, &c. The heathens appropriated a particular deity to each attribute: his power they called by the name of Jupiter; his wisdom, Apollo; his will, Fate; his wrath, Juno; &c. In painting and statuary, attribute is some distinguishing addition to the principal figure; as the club to Hercules, the peacock to Juno, the eagle to Jupiter, &c.

ATTRIBUTION, s. [attributio, Lat.] something ascribed; character or reputation.

ATTRITE, a. [attritus, Lat.] worn off by rubbing two bodies together.

ATTRITENESS, s. quality produced by the rubbing of two bodies together, so as to wear off some of their surfaces.

ATTRITION, s. [attritio, Lat.] the action of rubbing two bodies together, so as to wear away or rub off some particles on their surfaces.

To ATTUNE, v. a. to put an instrument into tune; to make the voice or any instruments accord together, and sound the same notes, or key.

AVA, a large city in India, the capital of the Burman empire. It is seated on the river Ava. The streets are very straight, and the houses are built with teek planks, and bamboos. It is 520 miles E. of Calcutta, and 276 E. NE. of Aracan. Lat. 21. 0. N. lon. 96. 30. E.

To AVAIL, v. a. [from valoir, Fr.] to turn to one's own use, benefit, profit, or advantage; to promote or procure; to be of use, or advantage.

AVAILABLE, a. applied to means, it signifies their suitableness or efficacy to obtain the end; powerful, or proper.

AVANTGUARD, s. [avantgarde, Fr.] in war, the first line or division of an army in battle array; or that part which is seen by the enemy, and marches first against him.

AVARICE, s. [avarice, Fr.] in morality, an immoderate love and desire after riches, attended with extreme diffidence of future events, excessive precaution against the instability of fortune, making a person rob himself of the necessary comforts of life, for fear of diminishing his riches.

AVARICIOUS, a. that partakes of the nature of avarice.

AVARICIOUSLY, ad. covetously.

AVARICIOUSNESS, s. that quality which inclines a person to desire riches immoderately, to make no use of them, when possessed of them, for fear of diminishing them, and denominates him an avaricious person.

AVAST, ad. [from basta, Ital.] hold, stop; a sea-term.

AVAUNT, interj. [avant, Fr.] a word implying detestation or abhorrence; signifying, begone! out of my sight!

AUBURN, a town of Wiltshire, with a considerable manufacture of fustian. It is situated near Ramsbury, on a branch of the Kennet, 3 miles N. E. of Marlborough, and 81 W. of London. It had 72 dwelling-houses, to the value of £20,000, destroyed by fire, in 1760. Market on Tuesday.

AUBURNE, a. [from auborn, Fr.] brown; tan-coloured.

AUCTION, s. [auctio, Lat.] a method of sale wherein goods are sold to the highest bidder.

AUCTIONARY, a. belonging to an auction.

AUCTIONEER, s. the manager of an auction.

AUDA'CIOUS, a. [audacieux, Fr.] a term relative to the nature of an action, applied to the disposition of mind of one who undertakes it, and the manner in which it is executed. With respect to the nature of the action, it implies something difficult, and attended with many obstacles; that the person is of such a disposition of mind as not to matter what difficulties he encounters; and that he shews a great deal of impudence in rendering his attempt effectual; so that the word is properly applied in a bad sense only.

AUDA'CIOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as bespeaks a daring impudence.

AUDA'CIOUSNESS, s. that quality which argues a disposition of mind that will induce a person to undertake any action, let the difficulties be what they will. Always used in a bad sense, and including the secondary idea of impudence.

AUDA'CITY, s. [audacitas, Lat.] a disposition of mind which makes a person capable of undertaking any difficult action, and frees him from those apprehensions which might render him inactive, or unfit for the offices of society.

AUDIBLE, a. [audibilis, Lat.] that is the object of hearing; that may be heard.

AUDIBLENESS, s. that which renders a thing the object of hearing, or to be heard.

AUDIBLY, ad. in such a manner as to be heard.

AUDIENCE, s. [audience, Fr.] that attention which is given to a person while he is speaking. In a court sense, the admission of ambassadors or public ministers to a king, in order to deliver the credentials of their sovereign, and to open the intentions for which they are sent. In history, the tribunals or courts of justice established by the Spaniards in America. Persons assembled in order to hear a public speaker. Audience Chamber, a court belonging to the archbishop of Canterbury, wherein differences upon elections, consecrations, institutions, marriages, &c. are heard; of equal authority with the Court of Arches.

AUDIT, s. [Lat.] in law, the hearing and examining the account of persons concerned in the receipt of money, by persons publicly appointed for that purpose.

To AUDIT, v. a. [audio, Lat.] to examine an account.

AUDITOR, s. [Lat.] one who hears; one who is present when any thing is delivered in public; who examines and passes either public or private accounts.

AUDITORY, a. [auditorius, Lat.] that conduces to hearing. In anatomy, the auditory nerves are a pair of nerves arising from the medulla oblongata, and distributed, the one to the ear, the soft and spongy part of which is the immediate cause of hearing; and the other to the eye, &c.

AUDITORY, s. [auditorium, Lat.] a place where persons assemble to hear any discourse; a collection of persons so assembled.

A'VE MARIA, s. [Lat. hail, Mary!] a prayer used by the Romish church, beginning with those words, in honour of the Virgin Mary.

To AVENGE, v. a. [venger, Fr.] to punish in proportion to the enormity of crimes: and distinguished from revenge, because that is always used in a bad, but this in a good sense.

AVENGEMENT, s. the act of punishing for crimes.

AVENGER, s. one who inflicts punishment for crimes.

A'VENS, s. the herb bennet. It has upright yellow blossoms, lyre-shaped leaves, and airy globular fruit. The root, infused in wine, is said to be a good stomachic. There is a sort of cinquefoil that is called by this name.

AVENTURE, s. in law books, a mischance, causing a man's death without felony.

A'VENUE, s. [avenue, Fr.] a passage or opening. In gardening, a walk of trees leading to a house. In perspective, it is a passage, which is narrower at the end than at the beginning, in order to make it appear the longer, or straight, when viewed at the narrowest end. In fortification, the opening, inlet to, or communication between, a fort and a bastion.

To AVER, v. a. [avérer, Fr.] to affirm or assert a thing to be true with some degree of positiveness.

A'VERAGE, s. [averagium, law Lat.] in law, a due or service which a tenant owed his lord by his beast or carriage. In sea-commerce, the accidents or misfortunes which happen to a ship or cargo, divided into simple, large, common, or small: an allowance given to the master for his care of the goods above the freight. A medium; a mean proportion.

AVERMENT, s. in law, the establishment of a thing by evidence; an offer to make good an exception pleaded in abatement of the plaintiff's action, and an actual doing it.

AVERNAT, s. a sort of grape.

AVERSA'TION, s. [from aversor, Lat.] a term alluding to the motion of a person who detests any thing, which is that of turning away from it.

AVERSE, a. [aversus, Lat.] hostile or angry with; unwilling, abhorring.

AVERSELY, ad. in a manner which shews great unwillingness. Backwards, opposed to forwards.

AVERSENESS, s. unwillingness; backwardness.

AVERSION, s. [aversion, Fr.] dislike, arising from the disagreeableness of an object; the cause of dislike.

To AVERT, v. a. [averto, Lat.] to turn aside; to keep off.

AUF, s. [alf, Belg.] a person void of discretion, or common sense; a fool.

AUGER, or AUGRE, s. [egger, Belg.] in mechanics, an instrument used by carpenters and coopers to bore holes with, consisting of a handle and bit.

AUGHT, pron. [auht, Sax.] any thing; applied to the extent of a person's knowledge, as far as.

To AUGMENT, v. a. [augmenter, Fr.] to increase the value or dimension of a thing by the addition of something else. SYNON. Our ambition augments with our fortune; and we are no sooner in possession of one hundred pounds, than we are eager to add to it another.

AUGMENT, s. [augmentum, Lat.] increase, applied to the dimension of a body or the progress of a disease.

AUGMENTATION, s. increase, enlargement, improvement. Also a court so called, erected 27 Henry VIII. when by the suppression of the monasteries, the revenue of the crown was augmented; and the office still remains, in which are many curious records, though the court has been long since dissolved. In heraldry, the additional charges to a coat of armour, frequently given as particular marks of honour, and generally borne either on the escutcheon or a canton; as have all the baronets of England, who have borne the arms of the province of Ulster in Ireland.

AUGSBURG, a considerable city in Germany. Under the old constitution, it was an imperial city, the metropolis of the circle of Swabia, and belonged alike to the catholics and protestants. The public buildings are magnificent. Besides the cathedral, here are six Roman catholic parish churches, and six Lutheran. It is surrounded by beautiful plains and large forests, abounding with game. The celebrated confession of the Lutheran faith, is called the Augsburg confession, because it was presented to a diet which was holden here. It is distant 30 miles from Munich. Lat. 48. 27. N. lon. 11. 4. E.

AUGUR, s. [Lat.] a minister of religion among the ancient Romans, appointed to take presages concerning futurity, from birds, beasts, and the appearances of the heavens.

To AUGUR, v. n. to foretell; to guess at; to presage.

To AUGURATE, v. n. [augurio, Lat.] to produce by signs, after the manner of an augur.

AUGURATION, s. the practice of determining future events in the manner of augurs.

AUGURIAL, a. according to the principles of an augur.

AUGURY, s. [augurium, Lat.] in antiquity, a species of divination, or the art of foretelling future events, and distinguished into five sorts, namely, augury from the heavens; from birds; from chickens; from quadrupeds; and from portentous events. Of this kind are also the more modern magic, astrology, palmistry, &c. which, though formerly very much practised, are now justly exploded as inconsistent with reason and true philosophy.

AUGUST, a. [augustus, Lat.] that may claim reverence on account of its dignity or rank, or expect awe from its appearance.

AUGUST, s. [from Augustus,] since the alteration of the style, the eighth month of the year, called by the Romans Sextilis, or the sixth month from March; but named August from Augustus Cæsar. It was represented by the ancients under the figure of a young man with a fair countenance, crowned with a garland of wheat, a basket of fruit under his arm, a sickle in his hand, and bearing a victim.

AUGUSTA, capital of Georgia, in N. America, about 130 miles from the sea, seated on the S. W. bank of the river Savannah, which flowing through a fine plain country, is navigable for barges managed by means of poles. Here is a bridge over the water to the Carolina side, which is hilly. From its excellent soil, and central situation, between the upper and lower countries it is rising into importance.

AUGUSTINES, a religious order of the church of Rome, who follow the rule of St. Augustine, prescribed them by pope Alexander IV. Among other things, this rule enjoins to have all things in common, to receive nothing without the leave of the superior; and several other precepts relating to charity, modesty, and chastity. The Augustines are clothed in black, and make one of the four orders of begging friars. There are likewise nuns of this order.

AUGUSTNESS, s. that quality which renders a person an object of reverence, awe, and homage.

AVIARY, s. [aviarium, Lat.] a place inclosed for keeping a collection of birds. Figuratively, the collection of birds kept in such a place.

AVIDITY, s. [aviditas, Lat.] greediness, eagerness, an insatiable love of money.

AVIGNON, a large city in the dept. of Vaucluse, declared a part of France, since the revolution; but before it, the capital of a little sovereignty, subject to the pope, whose legate resided here. In Avignon they reckon seven gates, seven palaces, seven colleges, seven hospitals, seven monasteries, seven nunneries, and seven popes who resided there in 70 years. Lat. 43. 57. N. lon. 4. 59. E.

AVILA, an ancient city of old Castile, with an university, and a manufactory of fine cloth. It is seated in a large plain, surrounded by mountains, and covered with fruit-trees and vineyards, 40 miles N. W. of Madrid.

AVISO, s. [Ital.] in commerce, notice or information given by letter.

AUKLAND, bishop, a large well built town in Durham, chiefly remarkable for one of the palaces of the bishop of Durham. A manufacture of calico and muslin has lately been established here. It is situated 12 miles from Durham, and 250 from London. Market on Thursday.

AUKWARD, a. See AWKWARD.

AULCESTER, an ancient town of Warwickshire, with a manufactory of needles. It is situated at the union of the rivers Alne and Arrow, 7 miles W. of Stratford-upon-Avon, 14 from Warwick, and 102 N. W. of London. Market on Tuesday.

AULIC, a. [aulicus, Lat.] belonging to the court. In history, applied to the highest court of the emperor of Germany, originally instituted to determine the disputes between the emperor and his subjects.

AUNT, (ānt) s. [tante, Fr.] a female relation, who is a sister either to a person's father or mother.

AVOCADO, s. [Span.] a tree that grows in great plenty in the Spanish West Indies. The fruit is of itself very insipid, for which reason they generally eat it with the juice of lemons and sugar, to give it a poignancy.

To AVOCATE, v. a. [avoco, Lat.] to call a person from a thing he is engaged in.

AVOCATION, s. [avocatio, Lat.] the diverting a person's attention from something he is already engaged in.

To AVOID, v. a. [vuider, Fr.] to forbear; to shun; to quit, or leave.

AVOIDABLE, a. that is possible to escape the effects of a thing; that may be escaped or shunned.

AVOIDANCE, s. the act whereby one frees himself from the effects of any cause; the act of emptying or carrying off.

AVOIDER, s. the person who shuns, escapes, or carries away; the vessels used to carry things away in.

AVOIDLESS, a. inevitable, that cannot be avoided.

AVOIRDUPOIS, s. [avoir du pois, Fr.] a kind of weight, supposed to be borrowed from the Romans, a pound of which contains 16 oz. bearing the same proportion to 1 lb. troy, as 14 to 16. All coarser commodities are bought by this weight.

AVOLATION, s. [from avolo, Lat.] the flying away; flight, or escape.

AVOSET, s. a bird which sometimes frequents our marshes, and is remarkable for having its bill turned upwards.

To AVOUCH, v. a. [avouer, Fr.] to prove by voucher or proper authorities; positively to maintain the truth of a thing; to justify or vindicate. Vouch is in use at present, in its stead.

AVOUCH, s. proof, witness, evidence.

AVOUCHABLE, a. that may be proved by evidence or vouchers.

AVOUCHER, s. he that proves the truth of an assertion by proper vouchers, or evidence.

To AVOW, v. a. [avouer, Fr.] to profess openly, without any dissimulation.

AVOWABLE, a. that may be publicly owned without dissembling, and sometimes without shame.

AVOWAL, s. a public confession, without the least dissimulation.

AVOWEDLY, ad. in a public open manner; professedly; publicly.

AVOWEE', s. [avoué, Fr.] the person to whom the representation of any benefice, or the right of advowson, belongs.

AVOWER, s. one who openly professes, asserts, or declares, without dissimulation.

AVOWRY, s. in law, the avowing or confessing the having taken a distress for rent, when the person distained sues for a replevin.

AVOWTRY, s. adultery.

AVRANCHES, a very ancient city in the department of the channel in France. It stands on a mountain, at the foot of which flows the river See, one mile and a half from the English channel, and 30 E. of St. Malo.

AURELIA, s. [Lat.] in natural history, the second change of a caterpillar, towards a moth or fly, in which it seems deprived of motion, receives no nourishment, and appearing sometimes with a yellow gold-coloured skin, is called by this name.

AURELIAN, s. a naturalist, who applies himself to study the various changes of insects; sometimes applied to one who breeds and describes the various states of moths and butterflies.

AURICLE, s. [auricula, Lat.] in anatomy, the external ear, or that which is prominent from the head.

AURICULA, s. the flower bear's-ear, of which there are many varieties.

AURICULAR, a. [auricularis, Lat.] that belongs to the ear; secret or private, as if whispered in a person's ear. Auricular confession, in the Romish church, is the private confession a person makes of his sins to a priest, in order to receive absolution.

AURI'CULARLY, ad. in a private or secret manner.

AURI'FEROUS, a. [aurifer, Lat.] that produces gold.

AURI'GA, in astronomy, the Waggoner, a constellation in the northern hemisphere.

AURIGA'TION, s. [from auriga, Lat.] the dividing a vehicle or carriage.

AURIPIGMENTUM, s. See ORPIMENT.

AURO'RA, s. [Lat.] in geography, that faint dawn which appears in the E. when the sun is within 18 degrees of the horizon. In mythology, the goddess who presides over day-break, the daughter of Hyperion and Thea, or of the Sun and Earth. She is described in all the pomp of imagination by Homer, covered with a great vail, with rosy fingers and hair sprinkling the dew, and expanding the cups of flowers. Aurora Borealis is an extraordinary meteor, or luminous appearance, shewing itself in the night in the northern parts of the heavens. Various reasons have been given by philosophers for this phenomenon; but as no two of them agree, and perhaps are all mistaken as to the real cause, we shall not trouble the reader with their conjectures. It is very common in countries near the pole, but rarely in England, none being recorded in our annals from Nov. 14, 1574, till the surprising one of March 6, 1716, since which time they have been and still continue very frequent.

AURUM FULMINANS, s. [thundering gold, Lat.] in chemistry, precipitate of gold, a powder, which, when cast into the fire, produces a loud noise like thunder. Aurum musivum, mosaic gold, a combination of white oxyde, of tin, with sulphur, by means of mercury; an article used by artists to give a beautiful colour to bronze. Aurum potabile, tincture of gold, a quack medicine prepared by mixing solution of gold with essential oil of rosemary, when the gold swims atop. The virtues of this tincture are entirely owing to the oil of rosemary.

AUSCULTA'TION, s. [from auscultо, Lat.] a hearkening, or listening to.

AU'SPICE, s. [auspicium, Lat.] the art of divination, confined to the flight or singing of birds; a prosperous event, or the favour and protection of a lucky person.

AUSPI'CIAL, a. relating to prognostics.

AUSPI'CIOUS, a. that promises success; favourable, fortunate, kind, propitious, applied to persons.

AUSPI'CIOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to promise success.

AUSTE'RE, a. [austerus, Lat.] applied to morals, rigid and mortified, opposed to effeminate, or luxurious. Applied to tastes, rough, sour, and astringent, like that of unripe fruits.

AUSTE'RELY, ad. in a rigid mortifying manner.

AUSTE'RITY, s. a state of rigid severity and mortification, sometimes including the secondary idea of sourness or moroseness; severity or harshness of discipline.

AUSTRAL, a. [australis, Lat.] that is towards the south; as, the austral signs.

AUSTRALA'SIA, one of the six grand divisions of the globe, consisting principally of the vast island of New Holland.

AUSTRA'LIS PISCIS, the southern Fish, a constellation of the southern hemisphere, not visible in our latitude.

AU'STRIA, a large country of Europe, bounded on the N. by Bohemia and Moravia, on the E. by Hungary, on the S. by Styria, and on the W. by the archbishopric of Saltzburg. The river Ens divides it into the Upper and Lower; Vienna is the capital of the Lower, and Lintz the capital of the Upper. Austria excels all the neighbouring states in the fertility of its soil, the plenty of its pastures, and the wholesomeness of the air. Corn, wine, and fruit, are very plentiful; and the saffron better than that of the East Indies. When Francis II. emperor of Germany, resigned that high dignity, in consequence of the great changes effected in the empire by the French, he assumed the title of Francis I. emperor of Austria. (Aug. 7, 1806.)

AUTHE'NTIC, or AUTHE'NTICAL, a. [authenticus, Lat.] of established authority; that is attended with full proof, and attested by persons who deserve credit.

AUTHE'NTICALLY, ad. in such a manner as to procure credit.

To AUTHE'NTICATE, v. a. to establish a thing by the necessary proofs of its genuineness.

AUTHENTI'CITY, s. the genuineness of a thing, supported by proper proofs and authorities.

AUTHE'NTICLY, ad. in such a manner as to evince a thing to be genuine.

AU'THOR, s. [auctor, Lat.] in its more proper sense, one who creates and produces any thing; the original inventor or discoverer of any new art or principle; one who writes upon any subject, opposed to a translator or compiler.

AUTHO'RITATIVE, a. that has an influence over another; that commands or obliges.

AUTHO'RITATIVELY, ad. in such a manner as to bespeak proper authority or license.

AUTHO'RITATIVENESS, s. that quality which shews a person to be properly licensed, or to have authority for the doing any thing.

AUTHO'RITY, s. [auctoritas, Lat.] a power which leaves a person the liberty of choice, arising from superiority of rank or reason; includes the secondary idea of respect, and is applied to God, with respect to his creatures; and to parents with respect to their children; applied to arguments, it denotes their strength. SYNON. There appears in the idea of authority something just and respectable; in the idea of power, something strong and active; and in the idea of dominion, something great and elevated.

AUTHORIZA'TION s. the act of communicating authority.

To AU'THORIZE, v. a. [authoriser, Fr.] to give a person licence or authority to perform a thing; to encourage; to justify; to give credit.

AUTO'CRACY, s. [autos himself, and kratos power, Gr.] independent power.

AUTOGRA'PHICAL, a. [from autos himself, and grapho to write, Gr.] that is written by a person's own hand.

AUTO'GRAPHY, s. [from autos himself, and grapho to write, Gr.] a persons own hand writing. An original, opposed to a copy.

AUTOMA'TICAL, a. that hath the quality of an automaton; that is endued with a power to move itself. In the animal œconomy, applied by Boerhaave to express those motions which arise purely from the structure of the body, and over which the will has no power.

AUTO'MATON, s. [from autos himself, and maomai to be excited, Gr.] in mechanics, an engine which has the principle of motion in itself.

AUTO'MATOUS, a. [automatos, Gr.] that has the power of motion in itself.

AUTOPSY, s [from autos himself, and optomai to see, Gr.] the seeing a thing with ones own eyes. Applied by the ancients to the communications which the soul was supposed to have with the gods in the Eleusinian mysteries.

AUTO'PTICAL, a. [from autos himself, and optomai to see, Gr.] that is seen by ones own eyes.

AUTO'PTICALLY, ad. in such a manner as a person may be an eye-witness.

AU'TUMN, (autum) s. [autumnus, Lat.] the third season of the year, wherein the fruits are gathered in commencing astronomically on the 23d of September, and ending on the 21st of December; popularly including August, September, and October. Some nations compute their years by autumns, the Saxons by winters, and, according to Tacitus, the Germans had no idea of this season. In painting, autumn is represented by a man at perfect age, clothed like the Spring, and girded with a starry girdle, holding in one hand a pair of scales, equally poised, with a globe in each; in the other a bunch of divers fruits and grapes. His age denotes the perfection of this season, and the balance, that sign of the zodiac which the sun enters when our autumn begins.

AUTUMNAL, a. that belongs to autumn; that is produced in autumn. In astronomy, the autumnal point, is that point of the equinoctial line from whence the sun begins to descend towards the south. The autumnal signs are Libra Scorpio, and Sagittarius. Autumnal equinox, the time when the sun enters the autumnal point, which is about the 23d of September.

AUTUN, anciently AUGUSTODUNUM, a city in the dept of Saone and Loire, situated near the river Arroux, at the foot of three mountains. It contains besides the cathedral, 8 parish churches, and before the revolution, had several religious houses. Here are also a great number of Roman antiquities, particularly, the temples of Janus and Cybele. They have manufactures of tapestry, from cow's hair and thread, carpets, coverlets, and delft ware. It is 45 miles E. by S. of Nevers, and 162 SE. of Paris. Lat. 46. 57. N. lon. 4. 23. E.

AVULSION, s. [avulsio, Lat.] the act of pulling asunder two bodies already united, implying the secondary idea of some exertion or force.

AUXERRE, a city in the department of Yonne in France, containing 12 parish churches, and about 16,000 inhabitants. It is 25 miles S. of Sens.

AUXILIAR, or AUXILIARY, s. [from auxiliaris, Lat.] a person who assists another, whether in war, peace, works of strength, or the products of the understanding.

AUXILIAR, or AUXILIARY, a. [auxiliaris. Lat.] that affords help or assistance. In grammar, applied to such verbs as are prefixed to others, and help to conjugate certain tenses, which are on that account named compound ones.

To AWAIT, v. a. to expect a thing in future; to be reserved, or designed for.

To AWAKE, v. a. [pret. awôke; weccian, Sax.] to raise from sleep. Figuratively, to rouse a thing in a dormant or latent state into action. Neuterly, it signifies to cease to sleep; also to be cautious; to be on one's guard; to take such measures as not to be surprised by an approaching calamity or enemy.

AWAKE, a. not being asleep; not sleeping.

To AWAKEN, v. a. pret. awakened. See AWAKE This seems to be the best word.

To AWARD, v. a. [the a in the second syllable is pronounced hard like au; weardig, Sax.] to pass sentence, or determine a controversy, as an arbitrator. Figuratively, to give one's opinion.

AWARD, s. [see the preceding word] the judgment or opinion of a person chosen by contending parties to determine a difference between them.

AWARE, ad. perceiving; cautious; or upon one's guard.

AWAY, ad. [aweg. Sax.] after the verb go, or be, it implies absent, or out of sight. At the beginning of a sentence it has the force of a verb in the imperative mood, and signifies leave this place. "Away, old man." Shak. Sometimes joined to a verb it implies to lose, including the idea of lavishing, squandering, or profusion.

AWE, s. [ege, or oga, Sax.] a respect mixed with terror, including the idea of superior rank, authority, or parts.

To AWE, v. a. to influence a person by one's authority, dignity, or age.

AWFUL, a. that causes respect, joined with fear, on account of its dignity, authority, or age.

AWFULLY, ad. in such a manner as to command respect, joined with fear; including the secondary ideas of authority and dignity.

AWFULNESS, s. that quality which attracts respect mixed with fear.

AWHILE, ad. applied to time, space, interval; some time.

AWKWARD, a. [from awkward, Sax.] applied to the mind, perverse; applied to the behaviour, clumsy; unhandy; clownish.

AWKWARDLY, ad. in a clumsy manner.

AWKWARDNESS, s. that quality which shews a person not to have been conversant with the elegancies of polite life; and denotes him to be clownish and clumsy.

AWL, s. [æle, or ale, Sax.] a sharp-pointed instrument used by shoemakers to make holes, in order to expedite their work.

AWLESS, a. irreverent; without the power of causing reverence.

AWL-SHAPED, a. in botany, applied to the leaves, threads, or seeds, slender, and becoming finer towards the end, like an awl.

AWME, or AUME, s. a Dutch liquid measure, containing equal to the tierce in England, or to one-sixth of a ton in France.

AWN, s. the slender sharp substance, growing to the valves of corn or grass, and frequently called a beard.

AWNING, s. [from aulne, Fr.] the hanging a sail or tarpauling over any part of a ship to keep the sun off.

AWRY, ad. [in pron. the w is dropped] out of a straight line; out of a perpendicular direction; on one side; not even. Figuratively, erroneously.

AX, or AXE, s. [eax, Sax.] a carpenter's instrument to hew wood; its edge tapers to the middle of the blade, and it has a long handle to be used with both hands.

AXBRIDGE, a town in Somersetshire, with a market on Thursday. It is seated under Mendip-hills, which are rich in lead mines, and proper for feeding cattle. It is a mayor town, consisting of one principal street, which is long, but narrow; 10 miles N. W. of Wells, 131 W. of London.

AXILLA, s. Lat. the cavity under the upper part of the arm, called the arm-pit.

AXILLAR, or AXILLARY, a. [axillaris, Lat.] belonging to the arm-pit.

AXIOM, s [from axioo to be worthy, Gr.] a plain, self-evident proposition, as that nothing can act where it is not; that a thing cannot be and not be, at the same time; that the whole is greater than a part thereof; and that from nothing, nothing can arise. This word is principally restrained to mathematics, and when used to other purposes is frequently called a maxim.

AXIS, s. [Lat. axes, plural] in geometry, astronomy, &c. is an imaginary line, passing through the centre of any figure or orbit. Thus the axis of the world is a line conceived to pass through the centre of the earth from one pole to the other, about which the sphere, or the world, in the Newtonian system, revolves in its diurnal rotation. The axis of a planet is that line drawn through its centre, about which the planet revolves. So likewise the sun, with all the other planets, except Mercury and Herschel, are known by observation to move about their respective axes. The axis of the earth, during its revolution round the sun, remains always parallel to itself, and is inclined to the plane of the ecliptic, making with it an angle of about 66 degrees. In conic sections, axis is a right line, dividing the sections into two equal parts, and cutting all its ordinates at right angles. In mechanics, the axis of balance, is that line about which it moves or rather turns about. Axis of oscillation, is a right line parallel to the horizon, passing through the centre, about which a pendulum vibrates. In optics, axis is that ray, among all others that are sent to the eye, which falls perpendicularly upon it, and which consequently passes through the centre of the eye. In architecture, spiral axis, is the axis of a twisted column drawn spirally, in order to trace the circumvolution without. Axis, in anatomy, is the second vertebra of the neck, so called from the head's turning on it like an axis.

AXIS, s. a very beautiful animal of the deer kind, which has its horns divided into three branches. It is a native of India.

AXLE, or AXLE-TREE, s. [æse and treow, Sax.] a piece of wood, &c. which passes through the centre of a wheel, on which it turns.

AXMINSTER, a town of Devonshire, with a market on Saturday. It is seated on the river Ax, near the edge of the county, in the great road from London to Exeter, and was a place of some note in the time of the Saxons. It is governed by a portreve; has one church, and about 200 houses; but the streets, though paved, are narrow. Here is a small manufactory of broad and narrow cloths; some carpets are also made in the Turkey manner It is 25 miles E. by N. of Exeter, and 147 W. of London.

AY, ad. [perhaps from aio, Lat.] yes; used to affirm the truth of a thing.

AYE, ad. [owa, Sax.] generally used after for, and implies time without end; for ever; to all eternity.

AYLESBURY. See ALESBURY.

AYR, a sea-port of Ayrshire, in Scotland, situated on a sandy plain, and built on both sides of the river Ayr, which rises on the borders of Lanerkshire, and crossing the county, to which it gives name, runs into the Clyde, near the town of Ayr. Its waters possess a petrifying quality, and wood petrified in it makes excellent hones for razors. Over it there is a bridge of 4 arches, in the middle of the town. The inhabitants carry on a considerable trade in coals and grain, and there is a profitable fishery of cod and haddock on the coast: they have also flourishing manufactures of cotton, iron, tambour works, &c. The market-cross here is a valuable relict of antiquity, purporting, by the date which it bears, to have been built in 1055. It is 65 miles S. W. of Edinburgh.

AYRESHIRE, a large commercial county of Scotland, bounded on the W. N. W. and N. by the river Clyde and Renfrewshire; on the E. by the counties of Lanerk and Dumfries; and on the S. E. and S. by the shires of Kirkcudbright and Wigtown. It is about 60 miles in length, and from 20 to 25 in breadth; it is divided into 46 parishes, and in 1791, contained about 83,892 souls, having gained an increase within the last forty years, of 14,883 inhabitants.

AYRY, or AERY, s. a nest or company of hawks, so called from the old French word aire, which signified the same.

AZIMUTH, s. [Arab.] is an arch of the horizon, comprehended between the meridian of the place and any given vertical, and is the complement of the eastern and western amplitude to a quadrant. The magnetical azimuth, is an arch of the horizon contained between the sun's azimuth circle and the magnetical meridian. Azimuth compass, is an instrument used at sea for finding the sun's magnetical azimuth. Azimuth dial, is one whose stile or gnomon is at right angles to the plane of the horizon. Azimuth circles, called Azimuths, are great circles of the sphere, intersecting each other in the zenith and nadir, and cutting the horizon at right angles in all the points thereof. The azimuths are represented by the rhumbs on common sea-charts, and on the globe they are represented by the quadrant of altitude when screwed in the zenith. On the azimuth is reckoned the height of the stars, and of the sun, when not in the meridian.

AZORES, a group of islands in the Atlantic ocean, between 25 and 32 degrees of W. longitude, and between 37 and 40 N. latitude; 900 miles W. of Portugal, and as many E. of Newfoundland. They were first discovered in 1439, by John Vanderberg, a merchant of Bruges, who was driven here by stress of weather. On his arrival at Lisbon, he boasted of his discovery; on which the Portuguese set sail, and took possession of them, which they have ever since retained. All these islands enjoy a very clear sky, and salubrious air; they are extremely fertile in corn, wine, and a variety of fruits; and they breed large quantities of cattle.

AZOTE, s. in modern chemistry, a name given to nitrogen, because it kills all animals which are obliged to breathe it alone.

AZOTH, s. among the old chemists, the first matter of metals.

AZOTIC, a. in chemistry, belonging to azote, or nitrogen.

AZURE, s. in the general sense, signifies the blue colour of the sky. Among painters, it is the blue colour, with a greenish cast, prepared from the lapis lazuli, generally called ultramarine. It likewise signifies that bright blue colour prepared from the lapis armenus. This colour is colour Lambert's blue. In heraldry, azure is the blue colour in the coat of arms of any person below the rank of a baron. In the escutcheon of a nobleman, it is called Sapphire; and in that of a sovereign prince, Jupiter. In engraving, this colour is expressed by lines or strokes drawn horizontally.

AZURE, a. that is of a sky or faint blue colour.

B

BIS the second letter of most alphabets, and in ours the first consonant. It is pronounced by pressing the whole length of the lips together, and forcing them open with a strong breath. It is used as an abbreviation: thus, in music, B stands for the tone above A, as Bb or bB does for B flat, or the semi-tone major above A; B also stands for bass, and B. C. for basso continuo, or thorough bass. As a numeral, B was used by the Greeks and Hebrews to denote 2; but among the Romans it stood for 300, and with a dash over it thus, B for 3000. The same people used B, for Brutus: B. F. for bonum factum. They likewise used B. and V. indifferently for each other. B. in the chemical alphabet signifies mercury. B. A. stands for bachelor of arts; B. L. for bachelor of laws; and B. D. for bachelor of divinity.

BA'A, s. a sound borrowed from, and expressive of, the bleating of a sheep.

To BA'A, v. a. [from the sound] to bleat like a sheep.

BA'AL, s. the supreme god of the ancient Phœnicians. Baal signifies Lord, and was applied to the sun.

BA'ALIM, s. inferior deities among the Phœnicians.

To BA'BBLE, v. n. [babbelen, Belg.] to prate like a child, without sense; to betray secrets; to talk without regard to place or circumstances.

BA'BBLE, s. [babil, Fr.] senseless prating.

BA'BBLEMENT, s. See BABBLE.

BA'BBLER, s. one who talks without any fund of sense, or without proper ideas of the words he makes use of.

BA'BE, or BA'BY, s. [baban, Brit.] a young child of either sex. Sometimes applied to one that can neither walk nor speak.

BA'BERY, s. finery to please a babe or child.

BA'BISH, a. that resembles the choice of a very young child; that belongs to a very young child; childish.

BABO'ON, s. [baboin, Fr.] a kind of monkeys with very muscular bodies and commonly short tails.

BA'BYLON, the capital of the ancient Babylonia or Chaldea, in Asia, is supposed to have stood in E. lon. 42. 53. N. lat. 33. 0. Semiramis is said by some, and Belus by others, to have founded this city. But by whomsoever it was founded, Nebuchadnezzar was the finisher of it; for he made it one of the wonders of the world. The most famous works in and about this city were, its walls, the temple of Belus, Nebuchadnezzar's palace, the hanging gardens, the banks of the river, the artificial lake, and canals. Its walls, which surrounded the city, were 87 feet thick, 350 feet high, and 480 furlongs (60 miles) in circumference. Such are the dimensions which Herodotus has handed down to us, who was himself at Babylon. These walls formed an exact square, each side of which was 120 furlongs (15 miles) in length, and were built of large bricks, cemented together with bitumen. The city was encompassed, without the walls, with a vast ditch, filled with water, and lined with bricks on both sides. In the whole compass of the wall were 100 gates, i. e. 25 on each side, all made of solid brass; and on the walls were 250 towers. The city, or town, within the walls, was regularly built; for from each of the 25 gates, on every side of the square, there was a straight street, extending to the corresponding gate in the opposite side; therefore the whole number of streets were 50, but they were each about 15 miles long, 25 of them crossing the other 25 exactly at right angles. By this intersection or crossing of the streets, the city was divided into 676 squares, each four furlongs and a half on each side, or two miles and a quarter in compass. Round these squares, on every side towards the streets, stood the houses, all of which were three or four stories high. The intermediate space within each of them was occupied as gardens, either for pleasure or convenience. A branch of the river Euphrates, which ran from N. to S. divided the city into two parts, by passing through the midst of it. The whole city stood in a large plain, in a very fat and deep soil. That part of it which stood on the east side of the river was the old city; and the other on the west was added by Nebuchadnezzar, both being included within the vast square, bounded by the walls above-mentioned. The glory of this city, however, did not last long; for Cyrus soon after removed the seat of the empire to Shushan, and Babylon by degrees fell to utter decay.

BABYLO'NIA, or CHALDEA, a kingdom of Asia, and the most ancient in the world, being founded by Nimrod, the grandson of Ham, who is supposed also to have founded Nineveh, the capital of the kingdom of Assyria. The history of these kingdoms is greatly involved in obscurity. It is plain, however, from sacred and profane history, that Babylonia subsisted as a distinct kingdom from Assyria, even when the latter was in its greatest splendour. The most probable account is, that the empire of Assyria was founded by Phul on the ruins of Damascus or Syria, in the days of Menahem king of Judah. This king left two sons, Tiglath-Pileser and Nabonassar. To the former he bequeathed the empire of Assyria, and to the latter that of Babylonia. Tiglath-Pileser resided at Nineveh, the original seat of the Assyrian empire, while Nabonassar, who was the younger brother, held his residence at Babylon. But about 626 before Christ, Nineveh was taken and destroyed by the Medes and Babylonians, (Nobopolassar being king of Babylon,) and the seat of the empire transferred to Babylon. Cyrus, the commander of the Median and Persian army, in an engagement, defeated the Babylonians, and blocked them up in the city of Babylon, which was stored with all kind of provisions or 20 years, and which he afterwards took by stratagem. It has frequently been the object of contention between the Turks and Persians.

BABYROUSSA, s. an animal of a slender shape, which bears some resemblance to a hog, but is distinguished by four remarkable tusks, two belonging to the lower, and two to the upper jaw: the latter pair growing to a great length, and turning backward, towards the ears. It inhabits the Indian islands.

BACCHANA'LIA, (Bakkanália) s. [Lat.] the drunken, revelling feasts of the heathen god Bacchus. There were two of these festivals celebrated in the year, one in the spring and the other in the autumn; but both were accompanied with games, spectacles, and theatrical representations, and it was at these times the poets contended for the prize of poetry. Those who were initiated into the celebration of these feasts, represented, some Silenus, others Pan, others Satyrs; and in this manner appeared in public night and day, counterfeiting drunkenness, dancing obscenely, committing all manner of licentiousness and debauchery; and running over the mountains and forests with horrible shrieks and howlings, crying out Io Bacche. In Rome they committed such shocking disorders, that the senate suppressed them.

BACCHANA'LIAN, (Bakkanálian) s. [from Bacchanalia, Lat.] one who attended the feasts of Bacchus. Figuratively, a riotous drunken person.

BA'CCHANALS, (Bákkanals) s. See BACCHANALIA.

BA'CCHARIS, s. in botany, ploughman's spikenard.

BA'CCHUS, s. in heathen mythology, the son of Jupiter and Semele, and the god of wine and drunkards.

BACCIFEROUS, a. [baccifer, Lat.] in botany, such vegetables as bear berries.

BA'CHELOR, s. a man who still continues in the state of celibacy, or who was never married. Anciently, it was a name given to those superior in quality to esquires, but had not a number of vassals sufficient to have their banner carried before them in the field of battle. They were usually young gentlemen, who endeavoured to acquire the title of Bachelors by their prowess; and being an order inferior to those called chevaliers or knights. Fauchet supposes they took their name from bas chevaliers, or the lowest order of knights. It was also a title given to young chevaliers, who, having made their first campaign, received the military girdle. It was likewise used to denominate him who had overcome another in combat the first time he ever engaged. In an university sense, Bachelors are those who have attained to the Baccalaureate; who have taken the first degree in the liberal arts and sciences. At Oxford, a person must be a student four years before he is entitled to be Bachelor of Arts; three years more before he attains the degree of Master of Arts; and in seven years more he may commence Bachelor of Divinity. At Cambridge the degrees are taken much the same as at Oxford, except in law and physic, in either of which the Bachelor's degree may be taken in six years.

BA'CHELORSHIP, s. the state of an unmarried man; the state, dignity, and office of a graduate, or bachelor, at an university.

BACK, s. [bac, bæc, Sax.] in anatomy, the hind part of the human structure, from the neck to the thighs. Applied to the hands, that part opposite to the palms. Applied to the array of an army, the rear. Applied to situation, the hind part, or that which is not in sight. Applied to an edge-tool or instrument, the thickest part of the blade, opposed to the edge. A large square trough or cistern, used by brewers to hold liquor in. Figuratively, a supporter, or one who will second another in an attempt.

BACK, ad. applied to motion, to the place from whence a person came. Applied to action, to retreat. Applied to time, that which is past. After keep, applied to the increase of plants, to stop or hinder the growth.

To BACK, v. a. to mount a horse; to break him for the saddle; to make him go backwards by pulling the reins. Figuratively, to second, support, or assist.

To BA'CKBITE, v. a. to speak against a person in his absence.

BA'CKBITER, s. one who censures the conduct, or vilifies the actions of a person in his absence.

BA'CK-BOARD, s. the board in a boat for passengers to lean their backs against; also the stiff milled paper put into the covers of books to preserve them from injury.

BA'CKBONE, s. the bone of the back.

BACKDOOR, s. a door or passage out of a house behind, opposed to the front. Figuratively, a private passage.

BA'CKED, part. having a back. Forced to go backwards.

BA'CKFRIEND, s. a false friend; or secret enemy.

BACKGA'MMON, s. a game played with dice and men on a board or table, veneered for that purpose.

BA'CKHOUSE, s. the building which lies behind a house.

BA'CKSIDE, s. the hinder part of any thing; the hinder part of an animal. Figuratively, a yard or ground behind a house.

To BACKSLIDE, v. n. in divinity, to return to idolatry, after having quitted it; to apostatize; to quit the true mode of worship.

BACKSLIDER, s. one who quits the true religion in order to embrace a false one; an apostate.

BA'CKSTAFF, s. an instrument used at sea to take the sun's altitude. This instrument, commonly called Davis's Quadrant, from the name of the inventor, and by the French the English Quadrant, is not so accurate as could be wished; and a large, heavy, brass Astrolabe is to be preferred before it.

BA'CKSTAIRS, s. the private stairs of a house, generally appropriated to the use of servants.

BA'CKSTAYS, s. in ship-building, the ropes belonging to the main and fore-masts, which keep them from pitching overboard.

BA'CKSWORD, s. a sword with only one sharp edge, and blunt back. Used, figuratively, for a cudgel, or the art of defending one's self with a cudgel.

BA'CKWARD, or BA'CKWARDS, ad. [back and weard, Sax.] applied to motion, it signifies the going from a person with the face towards him, the legs being moved towards the hind, instead of the fore part of a person; towards the back, or behind upon the back. "Backwards and forwards." Newton. Applied to the success of an undertaking, it implies, not to prosper or advance; to want success. Applied to time, some period that is past: or a portion of time already past.

BA'CKWARD, a. unwilling in allusion to making advances, anticipating or meeting a person's wishes; reluctant; slow; dull; not quick, or apprehensive.

BA'CKWARDLY, ad. applied to the motion whereby a person retreats or goes from another with his face towards him; in a perverse, unwilling manner; reluctantly.

BA'CKWARDNESS, s. that quality which proceeds from a dislike of the measures a person is to put in practice, the undertaking he is to accomplish, or the person he is to oblige, including the idea of slowness. Dulness; want of apprehension.

BA'CON, s. [bacaun, Brit.] the flesh of a hog salted, and sometimes dried. To save one's bacon, is a low phrase for preserving one's self from hurt or mischief.

BACULE, s. [Fr.] in fortification, a kind of portcullis, or gate, made like a pit-fall with a counterpoise supported by two stakes, placed before the corps du garde, advanced near the gate.

BACULOMETRY, s. [from baculus a staff, and metreo to measure, Gr.] the art of measuring accessible or inaccessible heights by means of staves or rods.

BAD, a. a relative term. Confined to natural agents, that which lessens or destroys the happiness of ourselves or others. Applied to moral agents, that which they voluntarily perform, in order to lessen or destroy their own happiness or that of others. Applied to persons, one who habitually transgresses the laws of duty prescribed by the Deity. Applied to actions, that which is performed contrary to any moral law. Applied to things, that which is prejudicial to our health, happiness, &c. PROV. A bad shift is better than none. Where bad's the best, nought must be the choice. A bad bush is better than the open field; that is, better to have any though a bad friend or relation, than to be quite destitute and exposed to the world.

BADA'JOS, a city of Spain, capital of Estremadura. It stands on an eminence on the S. side of the Guadiana, over which there is a bridge 700 paces long, and 14 broad, built by the Romans. It was taken by the English under Lord Wellington, in 1812. It is 175 miles S. by W. of Madrid. Lat. 38. 32. N. lon. 6. 50. W.

BADE, or BAD, the preter tense of BID

BA'DEN, a margravate in Swabia in Germany, in alliance with France.

BADGE, s. a mark worn by a person to denote his dignity, profession, trade, rank, &c.

To BADGE, v. a. to set a mark on a person; to stigmatize.

BA'DGER, s. [bedaw, Fr.] in law, one who is licensed to buy corn in one place, and sell it in another, and is exempted from the punishment of an engrosser, by 6 Ed. VI. In natural history a wild animal about the size of a fox, that lives in solitary places, feeds on fruits, and makes a desperate resistance when attacked by the dogs.

BA'DLY, ad. not agreeable to a person's wishes; in a manner inconsistent with a person's undertakings. Applied to health, sickly. Applied to the execution of any thing, not suitable to the ideas of taste, elegance, or proportion.

BA'DNESS, s. a quality which denotes a person habitually to transgress against the laws of his nature. Applied to things, it denotes that they are inconsistent with the good, ease, or pleasure of rational or irrational beings. Applied to roads, it signifies that they cannot be travelled with ease or pleasure. Applied to weather, it denotes a want of serenity, calmness, or sunshine. Applied to health, that it is infirm, and interrupted with sickness.

BA'DOUCE, s. in natural history, a fruit very common in the East Indies, of the size of an apple, and a taste resembling that of the gooseberry.

BA'FFIN'S BAY, a gulph of North America, discovered by one Baffin, an Englishman, in 1622, who attempted to find out a North West passage to the South Sea.

To BA'FFLE, v. a. [baffler, Fr.] to render the care of another insignificant; to frustrate the intentions of another.

BA'FFLER, s. the person, or thing, which defeats, or renders any thing abortive.

BAG, s. [belge, Sax.] in its primary sense, a receptacle made of linen, silk, or leather, to contain any thing, in the shape of a long square when empty, and open only at one of its ends; which is called the mouth. Likewise a kind of smaller bag, made of black silk, worn by gentlemen over the hind locks of their hair or perukes, as an ornament. In natural history, the thin membrane, or cystis, containing the poison of vipers, which they lay out of their mouths when eating their food; that which contains the honey in bees, &c. In commerce, a term of quantity; as, a bag of pepper, of aniseed, almonds, &c. In botany, a distended bladder-like seed-vessel, opening on one side, as in bladder senna.

To BAG, v. a. to put into a bag; to load with a bag. Used neuterly, to swell, so as to resemble a full bag.

BAGATE'LLE, s. [Fr.] a trifle; a toy.

BA'GDAD or BAGDAT, a celebrated city of Asia, the capital of Irak Arabi, on the banks of the river Tigris. This city, for many years the capital of the Saracen empire, was founded by caliph Al Mansur, the second of the house of Al Abbas, after the attempt of the Rawandians to assassinate him. This place has experienced a great deal of the horrors of war, it being an object of almost perpetual contention betweens the Persians and the Turks. Amurath, or Morad IV. with a formidable army made himself master of it in 1638; since which time the Persians have never been able to get possession of it for any length of time. The Turks have a garrison of 10,000 men here, which is doubled in time of war. Jan. 19, 1773, the plague appeared in this city for the first time; and made such havoc in the months of February, March, and April, that of about 400,000 inhabitants scarcely a fourth part were left alive. The inhabitants of the neighbouring towns of Hela, Iman Aly, Iman Hussein, and Iman Moussa, were entirely swept away. Lat. 33. 20. N. lon. 43. 52. E.

BA'GGAGE, s. [baggage, Fr.] the utensils of an army, so called from their being packed up in bags. Bag and baggage, a low phrase, to signify all a person's goods; a woman of no character; a prostitute.

BA'GNIO, (bánio) s. [bagno, Ital.] a house for bathing, a brothel.

BA'GPIPE, s. [from bag and pipe; the wind being received in a bag] a musical instrument, consisting of a leathern bag, which blows up, like a foot-ball, by means of a port-vent or little tube fixed to it, and stopped by a valve; and three pipes or flutes, the first called the great pipe or drone, and the second the little one, which pass the wind out only at the bottom; the third has a reed, and is played on by compressing the bag under the arm when full; and opening or stopping the holes, which are eight, with the fingers. The bagpipe takes in the compress of three octaves. It is a very favourite instrument in Scotland.

BA'GRE, s. a small bearded fish resembling an eel, which frequents the American seas. It is armed with prickles, which inflict a wound difficult to cure.

BAGUETTE, s. [Fr.] in architecture, a little round moulding, less than an astragal; sometimes carved and enriched.

BAHA'MA ISLANDS, or LUCAYA ISLANDS, situated to the S. of Carolina, between 22 and 27 degrees of N. latitude, and 73 and 81 of W. longitude. They extend along the coast of Florida to the Isle of Cuba, and are said to be 300 in number, mostly mere rocks; but 12 of them large and fertile: Providence, one of the least of these, is reckoned the most valuable. The island of Bahama, which is the largest, and gives name to the rest, is about 60 miles long, 9 wide. Lat. about 26, and 27. N. lon. about 78, and 80. W. They are possessed by the English, who have introduced the cotton seed here from Georgia, which is found to be well adapted to the soil and climate. The quantity of cotton they exported in 1792, was 5047 bales, weighing 1,162,822 pounds.

BAIL, s. [probably from bailler, Fr.] the act of freeing or setting a person at liberty who is arrested or imprisoned for an act civil or criminal, under security taken for his appearance; likewise the person who gives such security. Bail is either common or special. Common bail, is in actions of small concern, and is so called because any securities are taken. Special bail, is in causes of greater weight, as debts amounting to 10l. where he sureties must be subsidy men, answerable to the value.

To BAIL, v. a. to deliver a person from arrest, or imprisonment, by being surety for his appearance at a certain day; to admit to bail.

BAI'LABLE, a. that may be set at liberty by proper bail or sureties.

BAI'LIFF, s. [baillie, Fr.] an inferior officer of justice, appointed to execute writs, and other processes directed to the sheriff, and to summon county courts, sessions, assizes, and the like. There are also bailiffs of forests, and of manors, who direct husbandry, fell trees, gather rents, pay quit-rents, &c. A water-bailiff, is an officer appointed in port-towns, for the searching of ships, gathering the toll for anchorage, &c. and arresting persons for debt, &c. upon the water. Bailiff, is likewise the chief magistrate of several corporations. Governors of some of the king's castles are likewise called bailiffs.

BAI'LIWICK, s. the place or jurisdiction of a bailiff, within his hundred, or the lord's franchise.

BAI'LMENT, s. in law, is a delivery of goods in trust, upon a contract expressed or implied, that the trust shall be faithfully executed on the part of the bailee. As if cloth be delivered, or (in our legal dialect) bailed to a tailor to make a suit of clothes, he has it upon an implied contract to render it again when made, and that in a workmanly manner.

BAIRAM, s. in the mahometan customs, a yearly festival of the Turks, which they keep after the fast of Ramadan. It is concluded with a solemn prayer against the infidels, to extirpate christian princes, or to arm them against one another, that they may have an opportunity to extend their law.

To BAIT, v. a. [batan, Sax.] to put meat on a hook, &c. in order to catch fish or other animals; to refresh one's self or cattle by eating on a journey; to attack with violence; to set dogs upon.

BAIT, s. [baitze, Teut.] a piece of flesh, or other lure, made use of to catch fish, or ensnare animals. Figuratively, an allurement, or enticement; any thing which, under a specious appearance, contains mischief in itself, or produces it by its consequences. A refreshment on a journey; generally applied to cattle.

BAIT WHITE, s. a small fish which is caught in great plenty during the month of July, in the river Thames.

BAITING, s. an attack made by smaller or weaker beasts upon those which are larger and stronger. Bull-baiting is a sport peculiar to the English, and highly disgusting to moral and humane persons.

BAIZE, s. a coarse open woollen cloth, with or without a frize, without a wale, and wrought, like flannel, in a loom with two treddles.

To BAKE, v. a. [bacan, Sax.] to dress, or heat any thing in an oven. Figuratively, to harden with heat.

BA'KEHOUSE, s. a place where bread is made, rendered eatable by the heat of an oven, and exposed to sale; and where other meat or pastry is dressed.

BA'KER, s. one who subsists by making bread and baking. The trade is both very ancient and useful, and was a brotherhood in England before 1155, in the reign of Henry II. The white bakers were incorporated in 1307 by Edward II. and the brown in 1685, in James II.'s time.

BA'KEWELL, a town in Derbyshire, with a market on Monday. It is seated on the river Wye, among the hills, and the market is good for lead and other commodities. It is 20 miles N. N. W. of Derby, and 151 from London. It lies in a deep valley, and has a large church with a lofty spire.

BA'KING, s. the art of preparing bread, and of cooking any victuals in an oven. In Otaheite, and many other islands of the south seas, they bake their meat by means of hot stones.

BA'KU, a city in Persia, from the ground in the neighbourhood of which, a vapour arises, which maintains the perpetual fire in a temple, into which it is conveyed by means of pipes.

BA'LA, a town of Merionethshire, in North Wales, with a market on Saturday. It is seated on a flat near Pembleмeer, by the Welch called Lhin Tegid, which is 13 miles in length, and six in breadth, and abounds with a fish called a guiniad, resembling a salmon in shape, and in its taste is like a trout. The river Dee runs through this lake, and is noted for Salmon. It is 36 miles S. W. by W. of Holywell, and 195 N. W. of London.

BA'LANCE, or BA'LLANCE, s. in mechanics, is that simple power which denotes the quality or difference of weight in heavy bodies, and is sometimes called scales and sometimes steel-yards, of which there are many different forms. Also, the beating part of a watch; equipoise. In commerce, it is the equality between the value of the commodities bought of foreigners, and the value of the native productions transported into other nations. In astronomy, it is one of the twelve signs of the zodiac, commonly called Libra. The sun enters this sign about the 22d of September at the autumnal equinox; this constellation consists of fourteen stars of several magnitudes; when it is represented on a globe or planisphere, it is under the form of a pair of scales. In physics, the balance of the air, is the weight thereof, whereby it presseth where it is least resisted, till it becomes of equal weight in all its parts. Hydrostatical balance, is an instrument which determines the specific gravity of fluids and solids, by weighing them in water.

To BA'LANCE, v. a. [balancer, Fr.] to weigh in a pair of scales; to bring two bodies to an equipoise in a pair of scales. In mercantile affairs, the making the creditor and debtor side of an account equal by the addition of as much as the one is less than the other. Figuratively, to atone for former failings by one's future conduct; to be in a state of suspension.

BA'LANCER, s. the person who weighs any thing, or makes weight in opposite scales.

BA'LANCING, among seamen, the contracting a sail into a narrower compass, in a storm, by retrenching or folding up a part of it at one corner: this method is used in contradistinction to reefing, which is common to all the principal sails.

BA'LBEC, the ancient HELIOPOLIS, a town of Syria, situated at the foot of Anti-Lebanon, exactly where the mountain terminates in the plain. The magnificent remains of the once famous Temple of the Sun, in this city, though mutilated and deformed by the Turkish minarets, houses, mosques, &c. made up of the ruins, are well preserved, and display the boldest and most beautiful plan that ever was attempted in architecture. This temple is supposed to have been built by Antoninus Pius, in place of the more ancient temple gone to decay. Balbec is chiefly inhabited by christians of the Greek church, and is 37 miles N. of Damascus. Lat. 34. 22. N. lon. 37. 22. E.

BALCO'NY, s. [balcon, Fr.] in architecture, a projecture beyond a wall or building, generally before a window, supported by pillars or consoles, and surrounded by banisters or balustrades.

BALD, (bauld) a. [bal. Brit.] that hath lost its hair. Figuratively, applied to trees, stripped of their leaves. Applied to style in writing, unadorned; void of elegance. Mean, naked, bare.

BA'LDACHIN, s. [baldachino, Ital.] a piece of architecture, in form of a canopy, supported with columns, and serving as a covering to an altar. It properly signifies a rich silk, and was a canopy carried over the host.

BA'LDERDASH, (baülderdash) s. any thing jumbled together without taste, judgment, or discretion.

BA'LDLY, (baüldly) ad. without hairs, applied to animals; without leaves, applied to trees; without ornaments, or elegance, applied to writings or buildings.

BA'LDMONEY, or BA'WDMONEY, s. a plant, the same with the meu, or common spignel.

BA'LDNESS, (baüldness) s. applied to animals, the want of hair; applied to tress, loss of leaves; and applied to writings, paintings, and buildings, want of ornament or elegance.

BA'LDOCK, a pretty large town in Herts, seated between the hills, in a chalky soil, 9 miles from Barkway and Royston, and 38 N. NW. of London. A considerable market on Thursday for corn and malt.

BA'LDRICK, s. [bale and ric, Sax.] a belt worn hanging from the shoulder across the breast, on which the sword was formerly hung, not unlike that worn by our soldiers at present, to which they fasten their pouches. Figuratively, the zodiac circle, which cuts the globe obliquely, as the belt formerly was suspended.

BALE, s. [balle, Fr.] a quantity of goods or commodities, packed in cloths, corded round very tight. Bale goods, are such as are exported in bales.

BALE, s. [bal, Sax.] something which deprives a person of happiness, or health; misery, anguish, calamity.

To BALE, v. n. to pack goods up in a bale. Used actively by sailors for laving water out of a vessel, instead of pumping.

BA'LEFUL, a. full of anguish, pain, misery, mischief, and grief; very fatal, or destructive to health.

BA'LEFULLY, ad. in such a manner as produces sorrow, anguish, calamity, and sickness.

BALK, (baulk) s. [balk, Belg. and Teut.] a large piece of timber; a beam; a raft or pole over any out-house or barn. In husbandry, a ridge of land left unplowed between two furrows, or at the end of a field. Figuratively, the disappointment of a person's curiosity or expectation, after having excited them.

To BALK, (baulk) v. a. to disappoint a person's expectations after exciting them; to render a person's endeavours ineffectual; to frustrate; to miss, omit, when the contrary is expected.

BA'LKERS, (baülkers) s. in fishery, persons who stand on a cliff to inform the fishermen which way the shoal of herrings go.

BALL, (bawl) s. [bol, Dan. and Belg.] any thing of a round form. Ball and socket, in mechanics, consists of a ball or sphere of brass, fixed in a concave semi-globe with an endless screw, that it may be moveable horizontally, vertically, and obliquely, and is generally added to surveying instruments, to fix them in any position. An entertainment wherein people are assembled to dance. The public dances, wherein masters display the abilities of their scholars in this qualification, go by this name.

BA'LLAD, s. [balade, Fr.] a popular song containing the recital of some action, adventure, or intrigue. Words set to music, and performed by a singer. At present the word is appropriated and confined to trifling pieces set to music, and sung about the streets.

To BA'LLAD, v. n. to make a person the subject of a ballad.

BA'LLAD-SINGER, s. one who sings ballads in the public streets; including the secondary idea of something very mean.

BA'LLAST, s. [ballaste, Belg.] a quantity of stones, sand, or gravel, laid in a ship's hold, to sink it to a proper depth, i. e. to make it draw more water, to sail upright, and to prevent its oversetting; and a ship is said to be in ballast when it has no other lading. Figuratively, that which is used to keep any thing steady.

To BA'LLAST, v. a. to lade a ship with stones, sand, &c. to keep her steady. Figuratively, to add something to keep a thing steady.

BALLE'TTE, s. [Fr.] a stage dance, which is mixed with dramatic characters, and alludes to some actions in real life or fabulous history.

BA'LLIAGE, s. a small duty paid to the city of London by aliens and denizens, for certain commodities exported by them.

BA'LLON, or BALLOO'N, s. [ballon, Fr.] in ærostatics, a hollow sphere, which being filled with gas, which is lighter than common air, ascends to a great height, and is capable if sufficiently large, of taking up with it a car with one or more æronauts on board. See plate. In chemistry, a large, short-necked, round vessel, or matrass, to receive the spirits which come over, or are drawn off by fire. In architecture, a ball or globe on the top of a pillar, &c. by way of a crowning. In fire works, a ball of pasteboard, filled with combustibles, which mounts to a considerable height, and bursts into stars.

BA'LLOT, s. [ballote, Fr.] a little ball made use of at elections, &c. in giving votes; the sum of votes so collected. At present applied to the votes which are given at elections, by a ticket dropped into some receptacle.

To BA'LLOT, v. n. [balloter, Fr.] to choose, by dropping a small ball into a box; to choose or elect by dropping in a ticket.

BALLOTA'TION, s. the act of voting or electing by ballot.

BA'LLYCASTLE, a sea-port town of Antrim, in Ulster, about 30 miles N. of Carrickfergus, and 113 from Dublin. It is noted for its adjacent colleries, and near it there is a chalybeate spring.

BALLYSHA'NNON, a town of Donegal, Ulster, 101 miles from Dublin. It has a good harbour SE. of Donegal Bay, and a bridge of 14 arches over a river which runs out of Longh Erne, and falling from a ridge of rocks about 12 feet, at low water forms a most beautiful, and picturesque cascade. It is a great salmon-leap, and great quantities of that fish are got here.

BALM, (in pron. the l is sometimes dropt) or BA'LSAM, s. [baume, Fr.] an oily, resinous substance, flowing either spontaneously or by means of incision from several plants of sovereign virtue. There are many kinds of balsams, but the most noted are these: 1. Balsam, or Balm of Gilead, so much valued in the country where it is produced, that it is esteemed as a rich present from the chief prince of Arabia Felix to the Grand Signior. In medicine, it opens obstructions of the lungs, and heals erosion from acrimony and the worst kind of ulcerations. It is prescribed in asthmas, pleurisies, and whatever requires expectoration; in inward bruises and sores, particularly those of the reins and urinary passages; and externally it is used to discharge and incarnate. 2. Balsam of Peru, which is distinguished into two sorts, white and black. The former is called the Balsam of Incision, is of a white colour, and is excellent for green wounds. The black is obtained by boiling the wood of the tree which produces it. The best is of a dark red colour, and of admirable fragrancy. It heals, dries, and discharges, and is much used externally, not only in wounds, but in palsies, itchiadic and rhumatic pains, and by perfumers for its excellent smell. 3. Balsam of Tolu, is produced from a tree, a species of the pine, which grows in New Spain; is of a deep yellowish colour, and of a most delicate scent. It flows from the tree in the consistence of turpentine, but by keeping becomes brittle. Its virtues are the same, in general, with those of the Peruvian and Gilead kinds. 4. Balsam of Capivi, or of Copaiba, is likewise the produce of a tree. It is of a thinner consistence than the common turpentine, but much more fragrant and detersive. It passes away quickly by urine, and mightily cleanses those passages, and all obstructions and ulcerations of those parts. 5. Balsam of liquid amber. It drops from a tree of Mexico, called ambor styracifera, by an incision in the bark. It is a resinous and pinguious liquor, of a reddish yellow colour, and an acid aromatic taste, and of the consistence of Venice turpentine. Its essence strengthens the head and nervous system, and its oil is of singular efficacy both for external and internal uses. There are also many sorts of factitious or artificial balsams, made up by apothecaries and chemists, which it would be endless to specify. In botany, balm is a species of mint.

To BALM, v. a. to anoint; to sooth; to mitigate.

BA'LMLEAF, s. a plant, called also bastard balm. It has red blossoms with purple spots, or white ones with red spots, growing six in a whorl on single fruits, and flowering in June.

BA'LMY, a. having the qualities of balm; soothing; fragrant; mitigating.

BA'LNEARY, s. [balnearium, Lat.] a bathing room.

BA'LNEATORY, a. [balnearius, Lat.] belonging to a bath or stove.

BALOTADE, s. the leap of an horse, so that when his fore feet are in the air, he shews nothing but the shoes of his hinder feet, without yerking out. A balotade differs from a capriole; for when a horse works at caprioles, he yerks out his hinder legs with all his force.

BA'LSAM. See BALM.

BALSA'MICS, s. in pharmacy, medicines that soften, restore, heal, and cleanse; of gentle attenuating principles, very friendly to nature.

BA'LSAMINE, a genus of plants, of which the most remarkable is the immortal eagle flower, which is one of the finest annual plants which have been imported into this country.

BA'LTIC SEA, a large inland sea, in the N. of Europe, having Denmark and Sweden on the W. Russia and Poland on the E. Poland, Prussia, and Germany, on the S. and Sweden on the N. The Baltic neither ebbs nor flows, and there is always a superficial current sets through the Sound into the ocean, while the water, at a considerable depth, keeps rushing in. There is a method of keeping a boat stationary in such a situation; it is by making use of a large basket full of stones, instead of an anchor; when this is thrown overboard, and suspended at a proper depth, from the boat by a rope, the boat is prevented from being carried along with the upper current, by the pressure of the opposite current beneath on the basket. The Baltic is generally frozen in the winter.

BA'LTIMORE, a town of Cork, Munster, with a good harbour; it stands on a headland, which runs into the sea 5 miles N. E. of the island of Cape Clear. It was taken and plundered by the Algerines in 1631, on which the affrighted inhabitants fled, and it has never since recovered its former consequence. It is 15 miles S. W. of Ross, and 168 from Dublin.

BA'LTIMORE, a large and trading town of Maryland, in America, seated on the Petapsee, which runs into Chesapeak Bay. It is divided into the town and Fell's Point, by a creek, over which there are two bridges. At Fell's Point, the water is deep enough for ships of burden; but small vessels only go up to the town. In 1787, the number of houses was 1955; the number of inhabitants is upwards of 12,000; their religious professions are various. Baltimore is 15 miles N. E. of Annapolis. Lat. 39. 45. N. lon. 76. 25. W.

BA'LTINGLASS, a town of Wicklow, Leinster, having extensive manufactures of linen, woollen, and diaper. It is situated on the river Slaney, 39 miles S. W. of Dublin.

BA'LUSTER, s. [balustre, Fr.] in architecture, a small column or pilaster, from 1 3-4th's of an inch to four inches square, or diameter, sometimes adorned with mouldings of no certain form, and placed with rails on stairs, and in the fronts of galleries and churches

BA'LUSTRADE, s. in architecture, an assemblage of one or more rows of balusters, high enough to rest the elbow on, fixed on a terrace, bridge, or building, by way of security, or for separating one part from another.

BA'MBERG, a large populous handsome city of Franconia, in Germany. It is 36 miles N. of Nuremburg.

BAMBOO', s. [Ind.] in natural history, a large kind of reed or cane, growing in the maritime parts of the East Indies.

To BAMBOO'ZLE, v. a. to trick, or impose on a person, under the appearance of a friend; to confound, under pretence of assisting. A word of low and ludicrous use, and never found in polite writers.

BAMBOO'ZLER, s. one who, under specious pretences, tricks another: a cheat, or sharper.

BAMF, a shire of Scotland, bounded on the S. by Aberdeenshire, on the N. by the bay of Cromarty, on the W. by Murray, and on the E. by the German Ocean. It is 32 miles in length, and 30 in breadth. It contains part of Buchan, Strathdovern, Boyn, Enzy, Strathwin, and Balveny. It sends one member to parliament.

BAMF, the county town of Bamfshire, in Scotland. It is well built, on the declivity of a hill, with a harbour, often stopped by the shifting of the sands, at the mouth of the Deveron, over which there is a handsome bridge, of 7 arches. It is 32 miles N. W. of Aberdeen.

BA'MPTON, a town of Devonshire, seated on a branch of the river Ex, in a bottom surrounded by hills, 21 miles from Exeter, and 162 W. by S. of London. Market on Saturday. Also, a large town in Oxfordshire, trading largely in fellmonger's wares, as leather jackets, gloves, breeches, and stockings. It is seated on the Isis, where it is navigable by boats, on the borders of Berkshire. It is 5 miles from Burford, 12 W. of Oxford, and 70 W. by N. of London. A considerable market on Wednesday.

BAN, s. in its primary signification, any thing publicly proclaimed, commanded, or forbidden. In church government, a proclamation of the intention of two parties to enter into matrimony, which is done thrice in the church they belong to, before the marriage ceremony can be performed. A curse, or excommunication. The ban of the empire, is a public act or proclamation, whereby a person is suspended of all his rights as a member or voter.

To BAN, v. a. [bannen, Belg.] to curse or devote to destruction; to execrate.

BANA'NA TREE, s. a species of plantain which grows in Africa, and is exceedingly useful to the inhabitants. Its fruit is very delicious and nourishing; its leaves, which are very long, are used for umbrellas, and other purposes, and its trunk is encompossed with several sprigs, of which the negroes make cords.

BA'NBURY, a town of Oxfordshire, with a market on Thursday. It is a large well built mayor town, containing several good inns, and its markets are well served with provisions. It is the second town for beauty in the county, and seated on the river Charwell. The houses are generally built with stone, and the church is a large handsome structure. It has been long noted for its cakes and cheese, and is 17 miles W. N. W of Buckingham, and 78 N. W. of London. It sends one member to parliament.

BAND, s. [band, Sax.] that which ties or keeps a person to a certain place, without liberty of going further; that by which a person or animal is kept from exerting their natural strength; the same as a bond. Figuratively, that which has the power of knitting a close alliance or connection between persons; a company of persons so united; that which is bound round a person or thing, applied to dress; particularly a linen neckcloth, consisting of two square leaves hanging down from the chin to the breast, worn by clergymen and lawyers. In architecture, any flat, low member, or moulding, that is broad. In surgery, a fillet, or piece of cloth, to surround or swathe certain parts that need assistance; called likewise a roller. Band of Pensioners, consisting of 140 gentlemen, who have 100*l.* a year each, for attending the king on solemn occasions.

To BAND, v. a. to unite together by some common tie; to cover or bind with some narrow cloth, fillet, or band.

BA'NDAGE, s. [bandage, Fr.] a fillet, roller, or swathe, to bind up wounds, dislocated bones, &c.

BA'NDBOX, s. a light box made of pasteboard, designed for keeping bands, ribbands, head-dresses, and other light and small pieces of dress in.

BA'NDELET, s. [bandelette, Fr.] in architecture, any little band or moulding, like that which crowns the Doric architrave.

BA'NDEROL, s. [banderolle, Fr.] a little flag, in form of a guidon, extending more in length than breadth, and formerly hung out at the top of vessels.

BANDI'TTO, s. [Ital.] the plural banditti, a set of outlawed thieves on the continent, who generally herd together in woods, and live on the plunder of passengers.

BA'NDOC. s. a large furious species of dog.

BANDOLEER, s. [bandouliers, Fr.] a large leathern belt, thrown over the right shoulder, and hanging down under the left arm, worn by the ancient musqueteers, both for the sustaining of their fire-arms, and the carriage of their musquet charges, which were put in 12 wooden cases coated with leather; but now out of use.

BA'NDROL, s. See BANDEROL.

BA'NDY, s. [from bander, Fr.] a crooked piece of wood, towards the bottom broad, flat on one side, rounded at the other and at the handle, used in the game of cricket; now called, a bat, from battre, Fr. to beat.

To BA'NDY, v. a. to beat or toss to and fro; to give and take; to exchange. To contend, used with with.

BA'NDY, a. crooked. Thus, bandy leg, is a crooked leg; and bandy-legged is applied to one that has crooked legs.

BANE, s. [from bana, Sax.] that which destroys life. Figuratively, poison, ruin destruction.

To BANE, v. a. to destroy, kill, or poison.

BA'NEFUL, a. abounding with qualities destructive to life; poisonous.

BA'NEWORT, s. a plant, the same with the deadly nightshade.

To BANG, v. a. [vengolen, Belg.] to cudgel; a low familiar word. Figuratively, to use a person roughly, applied either to words or actions.

BANG, s. a blow with a stick or cudgel.

BA'NGOR, a city of Carnarvonshire, in North Wales; it has a market on Wednesday. This place was so considerable in ancient times, that it was called Bangor the Great, and defended by a strong castle. Its situation is low; the principal buildings are the cathedral and the bishop's palace; it is 36 miles W. of St. Asaph, and 255 N. W. of London.

BA'NGUE, . a species of opiate, in great use throughout the East, for drowning cares, and inspiring joy. It is the leaf of a kind of wild hemp, growing in the countries of the Levant.

BA'NIANS, a religious sect of Asia, in India, whose professors never eat any thing that has life. They are dispersed all over the East, being the greatest merchants in the world, and may in some sense be compared to the Jews in other parts. There is scarcely a merchant in the East Indies but has one of these Banians to take care of his accounts. They believe the transmigration of souls, and think cleanness of the body a considerable part of sanctity. They marry their children very young, seldom staying till they are 12 years of age.

To BA'NISH, v. a. [bannir, Fr.] to make a person quit his own country. Figuratively, to drive from the mind; to expel.

BA'NISHER, s. one who expels from, or causes another to quit his native country.

BA'NISHMENT, s. the state of a person banished. In law, a kind of civil death, whereby a person is cut off from all benefits arising from the society or country in which he was born, obliged to quit it, and live in a foreign country. Oftentimes the punishment of capital crimes is remitted and converted into banishment for life; but it is then termed transportation.

BANK, s. [banc, Sax.] a great shoal of sand in the sea; a rising ground on each side of a river, washed by its waters, which it hinders from overflowing; earth cast up on one side of a trench between two armies. A bench where rowers sit, in vessels. In commerce, a common repository, where persons agree to keep their cash, to be always ready at their call, or direction. Likewise the place where the public bank is kept.

To BANK, v. a. to inclose with banks. In commerce, to raise a sum of money; or to place money in a bank.

BA'NKBILL, s. a promisory note given by the bank for money placed there, which is payable on presenting it.

BA'NKER, s. a private person entrusted with the cash of others, payable on demand.

BA'NKRUPT, s. [banqueroute, Fr.] in law, one who lives by buying and selling, has got the goods of others in his hands, and concealed himself from his creditors. After a statute of bankruptcy is taken out, a bankrupt not surrendering within forty days, and not discovering his estates, is adjudged guilty of felony.

To BA'NKRUPT, v. a. to break; to disable one from satisfying his creditors.

BA'NKRUPTCY, s. the state of a person declared a bankrupt; wherein his goods are sold, and a dividend made to his creditors, in proportion to the amount of their respective debts.

BA'NNER, s. [banair, Brit.] a square flag, standard, colour, or ensign of an army.

BA'NNERET, s. an ancient order of the knights, or feudal lords, who possessing large fees, led their vassals to battle under their own banner, when summoned by the king. This is certainly a very honourable order, as it was never conferred but on some heroic action performed in the field: it was lately revived by his majesty in the person of Capt. Trollope, who was created a Knight Banneret, for his signal services on board of Admiral Duncan's fleet in the engagement with the Dutch, Oct. 12, 1797.

BA'NNIAN, s. a morning gown, or undress.

BA'NNOCK, s. a cake made with oatmeal and peas, mixed with water; common in the north countries.

BA'NQUET, s. [Fr.] a feast, or great entertainment.

To BA'NQUET, v. a. to entertain or give a feast to one or more persons; to feast or regale.

BA'NQUETER, s. a person who entertains another at a sumptuous feast; one who lives sumptuously, or keeps a good table.

BA'NQUETING-HOUSE, s. a house where public feasts are given. The banqueting-room at Whitehall, intended for the king to feast in, is a structure of the great Inigo Jones; but is now used as a chapel, and is called Whitehall chapel. Here twelve clergymen of Oxford and twelve of Cambridge university, preach alternately.

BA'NQUETTE, s. [Fr.] in fortification, a small bank for soldiers to mount upon, when they fire behind an intrenchment.

BA'NSTICKLE, s. a very small species of fish, common in our rivers and brooks.

BA'NTER, s. the turning any thing to jest; the being pleasant; ridicule, or raillery.

To BA'NTER, v. a. to represent a person or thing in such a light, as to make them laughed at, or become objects of ridicule; to rally; to play upon.

BA'NTERER, s. one who represents the actions or expressions of another in a ridiculous light; one who plays on another on account of some fault.

BA'NTLING, s. a sucking child; an infant.

BA'NTRY, a barony, town, harbour, and bay of Cork, Munster. The barony is large, but barren and desolate; the bay, 26 miles long, a league broad, and in the middle 40 fathoms deep, is one of the finest in the world, being capable of holding all the shipping of Europe; the town is seated at the bottom of the bay, 20 miles S. W. of Cork, and 104 S. W. of Dublin.

BAPTISM, s. [baptismos, Gr.] a sacrament by which the person is initiated into the Christian church. Baptism is practised by all professors of the Christian religion, except the people called Quakers. The practice of the western churches is to sprinkle the water upon the head or face of the person baptized, except the church of Milan, in whose ritual it is ordered that the head of the infant be three times plunged into the water.

BAPTISMAL, a. relating to, or done at, our baptism.

BAPTIST, s. [baptistee, Gr.] one who administers baptism; applied by way of eminence to St. John, our Saviour's forerunner; likewise one who holds that baptism ought to be administered only to adult persons.

BAPTISTERY, s. [baptisterium, Lat.] the place in the church where the sacrament of baptism is administered; the font.

To BAPTIZE, v. a. [baptizo, Gr.] to perform the ceremony of baptism; to christen.

BAPTIZER, s. one who administers the sacrament of baptism.

BAR, s. [barre, Fr.] a piece of wood or iron, made use of to secure the entrance of any place from being forced; a rock or sand-bank, at the entrance of a harbour, or river to keep off ships of burden; the part of a court of justice where the criminal generally stands, and within which the counsel and judge sits to try causes, so called from a wooden bar being placed there to keep off the crowd; an inclosed place at a tavern, coffee house, &c. wherein a person sits to take care of, and receive the reckoning. Figuratively, any obstacle, or thing which hinders; any thing which keeps the parts of a thing together. In law, a peremptory exception against a demand or plea brought by a defendant in an action, that destroys the action of the plaintiff for ever, and is either bar to common intent or special. A bar of gold or silver is a lump of either melted and cast into a mould without ever having been wrought. In music, the straight strokes drawn perpendicularly across the lines in a piece of music, between as many notes as the measure of time consists of, in which the air is pricked. In heraldry, an ordinary resembling the fess, differing from it in narrowness, and that it may be placed in any part of the shield; it is generally drawn horizontally across the field, dividing it into two unequal parts, and containing one-fifth of the whole. Bar-shot, two half-bullets joined together by an iron bar, used in sea engagements for cutting down masts and riggings. Also a new French measure of weight, consisting of 204lb. 4oz. 4d. 54gr.

To BAR, v. a. to fasten or secure any entrance by a piece of iron or wood. Figuratively, to exclude, except against; to hinder, or put a stop to.

BARATRY, s. in law, is when a master of a ship endeavours to cheat the owners or insurers, either by running away with the ship, or embezzling the goods.

BARB, s. [barba, Lat.] in its original signification, a beard. In its secondary, any thing that grows in its place, or resembles it. The piece of wire at the end of a fish hook, which makes an angle with the point, and hinders it from being extracted; likewise the pieces of iron which run back in the same manner from the point of an arrow, and serve for the same purpose.

BARB, s. [a contraction of Barbary] a horse brought from Barbary, esteemed for its beauty, vigour, swiftness, for its never lying down, and for its standing still when the rider drops his bridle. Also a variety of pigeon having a red circle round their eyes.

BARBACAN, s. [barbacane, Fr.] in architecture, a long narrow canal, or passage for water, in walls, where buildings are liable to be overflowed; likewise to drain off water from a terras; an aperture in the walls of a city, to fire muskets through at an enemy. In fortification, a fort at the entrance of a bridge; an outward defence or fortification to a city; a watch tower.

BARBADOES, the easternmost of the Windward Islands in America; it is in general a level country, though not without hills, is 25 miles in length, and 15 in breadth. It had formerly a good deal of wood, but is now almost all consumed with carrying on the sugar-works. The commodities which they export are sugar, rum, cotton, indigo, and ginger; and they have most of the fruits common to the climate. The number of the white inhabitants are about 20,000, who have 100,000 negro slaves. They have no manufactures, nor do they breed many cattle; receiving most of their corn, cattle, flesh, and salted fish, from North America, and their clothes and furniture from England. They are subject to hurricanes in July and August; but not so much as the other Caribbees; and it is the most healthy island of any in these parts, because, unless when there is an hurricane, they have always the advantage of a constant easterly wind, commonly called the trade-wind. The sugar that is brought to England from hence is whiter and finer than that of any other plantation; and they have one particular production, called Barbadoes tar, which rises out of the earth, and swims upon the surface of the water. It is of great use in the dry belly-ache, and in diseases of the breast. It is 70 miles E. of the island of St. Vincent, and 90 S. E. of Martinico. The capital town is St. Michael, or Bridgetown, which lies in lon. 59. 36. W. lat. 13. 5. N.

BARBARIAN, s. [barbarus, Lat.] in it primary sense, applied by the Greeks and Romans to all that were not of their own nation, i. e. a foreigner; but in process of time it acquired a secondary idea of cruelty, and was used to denote a person void of all the elegant embellishments of life, and the social affections of benevolence, good-nature, and humanity.

BARBARIC, a. [barbaricus, Lat.] foreign; brought from countries at a great distance.

BARBARISM, s. [barbarismus, Lat.] in grammar, an offence against the purity of style or language; uncultivated ignorance. Applied to manners, rudeness; want of politeness; savageness; cruelty.

BARBARITY, s. [barbaritas, Lat.] incivility, unpoliteness. Applied most commonly to manners, cruelty, savageness, want of pity, kindness, and humanity.

BARBAROUS, a. [barbarous, Gr.] applied to learning, ignorant; unacquainted with the polite arts and sciences. Applied to manners, void of benevolence, pity, or compassion; cruel; savage; inhuman.

BARBAROUSLY, ad. in such a manner as shews a mind unpolished with learning; a stranger to politeness pity, compassion, or humanity.

BARBAROUSNESS, s. incivility of manners; cruelty.

BARBARY, a country of Africa, extending along the Mediterranean, from Egypt to the Atlantic, and containing the kingdoms of Tripoli, Tunis, Algiers, Fez, and Morocco, It was known to the ancients by the name of Mauritania, Numidia, and Proper Africa. It is fertile in corn, maize, wine, citrons, oranges, figs, almonds, olives, dates, and melons. Their chief trade consists in their fruits, in their horses, called barbs, morocco leather, ostrich-feathers, indigo, wax, tin, and coral. The national profession is Mahometanism; and there are some Jews, but few Christians, except the slaves. The inhabitants are noted for the practice of piracy.

To BARBECUE, v. a. [Ind.] to dress a hog whole, by splitting it to the back bone, and broiling it upon a gridiron, raised two feet above a charcoal fire.

BARBECUE, s. hog dressed whole after the West Indian manner.

BARBEL, s. [barbus, Lat.] a large, strong, but coarse river fish; so called from its having a barb or wattle under its chin.

BARBER, s. [barbier, Fr.] one who shaves.

BARBER CHIRURGEON, s. (barber-surgeon) one who practises the lower operations of surgery; such as bleeding and drawing of teeth, together with the trade of a barber.

BARBERRY, s. in botany, the piperidge bush, which grows in hedges to the height of eight or ten feet, the bark of which is much used in popular prescriptions against the jaundice.

BARBU'DA, one of the Leeward Islands, in the West Indies, possessed by the English, about 20 miles long, and 12 broad. The land is low, but fertile. The inhabitants (about 1500) are chiefly employed in raising corn, and breeding sheep, kids, fowls, and other stock, for the neighbouring islands. They likewise cultivate citrons, pomegranates, oranges, raisins, Indian figs, pepper, indigo, &c. Here is no harbour, but a well-sheltered road on the W. side. It is near 20 miles NE. of St. Christopher's. Lat. 18. 30. N. lon. 61. 50. W.

BARCELO'NA, a large and strong city of Catalonia, in Spain. It is the see of a bishop, and has a good harbour. It contains about 15,000 houses. It is divided into the New and Old Towns, which are separated from each other by a wall and a ditch. The inhabitants carry on an extensive trade. This city was united to the crown of Arragon, in 1131, by the marriage of Don Raymond V. count of Barcelona, with the daughter of Don Ramiro the monk, king of Arragon. It was taken by the French after a siege of 52 days, in 1697. Lord Peterborough got possession of it in 1705; and in 1714 it was taken by the French and Spaniards, after a long siege, when it was deprived of its privileges, and the citadel built to keep it in awe. Lat. 41. 26. N. lon. 2. 13. E.

BARD, s. [bardd, Brit.] among the ancient Britons, Danes, and Irish, an order of men who used to sing the great exploits of heroes to the harp, were persons in the highest esteem among all ranks of people, and reverenced as persons of extraordinary abilities, even by crowned heads, who paid them so much deference, as to be reconciled to their most inveterate enemies at their instance. Even in the present times, the word implies a poet.

BARE, a. [bare, Sax.] uncovered; without any dress; naked. Figuratively, without ornament; destitute, or in want of necessaries; not joined with any thing else; alone; solitary; very much worn; that has lost its knap; threadbare.

To BARE, v. a. to strip.

BARE or BORE, the preter of BEAR.

BA'REBONE, s. a very thin and lean person, who has scarcely any flesh to cover his bones. A low word.

BA'REFACED, a. with the face uncovered. Figuratively, without dissimulation or disguise; with great effrontery or impudence. Generally used in a bad sense.

BAREFA'CEDLY, ad. in such a manner as shews a bold, daring impudence.

BA'REFOOT, a. without shoes, or any covering to the feet.

BAREHE'ADED, a. without a hat, or any covering to the head.

BA'RELY, ad. without clothes, applied to dress; without any thing else, or only, applied as an exceptive.

BA'RENESS, a. applied to dress, either total nakedness, or a want of some necessary part of attire; meanness, with respect to the quality of clothing.

BA'RGAIN, (in common pronunciation the i is dropped) s. [bargen, Brit.] a voluntary agreement made between traders to deliver or sell a commodity at a price agreed on; the thing bought or sold: the conditions of sale. SYNON. Bargain is more limited, relating to sale. Agreement and Contract are more general, implying any sort of stipulation; with this difference between them, that Agreement seems to denote a verbal one; Contract, one that is written.

To BA'RGAIN, v. a. to agree to, or make terms for, the sale of any thing.

BARGAINEE', s. the person who agrees to the condition of a bargain or purchase.

BARGAINER, s. one who proposes the conditions of a bargain.

BARGE, s. [bargie, Belg.] a large flat-bottomed vessel used for the carriage of goods in rivers; likewise a state or pleasure boat, built with a room capable of containing several persons.

BARILLA, s. in the glass trade, a sort of potash imported from Spain, being the ashes of a plant called saltwort, which is collected from the coasts.

BARK, s. [barck, Dan.] in botany, the outside covering of a tree, which increases every year. It is generally spoken of as inner and outer. Blossoms are an expansion of the inner, and impalements are a continuation of the outer bark. Bark is also used in conversation for the Quinquina, or Jesuit's-bark, a most valuable medicine in removing all kinds of intermitting fevers and agues. It is the bark of a tree growing in Peru, which the Spaniards call the fever wood, and the Indians fuddling tree, from the property it has of intoxicating fishes, when either its wood or bark is beaten and steeped in the water where they are.

BARK, or BARQUE, s. [barque, Fr.] a small vessel with one deck only, used in transporting merchandises either by sea or on rivers.

To BARK, v. a. to strip off the rind or bark of a tree.

To BARK, v. n. [biornean, Sax.] to make a noise like a dog, when he gives the alarm.

BARK-BA'RED, a. stripped or robbed of the bark.

BARK-BI'NDING, s. in gardening, a disease, incident to trees, wherein the bark is so close, that the vegetation, and circulation of the sap is hindered. It is cured by slitting the bark, or cutting it along the grain.

BA'RKER, s. applied to a litigious, noisy, or clamorous person.

BARK-GA'LLING, s. is when the bark or rind of a tree is galled or fretted with thorns, &c. which is cured by binding clay on the galled places.

BA'RKING, a town in Essex, with a market on Saturday. It is seated on the river Rothing, not far from the Thames, in an unwholesome air. It has been chiefly noted for a large monastery, now in ruins, there being nothing left standing but a small part of the walls, and a gate-house. It is 7 miles E. of London.

BA'RKLEY, a town in Gloucestershire, with a market on Wednesday. It is seated on a branch of the river Severn; and formerly was of some note for a nunnery; and has still the title of a barony. It is 18 miles S. W. of Gloucester, and 112 W. by S. of London.

BA'RKWAY, a town in Hertfordshire, which had formerly a market on Friday, and has still one fair. It is on the great road from London to York, 18 miles S. of Cambridge, and 34 N. of London.

BA'RKY, a. that consists of, or has the properties of bark.

BA'RLEY, s. [from bar, wheat or corn, Heb.] in botany, the grain whence beer is extracted.

BA'RLEY-BRAKE, s. a kind of rural play, which consists in swiftness of running.

BA'RLEY-CORN, s. a grain of barley; used in long measure, as the third part of an inch.

BA'RLEY-MOW, s. a heap of barley laid together, and formed into a rick or stack.

BARM, s. [burm, Brit.] that which is put into drink to make it work, or into bread to swell it, and make it lighter; called by the Londoners yeast.

BA'RMINE, s. such mine or ore as is adjudged at a court of barghmote, which courts are a kind of tribunal which takes cognizance of disputes between miners.

BA'RMY, a. that has been well fermented or worked with barm or yeast.

BARN, s. [bern, Sax.] a place, or house, wherein any grain, hay, &c. is stored.

BA'RNACLE, s. [probably of bearn, a child, and aac, Sax. an oak] in natural history, a bird of the goose kind, frequent in the western isles of Scotland; also a kind of shell fish.

which is found sticking to the bottoms and sides of ships in certain seas. It was formerly imagined that the barnacle grew on an oak, whence falling into the water it became first a shell-fish, and afterwards a sea-fowl.

BARNARD CASTLE, a handsome town of Durham, containing about 3,000 inhabitants. It takes its name from a castle, (a large structure, situated on a rock, by the river, a great part of which is still standing,) built here by Bernard Baliol, great grandfather of John Baliol, king of Scotland. Here are some manufactures of bridles, reins, belts, stockings, serges, and camblets, which last employs about 400 weavers. It is seated on the river Tees, 30 miles S. W. of Durham, and 244 N. N. W. of London. A great market for corn, &c. on Wednesday.

BARNET, a town, partly in Middlesex and partly in Hertfordshire, with a market on Monday. It is a great thoroughfare town, well provided with good inns. It is 11 miles N. W. of London.

BARNESLEY, a town in the West Riding of Yorkshire, with a market on Wednesday. It is seated on the side of a hill, and has a manufacture of wire. It is commonly called Black Barnsley, and is 53 miles N. by W. of Nottingham, and 174 N. W. of London.

BARNSTAPLE, a sea-port town in Devonshire, with a market on Friday. It is a corporation town, and sends two members to parliament; is seated on the river Tau, over which there is a good bridge; and the market is large for cattle, corn, and provisions. It is 38 miles N. N. W. of Exeter, and 191 W. of London. Market on Friday.

BARO'METER, s. [from baros, weight, and metreo, to measure, Gr.] a machine for measuring the weight of the atmosphere, and the variations in it, in order chiefly to determine the changes of the weather. It differs from the baroscope, which only shews that the air is heavier at one time than another, without specifying the difference. The barometer is founded upon the Torricellian experiment, so called from Torricella, the inventor of it, at Florence, in 1643. It is a glass tube filled with mercury, hermetically sealed at one end; the other open, and immerged in a basin of stagnant mercury; so that, as the weight of the atmosphere diminishes, the mercury in the tube will descend, and as it increases, the mercury will ascend; the column of mercury suspended in the tube, being always equal to the weight of the incumbent atmosphere.

BAROMETRICAL, a. relating to, or tried by the barometer.

BARON, s. [possibly from baro, Lat.] a term which formerly included all the greater nobility. It is now used as a degree of nobility next below that of a viscount, and above that of a baronet. Parliamentary barons are not barons by name only, but are all by birth peers, noblemen, and are summoned by the king "to treat of the weighty affairs of the nation, and to give counsel upon them." They have the following immunities and privileges: in criminal causes they are judged by their peers only, and are not put on oath, but deliver the truth upon honour; are not impannelled on a jury, nor liable to the writs supplicavit, capias, essoigns. They had no coronet till Charles the II. gave them a gold one, with six pearls. Besides these, the two archbishops, and all the bishops of England, are parliamentary barons, and enjoy all the privileges of the others, excepting that they are not judged by their peers; for being not to be present in sanguinary causes, in such cases they are judged, as a fact, by a jury of 12. Barons of the Exchequer, are four judges, who determine causes between the king and his subjects, in affairs relating to the revenue and the exchequer. Barons of the Cinque Ports, are members elected two for each, who have seats in the House of Commons. Baron and femme, in law, are husband and wife. Baron and femme, in heraldry, is when the coats of arms of a man and his wife are borne per pale in the same escutcheon.

BARONAGE, s. [baronagium, low Lat.] the body of barons; the dignity, or lands, which give title to a baron.

BARONESS, s. [baronessa, Ital.] the lady or wife of a baronet.

BARONET, s. [diminutive of baron] a degree of honour next to a baron, created by king James I. in order to propagate a plantation in Ulster, in Ireland, for which purpose each of them was to maintain 30 solders in Ireland, for three years, after the rate of eightpence per day, for each soldier; and they have the precedence of all knights, except those of the garter, bannerets, and privy counsellors. They were allowed to charge their coat with the arms of Ulster, which are in a field-argent, (white) a hand gules, (red). The title Sir is allowed them by their patent, though they are not knighted. There were at first but 200 which number was afterwards increased. No honour is created between barons and baronets.

BARONY, s. [baronnie, Fr.] the lordship or fee of a baron, whether spiritual or temporal.

BAROSCOPE, s. from baros, weight, skopeo, to see, Gr.] an instrument to shew the alteration of the weight of the atmosphere.

BARRACAN, s. [bouracan, or barracan Fr.] a kind of stuff resembling camblet, but coarser, and used for surtouts, or upper garments against the rain. They are manufactured principally in England, Flanders, and the North of France.

BARRACK, s. [barraca, Span.] a small hut erected by the Spanish fishermen along the shore; likewise a building raised to lodge soldiers in.

BARRATOR, s. [from barat, old Fr.] a litigious person, or one who is fond of quarrels and law-suits.

BARRATRY, s. in common law, the moving or maintaining of suits in the disturbance of the peace; and the taking and detaining houses, land, &c. by false pretences.

BARRAY, one of the western isles of Scotland, five miles in length, and three in breadth, rocky on the east side, and arable land on the west. There is plenty of cod and ling near this island: and several small ships from Orkney come hither in summer, and return laden with the fish.

BARREL, s. [baril, Brit.] a round wooden vessel, which serves for holding several sorts of wares and merchandise. The English barrel, wine-measure, contains the eighth part of a ton, the fourth part of a pipe, and one half of a hogshead, i. e. 31 and a half gallons; beer measure 36 gallons, and ale measure 32 gallons. It denotes also a certain weight of several merchandises, which differ according to the several commodities. The barrel of herrings ought to contain 32 gallons wine measure, which amount to about 28 gallons old standard, making about 1000 herrings. The barrel of salmon must hold 42 gallons; of eels the same; and of soap 256 pounds. In mechanics, it is the cylinder of a watch, about which the spring is turned. In gunnery, it is the cylindrical tube of a gun, pistols, &c. through which the bullet is discharged. In anatomy, it is a pretty large cavity behind the tympanum of the ear, about four or five lines deep, and five or six wide, lined with a fine membrane, on which are several veins and arteries. In this cavity are four small solid bones, not covered with the periostium, as the rest of the bones of the body are.

To BARREL, v. a. to put into, or inclose in a barrel.

BARREN, a. [bare, Sax.] applied to animals or soils, not able to produce its like. Applied to genius, not able to produce any thing new.

BARRENLY, ad. in an unfruitful manner.

BARRENNESS, s. that imperfection in any animal or vegetable that renders it incapable of bringing forth, or propagating its kind. Also want of invention, sterility of thought, &c.

BARRICADE, s. [barricade, Fr.] any defence in the military art raised against an enemy hastily, made with vessels, carts, baskets of earth, trees, or pallisades. Figuratively, any thing which obstructs or hinders the motion of any thing.

To BARRICADE, v. a. [barricader, Fr.] to stop up a passage; to hinder the advance or motion of any thing.

BARRICADO, s. [barricada, Span.] in fortification, a defence made with stakes shod with iron, crossed at the top with battoons, and erected in passages or breaches.

To BARRICA'DO, v. a. to block up a passage; to hinder an enemy from passing any defile or place.

BARRIER, . eér) s. [barriere, Fr.] that which keeps an enemy off, or . ers him from entering into any country; a fence made a passage, retrenchment, &c. to stop up its entry. Figuratively, an obstruction or hinderance; a boundary or limit.

BA'RRISTER, s. one who is qualified, from his having performed his exercises at the inns of courts, and by licence from the lord high chancellor, after a proper standing, to plead the cause of clients in a court of justice.

BA'RROW, s. [berewe, Sax.] any carriage moved or set in motion by the hand; hence a hand-barrow is a frame of boards on which things are carried by handles at its extremities between two men. A wheel-barrow is that with one wheel at the head, by which it moves when pushed forwards by the handles at the other end.

BA'RROWS, s. [from beorg, Sax.] hills or mounts raised by the Saxons, in honour of those who died in the field of battle.

BA'RRY, s. in heraldry, when an escutcheon is divided bar-ways, i. e. across from side to side, into an even number of portions, consisting of two or more tinctures, interchangeably disposed; expressed in the blazon by the word barry, and the number of pieces must be specified; but if the divisions be odd, the field must be first named, and the number of bars expressed. Barry-bendy is when an escutcheon is divided equally, bar and bendways, by lines drawn transverse and diagonal, interchangeably varying the tinctures by which it consists. Barry-pily, is when a coast is divided by several lines drawn obliquely from side to side, where they form acute angles.

BA'RTER, s. in commerce, the purchasing one commodity by another, or exchanging one ware for another. SYNON. Barter is a merchantile expression, and intimates the exchange of different commodities by way of traffic.

To BA'RTER, v. a. [baratte, Fr.] to exchange one thing for another; the original manner of carrying on all trade and commerce till the invention of money.

BA'RTERER, s. he that trades by exchanging one commodity for another.

BA'RTON, s. [barton, Sax.] the demesne lands of a manor; a manor-house; the fields, out-houses, &c. a term in great use in the west of England.

BA'RTON, a town in Lincolnshire, with a market on Monday. It is seated on the river Humber, where there is a considerable ferry to pass over into Yorkshire, of great advantage to the town, which is a large straggling place, 35 miles N. of Lincoln, and 166 N. of London.

BA'RTRAM, s. a plant; the same with pellitory.

BA'RYTES, s. one of the primitive earths discovered by Scheele, in 1774, in combination with sulphuric acid. Sulphate of barytes is very plentiful in the Derbyshire lead mines, where the workmen call it cauk.

BA'SALT, s. the matter of basaltes, which is now used in the manufactures of glass bottles, and to harden mortar which is placed under the water.

BASA'LTES, s. in natural history, a kind of marble, of a very fine texture, of a deep glossy black, like polished steel. Its figure is very remarkable, being never found in strata like other marbles, but always standing up in regular angular columns, composed of a number of joints, one placed on, and nicely fitted to another, as if formed by the hand of a skilful workman. It is extremely hard and heavy, will not strike fire with steel, and is a fine touch stone. They are found in several parts of the world; but the noblest store seems to be that called the Giants' Causeway in Ireland, where it rises far up in the country, runs into the sea, and rises again on the opposite land.

BASE, a. [bas, Fr.] applied to actions, proceeding from a mean, narrow, abject, and sordid disposition. Applied to rank, low, mean, and void of dignity. Applied to birth, descended from mean parents. Applied to metals, counterfeit or adulterated. Applied to sounds, deep, grave.

BASE, s. [ba·, Fr. basis, Lat.] in architecture, the lower part of a column or pedestal, being the same to a column as a shoe is to a man. Base, in fortification, is an imaginary line drawn from the flanked angle of a bastion to that which is opposite to it. Base of a figure, in geometry, is the lower part of it. Base of a triangle, is properly that side parellel to the horizon. Base, in anatomy, is the broader or upper part of the heart, to which the two auricles are fixed. Base fee, is tenure in fee at the will of a lord. Base, in music, is the lowest of all the parts, serving as a foundation for the others. In chemistry, the earth alkali, or metal which is combined with an acid to form a salt.

To BASE, v. a. [basier, Fr.] to lower the value of a thing by mixtures; to debase; to adulterate.

BA'SELY, ad. meanly, dishonourably. In bastardy.

BA'SENESS, s. applied to actions, that which is void of generosity, magnanimity, or nobleness of soul, and proceeds from a narrowness or meanness of spirit. Applied to metals, their want of the standard value. Applied to birth, dishonourable, or produced from unlicensed embraces. Applied to sound, low, grave.

BASE-VIOL, s. See BASS-VIOL.

To BASH, v. a. to be ashamed.

BASHAW, s. [Turk.] a Turkish governor of a province, city, or district, who has two horse-tails carried before him.

BA'SHFUL, a. easily put out of countenance.

BA'SHFULLY, ad. in a timorous sleepish manner.

BA'SHFULNESS, s. timorousness, fear, or shame.

BA'SIL, BASLE, or BALE, the capital of the canton of Basil, in Switzerland. It is a large, rich, populous city, with a bishop's see, and a famous university. It is divided into two parts by the river Rhine; the largest of which is on the side of Swisserland, and the least on that of Germany; but they are joined together by a handsome bridge. The larger has five gates, six suburbs, 220 streets, six large squares, and 46 fountains, and is partly seated on a hill. The lesser stands in a plain, and has but two gates, with several streets and fountains. The town-house, and fine paintings in fresco, particularly the picture done by Holbein, which represents the passion of Christ, are much admired by travellers. The library contains a prodigious number of books, as well in manuscript as printed; and there is a rich collection of medals, among which there are several exceedingly scarce. The clocks here always go an hour too fast, because they did so on the day appointed to murder the magistrates, by which the conspiracy was disconcerted. This town is surrounded with thick walls, flanked with towers and bastions, and yet is not a strong place. The art of making paper is said to have been invented here. Lon. 7. 36. E. lat. 47. 40. N.

BA'SIL, (bázil) s. among joiner's, the sloping edge of a carpenter's or joiner's tool, which varies according to the work it is to do; the skin of a sheep tanned. In botany, a plant scientifically called clinopodium.

To BA'SIL. (bázil) v. a. to grind away the edge of a tool to a certain thickness or angle.

BA'SILIC, s. [basilike, a royal palace, Gr.] in ancient architecture, a term used for a large hall, or public place, where princes sat and administered justice in person; but is now applied to such churches, temples, &c. which by their grandeur as far surpass other churches, as princes' palaces do private houses; also to such stately buildings as the Royal Exchange of London, where persons meet and converse.

BA'SILIC, or BASI'LICAL, a. in anatomy, belonging or relating to the basilical vein.

BASI'LICA, s. [from bazilike, Gr.] in anatomy, the middle vein of the arm; so called by way of pre-eminence.

BASI'LICON, s. [Gr.] in pharmacy, an ointment called likewise tetrapharmacon, from its being composed of four ingredients, viz. resin, wax, pitch, and oil of olives; by some, of Burgundy pitch, turpentine, resin, and oil.

BA'SILISK, (bázilisk) s. [basiliskos, a little king, Gr.] a fabulous serpent, said to kill by its look; also a species of lizard.

BA'SINGSTOKE, a town in Hampshire, with a market on Wednesday. It is a corporation, and a great thoroughfare town on the western road; seated on a small brook, 35 miles E. by N. of Salisbury, and 46 W. by S. of London.

BA'SIS, s. [basis, Lat.] the foundation, or that on which any thing is established or supported. See BASE.

To BASK, v. a. [backeren, Belg.] to warm by exposing to, or laying in, the heat of the sun. Neuterly, to lay in a warm place.

BA'SKET, s. [basged, Brit.] a vessel made with twigs, rushes, &c. woven together.

BA'SKET-FISH, a very remarkable fish, sometimes caught in the American seas. This fish spreads itself from a pentagonal mouth piece, or root in the centre of which the mouth is placed into five main limbs or branches, and each of these dividing and subdividing 14 times, so that at length they make more than 80,000 limbs. The use of the numerous arms of this fish is to catch their prey.

BA'SKET-HILT, s. a hilt of a weapon so made as to contain the whole hand, and defend it from being wounded.

BA'SON, or BA'SIN, s. [basin, Fr.] a small vessel to hold water or other liquors; an hollow place which contains water; a poud; a canal; a dock for repairing or building ships; a concave piece of metal made use of by opticians to grind their convex glasses in; a round shell, or case of iron, placed over a furnace, wherein hatters mould their hats. In anatomy, a round cavity in the form of a tunnel, between the anterior ventricles of the brain, the pituitory glands, and the veins. Basons of a balance are the same as scales, one of which contains the weight, and the other the commodity whose weight is required.

BASS, (pron. base, which way it is frequently spelt) s. [basso, Ital.] in music, the lowest of all the parts, serving as a foundation to the others. That part of a concert consisting of the gravest, deepest, and most solemn sounds. Counter-bass is the second, when there are several in the same concert. Thorough-bass, is that which proceeds without intermission from the beginning to the end, and is the harmony made by bass-viols, theorbo's, &c. playing both while the voices sing and other instruments perform; and also filling the intervals when they stop. Also, a mat used in churches to kneel on, made of rushes, in a cylindrical form, and stuffed with hay; commonly called a boss.

BA'SSA, s. See BASHAW.

BA'SSET, s. [basset, Fr.] a game at cards.

BA'SSO, s. [Ital.] in music, sometimes extended to the bass universally, and at other times restrained to that only which is sung. Basso concertato, the figure or thorough bass, going through the whole piece, playing chords, or whatever can convey harmony to the ear. Basso repieno, the bass of the grand chorus, which is heard only or comes in at intervals, in order to make the composition have a greater effect.

BA'SSON, or BASSOO'N, s. [basson, Fr.] in music, a wind instrument, blown with a reed, nine inches diameter at the bottom, with eleven holes, stopped like those of a flute, dividing into two parts, and used for the bass in concerts with hautboys.

BA'SSO-RELIE'VO, or BASS-RELIEF, s. [Ital.] in sculpture, the figures of which do not stand out much from the ground or plane on which they are formed; and when that work is low, flat, and but little raised, as upon coins, medals, counters, &c. it is called low relief; if the figures are raised high, so as to be well distinguished, it is called bold relief.

BASS-VIOL, s. of the same form with that of a violin, but much larger; is played upon in the same manner, and has the same number of strings, and eight stops, which are subdivided in semi-stops.

BA'STARD, s. [bastardd, Brit.] in law, a person born of parents which have not been lawfully married, and cannot inherit land as heir to his father.

To BA'STARD, v. a. to convict of getting a bastard; to prove a person not begotten in lawful wedlock.

To BASTARDIZE, v. a. to prove a person not begotten in lawful marriage; to get a bastard.

BA'STARDLY, ad. like a bastard; in a degenerate, spurious manner.

BA'STARDY, s. in law, an unlawful state of birth, wherein a person is produced from a couple not married, and is therefore disabled from succeeding to an inheritance.

To BASTE, v. a. [bastonner, Fr.] to beat with a stick. In cookery, to moisten meat while roasting, with butter or dripping. Among semptresses from baster, Fr. to stitch, to sew two selvages together.

BA'STIA, a sea-port, the capital of Corsica, with a good harbour, and only fit for small vessels. The number of inhabitants is about 6000. It is situated on the NE. coast of the island, in lat. 42. 36. N. lon. 9. 30. E.

BASTI'LE, a royal castle built by Charles V. in 1369, for the defence of Paris, formerly used as a place of confinement for state prisoners, but totally demolished by the populace, on the great revolution in France, 1789.

BASTINA'DE, or BASTINA'DO, s. [bastonnade, Fr.] the act of beating with a stick or cudgel; the punishment inflicted by the Turks, of beating the soles of a person's feet with a heavy piece of wood, having a large knob or round head at the end.

To BASTINADE, or BASTINA'DO, v. a. [bastonner, Fr.] to beat with a stick or cudgel.

BA'STION, s. [bastion, Fr.] in fortification, a large mass of earth, faced with sods, seldom with brick or stone, standing out from a rampart.

BA'STON, or BA'TTOO'N, s. [Fr.] in architecture, a mould at the base of a column, called a tore. In heraldry, a kind of bend not reaching quite across the shield; a sign of bastardy, and ought not to be removed till the third generation.

BAT, s. any large club; particularly one curved and flat on one side, towards the bottom, used in the game of cricket. In natural history, a quadruped furnished with membranaceous wings, which appears only in the evening.

BA'TABLE, a. in law, applied to grounds whose property is disputable.

BATA'VIA, a handsome, large, and very strong town of Asia, in the island of Java and kingdom of Bantam; the capital of all the Dutch settlements and colonies in the East Indies. The fort, or citadel, is built at a little distance from the town, of stone brought from Europe. Besides this, they have five other forts about the city, to defend it from all insults. In general the place is very beautiful, and built with white stone; and they have canals in the principal streets, planted on each side with evergreen trees. Batavia contains a prodigious number of inhabitants, of every nation and country in these parts; particularly a great number of Chinese, till many thousands of them were massacred in cold blood, in 1741, and their wealth confiscated by the Dutch. It is the residence of the governor-general of all the Dutch colonies in the East Indies, who continues but three years, and is replaced by another, sent by the United Provinces. It has an handsome hospital and arsenal; and all the goods brought from other parts of the East Indies are laid up here till they are exported to the places of their destination. It was taken from the Dutch by the English forces in February, 1796. The harbour is excellent, and seated on the N. E. part of the island, S. E. of Sumatra, and N. W. of Borneo. Lon. 106. 50. E. lat. 6. 10. S.

BA'TCH, s. the quantity of bread baked at one time. Any quantity of a thing made at once, so as to have the same qualities.

BA'TCHELOR, s. See BACHELOR.

BA'TCHELOR'S BUTTONS, s. the common white and red campion.

To BATE, v. a. [contracted from abate] to lessen a demand or lower the price of a commodity; to abstain or refrain from a thing; to except, or take away.

BA'TEMENT, s. the lessening the quantity of stuff: used by carpenters, and low mechanics.

BAT-FOWLING, s. a method of catching birds in the night, practised by lighting straw, or carrying a lantern near the bushes, which being beat with a stick, they fly towards the light, and are caught in nets provided for that purpose.

BATH, s. [bath, Sax.] a sufficient quantity of water collected into some convenient place for persons to wash in. Baths are divided into hot and cold. The most celebrated of this kind in England, are those near Wells, in Somersetshire. They produce a perspiration of 5oz. in an hour are of great use in disorders of the head, palsy, diseases of the skin, scurvy, stone, constipations of the bowels, and most chronical disorders. Cold bathing operates both by its cold and constringing power, and its weight, which at the depth of two feet under water, presses on the human frame with a weight of 2280lb. troy. It dissolves the blood, removes any viscid matter adhering to the sides of the vessels; generates the spirits; forces urine; and removes obstructions in the viscera. In chemistry, baths are vessels for distillation, or digestion, contrived to transmit heat gradually and regularly. They are of two kinds, sand-baths, and water baths. Sand-baths, are vessels filled in part with dry sand, in which those retorts are placed, which require a greater heat than can be given by boiling water. Water-baths, are vessels of boiling water, in which other vessels, containing the matters to be distilled or digested, are put in order, that the same heat may be kept up throughout the whole of any particular process. Knights of the Bath, a military order in England, instituted by Richard II. who limitted their number to four; but his successor, Henry IV. increased them to forty-six. Their motto was tres in uno, signifying the three theological virtues. This order received its denomination from a custom of bathing before they received the golden spur. The order of the bath, after remaining many years extinct, was revived under George I. by a solemn creation of a great number of knights.

BATH, a city of Somersetshire, famous, from the times of the Romans, for its hot springs. They are not only used as baths, but internally as medicine, and great benefits are derived from them in gouty, paralytic, billious, and a variety of other cases. Bath is a place of such general resort, that it seems like a great national hospital; it is so far, however, from being a house of mourning, that it exceeds every other part of England in amusements and dissipation. It is laid out in squares, circuses, crescents, terraces, &c. these are constructed of white free-stone, which abounds here, and are executed in an elegant stile of architecture. It is seated on the river Avon; but, in its later improvements, the buildings, rising, one range above another, have nearly reached the summit of the hill, on the declivity of which it stands. The principal season for the waters are spring and autumn; and, besides the great infirmary, here are several other hospitals and alms-houses, for the relief and support of indigent patients. Considerable manufactures of cloth are carried on near Bath. It is 12 miles E. S. E. of Bristol, and 105 W. of London. Market on Saturday.

To BATHE, v. a. [bathian, Sax.] to wash in a bath; to soften or supple by the outward application of warm liquors; to wash any thing.

BATH-KOL, s. [Heb. the daughter of the voice] a name whereby the Jewish writers distinguish the revelation which God made of his will to his chosen people, when, upon the death of Malachi, all prophecies had ceased in Israel.

BATH-METAL, s. mixed metal, otherwise called Prinees' Metal

BA'TING, prep. except.

BATTA'LIA, s. [battaglia, Ital.] the drawing up an army in order of battle.

BATTA'LION, s. [battaillon, Fr.] a small body of infantry drawn up in order of battle. A battalion seldom falls short of 700, or exceeds 1000 men. It is generally ranged in six ranks.

BA'TTEL, a town in Sussex, so named from an abbey, called Battel-abbey, erected by the conqueror, on the spot where the decisive battle was fought between Harold and William duke of Normandy, Oct. 14th, 1066. The gate-house of the abbey, (which was a stately pile, nearly a mile in circumference) remains almost entire, and serves for the sessions, and other public meetings. The town, which is low and dirty, consists of one good street, has a harbour for barges, and a manufacture of gunpowder, of considerable estimation among sportsmen. Battel is 6 miles N. W. of Hastings, 22 E. of Lewes, and 57 S. E. of London. A weekly market on Thursday, for provisions, and a market every second Tuesday in the month for cattle, corn, &c.

BA'TTEN, s. a name given by workmen to a long thin piece of wood, of an inconsiderable breadth, seldom exceeding four inches; it is generally about an inch thick.

To BA'TTEN, v. a. [batten, Teut.] to glut or satiate one's self; to grow fat, to live luxuriously. Applied to land, to make fruitful.

BA'TTER, s. in cookery, a mixture of flour, eggs, and milk, beaten together with some liquor.

To BATTER, v. a. [battre Fr.] to beat, to beat down. Most commonly applied to the battering of walls by engines, cannon, &c.

BA'TTERY, s. [batterie, Fr.] in fortification, a place where artillery is planted, in order to play upon the enemy. In law, the beating any person unjustly. In electricity, a combination of coated surfaces of glass, so connected together that they may be discharged by a common conductor.

BA'TTLE, s. [battaille, Fr.] a fight between two numerous bodies of men. SYNON. The fight of two individuals is frequently, but improperly, called a battle instead of a combat, for a battle supposes a number on both sides. We use the word battle when speaking of the conflict between two armies. Engagement is applied to the encounter between two fleets.

To BA'TTLE, v. a. [batailler, Fr.] to engage in battle, or contend in any manner whatever.

BA'TTLE-ARRAY, s. arrangement, or order of battle; the proper disposition of men in order to engage an enemy.

BA'TTLE-AXE, s. a weapon made use of in former times, frequent mention is made of it by historians, though none of them have left us a description of it.

BA'TTLEDOOR, s. an instrument used to strike a shuttle-cock; it consists of a handle and broad blade.

BA'TTLEFIELD, a village in Shropshire, 5 miles N. of Shrewsbury, where a victory was gained by Henry IV. over the rebels under Henry Percy, surnamed Hotspur. It is governed by a constable, and consists of 400 houses and 1400 inhabitants. It has a large church, and one long street, paved; but no manufactory.

BA'TTLEMENTS, s. notches on the top of a tower, wall, parapet, &c. to look through, in order to annoy an enemy.

BATTO'LOGY, s. [from battos, a babbler, and lego, to speak, Gr.] a tedious circumlocution, or the frequent repetition of the same word without any reason.

BA'TTON, s. in merchandise, a name given to certain pieces of wood or deal for flooring and other purposes.

BATTOO'N, s. [baton, Fr.] a truncheon or staff, borne by a marshal as a mark of his dignity; likewise, any short stick or club.

BAVA'RIA, a considerable country of Germany, with the title of a duchy; bounded on the N. by Bohemia, and the Upper Palatinate; on the E. by Austria, the archbishopric of Saltzburg, and the bishopric of Passau; on the S. by the bishopric of Brixen, and the Tyrol, and on the W. by the river Lech. It is about 124 miles in length from E. to W. and

87 in breadth from N. to S. The principal rivers are the Danube, the Inn, the Iser, and the Lech. The air is wholesome, and the soil fertile in wine, wheat, and good pastures; but the country having little trade, is poor. It is divided into the Upper and Lower; and the duke is one of the electors since the year 1623.—In 1806, Bavaria was erected into a kingdom by the favour of Bonaparte, and is now a member of the new confederation under the protection of France

BA'VAROY, a kind of cloak or surtout.

BAU'BLE, s. [baubellum, barbarous Lat.] a play-thing; and figuratively, any thing of a trifling insignificant nature.

BA'VIN, s. a sort of brush faggots, used by bakers to heat their ovens, and by others for other uses; in war, they are used to fill up ditches.

BAWBEE', s. in Scotland, a halfpenny.

BA'WCOCK, s. a fine fellow.

BAWD, s. [baude, old Fr.] a person of either sex, who lives by procuring women for lewd purposes.

BA'WDILY, ad. in an obscene, unchaste, or immodest manner.

BA'WDRY, s. the acting like a bawd, in bringing persons together for immodest purposes. Applied to language, that which is unchaste and obscene.

BA'WDY, a, that expresses obscenity or unchaste ideas in plain terms; and carries with it the idea of impudence.

BA'WDY-HOUSE, s. a place where strumpets carry on their immodesty, and prostitution is practised.

To BAWL, v. a. [bala, Lat.] to cry or speak any thing with a loud voice.

BA'WSIN, s. in natural history, a badger.

BA'WTRY, or BEAUTRY, a town in the W. Riding of Yorkshire, on the borders of Nottinghamshire, with a market on Wednesday. It is three furlongs in length on the road from London to York, and has been long noted for millstones and grindstones, brought hither by the river Idle, on which it is seated. It is 8 miles S. by E. of Doncaster, and 149 N. of London.

BAY, s. [badius, Lat. baye, Belg.] applied to the colour of a horse, is that which inclines to red, and approaches near to a chesnut. The light and gilded bays have a greater cast of the yellow; the dun, scarlet, and bloody bay, a greater mixture of red; and the chesnut bay, that which resembles the colour of a chesnut. In geography, a part of the sea which runs into the land, and is broader in the middle than at its first entrance, called the mouth. Figuratively, the state of one surrounded by enemies, which cannot be escaped but by making head against them. In architecture, used to signify the largeness of a building; thus a barn, which has a floor and two heads, is called a barn and two bays. In botany, the laurus, a kind of evergreen, which used to be formed into wreaths, as a reward for poets, &c. Hence it is used as a token of honour, and a mark of merit.

To BAY, v. n. [abboyer, Fr.] to bark at; to surround, in the same manner as hounds do their prey.

BAY-SALT, s. salt made of sea-water, which receives its consistence from the heat of the sun, and is so called from its brown colour. By letting the sea-water into square pits or basons, its surface being struck and agitated by the rays of the sun, it thickens at first imperceptibly, and becomes covered over with a slight crust, which hardening by the continuance of the heat, is wholly converted into salt. The water in this condition is scalding hot, and the crystillization is perfected in eight, ten, or at most fifteen days.

BAY-WINDOW, s. a window which swells or projects outwards.

BA'YARD, s. a horse of a bay colour.

BA'YONET, s. [bayonette, Fr.] a short broad dagger made lancet-fashion, with a round hollow iron handle, which goes over the muzzle of a musket, and fixes it to it.

BAYONNE, a large, rich, populous, commercial, and well fortified city, in the dept. of the Lower Pyrenees, noted for hams and chocolate, and exporting masts, brought from the Pyrenees, by the rivers to Brest, &c. It is supposed that the bayonet was invented by a native of this city, or was here first made use of. It is 25 miles S. W. of Dax, and 425 miles S. by W. of Paris.

BA'Y-YARN, s. yarn proper for making baize.

BAYZE, s. See BAIZE.

BAZAS, a small city in the dept. of Gironde, formerly capital of the Bazadois, 5 miles S. of the Garonne, and 30 S. E. of Bourdeaux.

BDE'LLIUM, (in pronunciation the b is generally dropped) s. [bdellion, Gr.] a gum-resin, somewhat resembling myrrh in appearance, brought from the Levant; it is met with in single drops of an irregular size, some of which are as large as a hazel-nut. Its colour is dusky, and its taste bitterish. People are no more agreed about the true nature of bdellium, than they are about the manner how it is produced; and it is much doubted whether the bdellium of the ancients be the same with the modern kind. In pharmacy, this gum is allowed to be an emollient and discutient, and to be a powerful aperient and detergent, according to its age; for it is more so when new and fresh than afterwards.

To BE, v. n. [beon, Sax.] an auxiliary verb, by which we form the passive; sometimes used to confirm the state or condition of a thing, and at others its existence. To be reserved for a person future, in opposition to present.

BE, an article used in composition, and borrowed from the Saxons, sometimes a mere expletive, and otherwise signifies upon, about; as to be-spatter, to be-sprinkle.

BEACH, s. that part of the sea-shore which is washed by its waves.

BE'ACHED, a. that is exposed to the sea waves.

BE'ACHY, a. that abounds in beaches.

BE'ACON, s. [beacon, Sax.] a signal, or combustibles raised on an eminence, to be fired as the signal of an enemy's approach; a signal or mark erected at sea, for the security of vessels.

BE'ACHY-HEAD, a promontory on the coast of Sussex; between Hastings and Shoreham, where the French fleet defeated the English and Dutch in June, 1690. Lat. 50° 44 24" N. lon. 0° 15' 12" E. from Greenwich.

BE'ACONAGE, a tax paid for the use and maintenance of a beacon.

BE'ACONSFIELD, a town in Bucks, with a small market on Thursday. It stands on an eminence on the road from London to Oxford; and has several good inns; contains about 100 well built houses, and is 8 miles N. W. of Uxbridge, and 23 W. N. W. of London.

BEAD, s. [from beade, Sax.] a small round piece of glass or other substance, moving on a string which runs through it, used by those of the Romish church to count their sins and prayers. Likewise used as ornaments for women, and worn round their necks in necklaces. In architecture, a round moulding, or astragal, carved so as to resemble a necklace.

BE'ADLE, s. [bydel, Sax.] a public crier, herald, or messenger. In law, one who cites people to appear at a court; one whose office is to punish or apprehend strollers, vagrants, and petty offenders in a parish. At the university, one who walks before the masters in public processions. Squire beadles are those that attend peculiarly on the vice-chancellors, give notice of convocations at each college, and are generally masters of arts.

BE'ADPROOF, s. among distillers, a fallacious way of determining the strength of their spirits, from the continuance of the bubbles or beads raised by shaking a small quantity of the spirit in a phial.

BE'ADROLL, s. a list or catalogue of a certain number of prayers for souls of the dead, which are generally counted by the members of the Romish church on their beads.

BE'ADSMAN, s. one who devotes himself entirely to prayer; one who undertakes or professes to pray for another.

BE'AGLE, s. [bigle, Fr.] in natural history, an English hound, or hunting dog, of a small size, known by its deep sound, and used in hunting hares.

BEAK, s. [bec, Fr.] the bill of a bird, or any thing which resembles it.

BEAKED, a. sharp pointed, resembling the beak of a bird.

BEAKER, s. a cup with a spout in the form of a bird's beak.

BEAL, s. a pimple, or any eruption in the skin, which raises or protuberates beyond it.

BEALT, BEALTH, or BULITH, a town of Brecknockshire, in South Wales, with a large market on Monday, for live cattle, and one on Saturday for provisions. It is pleasantly seated on the river Wye, and consists of about 100 houses, whose inhabitants have a trade in stockings. It is 16 miles N. of Brecknock, 92 S. of Chester, and 171 from London.

BEAM, s. [from beam, Sax.] in building, a large piece of wood lying across the walls of a building, supporting the principal rafters of the roof. Applied to a balance, that piece of iron, &c. which supports the scales. Among weavers, a cylindrical piece of wood, placed lengthways on the back part of the loom, on which the threads of the warp are rolled and unrolled as the work advances; likewise the cylinder, or round piece of wood, on which the stuff is rolled as it is weaved, placed on the fore part of the loom. A ray of light darted or emitted from any luminous body. Applied to an ancher, the straight part or shank, to which the hooks are fastened. SYNON. We say rays of light, beams of the sun; by the first of which expressions we mean, that those are rays which shine early in the morning; by the second, that those are the beams which gleam at noon.

To BEAM, v. n. to emit or dart rays.

BEAMINSTER, BEMINSTER, or BEMSTER, a town in Dorsetshire, with a market on Thursday. It is a pretty place, seated on the river Bert, 15 miles W. N. W. of Dorchester, and 137 W. by S. of London.

BEAMY, a. that darts rays; shining; radiant.

BEAN, s. [bean, Sax.] in botany, a kind of pulse.

To BEAR, v. a. [beoran, beran, Sax.] in its primary sense, to support, to stand under, or carry a burden; to deliver or carry; to wear. Used with name, to go by. To support, sustain, or keep from falling; to endure; to permit, or suffer without resentment: to produce, to bring forth. To carry away by violence. Joined with down, to overcome, or carry along with one like a torrent. To bear a head, in distillery, to shew itself to be proof by frothing when shook. To bear a body, in painting, capable of being well ground down, and mixing with oil, so as not to shew any grit or particles. Joined to price, to sell well, or at a certain value. To endure the frown of adversity; to suffer without remonstrance or complaint. To produce fruit, applied to vegetables. To bear off, to carry away by force. To bear upon, to stand firm without falling. To bear out, to support or maintain one's opinion.

BEAR, s. in natural history, a genus of wild beasts, with long shaggy hairs, sharp hooked claws, and long soles to their feet. The common bear inhabits the forest of the northern regions of Europe, and is pretty well known. The black bear lives chiefly on vegetables, and the brown bear on animal food. They are extremely fond of honey. The white, or polar bear is much larger than the common, and inhabits the most northern regions, which have been visited by navigators. These feed chiefly on seals and the carcases of dead whales. Bear, in astronomy, is applied to two constellations in the northern hemisphere, called the greater and the less. In the tail of the less is the pole star, never distant above two degrees from the pole.

BEARALSTON, a small town in Devonshire, that had a market on Thursday, now disused; nor has it any fairs; but sends two members to parliament. It is 10 miles N. of Plymouth, and 212 W. by S. of London.

BEARD, s. [beard, Sax.] the hair which grows on a person's cheeks, lips, and chin, which has given no small cause of contention in the military, civil, and ecclesiastical world. The Chinese are very fond of long ones; but nature having been very sparing to them, they look on the Europeans as very great men, on account of this advantage. Applied to vegetables, it signifies the prickles which grow on the ears of corn. In an arrow, it is the barb, or forked point at the head. In astronomy, the beard of a comet is the rays emitted towards the part to which it moves.

To BEARD, v. a. to take a person by the beard, including the idea of strength and contempt in the agent.

BEARDED, a. an epithet applied to a person that has a beard. Applied to vegetables, that has long ears, like those growing on the ears of corn. Applied to instruments, that is forked like a fish-hook, not easily to be pulled out; jagged.

BEARDLESS, a. without a beard. Figuratively, young, or not arrived at the state of manhood.

BEARER, s. one who carries or conveys a thing from one to another. One who supports, or sustains, applied to dignity. That which produces or yields fruit, applied to vegetables.

BEAR-GARDEN, s. a place wherein bears are kept for diversion. Figuratively, any place where low diversions are exhibited, and tumult and confusion are customary.

BEARING, s. the act of supporting a weight; the carrying a burden. In geography, and navigation, the situation of one place to another, with regard to the points of the compass. In sea language, when a ship sails towards the shore before the wind, she is said to bear in with the land or harbour. To let the ship sail more before the wind, is to bear up. To put her right before the wind is to bear round. A ship that keeps off from the land, is said to bear off. When a ship to the windward comes under another ship's stern, and so gives her the wind, she is said to bear under her lee.

BEAR'S-FOOT, s. a plant, the same with the stinking hellebore.

BEAST, s. [beste, Fr.] an animal not endued with reason, generally four-footed, and no other covering or dress but that which nature has furnished it with. Figuratively, a person who acts inconsistent with the character of a rational creature.

BEASTLINESS, s. that which is unworthy of a man; that which is indecent and disgustful.

BEASTLY, a. that resembles a beast, either in its form, or other of its peculiar qualities.

To BEAT, v. a. [preter beat, part. pass. beat or beaten; battre, Fr.] to strike a person; to pound, to reduce to powder; to forge; to subdue, overcome, or vanquish; to mix together by violent stirring. Used with the particle down, to lessen the price. Used with brains or head, to apply one's thought to a difficult subject. "To beat his brains about things impossible." Hayw. "Waste his time, and beat his head about the latin grammar." Locke. Neuterly, to move, or throb, applied to the pulse or the heart. To beat up for soldiers, to go about with a drum in order to raise recruits. The word up is an expletive, and might be left out. SYNON. In order to beat, we must redouble the blows; but to strike, we give only one. We are never beaten without being struck; but we are often struck without being beaten.

BEAT, s. a stroke; the sound made by a drum, when struck by the sticks; the stroke or throb of the pulse or heart.

BEATER, s. an instrument by which blows or strokes are given; a pestle.

BEATIFIC, or BEATIFICAL, a. [beatificus, Lat.] that can render a person completely happy. An epithet used by divines for the bliss of heaven.

BEATIFICALLY, ad. in such a manner as to make a person perfectly happy.

BEATIFICATION, s. in the Romish church, an acknowledgment that a person is in heaven, and may be esteemed as blessed; but not allowed the honours of saints, conferred by canonization.

To BEATIFY, v. a. [beatifico, Lat.] to make perfectly happy; to bless with a place in the heavenly mansions.

BE'ATING, s. a punishment inflicted with blows.

BEATITUDE, s. [beatitudo, Lat.] in divinity, a state of perfect happiness, free from defect or interruption, applied to that of the deceased saints and angels in heaven.

BEATS, s. in clock or watch-work, the strokes made by the fangs or pallat of the spindle of the balance.

BEAU, s. [Fr. pronounced bo, and has the French plural beaux] an effeminate person of the male sex, who is passionately fond of dress.

BEAUDESERT, or BELDESERT, a town of Warwickshire, NE. of Henley. Market on Monday.

BE'AVER, s. [bievre, Fr.] in natural history, an animal which lives sometimes by land, and sometimes by water, about four feet long, and weighs from 50 to 60lb. Its hair is either brown, white, or black; that on the belly is a very fine down, about an inch long, and is used for hats. Its tail resembles that of a fish more than any land animal, serves it instead of a trowel in building, and of a rudder in swimming.

BEAUFET, BUFFET, or BUFET, anciently a little apartment separated from the rest of the room by slender wooden columns, for the disposing china and glass ware, &c. called also a cabinet. It is now properly a large table in a dining room, called also a side board.

BEAUISH, (bo-ish) a. resembling a beau; effeminately nice; foppish.

BEAUMARIS, a town of Anglesea, in North Wales, with a market on Wednesday. It stands on the streight of Menay, and was fortified with a castle by Edward I. It is governed by a mayor, recorder, two bailiffs, and twenty-one common council men, and sends one member to parliament. Here the general quarter sessions are held, and the county gaol is kept. It lies on the road from Chester to Holyhead, and was formerly a place of good trade by means of its excellent harbour. Here is plenty of corn, butter, and cheese. It is 59 miles W. by N. of Chester, and 254 N. W. of London.

BEAUTEOUS, (beúteous) a. that is formed with so much elegance and symmetry, as to raise an agreeable sensation in the mind.

BEAUTEOUSLY, (beúteously) ad. in such a manner as to raise an idea of regular feature, fineness of shape, and elegance of complexion.

BEAUTIFUL, (beútiful) a. that has all the symmetry of parts necessary to convey the idea of beauty, applied both to persons and things.

To BEAUTIFY, (beútify) v. a. to recommend any thing to the love or approbation of a person, by heightening or increasing its charms.

BEAUTY, (beúty) s. [beauté, Fr.] a certain composition of colour and figure, which raises delight and approbation in the beholder. Figuratively, applied to music, painting, architecture, statuary, and literary compositions, implying an idea of excellence in the object, capable of raising delight in the mind. A person blessed with all that symmetry of features, &c. that raise delight in the mind of a beholder, and extort approbation by its excellencies. SYNON. By a handsome woman, we understand one that is graceful and well shaped, with a regular disposition of features; by a pretty, we mean one that is delicately made, and whose features are so formed as to please; by a beautiful, an union of both. When applied to other things, beautiful relates to something more serious and engaging; pretty, to somewhat more gay and diverting; this is the reason why we say a beautiful tragedy, but a pretty comedy.

BEAUTYSPOT, (beúty spot) s. something artfully made use of to heighten the charms of a person; a patch.

BEAUVAIS, a city in the dept of Oise, having besides the cathedral, 6 collegiate, and 3 parish churches. Before the revolution, it was the capital of the Beauvaises. It is seated on the river Thesin, 42 miles nearly N. of Paris.

To BECALM, v. a. to reduce a storm or tempestuous commotion of the elements to rest and quietness. Figuratively, to pacify the turbulent passions that disturb the mind.

BECAFICO, s. [becafigo, Sax.] a bird like a nightingale, feeding on figs and grapes; a fig-pecker.

BECAUSE, conj. [from be, Sax. and cause] used to imply a reason, or cause of an assertion or truth which comes before it.

BECCLES, a town in Suffolk, with a good market on Saturday. It is a large town with a handsome church, and a tall bulky steeple, seated on an eminence some distance from the church; 15 miles S. W. of Yarmouth, and 109 N. E. of London.

BECHICS, (bekiks) s. [from bex a cough, Gr.] in pharmacy, medicines to relieve a cough.

BECK, s. an external sign, generally such as is made with the head: also a word which imports a small stream of water issuing from some bower or spring. Hence the term Hellbecks, which are little brooks in the rough and wild mountains about Richmond near Lancashire.

To BE'CKON, v. a. to make signs to a person to approach or come to one.

To BECO'ME, v. a. [pret. I became, comp. pret. I have become] to be made; to grow; to alter or change from one state to another. Used with of, to happen, to fall out, to be the end of.

To BECO'ME, v. a. applied to persons, to appear worthy of, to adorn, or grace. Applied to things, to suit; to be proper for; to agree, or be so adapted to the circumstances of a person as to be graceful.

BECO'MING, part. that acquires a grace from its suitableness or propriety.

BECO'MINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to suit the circumstances, rank, and character of a person.

BED, s. [bed, Sax.] a place designed for a person to sleep or lie on, made of a sacking covering, stuffed with feathers, flocks, &c. Figuratively, lodging; marriage. In gardening, a piece of made ground, enriched with dung, &c. for raising plants and other vegetables; the channel of any river. In natural history, a range or layer of earth or mineral substance, a stratum. To be brought to bed of a son, to be delivered of, &c. To make a bed, to shake it, lay the clothes smooth, and make it fit to be lain on. Bed, in gunnery, a solid piece of oak, hollowed in the middle, to receive the breech and half the trunnions.

To BED, v. a. to place in a bed; to go to bed. Neuterly, to cohabit.

To BEDA'BBLE, v. a. to wet, so as to occasion inconvenience or uneasiness.

To BEDA'GGLE, v. a. to daub, dirt, or splash the bottom of a garment, by walking carelessly in wet weather, and not holding it up.

BE'DAL, a small town in Yorkshire, 6 miles from Northallerton, 8 from Richmond, and 220 from London. The Roman causeway, leading from Richmond to Barnard's Castle, which for 20 miles together, is called Leeming Lane, passes through this place. All the adjacent country is full of jockeys and horse-dealers, here being some of the best hunting and road horses in the world. Market on Tuesday.

To BEDA'SH, v. a. to wet a person with water by beating it with a stick, or casting a stone in for that purpose.

To BEDAUB, v. a. to cover a thing with dirt. Figuratively, to apply or lay on paint in a rough and ignorant manner.

To BEDA'ZZLE, v. a to overpower the sight by too much brightness or lustre.

BE'DCHAMBER, s. a room furnished with a bed, and set apart for sleeping in. Lords of the bed-chamber are 10, of the first rank, who attend in their turns one week in the king's bed-chamber, lying on a pallet bed all night, and waiting on him whenever he eats in private. The first of them is called the groom of the stole.

BE'DCLOTHES, s. the blankets, quilt, coverlid, &c. which are spread over a bed.

BE'DDING, s. [bedinge, Sax.] the bed, blankets, quilt, coverlid, &c. which are on a bedstead.

To BEDE'CK, v. a. to embelish; to adorn; to grace.

BE'DHOUSE, s. [from bede, Sax. and house] an hospital, or alms-house.

To BEDE'W, v. a. to moisten by sprinkling; in allusion to the manner in which the dew moistens the earth and vegetables.

BE'DFELLOW, s. one who lies in the same bed with another.

BE'DFORD, the county town of Bedfordshire, with two markets, on Tuesday and Saturday. Bedford is seated on the river Ouse, which divides it into two parts, united by a bridge with two gates, one at each end, to stop the passage occasionally. It has five churches, and formerly had a strong castle, whose site is now a very fine bowling-green. It is governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen, a recorder, two bailiffs, a town-clerk, and two sergeants at mace. The Tuesday market is on the south side for cattle; and that on Saturday on the north side, for corn. It is 27 miles E. by N. of Buckingham, and 50 N. W. of London. It has the title of a duchy, and sends two members to parliament.

BE'DFORDSHIRE, a county in England, about 35 miles in length, and 22 in breadth. It contains 9 hundreds, 10 market towns, 124 parishes, and about 67,350 inhabitants, and sends 6 members to parliament. It is a pleasant inland county, and diversified with fruitful plains and rising hills, abounding in cattle, corn, and rich pastures; it is noted for barley, bone, lace, and a manufacture of straw goods.

To BEDI'GHT, v. a. to set off with dress, or other external ornaments.

To BEDI'M, v. a. to darken, to obscure by great brightness.

To BEDI'ZEN, v. a. to dress out.

BE'DLAM, s. [formerly spelt Bethlehem, a religious house near Moorfields in London, converted into an hospital for mad people] a house set apart for the abode and cure of mad people.

BEDLAM, a. belonging to a mad-house.

BE'DLAMITE, s. an inhabitant of bedlam; a mad person.

BE'DMAKER, s. a person in the universities, whose office it is to make the beds, and clean the chambers.

To BEDRA'GGLE, v. a. to dirt or soil the lower part of a garment, by letting it drag in the dirt.

To BEDRE'NCH, v. a. to soak with an abundance of some fluid.

BE'DRIDDEN, a. worn out by age and sickness, so as to be unable to quit his bed.

BE'DRITE, s. the privilege of the marriage-bed.

BE'DSTEAD, or BE'DSTED, s. the frame on which the bed is laid.

To BEDU'NG, v. a. to cover with dung.

To BEDU'ST, v. a. to sprinkle with dust.

BE'DWIN-MAGNA, a village 5 miles S. W. of Hungerford, which has neither market nor fair; but has a borough by prescription, and sends two members to parliament. Some tell us it was a considerable place in the time of the Saxons, and that the traces of fortifications are still remaining. It is 79 miles W. of London.

BEE, s. [beo, Sax.] an insect that makes honey. These valuable insects are generally divided into three sexes, the drones, which are male; the sovereign, or queen, which is female; and the working, or honey-bees, which are neuter. Each bee derives its origin from an egg, which is deposited by the queen in a cell by itself, and sometime after, fecundated by the drone. On the third or fourth day, is produced a maggot, which is fed by the working bees with an insipid liquid, which has been called bee-bread. After being thus fed about 8 days, it desists from eating, and being brooded by the working-bees, at length spins itself a sort of web, like the silk-worm, which serves as a lining to its cell. In the space of about 20 days the process of transformation is finished, and the bee gradually forces its way through the covering of the cell. The bee, after it has disengaged itself, is fed with honey by the common bees till it arrives at full maturity so as to be fit for labour. The life of the bee is said to be limitted to a year, or at most to two summers.

BEECH, s. [bece, Sax.] a well known tree, which has a white, hard, dry wood, useful for the fellies of cart wheels, and for a variety of utensils. An oil is prepared from its mast, which is much esteemed by the French, for sallads, &c.

BE'ECHEN, a. [bucene, Sax.] consisting of beech; belonging to beech.

BEE EATER, s. a bird that feed upon bees.

BEEF, s. [bœuf, Fr.] the flesh of black cattle dressed up for the markets.

BEE'FEATER, s. a yeoman of the guards. The word is derived from beaufetier, one who attends at the sideboard, which was anciently placed in a beaufet. The business of the beef-eaters was, and still partly is, to attend the king at meals.

BEE'HIVE, s. the case, or box, in which bees are kept.

BEELE, s. a kind of pick-axe used by the miners for separating the ores from the rocks in which they lie. In Cornwall it is called a tubber.

BEEN, part. pret. of To BE.

BEER, s. [bere, Sax. or bir, Brit.] a liquor prepared from malt and hops, and rendered vinous by fermentation. A kind of beer appears to have been made by the ancient Germans and Egyptians.

BEE'STINGS, s. See BIESTINGS.

BEET, s. [beta, Lat.] the name of a plant, of which there are several species. It is boiled like parsnips, and often makes one of the ingredients of a soup or sallad.

BEE'TLE, s. [bytel, Sax.] an insect that flies about in summer-evenings, having four wings, the two outward being only sheaths for the others; they are black, and abound in damp places, such as vaults under ground. Also a great sledge, used to beat down piles, stakes, wedges, &c. A wooden mallet made use of in beating hemp.

To BEE'TLE, v. n. to jut out; to hang over.

BEE'TLEHEADED, a. having a dull, stupid, or unthinking head.

BEEVES, s. [the plural of beef] oxen, cattle, bullocks.

To BEFA'LL, (befáll) v. n. to happen. This word is most commonly taken in a bad sense.

To BEFI'T, v. a. to suit; to tally with.

To BEFOO'L, v. a. to delude; likewise to deride, and treat a person as a fool.

BEFO'RE, prep. [biforan, Sax.] further onward in place; in the front of, not behind; in the presence of; in sight of; under the cognizance of; in the power of; preceeding in time; in preference to; prior to; superior to.

BEFO'RE, ad. earlier in time; in time past; previously to; to this time, hitherto.

BEFO'REHAND, ad. in a state of participation, or preoccupation; previously, by way of preparation, in a state of accumulation, or so as that more has been received than expended.

BEFORETIME, ad. formerly.

To BEFO'RTUNE, v. n. to betide.

To BEFOU'L, v. a. to daub, smear, or dirt.

To BEFRIE'ND, v. a. to do a kindness to a person; to confer a favour.

To BEG, v. n. [beggeren, Teut.] to pray, intreat, petition, or crave charity, favour, or assistance.

To BEGE'T, v. a. preter. I begot, or begat, I have begotten; [begettan, Sax.] to generate, or bring forth. To produce as effects or accidents.

BEGE'TTER, s. he that generates, or gets a child.

BE'GGAR, s. one who lives upon alms; one who assumes what he does not prove; as, to beg the question.

To BE'GGAR, v. a. to reduce a person from plenty to want.

BE'GGARLINESS, s. a quality which would permit a person to submit to any meanness for the sake of a subsistence.

BE'GGARLY, a. poor; mean.

BE'GGARLY, ad. meanly, despicably.

BE'GGARY, s. extreme poverty.

To BEGI'N, v. n. pret. I began, or begun; I have begun; beginnan, Sax.] to enter upon something new; to commence any action or state: to enter upon existence; to have its original; to take rise. Actively, to do the first act of any thing; to trace from any thing as the first ground. To begin with; to enter upon.

BEGI'NNER, s. he that gives the first cause or original to any thing; an unexperienced attempter.

BEGI'NNING, s. the first original or cause; the entrance into act or being; the state in which any thing first is; the rudiments or first grounds.

To BEGI'RD, v. a. preter. I begirt, or begirded; I have begirt; to bind with a girdle; to surround; to encircle: to shut in with a siege; to belenguer.

BE'GLERBEG, s. [Turk.] the chief governor of a province among the Turks. He is also called a bashaw of three tails, from having three ensigns, or staves, trimmed with horse-tails, as the mark of his dignity.

BEGO'NE, interject. go away; hence away.

To BEGUI'LE, v. a. [begalian, Sax.] to cheat, impose upon, or deceive

BEGUINS, s. devout societies of young women, established in several parts of Flanders, and the north of France, who maintained themselves by the work of their own hands, leading a middle kind of life, between the secular and the religious, but making no vows.

BEHA'LF, s. interest; side; party. To speak on a person's behalf.

To BEHA'VE, v. a. to demean, act, or conduct one's self.

BEHA'VIOUR, s. a manner of behaving one's self; elegance of manners; conduct; demeanor; course of life. To be upon one's behaviour, a familiar phrase, implying such a state as requires great caution.

To BEHE'AD, v. a. to cut off a person's head. In Europe, this is the punishment of the great and nobly born. In China, it is the punishment of the lowest sort of people, while their superiors are hanged on account of their quality.

BEHE'MOTH, s. [Heb.] a monstrous creature mentioned by Job, which some imagine to be the whale; others the sea-calf, or ox. Some of the fathers thought it to be the devil, and others the elephant. In the Hebrew language, it signifies a beast in general, and particularly those larger sorts that are fit for service.

BE'HEN, s. in the Materia Medica, the name of two roots, the one white, the other red, both accounted cordials and restoratives, but neither is received into the present practice.

BEHE'ST, s. [be and hæs, Sax.] the positive commands of a superior to an inferior.

BEHI'ND, prep. [be and hindan, Sax.] at a person's back; backwards; following; remaining after a person's departure, or death. Applied to motion, at a distance from that which moves or goes before, used with the verb leave. "It leaves our sense behind." Dryd. Used comparatively, it implies great inferiority, or less worth. Used adverbially, it implies something not yet discovered or perceived by the mind.

BEHI'ND HAND, ad. applied to persons who live beyond their income, and in debt.

To BEHO'LD, v. a. pret. I beheld; I have beheld, or beholden; [behealdan, Sax.] to take a view of a person; to have a person in sight, including the idea of attention, or looking on him for some time. SYNON. We see whatever strikes the sight; We look at an object when we designedly cast our eye upon it; We behold it, when we look with attention; view, when we survey it.

BEHO'LD, an interjection with the same force with lo.

BEHO'LDEN, part. indebted to; lying under an obligation to a person.

BEHO'LDER, s. one who cast his eyes upon an object.

BEHO'LDING, s. obligation. This word is seldom used by elegant writers.

BEHOO'F, s. [behifts, Sax.] an obligation which a person lies under; also the profit, benefit, or advantage, which may accrue from any thing.

To BEHOO'VE, v. n. [behofan, Sax.] to be incumbent on a person as a duty; or to be fit and suitable in point of convenience.

BEI'NG, the participle of the verb To BE.

BEI'NG, s. an abstract term, signifying the existence of a thing: thus we say, the Supreme Being; a finite Being, &c.

BEI'NG, conj. since.

BEI'RA, a province of Portugal, bounded on the W. by the Atlantic; on the N. by Tralos Montes, and Entre Douro e Minho; on the E. by Leon, and Spanish Estremadura; and on the S. by Portuguese Estremadura and Alentejo. It is divided into 6 jurisdictions, called Comarcas. This province is nearly square, being about 90 miles in extent each way; it is well watered, and fertile, at least in corn and fruits; but the people are indolent, and much given to begging.

To BELA'BOUR, v. a. to beat a person severely. A low and vulgar expression.

To BELA'CE, v. a. in navigation, to mend a rope, by laying one end over another.

BELA'TED, a. benighted; used to express something which ought to have been done, but was omitted at a period past.

To BELA'Y, v. a. to lie in ambush; or to lie in wait for.

To BELA'Y, v. a. [beleyggen, Belg.] in navigation, to fasten.

To BELCH, v. a. [bealcan, Sax.] to break wind upwards.

BELCH, s. the act of breaking wind upwards.

BE'LDAM, s. [belle dame, Fr.] a name given in derision to an old woman.

To BELE'AGUER, v. a. [beleggerin, Belg.] to block up, or beliege a place.

BELE'AGUERER, s. one that besieges a place.

BELE'MNITES, s. [from belemnon, an arrow, Gr.] usually called a thunder-bolt, arrow head, or fingerstone. Their forms are various as well as their sizes, from a quarter of an inch, to eight inches in length; of different colours, and have a peculiar smell when scraped. They are found in all sorts of strata, in beds of chalk, clay, gravel, stones, and often in loose flints.

BELFAST, a large town and sea-port, of increasing importance, in the county of Antrim, in Ulster, seated on Carrickfergus Bay, at the mouth of Lagan river, with a stately bridge over it, of 21 arches, which, including the dead work at each end, is 2562 feet long. A navigable canal, connecting the harbour with Lough Neagh, was completed in 1793. In 1791, this town contained 3107 houses, and about 18,320 souls. Here are considerable manufactures of cotton, cambric, sailcloth, and linen, with others of glass, sugar, earthenware, a large export of provisions, &c. It is 9 miles S. W. of Carrickfergus, and 20 from Dublin.

BELFORD, a small, neat town in Northumberland, situated on the ridge of a hill, 2 miles from the Lear, 14 N. of Alnwick, and 319 from London. Market on Tuesday.

BE'LFRY, s. [perhaps from beffroi, Fr.] that part of the steeple wherein the bells are hanged, particularly that timber work to which they are fastened.

BELGRADE, a large, and formerly a strong city, of Turkey in Europe, the residence of a sangiac, and chief place of Servia. It is seated on a low hill, which reaches to the Danube, a little above its confluence with the Save. It is still a place of considerable trade, being resorted to by merchants of different nations; but its fine fortifications, which rendered it so important, were demolished, agreeable to treaty, in 1738. It is 60 miles S. W. of Temeswear, 265 S. E. of Vienna, and 400 N. W. of Constantinople.

BELIAL, s. [from the Hebrew] the devil. A son of Belial, is a wicked man, who will endure no constraint.

BELIE'F, s. credit, persuasion, opinion; faith, or firm assurance of the truths of religion; the creed, or form, containing the articles of faith.

To BELI'EVE, v. a. [geliſan, Sax.] to assent to the truth of a proposition founded on probable arguments; to put a confidence in the veracity or truth of any one.

BELI'EVER, s. one who gives assent or credit to a thing; one who assents to the truth of Christianity, upon the probable arguments produced in its favour.

BELI'KE, ad. perhaps; probably.

BELL, s. [bel, Sax.] a popular machine or vessel, ranked by musicians among the instruments of percussion; made of a compound metal, of tin and copper, or pewter and copper, in the proportion of 20lb. of pewter or 23lb. of tin, to 100 wt. of copper; hanged in steeples of churches, and in houses. Its sound arises from a vibratory motion of its parts, like that of a musical chord. Those of the Egyptians are made of wood. The Turks have a very great aversion to bells, and prohibit Christians the use of them in Constantinople, pretending that the sound of them would be troublesome to the souls of the departed. Bells are said to have been first introduced into churches by St. Paulinus, bishop of Nola, in Campania, about the year 400. To bear the bell, is to surpass others, or be the first in merit.

To BELL, v. n. in botany, to grow in the shape of bells.

BELL-ANIMAL, s. a very small animal, found in the roots of common duck-weed. They are usually found in great numbers together, in a sort of bunches, and all of the same bunch have always the same motion, very frequently contracting themselves, and afterwards expanding all together to the full length of their tails.

BELLE, s. [the feminine of beau, Fr. pron. bell] a person who dresses with elegance, behaves with gentility, and has all the polite accomplishments that can adorn a lady.

BELLES LETTRES, s. those branches of education that polish and adorn the mind. Languages, classical learning both Greek and Latin, geography, rhetoric, chronology, and history, may be accounted the chief parts of learning contained under this term.

BELLFASHIONED, a. that resembles a bell in its shape.

BELLFLOWER, s. a genus of plants, so called from the shape of their blossoms. The species are very numerous.

BELLFOUNDER, s. a person who casts bells.

BELLI'GERENT, part. [from bellum and gero, Lat.] that is at war; that is engaged in war.

BELLI'GEROUS, a. [belliger, Lat.] engaged in, or waging war.

BELLING, part. [a corruption of bellowing, or bellan, Sax.] applied to the noise made by a doe at rutting time.

BE'LLINGHAM, a town in Northumberland; the markets are on Tuesday and Saturday. Distance 300 miles from London.

BELLMAN, s. a superior kind of watchman, with a bell, which he rings at certain places in his parish, before he repeats some verses on the eve of a festival. In country towns, applied to the crier, who bears a bell which he rings to give notice to the neighbourhood before he makes his proclamation.

BELLMETAL, s. the metal of which bells are made, being a composition of tin and copper.

BE'LLON, or BE'LLAND, in medicine, a distemper very common in Derbyshire, and other countries where they melt lead ore. It is attended with an intollerable pain in the bowels.

BELLO'NA, in mythology, the sister of Mars, and goddess of war. When war was proclaimed, the herald set a spear upon a pillar before her temple; the priestesses in their devotions to her, used to cut themselves with knives to render her propitious.

To BE'LLOW, v. n. [bellan, Sax.] to make a very loud noise; applied to that of a bull, the sea in a storm, or the outcries of human creatures.

BE'LLOWS, s. [bilig, Sax.] an instrument into which air is alternately drawn and expelled, rushing in at some apertures in its bottom called feeders, and rushing out of a metal tube called its muzzle.

BELLUINE, a. [bellinus, Lat.] beastly; brutal.

BELLY, s. [balg, Belg.] that part of the body which reaches from the breast to the thighs, and contains the entrails both in men and beasts; used figuratively, for gluttony, or luxury in eating.

To BELLY, v. n. to swell; to protuberate, applied to the thing which grows larger in one part than it is in another.

BELLYACHE, (belly-ake) s. a pain in the belly, arising from wind, or other flatulences; the colic.

BELLYBOUND, a. affected with costiveness.

BE'LLYFUL, s. a sufficiency of food, or what takes away the sensation of hunger, and satisfies the appetite.

BELLYGOD, s. a glutton; one who makes a god of his belly.

BELLYPINCHED, a. denied, or in want of sufficient food; hungry.

BELLYROLL, s. in husbandry, a roller, or cylinder, made use of to roll the ground after it is plowed.

BELLYTIMBER, s. food, or that which suffices hunger, and supports the human fabric, in the same manner as props or timber do a building. A low word.

BELLYWORM, s. a worm which feeds in the belly or entrails.

BELOMANCY, s. [from belos, an arrow, and manteia, divination, Gr.] divination by arrows.

To BELONG, v. n. [belangen, Belg.] to be the property of a person; to be the province or business of, to have relation to, applied to the heads of a discourse; to be dependent on as a subject, or domestic; to be appropriated to; to have for its peculiar object.

BELO'VED, part. [from below, which is hardly ever used, though nothing can be more frequent than the use of the participle; thus we say, you are beloved by me, but never I before you] caressed with the greatest warmth of kind affection, as an object worthy to be beloved.

BELO'W, prep. [from be and lo or loh, Belg.] applied to a place, not so high as another object. Applied to dignity or excellence, inferior to. Applied to characters, or rank, unbecoming, on account of its meanness; unfit, or degrading, on account of its baseness or viciousness. Used adverbially, in a low situation or nearer to the earth.

BELSWA'GGER, s. one who makes a noise, and puts on an air of importance.

BELT, s. [belt, Sax.] a girdle fastened round a person's middle. When a sword is hung to it, it is called a sword belt. In astronomy, those parallel bands or girdles surrounding the body of the planet Jupiter. In geography, certain straits, called the Great and Lesser Belt, between the German ocean and the Baltic. The belts belong to the king of Denmark, who exacts toll from all ships passing through them, except those of Sweden. The greater belt, is a strait between the islands of Zealand and Funen, forming a communication between the Cattagat and Baltic. The lesser belt, is a narrow strait between Funen and Jutland. It is also one of the passages between the German ocean and the Baltic.

BELUGA, s. in natural history, a sea animal of the dolphin tribe.

BE'LWETHER, s. a sheep which keeps the rest of the flock together, and draws them after him by the sound of a bell hanging to his neck.

To BELY'E, or BELI'E, v. a. to invent a falsehood; to feign; to calumniate; to misrepresent.

To BEMI'RE, v. a. to daub, or smear with dirt.

BEMI'RED, part. covered with dirt. Figuratively, stuck or sinking in a dirty or boggy place.

To BEMO'AN, v. a. [bemoncan, Sax.] to express sorrow for any disaster or calamity.

BEMO'ANER, s. one who pities, laments, or is affected with sorrow, on account of the disasters of another.

To BEMO'IL, v. a. [of be and moil; from moiller, Fr.] to bedaub; to fall, to be rolled in, or incumbered with dirt.

To BEMONSTER, v. a. to make a thing hideous, horrible, or monstrous.

BE'MISTER, or BEMINSTER. See BEAMINSTER.

BEMUSED, a. given to rhyming or poetry. A term of ridicule.

BENA'RES, a rich, populous city in Hindostan, subject to the British, and celebrated as the ancient city of Brahminical learning. It is 425 miles SE. of Delhi and 335 NW. of Calcutta. Lat. 25. 20. N. lon. 83. 10. E.

BENCH, s. [benc, Sax. banc, Fr.] a seat made of a long board, distinguished from a stool by its length. Used for the prison or liberties of the King's Bench, which see. The seat whereon judges sit. Figuratively, the persons sitting in the trial of causes. Free-bench signifies that estate in copyhold lands, which the wife, being espoused a virgin, has, after the decease of her husband, for her dower, according to the custom of the manor. It is the custom of the manors of East and West Emburn, Chadleworth in the county of Berks, Tor in Devonshire, and other places of the west, that, if a customary tenant die, the widow shall have her Free-bench in all his copyhold land, dum sola et casta fuerit; but if she commit incontinency, she forfeits her estate; yet, if she will come into the court, riding backwards on a black ram, with his tail in her hand, and say the words following, the steward is bound, by the custom, to re-admit her to her Free-bench.

Here I am,
Riding upon a black ram,
Like a whore as I am,
And for my Crincum Crancum,
Have lost my Bincum Bancum;
And, for my Tail's game,
Have done this worldly shame:
Therefore, I pray you, Mr. Steward,
Let me have my land again.

To BENCH, v. a. to furnish with, erect, or make benches in any place; to place, seat, or prefer a person to a seat or bench.

BE'NCHERS, s. in law, the senior barristers of an inn of court, intrusted with the government and direction of it, out of which is annually chosen a steward.

BENCOO'LEN, a fort and town of Asia, on the S. W. coast of the island of Sumatra, belonging to the English. The chief trade is in pepper, of which there is a large quantity. Lat. 3° 49′ 9″ S. lon. from Greenwich 102° 2′ 25″ E.

To BEND, v. a. [pret. and part. bended or bent; bendan, Sax.] applied to shooting with a bow, to stretch; to force from a straight line to a curve, or crooked one; the point or object to which a motion is directed. Figuratively, to apply the mind to the consideration of any object; to be disposed to; to make submissive. To bend the brow, to knit the brow. Neuterly, to hang or jut over; to be strongly inclined to, or resolved on; to bow the body, or the knee, in token of submission or respect.

BEND, s. the part of a line, &c. which is not straight, and forms an angle. In heraldry, bend is one of the nine honourable ordinaries, containing a third part of the field when charged, and a fifth when plain. It is sometimes, like other ordinaries, indented, ingrained, &c. and is either dexter or sinister. Bend Dexter is formed by two lines drawn from the upper part of the shield, on the right, to the lower part of the left, diagonally. It is supposed to represent a shoulder-belt, or a scarf. Bend Sinister, is that which comes from the left side of the shield to the right. In Bend, is when any things borne in arms, are placed obliquely from the upper corner to the opposite lower, as the bend lies BE'NDABLE, a. that may be forced from a straight to a crooked line; that may be bent.

BE'NDER, s. one who bends any thing; an instrument by which any thing may be forced from a straight to a crooked line.

BE'NDLETS, s. [bandelet, Fr.] in heraldry, marks or distinctions in a shield, of the same length, and but half the breadth of a bend.

BENDS, s. in a ship, are the wales, or the outmost timbers of a ship's side, on which men set their feet in climbing up.

BE'NDY, s. in heraldry, is the field divided into four, six, or more parts, diagonally, and varying in metal and colour.

BENE'APED, a. [be and neap, from neafte, Sax.] a sea-term, implying that a ship has not depth of water enough to set her afloat, bring her over a bar, or out of a dock.

BENE'ATH, prep. [beneoth, Sax. beneden, Belg.] applied to situation, not so high as, or under, something else. In botany, applied to a blossom when it includes the seedbud, and is attached to the part immediately below it; as in the sage, borrage, convolvulus, polyanthus, &c. applied also to the seedbud when the blossom is above it, and therefore not connected therewith, as in the honeysuckle, currant, hawthorn, &c. Joined with sink, it implies the pressure of something heavy on a person. Applied to rank or dignity, inferior to. Applied to actions, not becoming, unworthy of a person. Adverbially, in a lower place, below, as opposed to heaven.

BENEDI'CTINES, s. an order of monks, who profess to follow the rules of St. Benedict. They wear a loose black gown, with large wide sleeves, and a capuche or cowl on their heads, ending in a point behind. In the canon law, they are styled Black-friars, from the colour of their habit. The rules of St. Benedict, as observed by the English monks before the dissolution of the monasteries, were these: They were obliged to perform their devotions seven times in 24 hours; the whole circle of which devotions had a respect to the passion and death of Christ; they were obliged always to go two and two together; every day in Lent they were obliged to fast till six in the evening, and abated of their usual time of sleeping and eating; but were not allowed to practise any voluntary austerity without leave of their superior; they never conversed in their refectory at meals, but were obliged to attend to the reading of the scriptures. They all slept in the same dormitory, but not two in a bed; they lay in their clothes; for small faults they were shut from meals; for greater, they were debarred of religious commerce, and excluded from the chapel; and as to incorrigible offenders, they were excluded from the monasteries. Every monk had two coats, two cowls, a knife, a needle, and a handkerchief; and the furniture of their bed was a mat, a blanket, a rug, and a pillow.

BENEDI'CTION, or BLE'SSING, s. [benedictio, Lat.] among the Hebrews, signifies the present usually sent from one friend to another; as also the blessing conferred by the patriarchs, on their death-beds, on their children. It was also one of those early instances of honour and respect paid to bishops in the primitive church. The custom of bowing the head to them, and receiving their blessings, became universal. In the western churches there was anciently a kind of Benediction which followed the Lord's prayer; and after the communion, the people were dismissed with a Benediction.

BENEFA'CTION, s. [benefactio, Lat.] a good and benevolent action; generally applied to charitable gifts for the relief of persons in distress.

BENEFA'CTOR, s. a man who confers a benefit or does an act of kindness to a person in want.

BENEFA'CTRESS, s. a woman or female, who contributes to the relief of the indigent by some charitable gift.

BE'NEFICE, s. [beneficium, Lat.] a word borrowed from the Romans, who used to distribute the lands conquered on the frontiers to their soldiers; they were called beneficiarii, and the lands themselves beneficia, which were at first given for life only, but afterwards were made hereditary. Hence benefice, in the church, signifies either a church endowed with a reward or salary for the performance of divine service, or the salary itself given on that account. All church preferments, except bishopries, are called Benefices; and all Benefices are styled by the canonists sometimes Dignities; but now Dignity is usually applied to bishopries, deaneries, archdeaconries, and prebendaries; and Benefice to parsonages, vicarages, rectories, and donatives. A benefice in commendam, is that which is given to a person on a vacancy for a certain time, or till it is provided for.

BENEFICED, a. possessed of a church living.

BENEFICENCE, s. [beneficentia, Lat.] a disinterested inclination to do a good action, or to promote another's welfare.

BENEFICENT, part. [beneficus, Lat.] performing acts of kindness and assistance without any views of interest.

BENEFICIAL, a. [from beneficium, Lat.] that assists, relieves, or is of service to.

BENEFICIALLY, ad. in such a manner as to relieve, assist, or be of service to a person.

BENEFICIARY, a. that holds any dignity as dependent on, and tributary to, another. Used substantively, it implies one who is in possession of a church living or benefice.

BENEFIT, s. [beneficium, Lat.] that which turns to the profit of another; an act of kindness or love done, to help or assist another. Among players, the whole takings of the theatre, which are applied to their own use. In law, benefit of clergy, was an ancient liberty of the church; whereby any priest might on his petition, even in case of murder be delivered to his ordinary, in order to purge himself. It is at present confined to signify a person's being burned in the hand, whipped, or transported, instead of suffering capitally for the offence.

To BENEFIT, v. a. to do something to or for another, whereby he may receive advantage or improvement; to promote, increase, or render better. Used neuterly, to improve. Applied to the mind, to reap advantage from.

BENEVENTO, anciently BENEVENTUM, a large and rich city of Naples, capital of the Principatro Ultra. It was formerly subject to the pope, but has since been created a principality by Napolean. It is seated on a fertile valley, near the confluence of the Saboro and Caloro, 30 miles NE. of Naples.

BENEVOLENCE, s. [benevolentia, Lat.] a disposition to do good; kindness; the good done; the charity given. According to the ancient statutes of this realm, it imports a voluntary gratuity given by the subjects to the king. SYNON. Of the two words beneficence and benevolence, one is the intention, the other the act; benevolence being the desire of doing good; beneficence, actual goodness.

BENEVOLENT, part. [benevolens, Lat.] inclined to do good from an affectionate regard to a person.

BENGAL, a country of India, in the E. part of Hindoostan, extending from E. to W. upwards of 400 miles, and from N. to S. above 300. It is bounded on the W. by Orissa and Bahar; on the N. by Napaul and Bootan; on the E. by Assam and Meckley; and on the S. by the Bay of Bengal. The country consists of one vast plain, which, in common with other parts of Hindoostan, annually renders two, and in some parts even three crops. Its principal products are sugar, silk, cotton, fruit, pepper, opium, rice, saltpetre, lac, and civet. It is annually overflowed by the Ganges, as Egypt is by the Nile. Bengal has been subject to the English East India company since the year 1765. Calcutta is the capital.

BENGAL, s. [from Bengal in the East Indies] a sort of thin light stuff, made of silk and hair, for women's apparel.

BENGUELA, a kingdom on the W. coast of Africa, bounded on the W. by the ocean; on the N. by Angola; on the E. and SE. by parts unknown; and on the S. by Mataman, or Matapan. The men wear skins about their waists; the women a kind of cloth made of the bark of a tree. At Benguela, the capital on the bay or river Benguela, the Portuguese have a settlement; their houses are shaded with orange, lemon, banana, and other trees. The productions are manioc, palms, dates, vines, cassia, and tamarinds; and from the humidity of the soil, they have two fruit seasons in the year. Lat. from 13 to 15. S. lon. from 12 to 20. E.

To BENIGHT, v. a. to be overtaken by darkness in a journey; to be without light; to wander in the dark. Applied literally to the eyes, and figuratively to the mind.

BENIGN, (benin) a. [benignus, Lat.] having a disposition that inclines a person to do a good action to another; kind, generous, or liberal. In medicine, wholesome, gentle.

BENIGNITY, (the g is retained in the pronunciation of this word, though dropped in the former) s. [bénignité, Fr. benignitas, Lat.] a disposition of mind inclining one person to be kind to another.

BENIGNLY, (beninly) ad. in such a manner as to shew kindness and condescension.

BENIGNNESS, (beninness) s. that which inclines a person, or fits a thing, to do good to another.

BENIN, a kingdom of Africa, extending from 1. 0. S. lat. to 9. 0. N. lat. and bounded on the W. by Dahomy and the ocean; on the N. by Dahomy and Biafara; on the E. by parts unknown; and on the S. by Loango. The country exhibits many beautiful landscapes; but the air in some places is pestilential, on account of the gross vapours exhaled from the marshes by the heat of the sun. The natives are skilful in making various sorts of dyes, and in manufacturing cottons, or calicoes, which they wear, and also export. The king is absolute, and has a great number of petty princes under him; and polygamy is allowed among them. Benin, the capital, seated on the river Benin or Formosa, is a spacious city; the houses are large and handsome, with clay walls, and covered with reed, straw, or leaves; the shops are stocked with European merchandise, as well as with the commodities of the country; and the streets are kept clean by the women. Lat. 7. 50. N. lon. 5. 4. E.

BENISON, s. [from benir, Fr.] a blessing, applied to the benediction of a parent.

BENNET, s. an herb; the same with avens.

BENNEVIS, a mountain of Inverness, rising 4300 feet above the level of the sea. Its summit affords one of the most extensive and beautiful prospects in Scotland.

BENT, s. that which forms an angle, or crookedness in opposition to straightness; the declivity or slope of a hill. Utmost power; application of the mind; disposition or inclination towards something; determination; fixed purpose; turn of the temper or disposition; tendency; flexion. In botany, a kind of grass.

To BENUMB, v. a. [benumen, Sax.] to take away or destroy the sense of feeling, applied to the effect of cold upon the extreme parts of the body; or the approach of death, and stupefying violence of any disorder.

BENZOATES, in chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with the bazoic acid.

BENZOIC, in chemistry, belonging to benzoin.

BENZOIN, (vulgarly called Benjamin) s. a dry and solid resin, brought from the East Indies. It should be chosen fresh, is of a quick pungent smell, easily broken, and full of the white almond-like granules. It is a powerful expectorant, and is given with success in disorders of the lungs and inveterate coughs. The leaves of the tree, from which it is procured by incision, resemble those of the lemon-tree.

To BEPAINT, v. a. to cover with artificial colours. Figuratively, to change the colour of the complexion.

To BEQUEATH, v. a. to leave a person any thing by will.

BEQUEATHMENT, s. the leaving something, or the thing left by will. Seldom used.

BEQUEST, s. something left by will; a legacy.

To BERATTLE, v. a. to make a noise at, including the idea of contempt; to scold.

To BEREAVE, v. a. [pret. bereaved, or bereft; bereafian, Sax.] to take away by force, including a want of pity; to spoil; to rob; to strip a person of his property.

BEREAVEMENT, s. the act of taking away, or leaving a person destitute of any thing.

BERE-REGIS, a town of Dorsetshire, with a market on Wednesday. It is a small place, 12 miles N. E. of Dorchester, and 113 S. W. of London.

BERGAMO, s. [Fr.] a coarse tapestry, manufactured with several sorts of spun thread, or of flocks of wool, silk, or cotton, ox, cow, or goat's hair.

BERGAMOT, s. [bergamotte, Fr.] in gardening, a fine juicy pear, of a globular form, and a coat of an olive colour, mixed with brown. An essence or perfume, drawn from the fruit of a lemon-tree, ingrafted with the stock of a bergamot pear-tree. Likewise a kind of snuff, of a large grain, said to be only pure tobacco, with some of this essence rubbed into it.

BERGEN, a handsome and ancient sea-port of Norway, capital of the province of Bergenhus, containing about 20,000 inhabitants. The harbour is excellent, and well fortified. Their exports are skins, timber, tallow, fish, &c.; but their wheat is brought from other places. It is 200 miles N. W. of Gottenburg, and 350 N. by W. of Copenhagen. Lat. 60. 11. N. lon. 5. 5. 45. E.

BERGEN-OP-ZOOM, a very strong town of Dutch Brabant, 15 miles N. of Antwerp, and 22 S. W. of Breda.

BERG-GRUEN, s. the name of an earth used in painting, and sometimes called green-ochre.

To BERHYME, v. a. to make a person or thing the subject of a poem; used by way of contempt.

BERKELEY. See BARKLEY.

BERKHAMSTEAD, a town of Hertfordshire, with a market on Saturday, chiefly for malt. It had formerly a strong castle built by the Normans, and has now a good free-school, founded by John Incent, dean of St. Paul's. It is 11 miles W. of St Alban's, and 26 N. W. of London.

BERKSHIRE, an English county, 37 miles in length, and 25 in breadth; bounded on the N. by Oxfordshire, and Buckinghamshire; on the W. by Wiltshire; on the S. by Hampshire and Surry; and on the E. by Middlesex and part of Buckinghamshire. It contains 20 hundreds, 12 market towns, 140 parishes, and about 115,000 inhabitants. The principal town is Reading. In general, it is a fruitful country, and particularly in the vale of White-horse; it has the title of an earldom. Its principal commodity is broad or woollen cloth; and its chief rivers are the Isis, which is afterwards called the Thames, and the Kennet.

BERLIN, a large, strong, and handsome city of Germany, and capital of the electorate of Brandenburg, where the king of Prussia resides. The palace is magnificent, and there is a fine library, a rich cabinet of curiosities and medals, an academy of sciences, and an observatory, besides a superb arsenal. Its trade & buildings have lately been much improved, and there is a canal cut from the river Spree to the Oder on the E. and another from thence to the Elbe on the W. It has a communication by water both with the Baltic Sea and German Ocean; seated on the river Spree, 300 miles N. by W. of Vienna. Lon. 13. 28. E. lat. 52. 31½ N. Berlin is applied to a carriage of the chariot kind, very convenient for travelling, being both lighter and less apt to be overturned than a chariot.

BERME, s. [Fr.] in fortification, a space of ground three, four, or five feet wide, left without, between the foot of the rampart and the side of the moat, to prevent the earth from falling down into the moat; sometimes palisadoed.

BERMUDA ISLANDS, a cluster of very fine islands, nearly in the form of a shepherd's crook, and surrounded with rocks, which render them almost inaccessible to strangers. They lie in the Atlantic Ocean, about 500 miles E. of Carolina. They are inhabited by the English, enjoy a pure and temperate air, and have plenty of flesh, fish, and garden stuff. The common employment of the inhabitants is in building sloops, and the making women's hats well known in England by the name of Bermudas hats. Lon. of Bermudas Isle is 63. 23. W. and its lat. 32. 32. N

BERN, the capital town of the canton of Bern in Switzerland. Here is a celebrated school, and a rich library, and 12 companies of tradesman, in one of which every inhabitant is obliged to be enrolled before he can enjoy any office. It is a strong place, and is seated in a peninsula formed by the river Aar, almost in the middle of the canton. Lon. 7. 40. E. lat. 40. 0. N.

To BEROB, v. a. to steal; to take away the property of a person. Seldom used.

BERRY, s. [berig, Sax.] a small fruit containing one or more seeds in a soft pulp, covered with a skin.

To BERRY, v. n. to produce berries. In the North, it signifies to strike, [from ber, Isl.] to beat or thresh.

BERVY, a sea-port and parliament town of Scotland, in the county of Merns, 22 miles S. W. of Aberdeen.

BERWICK, a town on the borders of England and Scotland, properly belonging to neither, with a market on Saturday. It is a town and county of itself, and is a place of great strength, as well by art as nature, being defended with walls, a castle, and other fortifications. It is large, populous, and well built, and has a good trade in corn and salmon. It is seated on the river Tweed, over which there is a very handsome bridge of 16 arches; sends two members to parliament, and has the title of a duchy. It is 340 miles distant from London.

BERWICK, a shire in Scotland, bounded by the river Tweed, on the S.; by Lothian on the N.; by the German Ocean on the E.; and by Tiviotdale on the W. It abounds with corn and grass, and has in it several seats of persons of quality. The principal rivers are the Tweed, the Whiteadder, Blackadder, Eye, and Ednel. The principal place is the town and castle of Dunse, the best place for trade in the county. It sends two members to parliament, one for the burgh of Lauder, &c.

BERWICK NORTH, a town of Scotland, in the county of Lothian, seated on the Frith of Forth, Near this place general Cope was defeated by the rebels in 1745, and made his escape to Berwick upon Tweed. It is 30 miles N. W. of Berwick upon Tweed, and 20 W. N. W. of Edinburgh.

BERYL, s. [beryllus, Lat.] a precious stone of a bluish green, found in the East Indies, and about the gold mines of Peru.

BESANCON, a city in the depart. of Doubs, containing 8 parishes, and about 20,000 inhabitants. It was formerly the capital of Franche-Comte, and is situated on a peninsula formed by the river Doubs 52 miles nearly E. of Dijon, and 208 S. E. of Paris.

BESANT, or BEZANT, s. a coin of pure gold, of an uncertain value, struck at Byzantium, in the time of the Christian emperors; hence the gold offered by the king at the altar is called besant. In heraldry, besants are representations of round flat pieces of money or bullion, introduced into coat armour by those who were at the holy war.

To BESCREEN, v. a. to conceal or hide any thing. Seldom used.

To BESEECH, v. a. preter. I besought; I have besought; [from secan, Sax.] to entreat with great earnestness; to ask as a favour, in an humble and suppliant manner.

To BESEEM, v. n. [beziemen, Belg.] to suit, applied to a means; to become, or be worthy of, applied to character or dignity.

To BESET, v. a. preter. I beset; I have beset; [besitten, Sax.] to surround, so as not to be able to escape without difficulty, alluding to an enemy's surrounding a body of men, or some fortified place. To endanger, to encompass, used with the particle with.

To BESHREW, v. a. [beschryen, Teut.] to wish any thing unhappy or miserable to a person.

BESIDE, or BESIDES, prep. [be and side, Sax.] by the side, or near; applied to situation. "To sit down beside him." Bacon. "Beside him hung his bow." Par. Lost. In the enumeration or detail of particulars, something more, over, and above. "In man there is a nature found beside the senses." Davies. "Great numbers beside those whose names are in the Christian records." Addis. Inconsistent with; not relating to; not discoverable by. "A method beside, and above the discoveries of man's reason." South. "It is beside my present business." Locke. Before a reciprocal pronoun, as himself, &c. it implies the loss of reason, or madness. "Thou art beside thyself." Acts. Used adverbially, it implies an additional circumstance, or something more than what has been mentioned. "Besides, you know not." Dryd. The rest; or that which has not been already spoken of, or mentioned. "Hast thou here any besides?" Gen. xix. 13.

To BESIE'GE, v. a. to surround or attack a place with an army, in order to conquer and get master of it.

BESIE'GER, s. a person who attempts to take a town by encamping against it.

To BESLU'BBER, v. a. to daub or smear with any thing that raises a disagreeable idea.

To BESME'AR, v. a. to cover or daub with any thing which alters the colour of a thing, and raises the idea of something not cleanly. Figuratively, to tarnish, to deprive of its lustre, applied to character, &c.

To BESMI'RCH, v. a. to soil, blacken, discolour.

To BESMO'KE, v. a. to soil; to foul, or dry in smoke.

To BESMU'T, v. a. [be and smitan, Sax.] to smear with any thing black; especially applied to discolour a thing by smoke, soot, &c.

BE'SOM, s. [besm. besma, Sax.] an instrument consisting of a long handle, to which birch or rushes are fastened, used by housewives to sweep their floors from sand or dust.

To BESO'RT, v. a. to suit; to fit.

BESO'RT s. company; attendance; train.

To BESO'T, v. a. to stupify with gluttony or drunkenness. Used with the particle on, to doat, or be extremely in love with.

BESO'UGHT, (besáut) part. pass. of BESEECH.

To BESPA'NGLE, v. a. to make a thing glitter, by means of some small shining object.

To BESPA'TTER, v. n. to wet, by casting small quantities of water. Figuratively, to soil or tarnish the character of a person.

To BESPE'AK, v. a. preter. I bespoke, or I bespake; I have bespoken; [be and spækan, Sax.] to give orders for the making of any thing, in order to prevent others from buying it; to engage beforehand. To discover beforehand, or forebode; to address in discourse; to speak to; to declare; to shew.

BESPE'AKER, s. he that gives orders for the making of any thing to an artificer or manufacturer.

To BESPE'CKLE v. a. to mark with spots.

To BESPI'CE, v. a. to season with spices, generally applied to liquors.

To BESPI'T, v. a. to wet with spittle; to spit upon.

BESPO'KE, irregular part. from BESPEAK.

To BESPO'T, v. a. to mark with spots.

To BESPRE'AD, v. a. [be and spræd an, Sax.] to extend a thing at full length over another; to cover with.

To BESPRI'NKLE, v. a. [be and springe, Sax.] to spurt, to throw water upon a thing, so as to make it fall upon it in drops.

To BESPU'TTER, v. a. to wet any thing, by forcing spittle in drops from between the lips.

BEST, a. the superlative degree of good; the comparative better: [bet, betera, betst, good better best, Sax.] the highest degree of good. Used with the word do, the utmost exertion of power or ability. Taken adverbially, the highest degree of goodness.

To BESTAIN, v. a. to mark with stains; to spot.

To BESTE'AD, v. a. to profit; to accommodate.

BE'STIAL, a. [from bestia, Lat.] that has the nature of a beast. Applied figuratively to one who seems to have no regard for reason, delicacy, virtue, shame, or humanity.

BESTIA'LITY, s. that quality which is contrary to the right use of reason; opposite to every principle of humanity.

BE'STIALLY, ad. in such a manner as to resemble a beast, and below the dignity of humanity.

To BESTI'CK, v. a. preter. I bestuck, or have bestuck; to fix darts, or any pointed thing or mark upon a subject.

To BESTI'R, v. a. to exert one's power vigorously. Generally used with the reciprocal pronouns, him, her, himself, &c.

To BESTO'W, (the aw in the last syllable is pronounced like o long) v. a. [besteden, Belg.] to give a person a thing which he had no right to demand. To give in marriage, used with the preposition upon, before the receiver. To apply. To lay out upon. To place.

BESTO'WER, s. he that gives a thing; he that confers a favour.

To BESTRE'W, v. a. part. bestrowed, or bestrown; to scatter, or sprinkle over; to cover with.

To BESTRI'DE, v. a. preter. I bestrid, or bestrode; I have bestridden; to stand over any thing, so as to have it between our legs, or a leg on each side of it. As this posture is that of a person on horseback, it is but figuratively for a person riding.

To BESTU'D, v. a. to adorn with shining dots, marks, or studs.

BET, s. [from betan, Sax.] the money deposited by each of the parties who lay a wager, to be given to him who wins.

To BET, v. a. to lay a wager.

To BETA'KE, v. a. preter. I betook, part. passive betaken; [betæcan, Sax.] to apply; to have recourse to, with the reciprocal pronouns him, her, &c. and the particle to. To take to, fly, or go, applied to motion.

To BETEE'M, v. a. to bestow or give. To produce, alluding to the teeming-time of animals.

To BETHI'NK, v. a. preter, I bethought; [be and thencan, Sax.] to recall back something past into the mind; to recollect one's self; to suspend our thoughts.

BETHLEHEM, s. [the house of bread, Heb.] the name of a city in Judea, famous for being the birth-place of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. It is now reduced to a poor village. Applied, according to its etymology, to an hospital; and at present appropriated to that where lunatics are confined, near Moorgate, London. See BEDLAM.

BETHLEHEMITE, s. a person confined, or fit to be confined in a mad-house, called a Bedlamite. Also an order of monks, subsisting principally in South America, who are reputed great politicians.

To BETHRA'L, (bethraûl) v. a. to bind and fetter as a captive. Seldom used.

To BETHU'MP, v. a. to bang, or beat. A ludicrous word.

To BETI'DE, v. n. preter. it betided, or betid; [from tid, Sax.] to happen to a person; to befall; used both of good and bad events.

BETI'ME, or BETI'MES, ad. [be and tima, Sax.] in season; without delay; soon; in a short time. Joined with morning, early.

BE'TLE, BE'TEL, or BE'TRE, s. [Ind.] an Indian tree, whose leaves are of great use throughout the East, for the purpose of dying the teeth black, and the lips red, and of sweetening the breath.

BETLEY, a town of Staffordshire, about 5 miles from Newcastle, and Namptwich, 16 miles N. N. W. of Stafford, and 156 from London. Market on Tuesday.

To BETO'KEN, v. a. to declare, to shew, to discover by marks or signs.

BE'TONY, s. [betonica, Lat.] a plant with gaping blossoms, found in woods and heaths. It was formerly much used in medicine, but is at present discarded. It is often smoked as tobacco, and the roots provoke vomiting. Paul's betony is the same with the smooth speedwell, and the yellow betony is a sort of stachys.

BETOO'K, irregular part. from BETAKE.

To BETO'SS, v. n. to be tossed about; to be agitated, disturbed, troubled, or tormented.

To BETRA'Y, v. a. [trahir, Fr.] to deliver a person up to his enemies, though bound to the contrary; to disclose a secret entrusted to one; to discover some failing. To discover.

BETRA'YER, s. the person who treacherously delivers another into the hands of his enemies; one who discloses a secret.

To BETRIM, v. a. to adorn or embellish the person with dress; applied with great beauty to the flowery creation.

To BETROTH, v. a. [betrowen, Belg.] to promise a person in marriage.

To BETRU'ST, v. a. to trust or rely on the fidelity of another, applied both to persons and things.

BETTER, a. [the comparative degree of good, of which best is the superlative; betera, Sax.] that exceeds, is better, or preferable to the thing it is compared with. Used as a substantive, a person of rank or authority superior to ourselves.

BETTER, ad. in a more perfect exact manner; in a more advantageous or profitable manner or way.

To BETTER, v. a. to improve; to increase the value of a thing; to amend by change; to surpass; to excel; to strengthen, or add strength to.

BETTER, s. one who lays wagers.

BETWEEN, prep. [betweonan, betwinan, Sax.] applied to situation, it signifies the middle, or the having one of the two things mentioned on each side of us. Applied to time, the middle space, or that which is included within the periods mentioned. Applied to qualities, partaking of each. Applied to things opposite or contrary to each other, it implies separation, or the idea of difference acquired by comparison. A reciprocation on both sides, applied to friendship. By themselves, privately, exclusive of any others. SYNON. Between is properly used of only two persons; but among, when more are included.

BETWIXT, prep. [betwyx, Sax.] used indifferently for between; which see.

BEVEL, or BEVIL, s. among joiners, a kind of square, one or both legs of which are crooked, according to the sweep of an arch, or vault. Bevil angle is that which is not square, whether it be obtuse or acute.

To BEVEL, or BEVIL, v. a. to form a bevil angle, in opposition to a right one.

BEVERAGE, s. [from bevere, Ital.] any common drink, or any thing drinkable; a treat at putting on, or first wearing a new suit of clothes; a treat at a person's first coming to prison, called likewise garnish.

BEVERLEY, a town in the east riding of Yorkshire, with two markets, on Wednesday and Saturday. It is a large well-built town, having two parish churches, besides the minster, and sends two members to parliament. The minster is a large structure that was founded by king Athelstan, but consumed by fire in 1188, and afterwards rebuilt. It stands near the river Hull, 8 miles from Hull, 30 from York, and 183 from London.

BEVY, s. [beva, Ital.] a flock, or number of birds collected together; an assembly, or company.

To BEWAIL, v. a. [from wa, grief, Sax.] to grieve for any calamity.

To BEWARE, v. a. to act with so much caution as to provide against any future obstacle or misfortune.

BEWDLEY, a town in Worcestershire, with a market on Saturday. It is pleasantly situated on the river Severn, is neat and well built, enjoys a good trade for malt, leather, and caps; and lies 14 miles N. of Worcester, and 125 N. W. of London. It sends one member to parliament.

To BEWET, v. a. to make moist or wet.

To BEWILDER, v. a. to lose in a place or wood, which has no certain path. Figuratively, to puzzle and perplex the mind with difficulties.

To BEWITCH, v. a. to injure by, or subject to, the power of diabolical charms and incantations. In a secondary sense, to operate so powerfully on the mind by personal or mental charms, as to captivate and be irresistible.

BEWITCHERY, s. a power which persons dealing with magic, or with evil spirits, have over others. In its secondary sense, a charm, either personal, mental, &c.

To BEWRAY, (in pronunciation the w is dropped) v. a. [bewregan, Sax.] to discover a thing that is hid, or secret, either through simplicity or treachery.

BEWRA'YER, (in pronunciation the w is dropped) s. a person who discovers a thing which should be concealed; a divulger of secrets.

BEY, s. among the Turks, the governor of a country or town; the Turks write it Begh, or Bec, a lord or sangiac.

BEYOND, prep. [begeond, Sax.] a word used to signify excess in any thing. Applied to a place, the farther side of any thing, or that which is at the greatest distance from us; farther than; across, or over; too great for, or out of the reach of; exceeding, above; superior.

BE'ZIL, or BE'ZEL, s. that part of a ring in which the stone is fixed.

BE'ZOAR, s. [from pa, against, and zahar, poison, Persic] if oriental, is a stone moderately hard and heavy, variable in size, shape, and colour. It is generally of a round form, and its size between that of a horse bean and a small walnut, of a dusky olive or green brown. It is always smooth and glossy; but when broken is found to consist of several coats or crusts of stony matter, laid over one another, on a piece of stick, or seed of a fruit, for a nucleus or basis. The oriental bezoar is, like the pearl, a distemper in the animal that breeds it, and is a concretion of stony matter in the stomach of a quadruped of the goat kind. It is brought from Persia and the East Indies; it is esteemed as an antidote against poison. Occidental bezoar is brought from Peru and Mexico, and is produced in the stomach of the same sort of creature; its virtues are the same as in the oriental, though in a less degree. Monkey bezoar is a rare and valuable stone, found in a species of monkey common in the East Indies and America. Porcupine bezoar is of a yellowish brown colour, greatly valued by the Indians as an universal remedy, especially in poisons and malignant fevers. German bezoar is a stone found in the stomach of an animal of the goat kind, and its virtues are said to equal, if not to excel, the oriental bezoar. There are likewise several sorts of factitious bezoars prepared from antimony by chemists, and given with good effect in several distempers.

BEZOA'RDIC, a. an epithet applied to medicines compounded with bezoar.

BIA'NGULATED, or BIA'NGULOUS, a. [from binus and angulus, Lat.] that has two angles.

BI'AS, s. [biais, Fr.] the weight lodged in one side of a bowl to direct or regulate it in its course, and to turn it from a straight line. Figuratively, an influence, propensity, or any thing which directs the course of a person's actions to a particular end. SYNON. These words rise gradually; inclination implying something less strong than propensity; propensity than bias: The first leads us to an object, the second draws us, the third drags us. Inclination is greatly owing to education, propension to custom, bias to constitution.

To BI'AS, v. a. to influence a person to any particular measures of conduct.

BIB, s. [from bibo, Lat.] a piece of linen put under the chin of infants when feeding, to keep the victuals which are spilt from their clothes; likewise a piece of linen pinned on the front of the stay of those of more advanced years.

BIBA'CIOUS, a. [bibax, Lat.] much addicted to drinking; or drinking to excess.

BIBA'CITY, s. [bibacitas, Lat.] the quality of drinking too much.

BI'BBER, s. [from biba, Lat.] a person who drinks to excess.

BI'BLE, s. [biblian, a book, Gr.] the volume containing the great truths of religion and rules of conduct revealed from heaven by God, comprehending the Old and New Testament; though sometimes applied to the Old only, as the word Testament is restrained to the New. The translation of this sacred volume was begun very early in this kingdom, and some part of it was done even by king Alfred. Adelmus translated the Psalms into Saxon in 709; other parts were done by Edfrid, or Ecbert in 730; the whole by Bede in 731; Trevisa published the whole in English in 1357. Tindal's was brought hither in 1534; revised and altered in 1538; published with a preface of Cranmer's in 1549. In 1551, another translation was published, which being revised by several bishops, was printed with their alterations in 1560. In 1613, a new translation was published by authority, which is that in present use. Bible Society, a society instituted in 1804, for the purpose of diffusing the sacred scriptures over the world. In this cause it has laboured with astonishing diligence and success.

BIBLIO'GRAPHER, s. [from biblos, a book, and grapho, to write, Gr.] one who writes or copies books.

BIBLIOMANCY, s. a kind of divination performed by taking passages of Scripture at hazard, and drawing indications thence concerning things future. It was much used at the consecration of bishops.

BIBLIOMA'NIA, s. an extravagant passion for accumulating books.

BIBLIOTHE'CAL, a. [from bibliotheca, Lat.] belonging to a library.

BI'BULOUS, a. [bibulus, Lat.] that sucks or drinks any fluid or moisture.

BICE, s. in painting, a blue colour prepared from capis armenus.

BI'CESTER, or BURCESTER, a town in Oxfordshire, noted for its excellent malt liquor. Here is a manufacture of slippers. It is situated on the road between Oxford and Buckingham, about 12 miles from each, and 56 from London. Market on Friday.

BICIPITAL, or BICIPITOUS, a. [biceps, Lat.] having two heads. It is also applied to one of the muscles of the arm.

To BI'CKER, v. n. [from bicre, Brit.] to skirmish, or quarrel; to tremble, quiver, or move backwards and forwards.

BI'CKERER, s. one who is quarrelsome.

BI'CKERING, s. a quarrel, skirmish, or sudden attack, opposed to a set or pitched battle.

BICO'RNE, or BICO'RNOUS, a. [bicornis, Lat.] that has two horns.

To BID, v. a. preter. I bid, bad, bade, I have bid, or bidden; [biddan, Sax.] to request, or invite a person as a guest; to order or command; to offer a sum for the purchase of a thing; to publish or proclaim. SYNON. To bid, intimates direction to perform, whether the person directing has any authority for so doing. To order, implies the exercise of authority.

BI'DAL, or BI'DALE, s. [from bid and ale] in our ancient customs, denotes the invitation of friends, to drink ale at some poor man's house, who in consideration hereof expects some contribution for his relief. This custom still obtains in the west of England.

BI'DDEN, part. pass. of To BID.

BI'DDER, s. one who offers a price for any commodity.

BI'DDEFORD, or BI'DEFORD, a well-built populous town in Devonshire, seated on the river Touridge, over which there is a very long bridge of 24 arches. It has a noble quay, and carries on a considerable trade in coarse earthen ware, Irish wool, &c. They also send ships to America, and the West Indies. It is 16 miles from Ilfracomb, and 203 from London. Market on Tuesday.

BI'DDING, s. command, and order, including generally the idea of a superior.

To BIDE, v. a. [bidan, Sax.] to endure, or suffer. Neuterly, to dwell, live, remain, or continue in a place.

BIDE'NTAL, a. [from bidens, Lat.] that has two teeth. Figuratively, that has two prongs.

BI'DET, s. a nag or little horse, formerly allowed each trooper and dragoon, for his baggage and other occasions.

BI'DING, s. constant stay or residence in a place.

BIE'NNIAL, a. [biennis, Lat.] that continues, or has been, for two years.

BIER, (beer) s. [beer, Sax.] a frame of wood on which dead persons are carried to the grave.

BIE'STINGS, s. [bysting, Sax.] in farming, the first milk given by a cow after calving.

BIFA'RIOUS, a. [bifarius, Lat.] double, two-fold, that may be understood two ways.

BI'FEROUS, a. [biferens, Lat.] bearing fruit twice a year.

BI'FID, a. [bifidus, Lat.] cut, cleft, or divided, into two parts.

BI'FOLD, a. two-fold, double.

BIFORMED, a. [biformis, Lat.] compounded of two forms; that is double shaped.

BIFO'ROUS, a. [from binus and forum, Lat.] opening with double doors.

BIFU'RCATED, a. [from binus and furca, Lat.] with two forks or prongs.

BIG, a. applied to dimensions, large, immense, swelling out. Joined to with, or of, pregnant; with child. Swelling or distended with grief. Applied to a person's looks or words, proud; haughty. SYNON. The word great is a general term, signifying any thing considerable in bulk, extent, quality, number, &c. Thus we say, a great house, a great road, a great weight, a great many, a great famine, a great happiness. The words big and large are more circumscribed; big implies greatness of bulk, large greatness of extent. Thus we say a big man, a big stone; but a large room, a large field.

BI'GAMIST, s. [bigamus, low Lat.] one who has married another before the death of his first wife.

BI'GAMY, s. [bigamia, low Lat.] a double marriage, or the having of two wives at the same time; which is felony by law.

BIGBE'LLIED, a. swelling out, applied to sails filled with wind; with child; pregnant.

BI'GGIN, s. [beguin, Fr.] the under cap of an infant, covering the hind part of its head, and made close, to keep the upper or mould of it warm.

BI'GGLESWADE, a town in Bedfordshire, much more considerable than formerly, being a great thoroughfare between London and York. It is seated on the Ivel, (which is navigable for boats, and brings up coals, timber, merchandize, &c. from Lynn.) 10 miles from Bedford, and 45 from London. Its market, which is one of the greatest in England for barley, peas, and horse corn, is on Tuesday.

BIGHT, s. [bygan, Sax.] the circumference of the coil of a rope, opposed to its ends or extremities.

BI'GNESS, s. largeness with respect to quantity, bulk, or dimensions.

BI'GOT, s. [supposed to be derived from Rollo's refusing to kiss the toe of Charles the Vth of France, when he received his daughter in marriage, and the investiture of the dukedom from him, with this Gothic expression, Ne se by God, on which account he was called by the king a bigot] a person strongly and immoveably attached to any religion or opinion, notwithstanding the strongest reason urged to convince him by a contrary party. Used in a bad sense.

BI'GOTED, a. obstinately prepossessed in favour of a person or opinion.

BI'GOTRY, s. unreasonable firmness; obstinacy, or attachment to any party or opinion.

BI'LANDER, s. [belandre, Fr.] a small ship or vessel, broad and flat, used for conveying goods from place to place.

BI'LBERRY, s. a small purple berry, of a sweetish and sharp taste, used sometimes for tarts.

BI'LBO, s. a rapier or sword.

BILBO'A, or VILVAO, a healthy sea-port town of Spain, capital of Biscay, consisting of about 800 houses, with 5 parish churches, and 12 convents. Here is a good, well frequented harbour, the town is well supplied with water, provisions, fish, &c. and the environs are fertile in leguminous plants and fruits. The chief exports are wool, sword blades, and other iron and steel wares. It is seated on the river Ibaicabel, 50 miles W. of St. Sebastian, and 180 N. of Madrid. Lat. 43. 23. N. lon. 3. 10. W.

BILBOES, s. a sort of stocks for punishing offenders on board a ship.

BILDESTON, a town in Suffolk, with mean buildings, but a good church. It is 12 miles SE. of Bury, and 63 NE. of London. Market on Wednesday.

BILE, s. [bilis, Lat.] in anatomy, a yellow bitter liquor or fluid, separated from the blood in the liver, collected in the gall-bladder, and discharged into the lower end of the duodenum. A red inflammatory swelling or tumor, very sore, and cured by suppuration, from bile, Sax.

BILEDULGERID, the ancient Numidia, an inland country of Africa, S. of Tunis. The air is hot, but the soil though dry, yields a considerable quantity of barley. The country in some parts is covered with large woods of palm-trees, from which the inhabitants gather vast quantities of dates, with which they carry on a considerable trade. The inhabitants are composed of the ancient Africans, who lead a settled life, and the Arabs who roam about at large. It lies between 28 and 32 degrees N. lat. and between 5. and 11. E. lon.

BILGE, s. [bilig, Sax.] that part of a ship's bottom on which, together with the keel, she rests, when aground. Bilge-water, that which rests on a ship's bottom, on account of its flatness, and cannot go to the well. Bilge-pump, is that which is applied to the side of a ship, to exhaust or pump out the bilge water.

To BILGE, v. n. a sea-term, to damage, to break the boards of a ship or vessel against a rock, so as to make a passage for the water to enter; to spring a leak.

BILIARY, a. [from bilis, Lat.] in anatomy, that belongs to, or conveys the bile.

BILIMBI, a noted fruit tree in the East Indies, very famous through those parts of the world for its uses in medicine.

BILINGSGATE, a gate, port, or stairs, on the river Thames, noted for the resort of fishermen and fishwomen. Figuratively, low abuse and scurrilous language, alluding to that which is made use of by those who frequent this place.

BILINGUOUS, a. [bilinguis, Lat.] an epithet applied to one who speaks two languages. In law, applied to a jury which passes upon a foreigner for a crime committed in England, whereof part are English, and part foreigners.

BILIOUS, a. [from bilis, Lat.] consisting of bile.

To BILK, v. a. [bilken, Teut.] to cheat; to defraud; to contract a debt, and run away without paying it.

BILL, s. [bile, Sax.] the horny substance protuberating and standing out from the head of a fowl, and forming its mouth; a beak. In husbandry, an edged tool, with a hooked point, of the axe kind, fitted to a handle and used to lop trees. If the handle be short, it is named a hand bill; but if long, a hedge bill. An old English weapon. In trade, a written or printed account of goods delivered to, or work done for a person. In commerce, a common obligation given by one person to another, or a writing wherein a person obliges himself to pay a sum of money to another at a certain time. Bill of credit, is that which is given by one person to another, impowering him to take up money of his correspondents in foreign countries. A bill of entry, is an account of goods, entered at the custom-house either inwards or outwards, mentioning the person exporting, &c. the quality or species of the goods, where exported to, and whence. Bill of exchange, is a piece of paper drawn by a person on another in a different place or country, for money received by him at home. Bill of lading, is a memorandum or acknowledgment, under the hand of a master of a vessel, of his having received goods on board, together with a promise to deliver them as consigned. Bills of parcels is an account given by the seller or buyer of the several goods bought, and their prices. Bill of sale, a solemn contract, by which a person impowers his creditor to sell the goods of which he gives him an inventory, unless the sum borrowed be repaid with interest at the time appointed. Bill, in law, is a single bond without a condition; a declaration in writing, expressing some grievance or wrong done by the person complained of. In parliament, a writing containing some proposals offered to the house to be passed into a law. A physician's prescription. A bill of mortality, is a bill giving an account of the number of persons dying within certain limits and times. A bill of fare, an account of the dishes of an entertainment, or of the provisions in season.

To BILL, v. n. to join bills together. Figuratively, to caress with great fondness, in allusion to the manner of doves joining their bills together.

BILLERICAY, a town in Essex, with a large market on Tuesday. It is seated on a hill; nine miles S. by W. of Chelmsford, and 23 E. of London.

BILLESDEN, a town of Leicestershire, 9 miles nearly E. of Leicester. Market on Friday.

BILLET, s. [billet, Fr.] in heraldry, a bearing in form of a long square. They are supposed to represent pieces of gold and silver; but Guillim thinks they represent a letter sealed up; and others take them for bricks. Also a log of wood cut for fuel, from billot, Fr. Also a note or ticket given by the constable of a parish or hundred, to quarter soldiers at public houses. Also, billet-doux, or a soft billet; a love-letter. Among fox-hunters, it signifies the ordure or dung of a fox.

BILLIARDS, s. [it has no singular, billard, Fr.] a kind of game played on an oblong table, fixed exactly horizontal, and covered with a cloth, with little ivory balls, which are driven by the opposite parties into hazards, holes, or pockets, placed at the end and sides of the table.

BILLINGHAM, a town of Northumberland, with a market on Tuesday and Saturday. It is 28 miles W. of Newcastle, and 297 N. N. W. of London.

BILLION, s. [Fr.] in coinage, a base metal, either of gold or silver, in which copper is predominant. In arithmetic, ten hundred thousand millions, expressed in figures thus 1,000,000,000,000.

BILLOW, s. [bilge, Teut.] a large, high, swelling, hollow wave. SYNON. We cut through the waves; are lifted by the surges; tossed and dashed by the billows.

To BILLOW, v. n. to swell or grow tempestuous; to raise in large heaps like the appearance of billows.

BILLOWY, a. stormy, tempestuous, swelling into large waves.

BIN, s. [binne, Sax.] a long square frame, or chest of wood, wherein corn, bread, &c. are put.

BINARY, a. [binarius, Lat.] two; double.

BINBROKE, or BINBROOK, a town in Lincolnshire, with a mean market on Wednesday, seated in a bottom, and has two parish churches. It is 30 miles N. E. of Lincoln, and 158 N. of London.

To BIND, v. a. preter. bound, bind; [bindan, Sax.] to deprive a person of the free use of his limbs by bonds; to surround, to encompass, confine, fasten together; to fix a bandage on; to compel, force, restrain. In physic, to make costive. To bind a book, to sew the sheets together, and place them in a cover. With the word over, to be obliged, under a certain penalty, to appear at a court of justice. SYNON. We bind the feet and hands of a criminal; and we tie him to a stake. In the figurative sense, a man is bound when he is not at liberty to act; and he is tied when he cannot change his party, or quit it. Authority and power bind; interest and love tie.

BINDER, s. one who binds books; one who ties sheaves together. In surgery, a fillet used to keep on the dressings of a sore, and rolled several times about it.

BINDING, s. that which is bound, wound, or tied round any thing; a bandage.

BINDWEED, s. a plant, the same with the convolvulus.

BINGHAM, a town of Nottinghamshire, seated on the vale of Belvoir, now a mean place, and its market, which is on Thursday, is small. It is 8 miles E. of Nottingham. Distant from London 130 miles.

BINNACLE, s. See BITTACLE.

BINOCLE, s. [binus and oculus, Lat.] in dioptrics, a telescope fitted with two tubes, so that distant objects may be seen by both the eyes.

BINO'CULAR, a. [from binus and oculus Lat.] that has two eyes or sights.

BINO'MIAL, a. in algebra, an epithet joined to a root, which consists only of two parts, connected with the signs plus or minus.

BIO'GRAPHER, s. [from bios, life, and grapho, to write, Gr.] one who writes the lives of particular persons.

BIO'GRAPHY, s. [from bios, life, and grapho, to write, Gr.] writing the lives of men is called biography.

BI'OVAC, s. in military affairs, a night-guard, performed by the whole army, when any danger is apprehended from the enemy. Not in use.

BIPAROUS, a. [from binus and pario, Lat.] bringing forth two at a time.

BIPARTITE, a. [bipartitus, Lat.] having two parts answering to each other; divided into two.

BIPARTITION, s. the act of dividing into two.

BIPED, s. [bipes, Lat.] an animal with two feet.

BIPEDAL, a. [bipedalis, Lat.] two feet in length.

BIPE'NNATED, a. [from binus and penna, Lat.] having two wings.

BIQUADRATE, or BIQUADRATIC, a. [from bis and quadra, Lat.] the next power above the cube, or the square of the square. Biquadratic equation, in algebra, is an equation where the unknown quantity of the terms has four dimensions. Biquadratic power, is the fourth power of a number, or the square squared. Biquadratic root of a number, is the square root of the square root.

BIQUINTILE, a. [bis and quintus, Lat.] in astrology an aspect of the planets, wherein they are 144 degrees from each other. " Biquintile aspect.

BIRCH, s. [birc, Sax.] in botany, betula; it hath male and female flowers at a distance from each other. Linnæus places it in the 4th section of his 21st class. There are four species. It is used for making ox-yokes, hoops, small screws, panniers, brooms, wands, bavin bands, withies for faggots, arrows, bolts, shafts, dishes, bowls, ladles; also for fuel, great and small coal. In Russia and Poland, they cover houses with the bark of the birch-tree instead of slate and tile. Birch-broom, is a broom or besom, made with the small twigs of the birch-tree. See BESOM.

BIRCHEN, a. made of birch.

BIRCHES, (THE) Shropshire, between Colebrook dale and Builder's bridge. An earthquake happened here in 1773, when the ground was rent in several places, and thrown into confused heaps; a wood, turnpike-road, fields, hedges, houses, &c. were thrown out of their former situations, the bed of the Severn was chooked up, and the river diverted into a new channel, causing for the time a great inundation above, and so sudden a fall below, that many fishes were left on dry land, and several barges were heeled over, till the river, remarkably deep at the time, forcing its way down, overwhelmed and sunk them, and in three days' time wore a navigable channel through a large meadow.

BIRD, s. [from bird, or brid, Sax.] one of the six general classes of animals; its body is covered with feathers, and has two wings, two legs, and a bill of a firm, bony, or rather horny substance; and the females are all oviparous. Birds, in heraldry, according to their several kinds, represent either the contemplative or active life. They are the emblems of liberty, expedition, readiness, swiftness, and fear. They are more honourable beings than fishes, because they participate more of air and fire, (the two noblest and highest elements,) than of earth and water. In the blazoning of birds, if their wings be not displayed, they are said to be borne close. PROV. Birds of a feather flock together.—He's in great want of a bird that will give a groat for an owl.—One bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.—'Tis an ill bird that bewrays its own nest.—Every bird must hatch her own egg.

BIRDBOLT, s. [bird and bolt, Sax.] a small shot or arrow, used in killing birds.

BIRDCAGE s. a receptacle made with wire, &c. to keep birds in.

BIRDCATCHER, or BIRDER, s. one who lives by catching and selling birds.

BIRDLIME, s. a viscid glutinous substance, prepared different ways, but that in common use with us is made of holly bark. It is spread upon twigs, upon which the birds lighting are entangled.

BIRDSEYE, s. a plant, the same with the mealy primrose. The wild carrot is called birdseye by some.

BIRDSFOOT, s. in botany, the ornithopodium of Linnæus, so called from the shape of the seed-vessel.

BIRDSNEST, s. a plant found in woods, but not common. The country people in Sweden give the dried plant to cattle that have a cough.

BIRDSTONGUE, s. a plant, called also marsh groundsel.

BIRGANDER, s. a fowl of the goose kind.

BIRMINGHAM, a very large town in Warwickshire, with a market on Thursday. It is no corporation, it being only governed by two constables and two bailiffs; and therefore free for any person to come and settle there; which has contributed greatly to the increase not only of the buildings, but the trade, which is the most flourishing of any in England for all sorts of iron-work, besides many other curious manufactures. The town stands on the side of a hill, forming nearly a half moon. The lowest part is filled with the workshops and warehouses of the manufacturers, and consists chiefly of old buildings. The upper part of the town contains a number of new and regular streets, and a handsome square, elegantly built. It has two churches; one in the lower part of the town, which is an ancient building with a very tall spire; the other is a very grand modern structure, having a square stone tower, with a cupola, and a turret above it; in this tower is a fine peal of ten bells, and a set of musical chimes, which play seven different tunes, one for each day in the week. The houses have been computed at 7000, and the inhabitants at 60,000, but their number is continually increasing; and the surrounding country, to a considerable distance, especially towards Wolverhampton, seems like a continued town peopled with industrious inhabitants. Birmingham, from the appearance of the houses, the bustle in the streets, and particularly from the continual passing of the stage coaches, has much the resemblance of the metropolis. Its manufactures are sent to every quarter of the globe, and for cheapness and beauty are unrivalled. A navigable canal was completed from hence to the colleries at Wednesbury, in October 1769. It has a handsome free school, endowed by Edward VI. It has also two chapels, and meeting houses for every denomination of dissenters. It is 17 miles N. W. of Coventry, 48 S. E. of Shrewsbury, and 109 N. W. of London.

BIRT, s. a fish the same with the turbot.

BIRTH, s. [beorth, Sax.] the natural exclusion of the fœtus by the vagina; the act of bringing forth; the entrance of a person into the world; any production; rank of dignity inherited by descent. In sea affairs, a proper place for a ship to ride in; the distance between a ship when under sail, and the shore; a place separated by canvas, wherein the sailors mess, and put their chests. A good birth, good accommodations, wherein a person has every thing that is convenient.

BIRTHDAY, s. the day in which a person comes into the world and is born.

BIRTHNIGHT, s. the night on which a person is born.

BIRTHPLACE, s. the place wherein a person is born.

BIRTHRIGHT, s. the right which a person acquires by birth, generally applied to the first-born.

BIRTHSTRANGLED, a. strangled, choked, or killed by suffocation, in coming into the world.

BI'SCAY, a province of Spain, bounded on the W. and S. W. by Asturia and Old Castile, on the N. by the Bay of Biscay, on the E. by Naverre, and on the S. by Old Castile and Naverre. It is about 48 miles in length, and 30 in its greatest breadth. Biscay produces apples, oranges, citrons, corn, &c. They have timber for ship building, and mines of iron and lead, which they also manufacture; the adjoining sea also supplies them with fish, and renders their trade very flourishing; their seamen are accounted the best in Spain. The Biscayners are of Celtic extraction, and still preserve their peculiar language, the Basque, which has no affinity with any other in Europe. Bilboa is the capital.

BI'SCOTIN, s. [Fr.] a confection made of flour, marmalade, eggs, &c.

BI'SCUIT, (bisket) s. [bis, Lat. and cuit, Fr.] a kind of hard dry bread, made entirely of wheat flour, mixed with leaven and warm water, baked for long voyages four times, and prepared six months before it is shipped. It will keep a whole year. Likewise a fine delicate pastry, or cake, made of fine flour, eggs, almonds, and rose water; or of flour, eggs, sugar, and citron, or orange peel, and baked twice.

To BISE'CT, v. a. [binus and seco, Lat.] in geometry, to divide any thing into two equal parts.

BISE'CTION, or BISSE'CTION, s. in geometry, the act of dividing, or the line divided into two equal parts.

BI'SHOP, s. [biscop, Sax.] a prelate, or person consecrated for the spiritual government and direction of the diocese, whose jurisdictions consists in collating to benefices, ordaining priests and deacons, licensed physcians, surgeons, and school-masters. The bishops are all peers of the realm, except the bishop of Sodor and Man, who seems to be excluded that privilege, from his being nominated by the duke of Athol, all others being nominated by his majesty. Next to the two archbishops, the bishops of London, Durham, and Winchester, have always the precedence; and the others follow according to the date of their consecration.

BI'SHOP, s. a liquor made of water, wine, sugar, and a Seville orange roasted.

BI'SHOPS-AUKLAND, a town in the bishopric of Durham, with a market on Thursday. It is pleasantly seated on the side of a hill, and noted for its castle, beautifully repaired about 100 years ago; for its chapel, whose architecture is very curious; and for its bridge. It is eight miles S. by W. of Durham, and 257 N. N. W. of London.

BI'SHOPS-CASTLE, a town in Shropshire, seated near the river Ciun; is a corporation; sends two members to parliament; and its market (on Friday) is much frequented by the Welsh. It is 159 miles N. W. by W. of London.

BI'SHOP AND HIS CLERKS, some little islands and rocks on the coast of Pembrokeshire, near St. David's dangerous to mariners.

BI'SHOPRIC, s. [biscoprice, Sax.] the province, district, or diocese, which belongs to a bishop.

BI'SHOP'S-STORTFORD, a town of Hertfordshire, with a good market on Thursday, seated on the side of a hill, and has several good inns; but the streets are not paved. It is 12 miles N. E. of Hertford, and 30 N. by E. of London.

BISK, s. [bisque, Fr.] a soup, or broth, made of different sorts of flesh boiled, according to Johnson.

BI'SMUTH, s. in natural history, a semi-metal, of a yellowish white colour, a fleaky texture, and moderately hard, but not malleable. It is so brittle that it breaks readily under the hammer, and may be reduced even to powder. It is generally found with cobalt, in the cobaltic ores of Saxony and England. Native bismuth, and sulphuret of bismuth, are also found upon the continent, but this is not an abundant metal. Bismuth is used with other metals, not only to form printer's types, but also to make pewter, and for some others compounds. It remarkably contributes to the fusibility of some alloys; hence, it is employed to make solder. Bismuth is likewise given in medicine, though now very rarely. Pearl-white is a precipitate of bismuth.

BISSEXTILE, s. so called, because the 6th of the calends of March was repeated in that year; [bis and sextilis, Lat.] a year containing 366 days, happening every fourth year, when a day is added to the month of February, to make up for the six hours which the sun spends in his course each year, beyond the 365 days usually assigned to it.

BI'STORT. s. a sort of snakeweed.

BI'STOURY, s. [bistouri, Fr.] a surgeon's instrument, used in making incisions.

BI'STRE, s. [Fr.] a colour made of chimney soot boiled, and afterwards diluted, and made into cakes with gum water. It is used by painters to wash their designs, instead of Indian ink, &c.

BISULCOUS, a. [bisulcus, Lat.] cleft in two parts; cloven-footed.

BIT, s. [bitol, Sax.] the essential part of a bridle, which being put into the horse's mouth, the rider is enabled to manage him. It is also the sharp end of a piercer, augur, or other iron instrument. The bit of a key is that part which contains the wards. Bit also means as much as a person generally bites off at once.

To BIT, v. a. to put a bit into a horse's mouth; to bridle.

BITCH, s. [bicge, Sax.] the female of the dog, wolf, fox and otter kind.

To BITE, v. n. preter. bit, part. pass. bitten; [bitan, Sax.] to wound, pierce, or divide with the teeth. To affect with pain, applied to the cold; to make a person uneasy, applied to satire or reproach; to wound by its sharpness, applied to a sword, &c. To make the mouth smart, applied to the sharp taste of acid bodies. Figuratively, to cheat or defraud.

BITE, s. the incision or wound made in any thing with the teeth; a sharper, a cheat, trick or fraud.

BITER, s. one that seizes with the teeth, applied to a dog; one that readily or quickly swallows a bait, applied to a fish; one who deceives or defrauds another by false appearances; a sharper.

BITTACLE, s. [from bitt, Belg.] a frame in the steerage of a ship, wherein the compass is placed.

BITTEN, part. pass. of BITE.

BITTER, a. [biter, Sax.] that excites a hot, pungent, and astringent taste, like that of wormwood. Figuratively, wretched, miserable, painful, disagreeable, unpleasing, and hurtful.

BITTER, s. in sea language, any turn of the cable round the bitts, so that they may be let out gradually, or by degrees. When a ship is stopped by the cable, she is said to be brought up by the bitter.

BITTERLY, ad. with a bitter taste. Figuratively, in a sorrowful, painful, sharp, and severe manner; used sometimes to express the superlative or highest degree.

BITTERN, s. [butour, Fr.] in natural history, a bird with a long bill and legs, which feeds on fish, and is remarkable for its noise. A very bitter liquor which drains off in making common salt, and used in the preparation of Epsom salt, from the adjective bitter.

BITTERNESS, s. a kind of savour, or sensation, the reverse of sweetness. Applied to manner, severity, austerity. Applied to reproach, keenness, sharpness, or extremity. Applied to the passions, sorrow, trouble, distress.

BITTERSWEET, s. a plant, called also woody nightshade.

BITTS, s. [bittan, Sax.] two perpendicular pieces of timber in the forepart of a ship, bolted to the gun-deck: their heads are braced with a cross piece, and several turns of the cable are taken over them, for securing the ship when at anchor.

BITUME, or BITUMEN, s. [bitumen, Lat.] in natural history, a fact, tenacious, inflammable, mineral substance, or a fossil body which easily takes fire, yields oil, and is not soluble in water.

BITUMINOUS, a. [from bitumen, Lat.] having the nature and qualities of bitumen.

BIVA'LVE, a. [from binus and valve, Lat.] in natural history, applied to fish that have two shells, such as oysters; and in botany, to plants whose seed-pods open their whole length, to discharge their seeds, as pease.

BIVALVULAR, a. that has two shells, or valves.

BIZANTINE, or BYZANTINE, s. a large wedge of gold, valued at 15*l.* which the king offers upon high festival days. See BESANT.

To BLAB, v. a. [blebberen, Belg.] to reveal a secret through heedlessness or want of caution. Used neuterly, to talk, or tattle.

BLAB, s. a tell tale; one who discovers secrets through inconsideration, or too great a propensity to talking.

BLA'BBER, s. one who discovers a secret through want of caution, and a great fondness for speaking.

BLACK, s. [blac, Sax.] absence or want of light and colour, owing to a body's reflecting no rays of light. Dyer's black, for stuffs of a high price, is composed of indigo, wood boiled with alum, tartar, or ashes of lees of wine, maddered with common madder, and mixed with gall-nuts of Aleppo, copperas, and sumach. The best black cloth should be first dyed blue. German black is made of the lees of wine, burnt bones washed afterwards, and ground with burnt ivory or peach-stones; that with ivory is the best. This is used by rolling-press printers. Ivory black is ivory burnt between two crucibles, and ground with water, used by painters and jewellers to blacken the bottom ground of the collets or bezels in which they set diamonds. Spanish black, invented by the Spaniards, is burnt cork. Lamp, or lam black, is the sooty smoke or soot of rosin, received in sheep-skins, or pieces of coarse linens fixed at the top of a chimney, wherein it is burnt for that purpose. Currier's black is made with gall-nuts, sour beer, and cold iron, for the the first blackening applied to the hides; but of gall-nuts, copperas, and gum arabic, for the second. Black, after the word look, and the preposition upon, implies sullen, unfriendly, and is a sign of displeasure. "Looked black upon me." Shakes. Joined with blue, it implies the colour of the skin, occasioned by a hard blow; livid. PROV. Black will take no other hue: this dyers find by experience. It may signify that vicious persons are seldom or never reclaimed. A black plum is as sweet as a white; signifying, that the prerogative of beauty proceeds from fancy. A black hen lays a white egg: I conceive the meaning of it is, that a black woman may bear a fair child.

To BLACK, v. a. to make of a black colour.

BLACK, a. of a black colour. Applied to despair, horrible, to moral action, excessively wicked.

BLA'CKAMORE, s. one whose complexion is naturally black. See NEGRO.

BLA'CKBERRY, s. the fruit of the blackberry bramble. They are ripe in September.

BLA'CK-BROWED, a. having black eye-brows. Figuratively, dark, gloomy, dismal, or threatening.

BLA'CKBURN, a town in Lancashire, with a large manufacture of calicoes for printing. It is seated near the river Derwent, called sometimes Blackwater, 12 miles E. of Preston, and 211 N. N. W. of London. Market on Monday.

BLACK-CATTLE, s. in husbandry, a general term, including oxen, bulls, or cows.

To BLA'CKEN, v. a. to make a thing black, which was of a different colour before; to intercept the rays of light; to darken. Figuratively, to sully a person's character by defamation, or unmerited censure.

BLA'CKGUARD, s. in low and familiar language, used to convey the idea of a person of mean circumstances, dirty and ragged dress, of base principles, and worthy of contempt.

BLACK-JACK, zinc mineralized with sulphur, a mineral employed till lately in Wales in mending the roads.

BLA'CKISH, a. [black and ise, Sax.] inclined to a black colour; somewhat black.

BLACK-LEAD, s. See LEAD.

BLA'CKNESS, s. that quality of a body which arises from its reflecting few or no rays, and is owing to its porosity, the minuteness of its particles, and the rays of light suffering so many reflections in the inside, that few return to the surface; want of light; or darkness.

BLACK ROD, s. the usher of the order of the Garter, so called from his black rod with a golden lion at the top. He attends the king's chamber, and the house of lords in parliament.

BLACK SEA, formerly the Euxine, is bounded on the W. by Romania, Bulgaria, and Bessarabia; on the N. by the sea of Asoph and Tartary; on the E. by Circassia and Georgia, and on the S. by Natolia. It is said to be 3800 miles in circumference, receives many large rivers, and has not any discernable flux or reflux. It lies between 41 and upwards of 46 degrees N. lat. and between 32 and 41. E. lon.

BLA'CKSMITH, s. a person who forges the larger works in iron, and derives his name from their colour, which is generally black from their not being polished; opposed to a whitesmith, who forges the smaller works, which are generally polished.

BLA'CKTHORN, s. a shrub, the same with the sloe.

BLA'DDER, s. [bladdre, Sax.] in anatomy, a thin dilatable membranous body, which serves as the receptacle of the urine after its secretion from the blood in the kidneys, situated in the pelvis of the abdomen; in men, immediately on the rectum; in women, on the vagina uteri. It likewise signifies a pustule, blister, or the swelling of a membrane filled with any juice or fluid, such as that which arises after scalding or burning.

BLADE, s. [blad, or bled, Sax.] in botany, the spire or leaf of grass before it grows to seed; the green shoots or leaves of corn, which rise from the seed. Hence that part of a sword or knife is called a blade, from the form's resembling a blade of grass. Figuratively, a bold, enterprising, brisk, fierce, and gay person.

BLADE, or BLADE-BONE, s. in anatomy, the scapula, or scapular-bone, of a flat or triangular form.

To BLADE, v. a. to furnish with a blade; to fit a blade to a handle.

BLA'DED, a. that has leaves, spires, or blades.

BLAIN, s. [blegene, Sax.] a distemper incident to beasts, consisting of a bladder growing at the root of the tongue, against the windpipe, which at length grows so large as to stop the breath. Applied to human creatures, a pustule or blister.

To BLAME, v. a. [blamer, Fr.] applied to persons, to charge them with having done a fault.

BLAME, s. the charging with wrong measures or faults. Figuratively, the defect which merits censure. Used with to, it implies that which deserves blame, or blameable.

BLA'MEABLE, a. that may be found fault with, or censured.

BLA'MEABLENESS, s. that which renders a thing faulty, or liable to blame or censure.

BLA'MEABLY, ad. in such a manner as deserves censure or blame.

BLA'MEFUL, a. that highly deserves to be found fault with, censured, or blamed.

BLA'MELESS, a. that is no ways defective; or deserves no censure or blame; used sometimes, but very rarely, with the particle of.

BLA'MELESSLY, ad. in such a manner as to be free from fault; so as not to merit censure.

BLA'MELESSNESS, s. that quality which renders a person or thing by no means the object of censure or blame.

BLA'MER, s. the person who censures, or charges a person or thing with defect, or being wrong.

BLA'MEWORTHY, a. that deserves censure or blame, including the idea of something wrong or defective.

To BLANCH, v. a. [blanchir, Fr.] to whiten a thing which was before of another colour. Figuratively, to peel, applied to the peeling almonds, which discovers their kernel of a white colour.

BLA'NCHER, s. one who makes any thing white; a whitener.

BLA'NCHER, s. the action, art, or method of making any thing white. In coinage, the method made use of to give the pieces that brightness and lustre they have on their first coming out of the mint.

BLANC-MANGER, s. (blomonge) [Fr.] a preparation of dissolved isinglass, milk, sugar, cinnamon, &c. boiled into a thick consistence, and garnished for the table with blanched almonds.

BLAND, a. [blandus, Lat.] soothing, mild, applied to language. Soft, temperate, applied to weather.

BLA'NDFORD, a town of Dorsetshire, with a market on Saturday. It is pleasantly situated on the river Store, near the Downs, and is a well inhabited place; but has been subject to several dreadful fires, particularly in 1731, when almost all the town was burnt down, with the goods therein; but it was soon rebuilt more beautiful than before. It has the title of a marquisate, and is 12 miles S. of Salisbury, 18 N. E. of Dorchester, and 103 W. by S. of London.

To BLA'NDISH, v. a. to insinuate one's self into a person's favour; to soothe, or allure. Seldom used.

BLA'NDISHMENT, s. [blanditiæ, Lat.] an insinuating address; soft, mild, and kind expressions, by which a person steals into the favour of another.

BLANK, a. [blanc, Fr.] whitish or pale, applied to colour. That is not written on. Used with the word look, (either expressed or understood) confused, dejected, or shewing the signs of disappointment. Applied to verse, that has no rhyme; but Milton, Thomson, and others, have shewn this to be the most masculine ornament of poetry, which brings our language to a nearer resemblance of the Greek and Roman poetry, and sits in a height beyond the poetry of the French and Italians, which they must look up at with envy, and acknowledge it impossible for their enervate languages to attain to.

BLANK, s. in commerce, a void space, or that which has no writing on it, but is left so, in order to be filled up. In lotteries, a ticket which has no prize drawn against it. Figuratively, the mark or point which an arrow or piece is aimed at.

To BLANK, v. a. figuratively, to confuse; to disappoint; to cease, bring to nothing, or render abortive.

BLA'NKET, s. [blanchette, Fr.] a stuff made of wool, and used for beds.

To BLA'NKET, v. a. to cover or wrap in a blanket.

BLA'NKLY, ad. in such a manner as causes or shews confusion or disappointment; with whiteness; with paleness.

To BLARE, v. n. [blaren, Belg.] to bellow, to roar: to melt away, like a lighted candle blown by the wind.

To BLASPHE'ME, v. n. [blasphemo, low Lat.] to speak ill of God, his messengers, or things relating to his service, and comprehended in his revelation. In law, an indignity or injury offered to the Almighty, by denying what is his due, or attributing to him what is not agreeable to his nature, Lindw cap. 1.

BLASPHE'MER, s. one who utters disrespectful or irreverent things, either of God, Christ, or any person in the Holy Trinity, God's messengers, or any thing relating to religion.

BLA'SPHEMOUS, a. that is disrespectful or irreverent with respect to God and heavenly things.

BLA'SPHEMOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as is inconsistent with that reverence we owe to the Deity; in such a manner as to speak ill of God and heavenly things.

BLA'SPHEMY, s. an offering of some indignity to God, any person of the Trinity, any messengers from God, his holy writ, or the doctrines of revelation.

BLAST, s. [blæst, Sax.] a breath, puff, or current of wind; the sound made by blowing a trumpet or other wind instrument; a warm air, or other alteration in the atmosphere, which withers trees, or causes a pestilence.

To BLAST, v. a. to infect with some sudden plague or infection by means of the air; to cause a thing to wither; to ruin a person's character by spreading false rumours; to render an enterprise abortive.

BLA'STING, s. in mineralogy, the blowing up the vein of a mine by gunpowder, which cannot be broken up by the spade, the gad, and the axe, or softened by fire.

BLA'TANT, a. [blattant. Fr.] bellowing like a calf. Seldom used.

BLAY, s. a small white river fish, called also a bleak.

BLAZE, s. [blase, Sax.] a flame, or the light of a flame. Figuratively, a spreading abroad; publication or extending a report; likewise, the white mark on a horse's forehead, reaching to his nose.

To BLAZE, v. a. used with upon, to shine, or give light. Figuratively, to make a thing universally known by report or rumour. Sometimes used with the words abroad and about.

BLA'ZER, s. one who spreads abroad any report or rumour. Not much in use.

To BLA'ZON, v. a. [blasonner, Fr.] in heraldry, to name all the parts of a coat, in their proper and technical terms. Figuratively, to set out, deck, or adorn. To discover to advantage; to display. To spread abroad.

BLA'ZON, s. in heraldry, the art of expressing the several parts of a coat of arms in its proper terms; all persons, beneath the degree of a noble, must have their coats blazoned by metals and colours; nobles by precious stones; and kings and princes by planets Blazon is used figuratively for making any thing public; a pompous display of any quality.

BLA'ZONRY, s. the art of blazoning.

To BLEACH, v. a. [blachen, Teut.] to whiten a thing by exposing it to the air and sun. Neuterly, to grow white in the sun or open air.

BLE'ACHING, s. the art of making a thing white, which was not perfectly so before, or which was of a different colour.

BLEAK, s. a small river fish.

BLEAK, a. [blac, Sax.] cold, sharp, chill; cheerless.

BLE'AKNESS, s. extreme coldness, applied to the air.

BLE'AKY, a. cold or chilly owing to the wind.

BLEAR, a. [blaer, Belg.] dim or sore with water or rheum. Applied to the eyes, that causes dimness of sight.

To BLEAR, v. a. to occasion dimness of sight; to make the eyes sore with water or rheum. Figuratively, to blind, to prevent the mind from taking notice of things.

To BLEAT, v. a. [blatan, Sax.] to make a noise like a sheep.

BLEAT, s. [from the verb] the cry of a sheep

BLEB, [blaen, Germ.] a blister.

BLED, part. pass. of To BLEED.

To BLEED, v. n. preter. I bled, or have bled; [bledan, Sax.] to lose blood by a wound, &c. to die by bleeding. Figuratively, to drop like thick or rich blood. Used actively, to extract blood from a person by opening a vein with a lancet; to let blood.

To BLE'MISH, v. a. to mark with any defect; to spot, stain, or any other ways to rob a thing of its beauty, value, or perfection. Figuratively, to defame; to ruin a person's reputation.

BLE'MISH, s. applied to personal charms, a scar, or any thing that diminishes their perfection. Applied to manufactures, a defect either in the making, or owing to some accident. Applied to moral conduct, a reproach, disgrace, defect, or fault.

To BLENCH, v. n. to shrink; to start back. To hinder; to obstruct. Seldom used.

To BLEND, v. a. preter. I blended, anciently blent; [blendan, Sax.] to mix or mingle things together imperfectly, or so as the several compounds may be discovered, applied to the mixing of colours.

BLEND, s. the ore of zinc mineralized by sulphur.

BLE'NDER, s. a person who mingles things together.

BLE'NHEIM, a village of Germany in Suabia, rendered memorable for the victory over the French and Bavarians, obtained in August 1704, by the Allies, under the command of the duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene. In memory of this battle, the fine palace of Blenheim was built, near Woodstock, at the charge of the government. It is seated on the W. side of the Danube, three miles N. E. of Hochsted, 27 N. E. of Ulm, and 25 N. W. of Augsburg. Lon. 2. 30. E. lat. 48. 40.

BLE'NNY, s. a genus of fishes, of which one is very remarkable for bringing forth its young ones alive.

BLENT, the obsolete preterite of BLEND.

To BLESS, v. a. preter. I blessed, or blest; [blessian, Sax.] to pray for, or wish happiness or good to a person; to praise for happiness received, or ascribe our happiness to God; to confer every thing that can make a person perfectly happy, applied to God.

BLE'SSED, part. pass. of BLESS.

BLE'SSEDLY, ad. in a manner which communicates the greatest happiness that can be wished.

BLE'SSEDNESS, s. that quality which renders a person extremely happy; the state of consummate felicity in heaven. Figuratively, the Divine favour.

BLE'SSING, s. a declaration of future happiness in a prophetic manner; a prayer in which happiness is requested. Figuratively, the Divine favour; any means or cause of happiness; any great advantage or benefit.

BLEW, the preterite of BLOW.

BLEYME, s. in farriery, an inflammation in the foot of a horse, between the sole and the bone.

BLIGHT, s. [blyche, Teut.] a distemper that affects trees and plants in various manners, sometimes the whole, and sometimes only the leaves, occasioned by an evil disposition of the air, as too severe frosts, &c. Figuratively, any thing which makes an undertaking miscarry, or disappoints the person's expectations.

To BLIGHT, v. a. to stop the vegetation of a tree; to render it barren; to wither. Figuratively, to blast, destroy, kill, or wither.

BLIND, a. [blind, Sax.] not able to see; deprived of sight. Figuratively, ignorant, with the particle to before the object; dark, not easily to be seen or found. In chemistry, applied to those vessels that have no opening but on one side. PROV. Blind men can judge no colours. A man were better to be half blind than have both his eyes out. Who so blind as he that will not see?

To BLIND, v. a. to deprive a person of his sight, to prevent a person from seeing; to darken. Figuratively, to render a thing obscure, and not easily comprehended.

BLIND, s. something made use of to intercept the light. Figuratively, something made use of to divert the eye or mind from attending to the design a person is carrying on.

To BLI'NDFOLD, v. a. to hinder a person from seeing, by folding or tying something before his eyes.

BLI'NDFOLD, a. with the eye covered; with the eyes shut. Figuratively, without consideration; without using our reason.

BLI'NDLY, ad. without sight. Figuratively, scarcely or hardly to be perceived; without examination; implicitly.

BLI'NDMAN'S BUFF, s. a play wherein a person endeavours to catch some one of the company, after something is tied over his eyes to prevent his seeing.

BLI'NDNESS, s. loss of the faculty of seeing, arising from the loss or distemperature of the organs of the eye. Figuratively, ignorance or want of knowledge.

BLI'NDSIDE, s. used figuratively, to express the foibles or weakness of a person, which exposes him to the artifices of others.

BLI'NDWORM, s. in natural history, the larger slow-worm, so called from the smallness of its eyes, which hath induced some to think it has none; a kind of small viper, the least of the English venomous reptiles.

To BLINK, v. n. [blinken, Dan.] to wink with one eye; to shut one eye; to be blind of, or to see obscurely with one eye.

BLI'NKARD, s. one who has bad eyes; one who sees but very dimly. Figuratively, one who discerns but very imperfectly.

BLISS, s. [blisse, Sax.] joy arising from the possession of some great and important good; a state of happiness, or of the highest felicity; most commonly applied to the happiness of the heavenly mansions. SYNON. Our happiness glares in the eyes of the world, and exposes us often to envy. Our felicity is only known to ourselves, and gives us continual satisfaction. The idea of bliss extends beyond a life temporal.

BLI'SSFUL, a. abounding with joy; possessed of the highest degree of happiness.

BLI'SSFULLY, ad. in such a manner as to shew the greatest signs of joy, occasioned by the possession and enjoyment of happiness.

BLI'SSFULNESS, s. the quality or state of extreme joy, arising from the enjoyment of an important and immense good.

BLI'STER, s. [blayster, Belg.] a swelling of the skin, generally filled with a watery fluid, after burning, scalding, &c. In pharmacy, a medicine which attracts the humours to a particular part, and by that means raises the cuticle.

To BLI'STER, v. n. to rise in blisters; to be covered with blisters. Used actively, to raise blisters by burning; to apply a plaister, in order to raise a blister.

BLITH, a town of Nottinghamshire, 23 miles N. NW. of Newark, and 146 N. by W. of London. Market on Thursday.

BLITHE, a. [blithe, Sax.] gay; airy; joyous; sprightly, owing to the enjoyment of some good.

BLI'THLY, ad. in a joyous, sprightly, or airy manner.

BLI'THNESS, s. the state of joyful alacrity and sprightliness.

BLI'THSOME, a. gay, airy, sprightly; cheerful.

To BLOAT, v. a. [blowan, Sax.] to swell with wind. Figuratively, to shew pride by the looks or gesture. Neuterly, it implies to look as if swelled by wind; generally applied to a person growing lusty, but appearing at the same time of a weak constitution.

BLO'ATEDNESS, s. the state of a person or thing puffed up with fat, or swelled with wind.

BLO'BBER, s. a bubble. Not in common use.

BLO'BBERLIP, s. a thick lip.

BLO'BLIPPED, or BLO'BBERLIPPED, a. that has thick lips, applied both to persons and things.

BLOCK, s. [block, Belg. bloc, Fr.] a heavy piece of timber more thick than long; a piece of marble as it comes out of the quarry; any massy body; a piece of wood formed in the shape of a skull, made use of by barbers to make their perukes upon; a piece of wood used by hatters to form or dress their hats on; the wood on which criminals are beheaded; pieces of wood belonging to a ship, fitted with shives and pins for running rigging to go through. Figuratively, an obstruction or impediment; a person of dull parts, slow apprehensions, remarkable stupidity.

To BLOCK, v. a. [bloquer, Fr.] to stop up any passage; to inclose a town so as to hinder any one from going into, or coming out of it. Generally used with the particle up.

BLOCKA'DE, s. [blockhuys, Teut.] a fortress or bulwark, erected to stop up or secure a passage. In war, a kind of siege, wherein all passages and avenues are seized and stopt up, so as the besieged can neither receive provisions, reinforcements, nor intelligence, and are reduced to the necessity of surrendering or starving.

To BLOCKA'DE, v. a. to seize upon, and block up all the avenues to a place.

BLO'CKHEAD, s. a figurative expression; used to imply a person of a dull apprehension, want of parts, and great stupidity

BLO'CKHEADED, a. remarkably stupid, dull, and incapable of improving.

BLO'CKHOUSE, s. a fortress built to secure a passage, and hinder any one from going through.

BLO'CKISH, a. stupid; dull.

BLO'CKISHLY, ad. after the manner of a person remarkable for his stupidity; like a blockhead.

BLO'CKISHNESS s. great dulness of apprehension; or stupidity.

BLOCK-TIN, s. tin which is pure or unmixed, and yet unwrought.

BLO'CKWOOD, s. in trade, the logwood brought from Honduras, and used in dying black.

BLOIS, an ancient and handsome city in the dept. of Loire and Cher, once the abode of the kings of France. The spectator is struck with the idea of an amphitheatre, in seeing the manner in which the streets are disposed, like rows of seats one above another against the hill. Here are some fine fountains, and a new bridge, one of the best in France. The French language is thought to be spoken here with the greatest purity. It has manufactures of serges and ticking, and a commerce in wines and brandy. Blois is pleasantly situated on the river Loire, in a fine country. 47 miles N. E. of Tours, and 100 S. W. of Paris. Lat. 47. 35. N. lon. 1. 25. E.

BLO'MARY, s. [from bloma, Sax.] the first forge in an iron work, through which the metal passes after it has been first melted from the mine.

BLOOD, (blud) s. [blod, Sax.] a red warm fluid, circulating by means of the veins and arteries, through every part of an animal body. Blood, when cold, separates into two parts, the one red and fibrous, which forms into a mass, and is called the cruor; the other, which is thin and transparent, retains its fluidity, and is called the serum. The red colour of blood is derived from the red oxide of iron which it contains. Blood is used figuratively for family kindred, descent, life. Joined with hot or cold, a cold or warm disposition; a person of a warm and sanguine temper; a rake. Joined with flesh, used in scripture, to signify human nature in its corrupt state, or the state of unassisted reason. The juice of vegetables.

To BLOOD, v. a. to stain with blood; to let blood.

BLOODGUILTINESS, s. murder; the crime of shedding blood.

BLOO'D-HOT, a. that has the same degree of heat as the blood.

BLOO'DHOUND, s. a hound that follows by the scent, seizes with great fierceness, will not quit the track of the person he pursues, and is trained to the sport by blood.

BLOO'DILY, ad. in a cruel savage manner; inclined to murder or bloodshed.

BLOO'DINESS, s. the state or appearance of a thing tained with blood.

BLOO'DLESS, a. without blood; having no blood. Figuratively, dead; pale.

BLOO'DSHED, s. murder, occasioned by giving a person a wound bywhich he bleeds to death; slaughter.

BLOO'DSHEDDER, s. one who murders another.

BLOO'DSHOT, or BLOO'DSHOTTEN, a. an epithet applied to a distemper in the eyes, wherein the blood vessels are so distended as to make them appear of a bloody colour.

BLOO'DSTONE, s. in natural history a mineral of a green colour, spotted with a blood red; hard, ponderous, composed of pointed needles, and generally found in iron mines. It is used in medicine as a styptic, or to stop blood; and by goldsmiths and gilders to polish their work.

BLOO'D-VESSEL, s. a vessel appropriated by nature to the conveyance of the blood.

BLOO'DY, a. stained with blood. Figuratively, cruel; murderous.

BLOO'DY FLUX. s. See DYSENTERY.

BLOO'DY MINDED, a. cruel; inclined to murder, or bloodshed.

BLOOM, s. [blom, Teut.] in botany, the flower on fruit-trees and plants, which precedes their fruits. The fine blue substance on plums, &c. In the iron works, a four square mass of hammered iron, of about two feet length, and three quarters of a hundred weight, made from part of a sow of cast iron. Figuratively, a flourishing state, which may admit of increase and improvement.

To BLOOM, v. n. to produce blossoms or flowers. Figuratively, to flourish; to be in a flourishing state.

BLOO'MY, a. full of blossoms or flowers. Figuratively, being in a state of vigour or perfection: being in a flourishing state.

BLO'SSOM, s. [blosme, Sax.] in botany, the flower which afterwards turns to fruit on trees or plants; more particularly applied to the petals.

To BLO'SSOM, v. n. to put forth flowers or blossoms, which afterwards turn to fruit.

To BLOT, v. a. [blottir, to hide, Fr.] to drop ink on a paper or other substance; to efface or dash out any word with ink; used with out. Figuratively, to render a thing imperceptible, or invisible; to efface; to stain, sully, or disgrace. To make black; to darken.

BLOT, s. a spot of ink dropped by accident on paper; a dash with a pen on a word, in order to efface it. Figuratively, a stain, or any thing which causes disgrace, applied to character.

BLOTCH, s. a sore, pustule, or any eruption of the skin which conveys the idea of a defect.

To BLOTE, v. a. [blossen, Belg.] to smoke, or dry with smoke; hence bloted, or red herrings. Seldom used.

BLOW, (blō) s. [blowe, Sax.] a stroke given with the fist or any weapon. Used with at, a single attempt; a sudden event, an unexpected evil. The act of laying or depositing eggs in flesh, applied to flies: "The blows of flies." Chapm.

To BLOW, (blō) v. n. preter. blew, part. pass. blown; [blowan, Sax.] to move, applied to the action of wind. Used sometimes impersonally with the particle it. "It blows a happy gale." Dryd. To breathe upon; to sound by means of wind. "Let the prating organ blow." Dryd. To sound a musical instrument by the breath. Used with over, to pass or cease without producing damage. "When the storm is blown over—how blest is the swain!" Gran. Used with up, to mount in the air, applied to the effect of gunpowder. "Some of the enemy's magazines blew up." Tatler, No. 59. Used actively, to drive or move by the force of wind; to increase a fire by means of a pair of bellows; to breathe upon; to sound a wind instrument by the breath. "Their loud up-lifted angel trumpets blow." Milt. Used with out, to extinguish by the wind or breath. Used with upon, to become common; to become contemptible on account of its being universally known, even to the vulgar; to be stale.

To BLOW, (blō) v. n. [blowan, Sax.] in botany, to bloom, to blossom, to flourish.

BLO'WER, (blō'er) s. among miners, a melter of tin.

BLO'WING, (blō'ing) s. the act of forming glass into its various shapes, by breathing or blowing with the mouth through the blowing-pipe.

BLOW-PIPE, s. in chemistry, an instrument to increase and direct the flame of a lamp for the analysis of minerals, and for other chemical purposes.

BLOWZE, s. a female of a healthy ruddy countenance, or one whose hair is generally in disorder; a ruddy fat-faced wench.

BLOWZY, a. ruddy-faced, or with the hair disordered.

BLUBBER, s. the fat part of a whale, or other cetaceous fishes, which contains the oil.

To BLUBBER, v. n. [imbabolare, Ital.] to weep in such a manner as to make the cheeks swell. Used actively, to swell the cheeks with weeping.

BLUBBERED, part. a. swelled, big, or large, applied to the lips.

BLUDGEON, s. a short stick, having one end loaded with lead, &c. used as an offensive weapon.

BLUE, a. formerly spelt blew; [blaw, Sax.] of a blue colour. Used substantively for one of the primitive colours of the rays of light; and among dyers for one of the five simple or mother colours, of which they form the others. Blue is dyed chiefly with wood and indigo, and painted with ultramarine, blue ashes and smalt, and in oil and miniature with indigo, blue bice, blue verditer, capis armenus, smalt and litmus. To look blue upon a person, is to behold him with an unfavourable aspect, or forbidding countenance.

To BLUE, v. a. to make of a blue colour, to give linen a bluish cast by dipping them into cold water, wherein soap and indigo have been dissolved.

BLUE'BOTTLE, s. a flower of the bell shape. A fly with a large blue bottle.

BLUE-JOHN, s. a beautiful Derbyshire spar.

BLU'ELY, ad. like a blue colour; bluish.

BLU'ENESS, s. that quality which denominates a thing blue.

BLUFF, a. applied to the looks, big, swelling, surly.

BLUFF-HEAD, s. among sailors, a ship is said to be bluff-headed that has an upright stem.

BLU'ISH, a. somewhat blue.

BLU'ISHNESS, s. the quality of being somewhat blue.

To BLU'NDER, v. n. [blunderen, Belg.] to be guilty of a gross mistake, including the secondary idea of contempt. Used actively, to go in a confused manner in quest or search. To mix ignorantly and by gross mistake.

BLU'NDER, s. a gross mistake, applied both to actions and words, and carrying with it the idea of gross and ridiculous stupidity.

BLU'NDERBUSS, s. a kind of gun or fusee, whose barrel is generally made of brass, and may be charged with several bullets. Figuratively, a person guilty of gross and ridiculous mistakes, either in actions or words.

BLU'NDERER, s. one who cannot distinguish one thing from another; one who is guilty of gross and ridiculous mistakes, either in action or language.

BLU'NT, a. applied to the point or edge of a weapon, that will not pierce or cut, on account of its thickness, opposed to sharp; deficient in politeness of behaviour; void of ceremony or politeness; not easy to be penetrated.

To BLU'NT, v. a. to spoil the sharpness of the edge or point of a weapon, so as to hinder it from piercing. Figuratively, to lessen the violence of any passion.

BLU'NTLY, ad. applied to edge-tools, so as not to be able to pierce or cut. Applied to behaviour, without ceremony, politeness, or elegance.

BLU'NTNESS, s. want of edge, point, or sharpness, applied to weapons. Plainness, abruptness, want of ceremony, or politeness, applied to manners.

BLUR, s. [borra, Span.] a blot or stain. Figuratively, a defect.

To BLUR, v. a. to efface, erase, or render a thing imperceptible. Figuratively, to stain, applied to credit, behaviour, or reputation.

To BLURT, v. a. to speak, discover, or declare, without consideration, or notwithstanding caution to the contrary. Used with the particle out.

To BLUSH, v. n. [blosen, Belg.] to redden, or grow red in the face at being charged with any thing that excites shame, or seeing any thing immodest. Figuratively, to bear the colour of a blush. Used with at before the cause.

BLUSH, s. a redness of the cheeks occasioned by the consciousness of some defect, or the sight of some unchaste object. Figuratively, any red colour. With the word first, a sudden appearance, or at first sight.

To BLU'STER, v. n. [from blast, Sax.] to roar, applied to the noise of the wind in a storm. Figuratively, to make a noise, bully, hector, swagger, or be tumultuous through a vain persuasion, or conceit of a person's importance.

BLU'STER, s. the roaring noise occasioned by the violence of the wind. Figuratively, the height or noisy turbulence of anger or vain conceit.

BLU'STERER, s. a person who makes a great noise from a conceited opinion of his own importance; a bully.

BLU'STROUS, a. applied to the wind, making a great noise from its violence. Applied to persons making a noise, and assuming the airs of those who are of some importance.

B MI, s. a note in music.

BO, interj. a word used to excite terror; according to Sir William Temble, from Bo, an old northern captain, whose very looks terrified his enemies.

BOA, s a genus of serpents, of which the boa constrictor is the most enormous. It is a native of America, and lays in ambush on the tops of trees, from which it darts down on any animal which passes underneath, and first crushes it to death by wrapping itself round it, and then devours it at its leisure. See Plate.

BOAR, s. formerly spelt bore; [bar, Sax.] the male hog.

BO'AR-SPEAR, s. a spear used in hunting wild boars.

BOARD, s. [brad, Sax.] a piece of timber sawn thin for the use of building; when thick it is called a plank. A table. A table round which a council or committee sits: hence the council board; the board of works. Figuratively, entertainment, diet, or food. The deck, or floor of a ship. Used with on, within the ship. Joined to without, as without board, out of the ship: with over, over the side of the ship, or out of the ship into the sea. "Throwed him over board." Slipt by the board, is to slip by the sides of a ship. To make a board, is to turn the ship to the windward. To make a good board, is used of a ship when advanced much to the windward at one tack.

To BOARD, v. a. to enter a ship by force; to attack or make the first attempt; from the French aborder quelqu'un. To cover with boards. To board it up to the wind, is to turn a ship to the windward.

To BOARD, v. n. [from bardd, Brit.] to live and diet at a house. Actively, to place a person as a boarder at a house.

BO'ARD-WAGES, s. money allowed servants to find themselves in victuals.

BO'ARDER, s. one who diets or eats at another's table, at a settled rate; a scholar that lives in the master's house, and eats at his table.

BO'ARDING-SCHOOL, s. a school where the scholars live with, and are found in victuals by, the master.

BO'ARISH, a. [boar and ish, Sax.] of the nature of, or like a boar. Figuratively, fierce, cruel, savage, furious, and void of every principle of humanity.

BO'ARISHNESS, s. the furious savage quality of a boar. Figuratively, want of delicacy, kindness, pity, and humanity.

To BOAST, v. a. [bost, Brit.] to display one's abilities in a proud, assuming, and vain manner; to magnify, exalt, or be proud of. Neuterly, to brag; to exalt one's self.

BOAST, s. the thing a person is proud of; the cause of a person's pride; a vain and conceited display.

BO'ASTER, s. one who makes a pompous display of his advantages, whether they consist in power, wealth, learning, virtue, or religion.

BO'ASTFUL, a. inclined or subject to brag; ostentatious.

BO'ASTINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to brag of, or display with vain conceit, and pompous expressions.

BOAT, s. [bat, Sax.] a small open vessel, commonly wrought or moved by oars, intended chiefly for rivers and lakes; when rowed by one man, called a sculler; when by two named oars, by the Londoners.

BO'ATMAN, or BO'ATSMAN, s. he that manages or works a boat.

BO'ATSWAIN, s. [boatswain, Sax.] an officer on board a ship, who has charge of all her rigging, takes care of the long boat and her furniture, steering her by himself; calls out the several gangs and their companies to their watches, and other offices, and punishes all offenders that are sentenced by the captain or a court-martial.

To BOB, v. a. [perhaps from bobo, Span.] to conquer or drub. To cheat, or deprive by fraud and cunning. These senses seem now obsolete. To catch eels in a peculiar manner.

To BOB, v. n. applied to any body, which being hung or suspended by a string, plays backwards and forwards; to play or swing against a thing. To give a person a hunch or push with the elbow, by way of signal, or to make him take notice of any particular.

BOB, s. a jewel or other ornament which hangs loose from the ear; the word or sentence repeated at the end of every verse or stanza of a song; a blow, hunch, or push with the elbow. Also a short peruke.

BO'BAC, s. in natural history, a species of marmot.

BO'BBIN, s. [bobine, Fr.] a small piece of wood, turned in the form of a cylinder, with a little border jutting out at each end, and bored through its length to screw a small iron spindle, and to wind thread, worsted, silk, &c. upon; the small reed put in the hollow of a shuttle, round which the thread or silk is wound to make the woof; a small neat turned stick, round which the thread is wound to make bone-lace with; likewise a round white tape, used by the ladies as a running string for their aprons, caps, &c.

BO'BCHERRY, s. a game among children, wherein a cherry is suspended by a string, which they strive to bite, or get into their mouths.

BO'BTAIL, s. a dog which has his tail cut off entirely, or very short; hence the adjective Bob tail'd.

BO'CASINE, s. a sort of linen cloth.

BO'CKELET, or BO'CKERET, s. a kind of long-winged hawk.

BO'CKING, a very large village in Essex, adjoining to Braintree, from which it is separated only by a small stream. It is 42 miles N. E. of London.

BO'CK-LAND, s. in the Saxon time was what we call freehold land, held by persons of rank by charter or deed in writing, by which name it was distinguished from Folk-land, or copy-hold land, held by the common people without writing.

To BODE, v. a. [bodian, Sax.] to convey the knowledge of some future event, applied to an omen; to portend, used both in a good and bad sense.

BO'DEMENT, s. a sign or signs foreshewing some future event, used both of good and bad events.

BO'DICE, s. stays, or a kind of waistcoat laced before, made of leather, and worn by country women next to their shifts.

BO'DILESS, a. [body and lease, Sax.] that has no body; incorporeal; immaterial.

BO'DILY, a. that consists of, or belongs to, matter; that belongs to the body. Real, opposed to chimerical.

BO'DILY, ad. in such a manner as to be united to the body, or matter; corporeally.

BO'DKIN, s. [bodkin, Brit.] an instrument with a small blade, and sharp point, to make holes with; an instrument formed like a needle with a long eye, used by females to run a ribbon or string in an apron or other parts of their dress, and formerly used in confining and tying up their hair.

BO'DMIN, a town of Cornwall, with a market on Saturday; seated in a bottom between two high hills, which renders the air very unwholesome. It chiefly consists of one street, and the many decayed houses shew it has been a place of greater note; is a mayor-town, and sends two members to parliament, and formerly had the privilege of the coinage of tin. It is 32 miles N. E. of Falmouth, and 331 W. by S. of London.

BO'DY, s. [bodig, Sax.] in physics, a solid, extended, palpable substance, of itself merely passive, and indifferent either to motion or rest, but capable of any sort of motion, or any kind of forms; composed of particles infinitely hard, so as never to wear or break into pieces. In anatomy, that part of an animal composed of bones, muscles, nerves, canals, and juices. The real existence of a thing, or its completion, in opposition to an image, shadow, representation, or type. A collection of persons united by some common tie, or charter. Applied to dress, that part which covers the body. The materials which compose a stuff or other manufacture. Applied to liquors, strength. Substance. The main or chief part of a thing. A perfect system, or that which contains all the branches of a science; as, "A body of divinity." "A body of laws."

To BO'DY, v. a. to produce; to bring into being.

BO'DY-CLOTHES, s. the clothes which cover a horse's body, when dieted, &c.

BOG, s. [from bog, soft, Irish] a moist rotten spot of earth, which sinks and gives way to the weight of the body, formed of grass or plants putrified by some spring; a marsh or morass.

To BO'GGLE, v. n. [from bogil, a spectre, bugbear, or phantom, Belg.] to start, run, or fly back at the sight of a terrifying object. Used with the particle at, to hesitate; to doubt. To dissemble; to be guilty of prevarication; or to play fast and loose; used with the particle with.

BO'GGLER, s. a person full of doubts: a fearful or timorous person.

BO'GGY, a. abounding in bogs; partaking of the nature or quality of a bog.

BO'GHOUSE, s. a house of office.

BO'GMOSS, s. a sort of moss generally found in bogs. The botanical generic name is sphagnum.

BO'G-TROTTER, s. one who lives in a boggy country.

BOHE'A, s. [Chin.] one of the coarsest teas which comes from China, and is the second gathering; for all teas grow on the same plant, and differ only according to the season of gathering, and the method of drying. After it is gathered, it is dried in pans over a fire, and rolled up in the form we have it, by a person employed for that purpose; the juice or oil of the plant, which then moistens the hands, being of so corroding a nature, that it often eats into the flesh, and produces the same effect as a caustic. Bohea tea is very serviceable, and where it agrees with a person, excels all other vegetables for preventing sleepiness or dulness, for taking off weariness or fatigue; for raising the spirits; corroborating the memory, and other faculties which depend on a true temperature of the brain, if used chiefly in an afternoon, drank moderately, and not too hot, as is the general custom.

BOHE'MIA, a kingdom of Europe, bounded on the N. by Misnia and Lusace, on the E. by Silesia and Moravia, on the S. by Austria, and on the W. by Bavaria. It is about 200 miles in length, and 150 in breadth, and is very fertile in corn, saffron, hops, and pastures. In the mountains there are mines of gold and silver, and in some places they find diamonds, granates, copper, and lead. The roman catholic religion is the principal, though there are many protestants. The chief rivers are only the Muldau, the Elbe, and the Oder. Their language is the Sclavonian, with a mixture of the German. The capital town, or city, is Prague. It is subject to the house of Austria.

BOHEMIAN BRETHREN, the ancient protestants of Bohemia, including the Hussites, Taborites, &c.

To BOIL, v. n. [bouillir, Fr.] to be violently agitated with heat; to have its particles set into a violent motion by fire, and so to be able to scald any thing immersed into it, applied to water. Figuratively, to be hot; to move with a violent motion, like that of boiling water; to be placed in boiling water. To boil over, applied to water or other fluids, to have its contents so rarefied by heat, as to take up a larger dimension than before, and to run over the sides of a vessel. Actively, to heat, by putting into boiling water; to seethe; to dress victuals by boiling.

BOIL, s. a species of abscess, properly spelt bile, which see.

BOI'LER, s. one who boils any thing; a vessel in which a thing is boiled.

BOI'LING, s. in physics, the particles of fuel passing the pores of the vessel, mix with the liquid, and meeting with a resistance there sufficient to destroy their motion, they communicate it to the water; hence arises a small intestine motion in the particles of that fluid; but the first cause still continuing, that motion is increased till the agitation of the water becomes sensible; but now the particles of fire, continually striking on those at the lowest surface of water, will impel them, both by its impulse and by their own rarefaction, upwards, during which the particles at the upper surface must, by their own specific gravity, be descending towards the bottom; which will easily account for the surface of water being sooner hot than at the bottom, and a person's being able to move a vessel of boiling water by putting his hand on the bottom, without receiving any hurt. The fire thus diminishing the specific gravity of water, so as to make it mount not only in water, but likewise air, we hence are enabled to account for the steam or smoke. The particles of air dilated and expanded thus by heat, moving upwards, will meet and coalesce in their ascent, by which means great quantities of water will rise and fall alternately, or, in other words, the water will boil; but the heat continuing, and the rarefaction increasing, the water will now be too much for the vessel to contain, and will consequently swell over its sides, which the vulgar call boiling over. It must however be added, that when water boils, it cannot be rendered hotter by any degree of fire whatever.

BOI'OBI, s. in natural history, a South American serpent, which is very poisonous, but does not bite unless when attacked.

BOI'SELE DUC, a very strong city in Dutch Brabant. It is seated among morasses, between the rivers Dommel and Aa, 22 miles E. N. E. of Breda, 45 N. E. of Antwerp, and 45 S. S. E. of Amsterdam.

BOI'STEROUS, a. violent, furious, vehement, or stormy. Roaring, applied to the wind. Figuratively, furious, warm, hot, outrageous. Applied to persons, violent.

BOI'STEROUSLY, ad. in a violent manner; furiously.

BOI'STEROUSNESS, that state or quality of being furious, tumultuous, turbulent, and stormy.

BO'KHARA, the capital of Great Bokharia, Bocharia, or Bucharia, which is a well cultivated country of W. Tartary, the ancient Sogdiana, having little Bucharia on the E. Hindostan and Persia on the S. and a part of Persia and the Caspian Sea on the W. It is a large populous place, seated on a rising ground; the houses are low, and mostly built of mud, but the the caravansaras and mosques, which are numerous, are of stone. Great numbers of Jews and Arabians frequent this place; but the khan seizes on their possessions at his pleasure. It is 100 miles W. by S. of Samarcand. Lat. 39. 15. E. Little Bucharia is an adjoining country, which has Yarkian for its capital.

BOLD, a. [bold, Sax.] not hindered from an undertaking, either by the threats of others, or the difficulties attending it; daring, brave, courageous, fearless. Impudent, rude, applied to the behaviour. Licentious, or too free, applied to words. Level, smooth, even, applied by sailors to situation. To make bold, to take the liberty or freedom.

To BO'LDEN, v. a. to grow bold, to make bold; to dispel a person's fears or doubts.

BO'LDFACED, a. impudent; not shewing any signs of shame by the countenance.

BO'LDLY, ad. confidently; with assurance; impudently.

BO'LDNESS, s. courage, intrepidity, undauntedness. The power to speak or do what we intend before others without fear or disorder. In a bad sense, a resolution to do or speak any thing before others, though conscious of its being wrong or indecent.

BOLE, s. [bolus, Lat.] a certain particular sort of earth, used by painters, moderately coherent, ponderous, soft, and not stiff or viscid, but in some degree ductile while moist; not composed of fine particles, smooth to the touch, friable, easily diffused in water, and freely subsiding from it. There are several sorts of Boles, as the white, yellow, red, brown, and gray; all which are prescribed in some case or other, in various distempers. Also, the body, or trunk of a tree. Likewise a measure of corn, containing six bushels.

BO'LINGBROKE, or BULLINGBROKE, a town in Lincolnshire, with a market on Tuesday. It is seated at the spring-head of a river, which falls into the Witham on a low ground, and is a very ancient town, with the title of an earldom, though now but a mean place. King Henry IV. was born here. It is 20 miles E. of Lincoln, and 128 N. by E. of London.

BO'LIS, s. [Lat.] in natural history, a great fiery ball, swiftly hurried through the air, generally drawing a tail after it.

BOLL, s. in botany, a round stalk or stem; as a boll of flax.

To BOLL, v. n. to rise in a stalk; "The flax was bolled," Exod. ix. 31.

BOLO'GNA, an ancient, large, rich, and very handsome town of Italy, in the ci devant territory of the church, and capital of the Bolognese; an archbishop's see, and an university. It contains about 80,000 inhabitants, and 169 churches. It is a place of great trade, which is in some measure owing to a canal that runs from this city into the river Po. The Reno, which runs near Bologna, turns 400 mills, which are employed in the silk works; besides, they deal in wax, soap, hams, sausages, and even lap-dogs, which are greatly esteemed. It is seated at the foot of the Modena, 25 miles S. W. of Ferrara, 48 N. of Florence, and 175 N. W. of Rome. Lon. 14. 30. E. lat. 44. 30. N.

BOLOGNE'SE, a small province of Italy, in the ci devant territory of the church, bounded on the N. by the Ferrarese, on the W. by Modena, on the S. by Tuscany, and on the E. by Romania. It is watered by a great number of small rivers, which render the soil the most fertile of any in Italy. It produces abundance of all sorts of grain and fruits, particularly Muscadine grapes, which are in high esteem. There are also mines of alum and iron; and they fabricate large quantities of linen, silk stockings, and cloth.

BOL'SOVER, a town of Derbyshire, seated on an eminence, and noted only for the manufacture of tobacco-pipes. Market on Friday.

BO'LSTER, s. [bolstre, Sax.] a long ticking sack filled with feathers, flocks, &c. made use of to support or raise a person's head in bed. Applied to dress, a pad made use of to hide some deformity. In surgery, a compress, or piece of linen doubled, laid, or bound upon a wound.

To BOLSTER, v. a. to support, or raise a person's head with a bolster. In surgery, to force or keep the lips of a wound close by means of a compress. Figuratively, to support or maintain.

BOLT, s. [boult, Belg.] a dart shot from a cross-bow; lightning; a thunder-bolt; a short piece of iron made to fasten doors; an iron pin made to secure the shutters of windows, and to fasten the planks of ships; a spot; obstacle, impediment. Bolt upright means upright as an arrow.

To BOLT, v. a. to fasten with a bolt; to fling out; to speak without hesitation. Figuratively, to fasten; to separate the fine from the coarse parts of a thing with a sieve, [from blutir, Fr.] To separate truth from falsehood by rigorous examination. Neuterly, to spring out with suddenness; to start out with the quickness of an arrow; to come in a hurry, or without due consideration. Used with the word out.

BO'LTER, s. a sieve to separate finer from coarser parts, particularly applied to that made use of to separate flour from bran.

BO'LTHEAD, s. in chemistry, a long straight-necked glass vessel used in distillations. See MATRASS.

BO'LTING-HOUSE, s. a place where meal is sifted, or separated from the bran.

BO'LTON, or BOLTON-LE-MOOR, a town of Lancashire, noted for its manufacture of fustians and counterpanes, dimities and muslins. Here are navigable canals, which conduct from this town to Manchester and Wigan. It stands amidst dreary moors, 11 miles N. W. of Manchester, and 199 N. N. W. of London. Market on Monday.

BOLT-ROPE, s. the rope on which the sail of a ship is fastened.

BOLTSPRIT, s. See BOWSPRIT.

BO'LUS, s. [Lat.] in pharmacy, a medicine made into a soft mass, about the size of a nutmeg, to be taken at once.

BOMB, s. [bombus, Lat.] formerly a loud noise. A hollow iron ball, or shell, filled with gunpowder, and furnished with a vent for a fusee, or wooden tube filled with combustible matter to be thrown out from a mortar, which had its name from the noise it makes. The fusee, being set on fire, burns slowly till it reaches the gunpowder, which goes off at once, bursting the shell to pieces with incredible violence: whence the use of bombs in besieging towns. The largest are about eighteen inches in diameter. By whom they were invented is not known, and the time is uncertain; some fixing it to 1588, and others to 1495.

To BOMB, v. a. to attack with, or shoot bombs against.

BO'MBARD, s. [bombardus, Lat.] a piece of artillery used before the invention of cannon, exceeding short and thick. This word is now obsolete.

To BOMBA'RD, v. a. to fling bombs into a town; to attack with bombs.

BOMBARDI'ER, s. the engineer who fires or directs the throwing of bombs out of the mortars.

BOMBA'RDMENT, s. an attack made upon a city, &c. by throwing bombs into it.

BOMBASIN, (bombazēen) s. [bombasin, Fr. from bombycinus, silken, Lat.] a slight silken manufacture used for mourning.

BOMBA'ST, s. in literature, high, pompous, swelling expressions, above the subject to which they are applied.

BOMBA'ST, a. pompous; of big sound.

BOMBA'Y, an island of Hindoostan, on the W. coast of the Deccan, 7 miles in length, and about 21 in circumference. The ground is barren, and good water scarce. It was formerly accounted very unhealthy; but by draining the swamps and bogs, the air is improved. It has a capacious harbour, or bay, reckoned the finest haven in the Indies, where whole fleets find shelter and security in all seasons. Besides the town of Bombay, which is about a mile in length, (with mean houses, a few excepted,) there are other smaller ones upon this island. The inhabitants are of several nations, and very numerous; they have abundance of cocoa-nuts, but scarcely any corn or cattle. It is one of the three presidencies of the English East India Company, by which their oriental territories are governed, and it is 150 miles S. of Surat. Lat. 18° 55′ 42″ N. lon. 72° 54 24″ E. from Greenwich.

BO'MB-CHEST, s. a chest filled with gunpowder and bombs, and placed under ground in order to blow it up, together with those that are upon it.

BO'MB-KETCH, or BOMB-VESSEL, s. a small vessel, strongly built, and strengthened with large beams, to bear the shock of a mortar at sea, when bombs are to be thrown from it into a town.

BO'NA FI'DE, s. [Lat.] among lawyers, signifies that such a thing was really done without fraud or deceit.

BO'NA RO'BA, s. a woman of the town; a prostitute.

BONA'SUS, s. [Lat.] in natural history, a kind of buffalo, or wild bull.

BONCHRE'TIEN, s. [Fr.] a pear, so called perhaps from the name of some gardener.

BOND, s. [bond, Sax.] any thing which confines a person's arms so, that he has not the free use of them; cords or chains; that which holds the parts of a thing together; union, joining, or connection. Figuratively, captivity, imprisonment, loss of liberty; obligation. A tie, applied to alliance. In law, a deed by which a person obliges himself to perform certain acts, under a penalty specified therein.

BOND, a. [gebonden, Sax.] not free; in a state of slavery.

BO'NDAGE, s. slavery; a state wherein a person is deprived of liberty.

BO'NDMAID, s. a woman, or female slave.

BO'NDMAN, s. a man slave.

BO'NDSERVANT, s. a person who is under bond to serve his master, and is not at liberty to quit him.

BO'NDSERVICE, s. the condition of a slave; slavery.

BO'NDSLAVE, s. a person in inextricable slavery

BO'NDSMAN, s. a slave; a person who has given his bond as a security for another.

BO'NDSWOMAN, s. a woman slave; or one who has given her bond for security.

BONE, s. [ban, Sax.] in anatomy, a white, hard, brittle, insensible substance, supporting and strengthening the body like beams and pillars in a building; defending some of the more essential parts, as the brain; giving shape to the human fabric, and assisting it in its motion. The bones consist of camellæ (little plates) running lengthwise, and arched over at their ends. The number of bones in the human fabric are reckoned to be 245, exclusive of the ossa sessamoidea, which amount to 48 more. To make no bones, is to make no scruple, alluding to the readiness with which a dog devours a bone. To give a person a bone to pick, a low phrase for laying an obstacle in a person's way; or suggesting something which may perplex him. A bone of contention, a cause of strife. For an enumeration of the principal bones, see the article Skeleton, and the plate annexed.

To BONE, v. a. to take the bones out of the flesh.

BO'NELACE, s. a cheap sort of flaxen lace, wove by bobbins made out of bones.

BO'NELESS, a. that has no bones. Applied to the gums, without teeth.

To BO'NESET, v. n. in surgery, to set a broken bone in such a position, that the two ends may meet and grow together; to reduce a dislocated bone into its proper place.

BO'NESETTER, s. one who applies himself peculiarly to set broken or dislocated bones.

BO'NFIRE, s. [bon, Fr. and fire] a public fire, made by the populace on rejoicing days.

BO'NGRACE, s. [bonne grace, Fr.] a forehead-cloth, generally worn by infants.

BONITO, s. a large and very beautiful sea-fish, of the tunny kind, very common in the Indian seas.

BO'NN, a city of Cologne, situated on the W. side of the Rhine. The streets are wide and beautiful, and the fortifications are in good repair. It is 14 miles SSE. of Cologne.

BO'NNET, s. [Fr.] a covering for the head; a cap; or outward covering made of silk, worn instead of a hat by the ladies. In fortification, a small work, or little ravelin, without a ditch, having a parapet of earth from 3 to 12 feet high, and from 30 to 36 feet thick. Bonnet à prêtre, or a priest's cap, an out-work with three salient angles, and two inwards. Bonnets, among sailors, are small sails set on the courses, or fastened to the bottom of the mizzen, main-sail, or fore-sail of a ship, when they are too narrow to clothe the mast, or in order to make more way in light winds or calm weather.

BO'NNILY, ad. in a gay manner; handsomely.

BO'NNINESS, s. the quality of appearing gay, handsome, or plump.

BO'NNY, s. in mineralogy, a name given by miners to a bed of ore which is unconnected with any vein.

BO'NNY, a. [from bon, Fr.] gay, cheerful, handsome, young.

BO'NNY-CLABBER, s. an Irish word for sour buttermilk.

BONO'NIAN STONE, a grey, soft, glossy, fibrous, sulphureous stone, about the bigness of a large walnut, found in the neighbourhood of Bologna, containing a kind of spar, and making when duly prepared a species of phosphorus.

BO'NUM-MAGNUM, s. [Lat.] in gardening, a species of plum.

BO'NY, a. having the properties, or consisting of bone; abounding in bones.

BO'NZES, s. Indian priests.

BOOBY, s. in natural history, the name of a water-fowl, common in the West Indies, which is robbed of its prey by the albatrosse. A dull, heavy, stupid or contemptible fellow.

BOOK, s. [boc, Sax.] a composition of some person, designed to communicate something he has discovered or collected to the public, and of a length sufficient to make a volume; a collection of papers sewed or bound, intended to be written on; the division of an author's subject. The most ancient materials for books appear to have been the leaves of the palm-tree, and the papyrus, then leather, and afterwards parchment. They anciently consisted of rolls, the several sheets of which they were composed being joined together at the ends. Used with the particle in, and personal pronouns his or my, to be much esteemed or valued by a person. "I was so much in his books, that, &c." Addison. Without book, applied to the public delivery of a preacher, by the mere strength of memory.

To BOOK, v. a. to enter or write any thing in a book.

BOOKBINDER, s. one who sews the sheets together, and fixes them to a cover of boards, or leather, &c.

BOOKFUL, a. full of opinions gleaned from books, without having either digested what he has read, or been able to produce any thing of his own.

BOOKISH, a. very fond of books, study, or reading; pedantic. Sometimes used in a bad sense, and as a term of contempt.

BOOKISHNESS, s. a great fondness for books; too intense an application to study. Used sometimes as a reproach, or term of contempt.

BOOK-KEEPER, s. a clerk employed in a compting-house to register the transactions daily carried on, and able to methodize them so, that his patron may at any time know the true state of his affairs.

BOOK-KEEPING, s. the art of keeping accounts, or registering a person's transactions.

BOOKLEARNED, a. conversant in books, but not in men; applied also to one that reads much, but is a person of no parts or invention.

BOOKLEARNING, s. improvement or learning to be acquired from books, opposed to that which may be obtained by the exercise of a man's own faculties.

BOOKSELLER, s. he whose profession it is to sell books.

BOOKWORM, s. in natural history, a mite or worm which preys upon books. Figuratively, a person immoderately fond of reading; one who applies himself too intensely to study.

BOOM, s. [beam, Sax.] among mariners, a long pole used to spread out the clue of the studding-sail, main sail, or fore sail; a pole, with bushes, or baskets, set as a mark to shew the sailors how to steer in a channel, when the country is overflown; a cable or cables stretched across the mouth of a river or harbour, with yards, topmasts, battlings, or spars of wood, lashed to it, and girded with iron hoops, rivetted together, and nailed to the spars to prevent an enemy's entering.

BOON, s. [bene, Sax.] a gift, or present, obtained by having requested or sued for it.

BOON, a. [bon, Fr.] merry; gay. Generally used with the word companion.

BOOR, a. [beer, Belg.] a rude unpolished countryman; a clown.

BOORISH, a. without any breeding or politeness; rude, clownish.

BOORISHLY, ad. in an unpolite, rude, and clownish manner.

BOORISHNESS, s. clownishness, rudeness of behaviour.

BOOSE, s. [bosig, Sax.] a stall for a cow or an ox.

To BOOT, v. a. to be of service or advantage; to profit, to enrich, serve, or accumulate.

BOOT, s. [bote, Sax.] gain, profit, or advantage. To boot, is an adverbial expression, implying besides; over and above.

BOOT, s. [botte, Fr.] a leather covering worn over the legs and feet, and used by those who ride on horseback; a leather receptacle under a coach-box, used for carrying boxes or other parcels. A kind of torture formerly used in Scotland.

To BOOT, v. a. to put on boots.

BOOTAN, a country of India, situated between Bengal and Thibet, and surrounded on all sides by very high mountains. It is a feudatory, or dependency of Thibet. Its capital is Tassasudon.

BOOTCATCHER, s. the person who pulls off boots at an inn.

BOOTED, part. with boots on the legs; in boots.

BOOTES, (boötes) s. [Lat.] in astronomy, the name of a northern constellation of fixed stars, consisting of 55, according to Flamstead; one of which, called Arcturus, is of the first magnitude.

BOOTH, s. [bwth, Brit.] a house built of boards, or boughs, to be used for a short time.

BOOT-HOSE, s. a stocking worn instead of boots; spatterdashes; or Welsh boots.

BOOTLESS, a. that will not produce any advantage or profit; unavailing; unsuccessful.

BOOT-TREE, s. an instrument consisting of two parts, when joined in the shape of a leg, with a groove cut in the middle, to receive a quoin or wedge, which is driven in by main force, in order to stretch or widen a boot.

BOOTY, s. [buyt, Belg.] that which is gained from an enemy in war; plunder; pillage; spoil; things acquired by robbery. To play booty, is to play or act unfairly.

BOPEEP, s. the act of thrusting the head in sight of a person, and drawing it back again immediately; sometimes used as a token of fear, and at others a sign of pleasantry.

BORABLE, a. that may be bored.

BORACHIO, s. [borracho, Span.] a drunkard.

BORACIC, a. in chemistry, belonging to borax.

BORAGE, s. a plant, with rough egg-shaped leaves, and blue blossoms, found on walls, and amongst rubbish, flowering in the summer months. The leaves of this plant are accounted cordial, and good for removing faintness; and therefore the tops are frequently put into wine and cool tankards.

BORAMEZ, s. the Scythian lamb, generally known by the name of Agnus Scythicus.

BORATES, s. in chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with the acid of borax.

BORAX, s. [Lat.] a mineral salt, of great use in soldering and casting gold and other metals. It is used by dyers, and gives a gloss to silks. It is one of the ingredients in Glauber's salts. It is generally brought from the East Indies in a state of impurity, when it is called Tincal. It has been found in a mountain of gypsum in Lunenburg in Germany, as also at the bottom of poles of stagnant water, in the kingdom of Thibet.

BORDEL, or BORDELLO, s. [bordeel, Teut.] a house of bad fame; or where women of the town are entertained.

BORDER, s. [bord, Teut.] the extremities or edge of any thing; the extremities or confines of a country; the outer and extreme parts of a garment or head-dress; a narrow slip of flowers at the extremity of a flower-bed, &c. in a garden.

To BORDER, v. n. to live near to the extremities or confines of a country; to be situated near. Figuratively, to approach. Used actively, to sew a narrow ornament at the extremities of a thing; to lie upon or near.

BORDERER, s. one who dwells near a place, or on the confines and extremity of a country.

BORDURE, s. in heraldry, a cutting off from within the escutcheon all round it about one-fifth of the field, serving as a difference in a coat of arms, to distinguish families of the same name, or persons bearing the same coat. If the line constituting the bordure be straight, and the bordure be plain, then in blazoning you must only name the colour of the bordure.

To BORE, v. a. [borian, Sax.] to wear into a hole; to make a hole by any sharp pointed instrument; to push forwards with violence; to make one's way, alluding to the strength required to make a hole with. The boring of cannon has been introduced of late years instead of casting them hollow, by means of a mould. The machine for this purpose, as well as for smoothing the inner surface, which is sometimes done after they have been cast hollow, is composed of a rectangular frame of timber, A B C D (see plate) fixed upon a solid plank E E, which is raised eight or ten feet above the floor of the workshop. This frame contains two upright beams F f, F f, placed level and exactly parallel to each other, and strongly fixed to the pieces of wood G, G, with their ends resting on the cross bars that connect the sides of the frame. Their length should be about three times that of the cannon to be bored. In the inner sides of these beams are two grooves, to which are applied two bars of wood 22, 22, which are connected together by the transverse pieces 33, 33, 33, between which the cannon H is fastened, so that the whole inclosed frame 22, 22, with the pieces of ordnances fixed to it, may slide on the grooves of the beams F f, F f, being raised or lowered by means of he ropes and pullies K k, K k, fixed above to the upper part of the frame, and below to the breech of the cannon. The rope belonging to each block of pulleys coils round an axis Y Y, bearing at each end the cogged wheels M, M. Each of these wheels lays hold of a trundle N, N, containing the same number of rounds; the trundles are fixed on a common axis Z Z, the ends of which pass beyond the sides of the frame, and bear spoked wheels o P, o P, by means of which the workmen turn the whole machine; and thus elevate or depress the cannon with the frame to which it is annexed at pleasure. On the floor of the workshop, directly under the frame F f, F f, a block of stone is fastened in the ground; and this supports a plate of iron or copper, placed exactly level, and under a line, supposed to be parallel to the beams F f, F f, dividing the space between them on either side into equal parts, and coinciding with the true axis of the cannon. The instrument for boring admits a strong bar of iron, which is round at the part which enters the cannon and terminates at its lower part in a pivot, which rests on the plate R. About three or four feet above the plate, the trunk of the borer is square, and bears upon it a strong box of wood or iron S, through which levers, as T S, pass, that are turned by men or horses. The box or trough v, serves to receive the pieces of metal that are taken off in the operation. By this motion, and the pressure of the cannon on the point of the borer, it is gradually bored, till the cannon sinks, by the contrivance already described, to a certain mark on the borer, which answers to the required depth of the bore. It is then elevated, till the borer may be taken out. When the borer is removed, an instrument formed for smoothing the inner surface of the cannon, is substituted in its room.

BORE, s. the hole made by boring; the instrument used in boring a hole; the dimensions of a hole or cavity, applied peculiarly to the mouth of a cannon, or other piece of artillery.

BORE, the preter. of BEAR.

BO'REAL, a. [borealis, Lat.] northern.

BO'REAS, s. [Lat.] the north wind.

BO'RER, s. an instrument made use of to bore holes with; the person who bores holes.

To be BORN, v. n. pass. [from bear,] to come into the world; used with the particles to, for, and of. "He was born to empire." PROV. He that is born to be hanged shall never be drowned.—He that was born under a three-halfpenny planet shall never be worth two-pence.

BORNE, part. pass. of BEAR.

BO'RNEO, an island of Asia, in the East-Indies. It was discovered by the Portuguese in 1521; is about 800 leagues in circumference, and almost of a round form. The inland country is very mountainous; but towards the sea, low and marshy, occasioned by the great rains that fall eight months in the year. It produces aromatic herbs, oranges, lemons, mangoes, pines, palms, &c. in great abundance, excellent mastic, and other gums, wax, rice, cassia, coffee, honey, cotton, camphire, frankincense, musk, aloes, agaric, brasil-wood, sapan, pepper, cinnamon, and other spices; diamonds and gold dust are found in their rivers and sands. Their animals are elephants, buffaloes, oxen, horses, tigers, leopards, bears, monkeys, deer, wild boars, goats, parrots, parroquets, together with a great variety of other beautiful birds; besides several animals unknown to the Europeans. Pepper is peculiar to the countries about Bangaar; and to the westward they have small diamonds of a yellow water. Sambass, another part of this island, produces gold, pearls, and beeswax, which last is used instead of money. The people, in general, are very swarthy, but not quite black, and they go almost naked. There are mahometans on the sea-coast; but all the rest are Gentoos or Pagans. The East-India company have had factories here; but differences arising between them and the natives, they have been all driven away, or murdered; however, the English have still a liberty of trading to the island. The sea-coast is usually overflowed half of the year; and when the waters go off, the earth is covered with ooze and mud; for which reason some of the houses are built on floats, and others on high pillars, or posts. The capital town is of the same name, and large and populous, with a good harbour, and seated on the north side of the island 42 miles S. W. of Bacasa. Lon. 111. 27. E. lat. 4. 55. N

BO'RNHOLM, an island of Denmark, in the Baltic, about 20 miles in circumference, nearly surrounded with rocks. The soil is stony, but fertile. Lat. 55. 15. N. lon. 15. 0. E.

BO'RNOU, an extensive country in the interior parts of Africa, lying to the S. E. of Fezzan and Berdoa; between 16 and 20 degrees of N. lat. having the desart of Bilma on the N. Nubia on the E. and Begarmee on the S. Two seasons divide their year. During our summer months they have intense heat, violent winds, deluges of rain, and dreadful tempests of thunder and lightning; but during the winter of Europe, the ardent heat subsides, the air becomes soft, and mild, and the weather serene. They have a great variety of animal and vegetable productions. They cultivate the ground with hoes, the plough being unknown. The country is said to abound in flocks, millet, and cotton, which last they manufacture and wear. Their religious profession is Mahometanism; their government a sort of elective monarchy. In their manners the people are courteous and humane. Bornou, the capital of this empire, is seated in a flat country, on the banks of a small river. It is of greater extent than Tripoli; but the houses, though neat, are so irregularly placed, that they can hardly be said to form streets. Their mosques are constructed of brick and earth, and they have schools in which the Koran is taught, as in the principal towns of Barbary. It is 650 miles S. E. of Mourzouk. Lat. 19. 40. N. lon. 25. 30. E.

BO'ROUGH, (burra) s. [borhoe, Sax.] a town with a corporation. The word originally signified a company, consisting of ten families, which were bound together as each other's pledge. Afterwards borough came to signify a town, having a wall or some kind of defence about it. Borough is a place of safety and privilege; and some are called free boroughs, and the tradesmen in them free burgesses, from a freedom they had granted them originally, to buy and sell without interruption, and exempt from toll. Borough is now particularly appropriated to such towns or villages as send burgesses or representatives to parliament, whether they be incorporated or not. The whole number of boroughs amount to 149. Royal boroughs are corporations in Scotland, made for the advantage of trade, having commissioners to represent them in parliament. Headborough, the president or chairman of a hundred, chosen to speak, or transact affairs in their name. In parishes, a subordinate constable.

BO'ROUGHBRIDGE, a town in the W. riding of Yorkshire, with a small manufacture of hardware. It is situated on the river Ure (over which there is a fine bridge of stone, with very wide high arches, and high stone causeys at each end, to keep out the water) 17 miles N. W. of York, and 218 N. by W. of London. Market on Saturday.

BO'ROUGH-ENGLISH, s. a customary descent of lands or tenements, in certain places, by which they descend to the youngest instead of the eldest son; or, if the owner have no issue, to the younger instead of the elder brother. This custom is not frustrated by the devise of a will, or a feoffment at common law to the contrary. The reason of this custom according to Littleton, is, because the youngest is presumed in law, to be the least able to provide for himself. It obtains only in some ancient boroughs, and copyhold manors.

BO'RRELISTS, a sect in Holland, who allow no use of sacraments, public prayers, or external worship, nor of any human explication of scripture, but profess to adhere to the faith and manners of the New Testament times in all their simplicity.

BO'RRODALE, in the S. E. part of Cumberland, bordering on Westmoreland, a romantic valley among Derwentwater fells. These fells or hills are some of the loftiest in England; and it is in one of them the black lead, or wad, is found, wherewith almost all the world is supplied: the mines are opened only once in seven years, and when a sufficient quantity of this valuable and singular mineral is taken out, they are carefully closed again. In travelling among these mountains, the idea that presents itself to the astonished spectator, is that of the earth having been in an uproar, like the ocean in a storm; the hills appear like waves rising one behind another, and were it not for the abrupt and sudden scarps, the immense masses of rugged rocks that give the idea of fixedness and stability, the bewildered fancy might be so lost as to imagine they were in a state of undulation, and ready to mingle with each other. The beautiful Vale of Borrodale is watered by the clearest brooks, which, precipitated from the hills, and forming many beautiful waterfalls, meet together in the dale, and forming one large stream, pass out of the dale under the name of Borrodale Beck, when its waters spread out into an extensive lake, containing several beautiful islands. This lake is called Derwent-water, or Keswick Lake. Borrodale is 4 miles from Keswick; in passing from which, the traveller has the lake on his right hand, and stupendous rocky precipices on his left; huge stones, or rugged masses of rock, which have tumbled from above, lie scattered along his way. As he approaches the dale, he sees the ledges of the rocks covered with herbage, shrubs, and trees; villages and farms arise upon his view, the larger cattle are seen feeding in the lower grounds, and the sheep in large flocks upon the mountains.

To BO'RROW, (bórro) v. a. [borgian, Sax.] the taking money or other things of another, on condition of returning it again. Figuratively, to take something which belongs to another; to assume a property which belongs to something else. PROV. He that goes a borrowing goes a sorrowing.

BO'RROWER, s. a person who takes money, &c. of another, on condition of returning it again; he that uses what is another's as if it were his own. Figuratively, he that adopts the sentiments of another, without acknowledging that they are so, applied to writings.

BO'SBOCK, s. in natural history, a kind of antelope, found in the interior of Africa.

BO'SCAGE, s. [boscage, Fr.] a place set with trees; a grove or thicket; woods or woodland. In painting, a picture or landscape, representing woods.

BO'SKY, a. [bosque, Fr.] abounding with wood; woody.

BO'SOM, (bóozom) s. [bosme, bosom, Sax.] the breast; that part of the body containing the heart. Figuratively, the embrace of the arms holding any thing to the breast; the middle or innermost part of any inclosure. In composition, it implies favourite; any thing near or dear to a person, or that of which he is peculiarly fond; thus bosom-interest, bosom-friend bosom-secret.

To BO'SOM, (bóozom) v. a. to inclose in the bosom. Figuratively, to keep secret; to surround.

BO'SON, s. a corruption of BOATSWAIN, which see.

BO'SPHORUS, s. [from bous, an ox, and poros, a passage, Gr.] in geography, a narrow streight or arm of the sea, which it might be supposed an ox could swim over; at present confined to that of Thrace, called the straits of Constantinople; and the cimmerian, or scythian bosphorus, called the straits of Kapha, or Kiderleri.

BO'SQUETS, s. [boschetto, Ital.] in gardening, small groves, or compartments, formed of trees, shrubs, or tall-growing plants, planted in quarters, either disposed in regular rows, or in a wild and accidental manner.

BOSS, s. [bosse, Fr.] a stud or ornament, raised above the rest of the work; a shining prominence; the prominent part, or that which sticks out of the middle of a thing, or shield.

BO'SSAGE, s. in architecture, a projecting stone laid rough in a building, to be afterwards carved into mouldings, arms, &c.

BO'SSINEY, or BOSS-CASTLE, a town in Cornwall, whose market is discontinued. It sends two members to parliament. It is seated on the sea-coast, 17 miles N. W. of Launceston, and 233 W. by S. of London.

BO'STON, a town of Lincolnshire, with two markets, on Wednesday and Saturday. It is commodiously seated on both sides of the river Witham, over which it has a handsome, high, cast iron bridge; by means of which river, assisted by navigable canals, it carries on a considerable inland trade. It also trades with London and the Baltic. It is a large, handsome town, with a spacious market place; has also a high steeple, which some pretend is the best built structure in the world; and serves as a land mark for sailors. It has a fair Dec. 11, that holds nine days for cattle and merchandize, called a mart; an ancient name, only used for this town, Gainsborough in Lincolnshire, Lynn Regis in Norfolk, and for Beverley and Headon in Yorkshire. It is 37 miles S. E. of Lincoln, and 116 N. of London.

BO'STON, the capital of Massachusets Bay, in N. America, seated on a peninsula, at the bottom of a fine bay, containing many small islands and rocks. It lies in the form of a crescent about the harbour; and the country within, rising gradually, has a very fine and striking appearance, at entering. There is only one safe channel to the harbour, and that so narrow that two ships can scarcely sail abreast; but within the harbour there is room for 500 sail to anchor, where they are covered by the cannon of a regular and very strong fortress. At the bottom of the bay is a pier near 2000 feet in length, to which ships of the greatest burden may come close, and on the N. side are warehouses for the merchants. The streets are generally spacious and well built, particularly the principal one, extending from the pier to the town-house. On the W. side of the town is the Mall, a beautiful public walk. Besides the state-house and other public buildings, there are 16 churches of various denominations. It is 310 miles N. E. of Philadelphia. Lat. 42. 25. N. lon. 70. 33. W.

BO'SWORTH, or MARKET-BOSWORTH, a town in Leicestershire, remarkable for a battle fought near it, August 22, 1485, between Richard III. and the earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII. in which Richard was slain, and the earl of Richmond crowned in the field. It is seated on a high hill, 13 miles N. W. of Leicester, and 107 N. N. W. of London. Market on Wednesday.

BO'TANIC, or BO'TA'NICAL, a. [from botane, a herb or plant, Gr.] that relates to herbs; skilled in herbs.

BO'TANIST, s. one who is skilled in the nature of plants, and their culture; one who applies himself peculiarly to the study of vegetables.

BO'TANO'LOGY, s. [from botane, a plant, and logos, a discourse, Gr.] a discourse on plants.

BO'TANY, s. [botane, a herb, or plant, Gr.] the science of herbs and plants. This science was very little cultivated till Baulune arose in the 16th century, and both reduced it to method, and increased the number of its objects. It is, however, indebted for its present state of perfection, to the labours and abilities of the late Swedish botanist, Linnæus.

BOTANY BAY, a bay of New South Wales, on the E. coast of New Holland, so called by captain, then lieutenant, Cook, from the great quantity of herbs found on the shore, when discovered in 1770. It was originally fixed on for a colony of convicts from Great Britain; but, in the sequel, Port Jackson, 15 miles farther to the N. was preferred. Lat. 34. 6. S. lon. 151. 22. E.

BOTARGO, s. [botarga, Span.] a relishing sort of food, made of the roes of the mullet fish; much used on the coasts of the Mediterranean, as an incentive to drink.

BOTCH, s. [bozza, Ital.] a swelling which afterwards encrusts, discolours the skin, and causes a disagreeable idea. Figuratively, the part of any work clumsily or ill finished, so as to disgrace the rest; something added or joined to a thing in a clumsy manner

To BOTCH, v. a. [boetsen, Belg.] to mend or patch old clothes in a clumsy manner. Figuratively, to mend any thing in an awkward manner; to join things together which do not suit, or agree with one another. To mark with pustules, scabs, or blotches.

BOTCHER, s. one who mends, or sews patches on old clothes, in a clumsy manner; and is in the same respect to a tailor, as a cobler to a shoemaker. Figuratively, a person who performs any thing in a clumsy and bungling manner.

BOTCHY, a. marked with blotches, or running sores.

BOTH, a. [bam, batra, Sax.] when applied to two persons, or other things as concerned together, it unites them into one collective idea, which implies the two. When followed by and, it implies either, or one as well as the other, "Both morning and afternoon." Sidney.

BOTHNIA EAST, a province of Sweden, situated on the E. side of the gulf of Bothnia; about 100 leagues in length, and from 20 to 70 in breadth. Eighty thousand inhabitants, divided into 28 parishes, are spread over this large space. Their cattle are small; and bears are numerous.

BOTHNIA WEST, a province of Sweden, situated on the W. side of the gulf of Bothnia. Their principal articles of commerce are, the skins of foxes, ermines, bears, wolves, martens, &c BOTRYOID, a. [from botrus, a bunch of grapes, and eidos, appearance, Gr.] in shape like a bunch of grapes.

BOTS, s. has no singular; from [bitan, Sax.] a species of small worm breeding in the entrails of horses.

BOTTESDALE, a town in Suffolk, whose market is on Wednesday. Distant 89 miles from London.

BOTTLE, s. [bouteille, Fr.] a vessel with a narrow mouth to contain liquor. When made of leather, called a leathern bottle; when of glass, a glass bottle. Figuratively, a quart, bottles generally holding that quantity; a bundle of grass or hay, derived from the French botteau, a bundle. When compounded with other words, it signifies drinking; as, a bottle companion.

To BOTTLE, v. a. to put liquor in bottles. Used with the particle off, to draw out of another vessel into a bottle.

BOTTLEMOSS, s. the English generic name for all those mosses called by Linnæus splachnum.

BOTTLE-NOSED, a. having a large nose, very big towards the end.

BOTTLESCREW, s. a spiral wire, made use of to pull a cork out of a bottle.

BOTTOM, s. [botm, Sax.] the lowest part of a thing. Applied to a river, the bed of earth or gravel, over which the water glides; a valley, dale, or lower ground. Figuratively, foundation; hence, to the bottom, sometimes implies thoroughly. To be at the bottom, to be concerned in, to have a part or share. A ship or vessel; hence, to embark on the same bottom, is to venture in one bottom, to run a risque together in the same thing. The bottom of a lane is the lowest part. The bottom of beer, the dregs. Applied to thread, a small ball. From botcau, Fr. a heap or little bundle.

To BOTTOM, v. a. to build upon as a foundation, principle, or support; to wind thread into a ball. Used neuterly, to be built on; to be supported by.

BOTTOMED, a. having a bottom; usually compounded with some other word, as flat-bottomed boats.

BOTTOMLESS, a. without a bottom; prodigiously deep; that cannot be fathomed. Figuratively, boundless, insatiable.

BOTTOMRY, s. in trade, the borrowing money upon the keel or bottom of a ship, whereby, if the money be not repaid at the day appointed, the ship becomes the property of the creditor; likewise, the lending money, to be repaid at the return of the ship; in consideration of which, though the interest demanded be 20, 30, 40 per cent. and upwards, it is not esteemed usury; because if the ship perishes, the creditor loses his money.

BOUCHET, s. [Fr.] a sort of pear.

To BOUGE, v. n. [bouger, Fr.] to swell out.

BOUGH, (bou) s. [bog, Sax.] an arm or large shoot of a tree, bigger than a branch, yet not always distinguished from it.

BOUGHT, preter. of BUY, and pron. bawt.

BOUGIE, s. [Fr.] an instrument employed by surgeons in the cure of strictures of the urethra.

BOUILLE'E, or BOUILLON, s. [bouillen, Fr.] in cookery, any thing made of boiled meat; broth or soup. In farriery, a lump of flesh near the frog of a horses foot, which makes him halt.

BOLO'GNE, a large and handsome sea-port in the department of the Straits of Calais. It is divided into the higher and lower town. The harbour has a mole for the safety of ships, which prevents it from being choked up with sand. It is seated at the mouth of the river Lianne, 14 miles S. by W. of Calais, and 120 N. of Paris.

To BOUNCE, v. n. to strike against a thing with such force as to redound back, making a noise at the same time. To spring with force, applied to the spurting beer out of a bottle. In familiar language, to make a noise, bully, or hector; to be strong made and active.

BOUNCE, s. a smart, violent, and sudden stroke; a sudden crack, or noise, applied to the explosion of a gun, or the bursting of a bladder, &c. In low language, a threat, or boast.

BOUNCER, s. one who is noisy in his own praise, or in his threats against another; a bully; a boaster.

BOUND, s. [from bondir, Fr.] a restraint; a leap, jump, or spring; the flying back of a thing which is struck against another with great force.

To BOUND, v. n. [bondir, Fr.] to jump, spring, or move on forwards by leaps; to fly back again when struck against a thing with violence. Used actively, to make a thing leap, or mount by fits from the earth, in its motion.

BOUND, part. pass. of BIND.

BOUND, a. [from bindan, Sax.] destined, intended, or on one's way to a certain place. Used with for, and peculiar to seamen.

BOUNDARY, s. the extremities, or utmost limits of a thing or country.

BOUNDEN, part. pass. of BIND.

BOUNDING-STONE, s. a stone played with, and made to bound from the earth, when flung from the hand.

BOUNDLESS, a. that is restrained by no limits, confined by no power; or satisfied by no enjoyment.

BOUNDLESSNESS, s. the quality of being without any restraint; insatiableness; infinity.

BOUNTEOUS, a. liberal, or conferring benefits, largely, and from a goodness and kindness of nature.

BOUNTEOUSLY, ad. in a liberal manner; conferring benefits generously, and from a principle of good nature.

BOUNTEOUSNESS, s. the quality of conferring benefits or favours from a principle of kindness, including the idea of superiority.

BOUNTIFUL, a. conferring favours without restraint, and from an internal principle of kindness. Applied to things, very much abounding in valuable products.

BOUNTIFULLY, ad. in such a manner as to confer favours or benefits with generosity, and from an inward principle of kindness. Applied to things, plentifully producing what is of service or use.

BOUNTIFULNESS, s. a great propensity to bestowing favours, or conferring benefits; generosity, munificence.

BOUNTY, s. [bonte, Fr.] the conferring benefits on others, distinguished from charity, because exercised towards objects that are not highly necessitous; and including the idea of a gift bestowed by a superior. In commerce, a premium paid by government to those who rear, prepare, or export certain commodities. Queen Anne's bounty, is the produce of the first fruits, and tenths set apart for augmenting poor livings.

BOURBON, a very healthy and profitable island of Africa, in the Indian ocean, producing plentifully with little culture, wheat, oats, and other European grains, rice, Indian corn, sugar canes, ebony, excellent tobacco, cinnamon, and most kinds of greens, roots, and pulse; as also, gum, resin, benzoin, &c. the soil yielding two crops a year. The country is every where well watered, and well stocked with horned cattle, hogs, goats, &c. but the chief production of the island is coffee, which was originally imported from Mocha, and is esteemed better than any of the growth of the West Indies. The French first settled here in 1672, and here their East India ships used to touch for refreshment. It has been taken by the British in the course of the present war. It is 300 miles E. of Madagascar. Lat. 20. 52. S. lon. 55. 30. E.

BOURDEAUX, an ancient maritime city in the dept. of Gironde, and one of the first in France for magnitude, riches, and beauty. It is seated on the Garonne, which river is bordered by a large quay; and as the tide flows here 4 yards perpendicular, large vessels come up to the town; most of the great streets lead to the quay. The inhabitants are upwards of 100 000; their trade is very extensive, and they ship annually 100,000 tons of wine and brandy. It is 87 miles SE. of Rochelle, and 325 SW. of Paris. Lat. 44. 50. N. lon. 0. 30. W.

To BOURGEON, (boarjon) v. n. [bourgeonner, Fr.] to sprout; to shoot into branches; to produce buds.

BOURGES, the chief town in the dept. of Cher, before the revolution, the capital of Berry. Although in extent it is one of the greatest cities in France, the inhabitants hardly amount to 25,000. They have manufactures of cloth, woollen, stuffs, and stockings. It is seated on the rivers Auron and Yevre, 25 miles NW. of Nevers, and 125 S. of Paris.

BOURN, a town of Lincolnshire, with a market on Saturday. It is seated near a spring called Burnwell-head, from which proceeds a river that runs through the town. It is a pretty large place, and has a good market for corn and provisions. It is noted for the coronation of king Edmund. It is 17 miles N. of Peterborough, 35 S. of Lincoln, and 95 N. of London.

BOURN, (boorn) s. [borne, Fr.] the extremities, bounds, or limits of a country, or piece of land.

BOURN, (burn) s. [burn, Sax.] a brook or torrent; when added to the names of places, it implies, that they are situated near, or upon brooks.

To BOUSE, (booze) v. n. [buysen, Belg.] to drink immoderately; to tope.

BOUSY, (bówzy) a. intoxicated with drink.

BOUT, s. [botta, Ital.] a turn; implying as much of an action as is performed without intermission; at once, a part of any action which is carried on by successive intervals.

BOW, (Bō) a small neat town in Devonshire, whose market is on Thursday. Distant 14 miles N. W. of Exeter, and 18⁹ from London.

To BOW, (ow pron. like that in now or how) v. a. [bugan, Sax.] to bend the body in token of respect; to listen to, joined with ear and the particle down. "Bow down thine ear to the poor." Eccles. iv. 8. To depress, or crush. Neuterly, to bend, or be bent; to make a bow; to stoop; or incline the body towards the earth. To be overpowered, or to stoop under the pressure of affliction.

BOW, (the ow pron. like that in how or now) s. a stooping of the head and inclination of the body, by way of compliment.

BOW, (pron. bō, as if the w was dropped) s. [bwa, Brit.] a warlike weapon or instrument, made of tough wood, the extremities of which are tied by a string, which being drawn towards the body of a person, bends the wood; and by its elasticity forces an arrow placed on the string with great violence to a great distance: a bending piece of wood furnished with hair, and used on stringed instruments; the loop of a string tied in a knot; a yoke or bending piece of wood. The ancient bows were of two kinds, the long bow, which was made of yew, and much used by the old English, and the cross bow, which was drawn by a trigger, and was the more favourite weapon of the French. Applied to a ship, that part which begins at the loof, and compassing ends of the stern, and ends at the sternmost part of the forecastle. In building, bow is a beam of wood or brass, with three long screws, which directs a lath of wood or steel to any arch, used commonly in drawing draughts of ships, projections of the sphere, or long arches. PROV. A bow long bent at last waxeth weak. This proverb may be applied both to the body and mind: too much labour and study weaken and impair both the one and the other.

BOW-BEARER, s. an under officer of the forest.

BOW-BENT, (bō bent) a. bent like a bow, or in the form of a bow; crooked; stooping.

To BOWEL, (the ow is pron. as in now) v. a. to pierce the bowels; to penetrate deep, or to the bottom of a thing.

BOWELS, (bówlz) s. [boyaux, Fr.] the intestine vessels, or organs within the body; the guts. Figuratively, the inner part of any thing. Tenderness, pity, or compassion.

BOWER, (bówer) s. an arbour, or place, formed of the branches of green trees, bent or arched at the top; the anchor of a ship, so called from its being in the bow of a ship, and then pronounced bo-er.

To BOWER, (bówer) v. a. to make a bower; to include in a bower. Figuratively, to inclose.

BOWERY, a. full of bowers; shady and inclosed like a bower.

BOWL, (bole) s. [buelin, Brit.] a drinking vessel, rather wide than deep, distinguished from a tea-cup by its greater dimensions, and from a drinking cup because that is rather deeper than wide; the hollow roundish part of any thing which can hold liquor.

BOWL, (the ow pron. as in cow) s. [boule, Fr.] a round or spherical piece of wood, which may be rolled on the ground.

To BOWL, v. a. to roll or bowl along the ground; to roll a bowl at any mark.

BOWLDER-STONES, s. lumps or fragments of stone or marble, broke from cliffs, rounded by the action of water.

BOW-LEGGED, (bō-legged) a. having crooked legs, or such as resemble a bow when bent.

BOWLER, (the ow pron. as in now) s. he that rolls a bowl; one that plays with or at bowls.

BOWLING GREEN, s. a piece of ground overgrown with grass, of a true level or horizontal surface, kept close cut, and frequently rolled for playing at bowls.

BOWLINE, (bō line) s. a rope fastened to the middle part of the outside of a sail.

BOWMAN, (bō man) s. one who shoots with a bow.

BOWSHOT, (bō-shot) s. the distance to which an arrow can fly when shot from a bow.

BOWSPRIT, or BOLTSPRIT, (bo-sprit) s. a kind of mast at the prow of a vessel, resting slopeways on the head of the main stem, fastened by the fore-stay and to the partners of the foremast, serving to carry the sprit, and sprit-topsail and jackstaff. Its length should be two-thirds of the mainmast, and its thickness equal to the mizzen.

BO'WSTRING, (bō-string) s. the string by which a bow is bent.

BO'WYER, (bō-yer) s. one who shoots with a bow; an archer; a person who makes bows.

BOX, s. [box, Sax.] its leaves are pennated and ever-green; it has male and female flowers on the same plant, the former having a three-leaved, and the female a four-leaved concave empalement. Linnæus ranges it in the 4th section of his 21st class, from its having male and female flowers on the same plant, and the male flowers having four stamina. There are three species. Its wood is yellowish, hard, solid, even, very heavy, and takes a good polish. One of these three species is the dwarf box, which is planted round the beds in gardens, and is remarkable for neither flowering, nor ever rising to any considerable height. Also a case made of wood, or other substance, to hold any thing; distinguished from a chest, as the less is from the greater; the case of a mariner's or sea compass; the inner case of a watch; a chest in which money is put; hence a Christmas box, which signifies both the chest into which the money is put, and the money then collected. The first story of seats in a play-house, formed into small square rooms, and built either on the stage, or round the extremities of the pit.

BOX, s. [from buck, Brit.] a blow on the face with the hand.

To BOX, v. a. to fight with the fists; to strike on the head or face with the hand.

BO'XEN, a. made of box. Applied to colour, of a box colour.

BO'XER, s. one who is skilled in fighting with the fists; one who fights with his fists.

BOY, s. [the etymology uncertain] a name applied to persons of the male sex till they are fifteen years old. Used figuratively for a person who wants the sedateness and discretion of manhood, and is then a term of reproach.

BO'YHOOD, s. the state wherein a person is styled a boy, extending from infancy to youth, or till a person is fifteen years old.

BO'YISH, a. like a boy with respect to inexperience, want of sedateness and discretion; childish; trifling; puerile.

BO'YISHLY, ad. in a childish, wanton, trifling manner.

BO'YISHNESS, s. that quality which is predominant in boys; want of thought, sedateness, or discretion; childishness; trifling.

BOYNE, a river of Ireland, which rises in the country of Kildare, crosses that of Meath, and falls into the Irish channel, 4 miles below Drogheda. It is celebrated for a victory, obtained by William III. king of England, and prince of Orange, over James II. July 1st, 1690.

BP. an abbreviation for bishop.

BRA'BANT, previously to the French revolution, was one of the largest and most important provinces in the Netherlands. It was divided between the Austrians and Dutch Breda, being the capital of the Dutch and Brussels of the Austrian division. It now forms the whole, or great part of the departments of the two Nethes, the Dyle, the Dommel, and the Scheldt and Meuse.

BRA'BBLE, s. [brabbelin, Belg.] a quarrel; a clamorous noisy contest.

To BRA'BBLE, v. n. to contest a thing with great clamour; to quarrel, to clamour.

BRA'BBLER, s. a clamorous, quarrelsome, turbulent, or noisy fellow.

To BRACE, v. a. [embrasser, Fr.] to tie, or wind bandages tight round any thing. To strain or stretch. To brace the yards, in sea language, is to bring the yard to either side, so as to make it stand square, or even across the ship.

BRACE, s. a bandage; that which keep the parts of a thing close together; that which is used to keep a thing stretched. In printing, a crooked line, denoting that the members of a sentence ought to be joined together, but not taken separately, marked thus } and used by poetical writers at the end of a triplet, or three lines which rhyme to each other. In architecture, a piece of timber formed with bevel joints, and used to keep a building steady. In the plural, those ropes fastened to the yard-arms of a ship, used to square the yards, and bring them to any position. Applied to a coach, the thick thongs of leather on which the body hangs. Also, those transverse slips of cloth or leather, which passing over the shoulders, and buttoning to the breeches, serve to hold them up.

BRACE, s. [never used with an s at the end for the plural, and is a collective noun, which seems to have only the singular] in hunting, two, or a pair; perhaps so called from their being tied together.

BRA'CED, a. in heraldry, the intermingling chevrons at the base of an escutcheon.

BRA'CELET, s. [bracelet, Fr.] an ornament worn round the wrist; a piece of defensive armour for the arm.

BRA'CER, s. that which braces, or keeps a thing tight. In surgery, a bandage.

BRA'CHIAL, (brākial) a. [from brachium, Lat.] that belongs to, or is situated in, the arm.

BRA'CHMANS, a sect of Indian philosophers, known to the ancient Greeks by the name of Gymnosophists. The ancient Brachmans lived upon herbs and pulse, and abstained from every thing that had life in it. They lived in solitude, without matrimony, and without property, earnestly wishing for death, and considered life only as a burden. The modern Brachmans are one of the casts or tribes of the Banians; they are their priests, and perform their office of praying and reading the law, with several mimical gestures, and a kind of quavering voice. They believe that in the beginning nothing but God and water existed; and that the Supreme Being, desirous to create the world, caused the leaf of a tree, in the shape of a child playing with its great toe in its mouth, to float on the water. From its navel there issued out a flower, whence Brama drew his original, who was entrusted by God with the creation of the world, and presides over it with an absolute sway. They make no distinction between the souls of men and brutes; but say the dignity of the human soul consists in being placed in a better body, and having more room to display its faculties. They allow of rewards and punishments hereafter; and have so great a veneration for cows, that they look upon themselves as blessed, if they can but die with the tail of one of them in their hand. They are skilful arithmeticians, and calculate, with great exactness, the eclipses of the sun and moon. They are remarkable for their religious austerities; one of them has been known to make a vow to wear about his neck a heavy collar of iron for a considerable time; another to chain himself by the foot to a tree, with a firm resolution to die in that place; and another to walk in wooden shoes stuck full of nails on the inside. Their divine worship consists chiefly of processions made in honour of their deities. They have a college at Banara, a city situated on the Ganges.

BRACHYGRAPHY, (brakygrafy,) s. [from brachus, short, and grapha, to write, Gr.] the art of short hand, or writing by characters in a shorter time and compass than by the letters of the common alphabet.

BRA'CKET, s. [braccietta, Ital.] a piece of wood, carved or plain, fixed against a wall, to support something.

BRA'CKISH, a. [brack, Belg.] salt; that is somewhat salt; of the taste of sea-water.

BRA'CKISHNESS, s. saltness in a small degree, applied to sea-water.

BRA'CKLAW, a city of Podolia, on the river Bog. Lat. 48. 49. N. lon. 29. 30. E.

BRA'CKLEY, a town of Northamptonshire, with a market on Wednesday. It is seated on a branch of the river Ouse, and is a corporation, containing two churches. It had formerly a college, now turned into a free school, and sends two members to parliament. It is 18 miles S. W. of Northampton, and 64 N. W. of London.

BRAD, a. [Sax.] when added to the names of places, signifies broad, thus Bradford signifies a broad ford.

BRAD, s. a kind of nails used in building, without a shoulder over their shank, or a spreading head like other nails, but are pretty thick towards the upper end, that the top may be driven into, and buried in the board they fasten.

BRA'DFIELD, (MAGNA) a town of Essex, near Thaxted, 38 miles from London. Market on Thursday.

BRA'DFORD, a town in Wilts, the centre of the greatest fabric of superfine cloths in England, which it shares with the surrounding towns of Trowbridge, Melksham, Corsham, and Chippenham. It it seated on the Avon, 11 miles nearly W. of Devizes, and 102 W. of London. Market on Monday.

BRA'DFORD, a town in Yorkshire, seated between Leeds and Halifax, on the branch of the Aire, from which a canal has been made to join the grand canal from Leeds to Liverpool. It has a considerable trade in shalloons, everlastings, and other worsted stuffs, which are made in the neighbourhood. There are also some iron founderies. It is 36 miles S. W. of York, and 193 N. N. W. of London. Market on Thursday.

BRA'DNINCH, or BRADWICK, a town of Devonshire, 6 miles N. of Exeter. Market on Saturday.

To BRAG, v. n. [braggeren, Belg.] to display an advantage with great pomp and vanity; to boast.

BRAG, s. a pompous or proud display of any advantage a person possesses. Figuratively, the thing itself which causes pride or boasting; glory. PROV. Brag's a good dog, but that he has lost his tail.—Brag's a good dog if he be well set on, but he dare not bite.

BRA'GA, a city, the capital of Entre Minho e Douro, seated on the Cavedo, 180 miles N. of Lisbon. Lat. 41. 42. N. lon. 8. 29. W.

BRAGA'NZA, a city in the province of Tra los Montes, in Portugal. It is seated on the river Fervanca, and carries on a manufacture of silk, stuffs, velvets, and grogram. Lat. 41. 40. N. lon. 5. 30. W.

BRAGGADO'CHIO, s. a person who vainly sets forth his own good qualities, or displays them more than they deserve.

BRA'GGART, s. [braggeret, Teut.] a person who boasts of his own abilities too much.

BRA'GGART, a. proud, conceited, vain.

BRA'GGER, s. one who displays his pretended abilities in all the pomp of vain and ostentatious language.

BRA'GLESS, a. without a boast; without being boasted of.

To BRAID, v. a. [brædan, Sax.] to weave together; to plait.

BRAID, s. a lock of hair, or any thing collected by weaving or plaiting; a small narrow kind of lace, used for ornamenting women's shoes, bed curtains, &c.

BRAILS, s. small ropes used in furling the sails across. To hale up the brails, or brail up the sail, implies that the sail is to be haled up, in order to be furled, or bound close to the yard.

BRAIN, s. [brægen, Sax.] in anatomy, the large, soft, whitish substance, filling the inside of the cranium, or skull, wherein all the organs of sense terminate, and wherein the soul is said to reside. It is divided into the cerebrum, cerebellum, medulla, oblongata, or medulla spinalis. The brain is much larger in men than in any other animals, and is generally biggest in such other animals as shew the greatest degree of sagacity, such as monkeys, &c.

To BRAIN, v. a. to dash the brains out; to kill by dashing the brains out.

BRAI'NLESS, a. without brains. Figuratively, silly, foolish, thoughtless.

BRAI'NPAN, s. the skull, so called from its containing the brains.

BRAI'NSICK, a. disordered in the brain. Figuratively, giddy, thoughtless, foolish, mad.

BRAI'NTREE, a town in Essex, near the village of Bocking, and, with it, carrying on a considerable manufactory of baize. It is 12 miles N. of Chelmsford, and 41 N. E. of London. Market on Wednesday.

BRAKE, s. [of uncertain etymology] a thicket of brambles, or thorns.

BRAKE, s. [from oracan, Sax.] a wooden mallet, used in beating or dressing hemp; the handle of a ship's pump; a baker's kneading trough; a sharp bit or snaffle for horses.

BRA'KY, a. abounding in brakes, or thickets of thorns.

BRA'MBER, a town of Sussex, formerly of some account, but has neither market nor fair; however, it sends two members to parliament. It is 19 miles S. of West Grinstead, and 49 S. S. W. of London.

BRA'MBLE, s. a wild prickly shrub; a blackberry, dewberry, and raspberry bush.

BRA'MBLING, s a bird, the same with the mountain chaffinch.

BRA'MPTON, a town of Cumberland, with a market on Tuesday. It is seated on the river Itshin, not far from the Picts' wall. It is at present but a small place; and near it, on the top of a high hill, is a fortified trench, called the Mote.—8 miles N. E. of Carlisle, and 311 N. N. W. of London.

BRAN, s. [brann, Brit. bremma, Ital.] the husk of corn, separated after grinding from the flour.

BRANCH, s. [branche, Fr.] in botany, the arm, or part of a tree which sprouts from the trunk. Figuratively, any detached part from the whole. A section or subdivision, applied to writings. Any part which is joined to another, like a branch to a tree. A part of a pedigree of family. In hunting, the antlers or shoots of a stag's horns. The branches of a bridle, in farriery, are two pieces of bended iron, that bear the bit-mouth, the chains, and the curb, in the interval between the one and the other.

To BRANCH, v. a. to divide into separate divisions like branches. Figuratively, to adorn with needle-work representing branches. Neuterly, to spread in branches; to separate or divide a subject into several parts, used with the particle out. To speak diffusely, to expatiate. To have horns shooting out into antlers.

BRA'NCHER, s. one that shoots out into branches. In falconry, a young hawk, [from branchier, Fr.]

BRA'NCHLESS, a. without branches. Without honour, alluding to the branches of a pedigree.

BRA'NCHY, a full of branches; spreading.

BRAND, s. [brand, Sax.] a stick lighted, or fit to be set on fire at one end. Figuratively, a thunderbolt. A mark made on the flesh of a criminal by a burning iron. Anciently, a sword, [from brando, Ital.]

To BRAND, v. a. [branden, Belg.] to mark with a brand, or burning iron. Figuratively, to reproach as infamous; to stigmatize.

BRA'NDENBURG, THE MARCHE OF, is bounded on the W. by Lunenburg; on the N. by Pomerania and Mecklenburg; on the S. by Silesia, Lusatia, Saxony, and Magdeburg; and on the E. by Poland and Polish Prussia. It is divided into five principal parts; the Old Marck, or Marche, Pregnitz, the Middle Marche, Ucker Marche, and the New Marche. The greater part of the inhabitants are Lutherans, but there are also Romanists. Berlin is the capital; and the principal rivers are the Elbe, Havel, Sprey, Ucker, and Warte.

BRA'NDENBURG, a city of Upper Saxony, divided into the Old and New Town by the river Havel. It is a prosperous, trading place, 26 miles W. of Berlin.

BRA'NDGOOSE, s. a kind of wild fowl, less than a common goose, having its breast and wings of a dark colour.

To BRA'NDISH, v. a. [from brand] to wave, shake, or flourish a weapon. Figuratively, to make a parade, or flourish with.

BRA'NDLING, a sort of worm.

BRA'NDON, a town in Suffolk, between Newmarket and Swaffham. It is seated on the Lesser Ouse, over which it has a bridge; and, at a small distance, a ferry, whereby corn, malt, timber, iron, &c. are conveyed to and from the Isle of Ely. It is 12 miles N. of Bury, and 78 N. E. of London.

BRA'NDY, s. [brandevin, Fr.] in distillation, a proof spirit, obtained from real wines, or fermented juices of grapes.

BRA'NGLE. s. squabble; wrangle.

To BRA'NGLE, v. n. to wrangle; to squabble.

BRANK, s. the same with buckwheat, French wheat, or crap.

BRA'NLIN, a species of fish, of the salmon kind, which never grow to any great size.

BRA'NNY, a. having the appearance of bran.

BRASIL, or BRAZIL, (brazeél) s. a heavy, dry, and very hard wood, so called because it is supposed to have com originally from Brazil in S. America. That of Fernambuco is the best. The tree grows commonly in dry and barren places, among rocks, and becomes very thick and tall; the branches are long and large, the leaves small, of a fine bright green, resembling those of box, but somewhat longer.

BRASIL, a large country of S. America on the E. between the equinoctial and 35. 0. S. lat. and between 35 and 55 degrees W. lon. extending from the river of Amazons to that of La Plata, a length of coast, through all its windings, of above 3000 miles. It is bounded on the W. by Paraguay and Amazonia; its other boundaries are formed by the great Atlantic Ocean. It was discovered by chance in 1500, for Alvarez Cabral, a Portuguese, was forced upon it by a tempest; and the kings of Portugal have continued masters of it ever since. Some time after the revolt of the United Provinces from the king of Spain, the Dutch drove away the Spaniards, to whom it then belonged; but the Portuguese, in their turn, obliged the Dutch to leave it in 1655. The air of this country, though within the torrid zone, is pretty temperate and wholesome; insomuch that people live there a long while. The waters in general are very good, and the soil fertile and excellent; there comes more sugar from thence than all other parts of the world; besides this, it produces tobacco, Indian corn, several sorts of fruit, and medicinal drugs. The wood brought from Brasil, and hence so called, is of very great use in dying red; and, within the country, there is gold, and several sorts of precious stones; likewise the cattle, carried over from Europe, increase prodigiously, insomuch that there is no want of provisions. The Portuguese chiefly inhabit the sea-coast, for they have not penetrated far into the country. The inland parts are full of people of different languages; but they all agree in wearing no sort of clothes. They are of a copper colour, with long coarse black hair on their heads, but without any on the other parts of their bodies, like the rest of the Americans. They are strong, lively, and gay; and, as they are subject to few diseases, they live a long time. They love to adorn themselves with feathers, and they are very fond of feasts, at which they dance and skip about immoderately. They have no temples, nor any other sign of religion; and they make no manner of scruple to marry their nearest relations. Some pretend that they are cannibals, and eat those they have taken in war; but this is a fable. They have huts made of the branches of trees, and covered with palm-tree leaves. Their furniture consists chiefly in their hammocks, and dishes, or cups, made of callibashes, painted without of a red colour, and black within; their knives are made of a sort of stone and split canes; and they have likewise baskets of different sizes, chiefly made of palm-tree leaves. Their arms are only bows, arrows, and wooden clubs. When they travel, they fasten their hammocks between two trees, and sleep all night therein. The Portuguese divide Brasil into fifteen governments or capitanaries; eight of which belong to the king of Portugal, and the rest to great men, who have peopled them at their own expense. The residence of the viceroy, till of late years, was at St. Salvador, but is now at St. Sebastian.

BRASS, s. [bræs, Sax.] a factitious yellow metal, made of copper melted with lapis calaminaris. In order to make brass, the calamine is previously roasted; it is then mixed with charcoal and grain copper, and put into large crucibles, which are kept for a considerable time in a heat that will not melt the copper; after a time, the heat is raised so as to fuse it, and the compound metal is then run into ingots. Among the ancients, Corinthian brass was a very valuable mixed metal, said to have been accidently formed by the melting of statues and vessels of different descriptions, when Corinth was burned by the Romans, 146 years B. C. Brass is used figuratively, for impudence.

BRA'SSY, a. partaking of brass; hard as brass. Impudent.

BRAT, s. [perhaps from bratt, Sax.] a child; used to express contempt. Figuratively, products or effects.

BRAVA'DO, s. [bravada, Span.] a proud boast; haughty defiance or challenge.

BRAVE, a. [bræve, Fr.] not daunted or terrified with dangers and difficulties; ready to attempt any dangerous enterprize; grand, or noble. Sometimes applied, in an indeterminate manner, to express good or great in the positive degree.

BRAVE, s. [brave, Fr.] a person who is daring beyond the rules of discretion; or bold to excess. A bold defiance or challenge.

To BRAVE, v. a. to undertake a thing notwithstanding the dangers with which it is attended; to defy contemptuously; to provoke a person to resentment; to bid defiance to; applied, in this last sense, to inanimate things with great beauty.

BRA'VELY, ad. in such a manner as not to be terrified by difficulties, or daunted by dangers; intrepidly; couragously.

BRA'VERY, s. the performance of any great and noble actions, notwithstanding the dangers which attend them; a disposition of mind, which enables a person to accomplish his designs, notwithstanding any obstacles or difficulties which oppose it. Applied to the appearance of things, finery, splendor. False courage; boasting; or boldness.

BRA'VO, s. [Ital.] a man who murders or assassinates another for hire.

To BRAWL, v. n. [brouiller, or brauler, Fr.] to quarrel about trifles in a noisy manner; to report in a loud manner; to make a noise; beautifully applied to inanimate things.

BRAWL, s. a noisy quarrel; scurrility.

BRA'WLER, s. one who is quarrelsome and noisy at the same time; a word of reproach.

BRAWN, s. [of uncertain etymology] the flesh or muscular parts of the body; the arm. Figuratively, vigour or strength. The flesh of a boar soused or pickled; a boar.

BRA'WNY, a. strong; robust; sinewy; fleshy; of great muscles and strength.

To BRAY, v. a. [bracan, Sax.] to beat into pieces, or powder in a morter by means of a pestle.

To BRAY, v. n. [braire, Fr.] to make a noise like an ass. Figuratively, to make a disagreeable noise like that of brass.

BRAY, s. the noise of brass; a terrible or disagreeable sound.

BRAY, a village in Berkshire, one mile from Maidenhead, famous for its changeable vicar, who having been twice a papist, and twice a protestant in the reigns of Henry VIII. Edward VI. Mary, and Elizabeth, was accused of being a turn coat; but he replied, that he always stuck fast to his principles, which was, to live and die vicar of Bray!

To BRAZE, v. a. the soldering or joining of two pieces of metal together. Figuratively, to be inured or hardened in impudence.

BRA'ZEN, s. made of brass. Figuratively, caused by brazen instruments. Impudent.

To BRA'ZEN, v. n. to deny with great impudence; to behave without concern; to bully. Used with the word out. "He would brazen it out as if he had done nothing." Arbuth.

BRA'ZENFACE, s. a person who has no sense of shame; an impudent fellow.

BRA'ZENFACED, a. void of shame, impudent.

BRA'ZENNESS, s. appearance like brass. Figuratively, undaunted impudence.

BRA'ZIER, s one who makes or sells brass ware.

BRA'ZING, s. the act of soldering or joining two pieces of iron together. Sometimes the word is applied to the joining pieces of iron together by beating them red hot upon one another; but this is more properly called welding.

BREACH, s. [breche, Fr.] the dividing or destroying the union between the parts of a thing before joined together. In fortification, a hole or gap made in any part of the works of a town, either by cannon or mines. Figuratively, a defect; the acting contrary to any law; the violating any obligation; quarrel; discord; want of unity.

BREAD, (bred) s. [brod, Sax.] a baked mass of dough formed from the flour of some grain, and a constant part of food. Figuratively, every kind of necessary for the support of life. To eat a person's bread, is sometimes used to imply, that he has been admitted to the most intimate friendship, and supported by his bounty.

BREAD CHIPPER, s. one that chips bread; a baker's servant, an under butler.

BREAD-CORN, s. corn or grain of which bread is made.

BREAD-FRUIT, s. a fruit that grows at Otaheite, and some other islands on the South Sea, on a tree, about the size of a middling oak. The fruit itself is about the size and shape of a child's head, covered with a thin skin, between which and the core is the eatable part, as white as snow, and of the consistence of new bread. Its taste is between that of the crumb of white bread, and the Jerusalem artichoke. It is roasted and baked before it is eaten. Three dishes are prepared from this fruit by beating it into a paste with water, or the milk of the cocoa nut, and mixing it with ripe plantains, bananas, or the sour paste, which they call mahie.

BREAD-ROOM, s. [a sea-term] a place in a ship's stern, to keep bread or biscuit.

BREADTH, (bredth) s. [from brad, Sax.] the measure of a plain superficies from side to side. In commerce, the measure of any cloth, or other manufacture, between the two selvages or lists. Within an hair's breadth, denotes extreme nearness, applied to situation; and a very narrow escape, applied to danger.

To BREAK, v. a. [breccan, Sax.] to separate the parts of a thing by force; to burst by violence. Used with the word down, to destroy or demolish. To pierce or penetrate, applied to light. "A dim winking lamp, which feebly broke the gloomy vapours." To diminish or weaken. "Have not some of his vices weakened his body, and broke his health?" Tillots. In horsemanship, to tame or render manageable. "To break the stubborn colt." Dryd. Applied figuratively, to the human species, "To break our fierce barbarians into men." Addis. To render a person unable to carry on trade; to make a bankrupt. "Impoverishes the rich, breaks the merchant." South. To wound so as to make the blood appear. "She'll sooner break your head." Dryd. Applied to promises, oaths, or duty, to act counter to, to violate or disregard. "I never more will break an oath." Shak. "To break the pious laws of nature." Dryd. To intercept, prevent, or hinder the effect of. "To break his dreadful fall." Dryd. To interrupt. "His voice broke with sighs." Spect. No. 164. To separate, joined to company. "They were forced to break company." Atter. Used with off, to dissolve; likewise to stop, hinder or prevent. "To break off so noble a relation." Collier. "To break off all its commerce with the tongue." Addis. With of, to master or lay aside an ill habit. "The French were not quite broken of it." Grew. Used with mind, to discover our sentiments. "Fearful how to break my mind." Dryd. Used with back, to strain or put the back-bone out of joint. In husbandry, to plow. "The husbandman must first break the land." Davies. To disband, applied to an army. "Solyman, returning to Constantinople, broke up his army." Knollis. Used with wind, to discharge wind included in the intestines. To break on the wheel, is to break the bones of a criminal fastened on a wheel.

To BREAK, v. n. to burst. "Whispers the o'er-fraught heart, and bids it break." Shak. To open so as to discharge matter, applied to a tumor. To dispel darkness, to dawn, applied to the first appearance of light in a morning. "As soon as the day breaks." Spect. No. 465. "See how the day begins to break." Swift. To decay in health and strength. To burst, to pronounce, or utter, used with from, and the words lips, mouth, or breast. "Whilst from his breast the dreadful accents broke." Dryd. To force a passage, used with the particles through, into, and forth, "To break through with his whole body of horse." Clarend. To intervene without notice or regard to the ceremonies of polite behaviour. "With a magisterial air breaks in upon conversation." Addis. Discarded or deprived of an employ. "When I see a great officer broke." Swift. Joined with loose, to disengage from any obstacle, tie, or other confinement or restraint. "Break loose from all our engagements." Tillots. To desist from an undertaking; to quit a habit; to desist suddenly, with the particle off. "Do not peremptorily break off in any business." Bacon. When used with off and from, to separate from with some effort or violence. "I must from this enchanting queen break off." Shak. To burst through and discover itself notwithstanding any impediment. "There being so many ways by which a smothered truth is apt to blaze and break out." South. To rage, or appear, applied to a distemper. "A violent fever broke out in the place." Spect. No. 164. In all the various meanings of this verb, the idea of separation, or the effect of sudden force, is always included.

BREAK, s. applied to the first appearance of light in the morning, when the rays of light break the gloom of darkness, it implies the dawn. A pause or interruption, applied to a discourse.

BRE'AKER, s. he who forces a thing asunder; he who divides a thing by force; a wave broken by rocks or sand-banks.

To BRE'AKFAST, (brèkfast) v. n. to eat after having fasted some time; applied to the first meal a person makes in the day.

BRE'AKFAST, s. that which a person eats at his first meal in the day. In a general sense, any thing to eat after a long want of food.

BRE'AKNECK, (brake-neck) s. a precipice or fall, from whence a person would break his neck.

BRE'AKSTONE, s. in botany, an umbelliferous plant called by Linnæus pimpinella, of which there are two British species. The root of either is very acrid, burning the mouth like pepper, and affords a blue oil. Its acrimony has occasioned it to be used in curing the tooth-ache, and cleansing the skin from freckles.

BRE'AM, s. [brame, Fr.] in natural history, a large fish, delighting in rivers or ponds, very broad, with a forked tail, and scales of a golden colour, set with great elegance. He has large eyes, and a narrow sucking mouth, and a lozing bone to help his grinders. The male is observed to have two large melts, and the female two large bags of eggs, or spawn.

BREAST, (pronounced and formerly written brest) s. [breost, Sax.] in anatomy, one of the three venters in an animal body, which contains the heart and lungs. Breasts are two prominences situated in the anterior, and towards the lateral parts of the thorax. In beasts, the word is applied to that part which extends from the neck to the fore-legs. Figuratively, the heart; bosom; conscience; or soul, which was, by the ancients, supposed to reside in this part.

To BREAST, v. a. to oppose with the breast; to meet; to struggle against.

BRE'ASTBONE, s. in anatomy, the bone of the breast; the sternum.

BRE'ASTHIGH, a. as high as the breasts.

BRE'ASTHOOKS, s. among ship-carpenters, the com-passing timbers before, that help to strengthen the stem, and all the fore part of a ship.

BRE'ASTKNOT, a bunch or knot of ribbands worn by females on or near their breasts.

BRE'ASTPLATE, s. armour worn by way of defence on the breast.

BRE'ASTROPES, s. in a ship, those ropes which fasten the yards to the parrels, and, with the parrels, hold the yards fast to the mast.

BRE'ASTWORK, s. works thrown up as high as the breasts of the defendants in a fortified place, or field; the same with parapet.

BREATH, (breth) s. [brathe, Sax.] the air which proceeds from the mouth, either in the actions of respiration or inspiration. Figuratively, life. Used with take, to recover lost breath from too great a fatigue; to cease from labour or hurry; a respite or pause. A breeze of wind, or gentle current of air. "Not a breath of wind flies o'er its surface." Addis. The same instant, used with in. "You menace and court me in a breath." Dryd.

BRE'ATHABLE, a. that may be breathed; or that is fit to be breathed.

To BREATHE, v. n. to draw in and force out the air at the mouth by the action of the lungs. Figuratively, to live. "Let him breathe a private man in Athens." Shak. To take breath, to recover a damage by means of a respite; to rest. "He followed the victory so hot upon the Scots, he suffered them not to breathe." Spen. Used with in, to enter by the action of breathing or respiration. "To whose foul mouth no wholesome air breathes in." Shak. Used actively, it implies to fill with, to discharge the lungs of air, by the actions of inspiration and respiration. Used with into, to act upon by breathing; to animate. "He breathed into us the breath of life." Decay of Piety. To force out of the mouth, with the particle out. "Who breathed out nothing but flame." Spect. No. 223. To make long-winded by exercise. "The greyhounds are as swift as breathed stags." Shak. To sound by the breath, applied to wind instruments. "To breathe the flute." Prior. To send up in vapours appearing like the breath in frosty weather. "His altar breathed ambrosial odours." Par. Lost. To sigh, or offer up, without being heard. "I have toward heaven breathed a secret vow." Shak. In surgery, to open by a lancet. "To breathe a vein." Dryd.

BRE'ATHER, s. one who enjoys life; one who is alive. He that causes or animates by his breath, alluding to God's breathing into man the breath of life, as the scripture expresses it.

BRE'ATHING, s. the action of fetching breath. Figuratively, alive. A sigh of devotion; secret prayer conceived in the mind, but not uttered in words; an aspiration. Breathing-places, vents, or chinks, that let in fresh air.

BRE'ATHLESS, (bréthless) a. out of breath, or scarce able to breathe from fatigue or hurry. Figuratively, dead.

BRE'CHIN, a parliament town of Scotland, in the county of Angus, 15 miles N. E. of Dundee, and 45 on the same point from Edinburgh.

BRE'CKNOCK, or BRECON, a town of S. Wales, and capital of Brecknockshire. It is called by the Welsh, Aber-Honddey, and it is situated at the confluence of the rivers Honddey and Usk. It is an ancient place, as appears by the Roman coins that have often been dug up here. It is a large town containing three churches, one of which is collegiate, and stands at the west end. The houses are well built, and it formerly had a wall, with three gates, and a stately castle. The assizes are kept here, and it has a good trade in clothing. The markets are on Wednesday and Saturday, and are well supplied with corn, cattle, and provisions. It sends one member to parliament, and is 34 miles N. W. by W. of Monmouth, 34 S. E. by E. of Llanbeder, and 162 W. by N. of London.

BRE'CKNOCKSHIRE, a county of S. Wales, 39 miles in length, and 27 in breadth. It is full of mountains, some of which are exceeding high, particularly Monuchdeny-hill, not far from Brecknock. However, there are large fertile plains and valleys, which yield plenty of corn, and feed great numbers of cattle. It has 61 parishes, and 4 market-towns, and there were formerly 9 castles. It is bounded on the E. by the counties of Hereford and Monmouth, on the S. by Glamorganshire, on the W. by Carmarthen and Cardiganshire, and on the N by Radnorshire.

BRE'DA, a large, strong, and beautiful city of Dutch Brabant, containing several public buildings, 4 spacious market-places, which are plentifully supplied with fresh and salt water fish, and about 2200 houses. It is seated on the rivers Aa and Merch, 22 miles W. by S. of Bois le Duc, 22 N. E. of Bergen op Zoom, 25 N. N. E. of Antwerp, and 60 S. of Amsterdam.

BREDE. s. [See BRAID] a border wrought with the needle in different colours resembling flowers, &c.

BREECH, s. [from bræcan, Sax.] the back and lower part of the body, from whence the excrements are voided. Applied to a piece of cannon, the hinder part, or that part behind the touch-hole.

BREE'CHES, (brítches) s. [brae, Sax.] It has no singular; that part of a man's dress that covers his thighs and breech. Breeches formed no part of the ancient Grecian or Roman dress, but were derived to us from our ancestors, the northern barbarians of Britain and Germany. To wear the breeches, is a phrase implying, that a woman usurps more authority over her husband than becomes her sex.

To BREED, v. a. [brædan, Sax.] to produce, bring forth, to generate; to educate, nourish, or bring up. Sometimes used with the particles to and up to. Figuratively, to occasion or cause. Applied to place, to give birth to. To cut, applied to the teeth. To keep animals for procreation or multiplying their species.

To BREED, v. n. to be big with child, to be pregnant. To propagate; or increase by propagation. To raise or increase a breed.

BREED, s. a species of animals; a cast or kind. Offspring, applied to mankind. That which is produced at one hatching.

BREE'DER s. that which produces or is the cause of any thing. That which educates or brings up. A person who is not barren: one who raises a breed.

BREE'DING, s. education, instruction. Figuratively, genteel and polite behaviour; the method taken in rearing a child.

BREESE, s. [briosa, Sax.] in natural history, a stinging fly, called also the gad fly.

BREEZE, s. [brezza, Ital.] a gentle, cooling, pleasant breath of wind. In navigation, a shifting wind blowing from the sea and land alternately at certain hours, and sensible only near the coasts.

BREE'ZY, a. refreshed by breezes.

BREHONS, the provincial judges among the ancient Irish, by whom justice was administered, and controversies were decided. They were a distinct family, who derived their support from certain lands, appropriated for that purpose, and from the eleventh part of all fines in criminal causes. The laws observed by them were called Brehon laws.

BREMEN, a duchy in the circle of Lower Saxony, the whole a vast plain, almost surrounded by the Weser and the Elbe, with Oldenburgh and the German Ocean on the W. It contains 111 Lutheran churches, and 137 pastors, under a general superintendant. The air is cold, but the country is well peopled, and fertile in grain, fruits, flax, &c. and produces large breeds of cattle. They have manufactures of cordage, linen and woollen stuffs. It formerly was subject to the Swedes, but was conquered by the Danes in 1712, who transferred it, together with Verden, to the elector of Hanover, in 1715, for 700,000 rix-dollars; and in 1719, the crown of Sweden renounced all the rights and appurtenances of the two duchies, in favour of the elector, George I. of England, for a million of rix-dollars. In the winter it is subject to inundations, and particularly, in 1617, several thousands of cattle were drowned, besides several hundreds of the inhabitants. The capital is Bremen, a large, populous, and imperial city, seated on the Weser. Lat. 53. 6. N. lon. 8. 48. E.

BRENT, a. burnt. Obsolete.

BRENT, a town in Devonshire, with a market on Saturday. It is a post-town, 26 miles S. W. of Exeter, and 200 W. by S. of London.

BRENTFORD, a town in Middlesex, seven miles from London, seated on the river Thames, into which at the W. end of the town, flows a rivulet called the Brent. Market on Saturday.

BRENTWOOD, a town in Essex, situated on a fine eminence. 11 miles W. S. W. of Chelmsford, and 18 E. N. E. of London. Market on Wednesday.

BRE'SCIA, a strong and handsome city of Italy, capital of the Bresciano. It is seated on the river Garza, which runs through it, and its walls are watered by the Mela on the W. and the Navilio on the E. The number of its inhabitants are nearly 50,000; they manufacture cloths, excellent fire-arms, &c. It is 35 miles N. E. of Cremona, and 95 W. of Venice.

BRESCIA'NO, or THE BRESSAN, a province, late of Venice. It has the county of Bormio on the N. and the Bergamasco on the W. and although mountainous, yet abounds in wine, oil, wheat, and other grain; it also contains mines of iron, copper, silver, gold, alum, and marble of different colours. It is watered by several small rivers, and abounds in towns and villages.

BRE'SLAW, or WRATISLAW, a large city of Germany, capital of Silesia, with an university. It is seated at the confluence of the rivers Oder and Ohlau, which last runs through several of the streets. It has several large squares, and the public buildings are very stately; the streets are straight and wide, and the houses generally well built. It is populous, and much frequented by Hungarian, Bohemian, Polish, and other merchants; it lies 113 miles N. E. of Prague, and 165 N. of Vienna. Lat. 51. 3. N. lon. 17. 14. E.

BREST, a town in the department of Cape Finisterre, seated on the N. side of a large commodious harbour, or bay, opening to the Atlantic, the finest in France; its entrance, however, called the Goulet, is narrow and difficult, by reason of certain rocks, which are covered at high water. The town stands upon a declivity, and the streets are narrow and crooked; but the quay is above a mile in length, and here is every accommodation for the shipping and marine service. It is 30 miles S. W. of Morlaix, and 325 W. by S. of Paris. Lat. 48. 22, N. lon. S. 4. 26. W.

BREST, s. in architecture, the member of a column, named likewise torus, or tore.

BRET, s. in natural history, a round flat fish of the turbot kind; called likewise burt or brut.

BRETA'GNE, a ci devant province on the E. of France, now formed into 5 departments, viz. North Coast, Feinsterre, Ille, and Vilaine, Lower Loire, and Morbihan.

BRETHREN, s. the plural of brother, which see.

BRETON, CAPE, an island so called, near the eastern continent of North America, between 45 and 47 degrees of N. latitude. It is separated from Nova Scotia by a narrow strait called Canso, and is about 140 miles in length, and 50 in breadth. It is a barren country, producing little corn or grass, and subject to fogs throughout the year. It is covered with snow in winter, and is excessively cold. It is of very small importance to England, but was of great consequence to the French, because it commanded the navigation of the river St. Lawrence, through which they passed to Canada. There is likewise an excellent fishery on this coast, from which they reap great advantage. It was taken by the English in 1745, and restored to the French in 1748, by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle. It was again retaken by the English, on July 26, 1758, when all the garrison, consisting of 5600 men, were made prisoners of war, while the loss of the English was very inconsiderable. There were eleven men of war in the harbour, which were all either taken, sunk, or destroyed; and it was ceded to England by the treaty of peace in 1763.

BREVE, s. in music, a long note, formerly pricked in the form of a square without any tail, equivalent to two measures, minims, semibreves, or bars, and is now wrote thus, 𝅜. In law, any writ directed to the chancellor, judges, sheriffs, or other officers, whereby a person is summoned, or attached, to answer in the king's court, &c.

BRE'VET, s. among the French, denoted a grant of some favour or donation from the king; not much unlike a warrant, or the king's letters patent, with us.

BREVIARY, [breviarium, Lat.] an abridgment or compendium. Also, a daily office, or book of divine service, in the Romish church.

BREVIER, (bre veer) s. a small printing letter.

BRE'VITY, s. [brevitas, Lat.] applied to writings, the expressing a sentiment in very few words; conciseness; shortness.

To BREW, v. a. [brouwen, Belg.] to make beer, or ale, by mixing malt and hops with boiling water, and fermenting it afterwards with yeast. Figuratively, to make any drink by boiling different ingredients; to contrive; to plot. Used neuterly, to perform the office of a brewer; to make ale or beer.

BREWER, s. one who makes malt liquor, and sells it.

BREWHOUSE, s. a place or house wherein beer or ale is made.

BREWING, s. the process or method of making ale or beer; the quantity of liquor produced by brewing.

BREWIS, s. a piece of bread boiled in a pot, together with meat. It seems anciently to have meant broth. "What an ocean of brewis shall I swim in."

BREWOOD, a town of Staffordshire, 10 miles S. by W of Stafford. Market on Tuesday.

BRI'AR, s. See BRIER.

BRIBE, s. a gift or reward given to a person to engage him to determine contrary to the merits of a cause; something given to a person to stifle evidence; something given to an elector, to engage him to vote for a particular candidate.

BRI'BER, s. one that pays for corrupt practices.

BRI'BERY, s. the act of giving a person money to engage him to any particular side or undertaking.

BRICK, s. [brick, Belg.] a flat lump of reddish or white earth, formed in wooden moulds of various sizes; first dried in the air, and afterwards burned in a kiln or clamp. The invention of bricks must have been very ancient, as we find they were employed in erecting the tower of Babel. The Romans did not burn their bricks, but dried them in the air four or five years. Oil of brick, is olive oil imbibed by heated bricks, pounded afterwards, and distilled in a retort.

To BRICK, v. a. to lay or build with bricks.

BRI'CKBAT, s. a piece or fragment of a brick.

BRI'CKDUST, s. the dust of bricks; or the powder of bricks made by rubbing them on each other, or pounding them.

BRI'CKING, s. among builders, the counterfeiting of a brick wall on plaister, which is done by smearing it over with red ochre, and making the joints with an edged tool; these last are afterwards filled with a fine plaster.

BRI'CK-KILN, s. a place where bricks are burnt.

BRI'CKLAYER, s. one whose business it is to lay and cement bricks in a wall or building. Tylers and bricklayers were incorporated 10 Eliz. under the name of Master and Wardens of the Society of Freemen of the Mystery and Art of Tylers and Bricklayers.

BRI'CKMAKER, s. one who makes bricks.

BRI'DAL, a. that belongs to a wedding.

BRIDE, s. [bryd, Sax.] a name given to a woman the day of her marriage, and sometimes after the wedding-day is over.

BRI'DEBED, s. the bed on which a new married couple lie.

BRIDECAKE, s. the cake with which the guests are entertained at a wedding.

BRIDEGROOM, s. a new married man.

BRIDEMEN, s. the male attendants, as the BRIDEMAIDS are the female attendants, or company, at a wedding; the office of the latter is to undress the bride on the wedding-night, and see her to bed.

BRIDEWELL, s. a house of correction near Fleet-ditch, London, built by Henry VIII. as a royal palace fit for the reception of the emperor Charles V. It is an institution of a mixed nature, partaking of the hospital, the prison, and the workhouse. Several youths are sent to this hospital as apprentices to manufacturers who reside there; they are clothed in blue doublets and breeches, with white hats. Having faithfully served the term of seven years, they have their freedom, and a donation of 10*£* each, for carrying on their respective trades. Any place where vagrants are obliged to beat hemp, or are kept to other hard labour as a punishment.

BRIDGE, s. [bric, Sax.] a building of stone or timber consisting of one or more arches, intended for the passage of men or carriages from one side of the river to another. The word bridge is used figuratively for the upper part of the nose; and in musical instruments for a piece of wood, which stands upright on the belly of the instrument, and supports the strings. Hanging bridges are those which are not supported either by posts or pillars, being sustained only by the two extremities. A draw-bridge is made fast only at one end with hinges, so that the other may be lifted by chains fixed to it. A flying bridge is made of pontoons, leather-boats, casks, &c. covered with planks for the passage of an army. A bridge of boats is made of copper or wooden boats, fastened with stakes or anchors, and covered with planks. PROV. Let every man praise the bridge he goes over, i. e. speak not ill of him who hath done you courtesy, or whom you have made use of to your benefit, or do commonly make use of.

BRIDGEND, a town of Glamorganshire, in S. Wales, with a market on Saturday. It is seated on the river Ogmore, which divides it into two parts, but they are joined together by a stone bridge. The market is considerable for corn, cattle, and provisions. It is 7 miles W. by N. of Cowbridge, and 177 W. of London.

BRIDGENORTH, a town of Shropshire, seated on the Severn, which divides it into two parts, joined by a stone bridge. The streets are broad and paved, and its situation is commodious for trade. Its fairs, which fall on the Thursday before Shrove Sunday, June 30th, August 2d, and Oct. 29th, are much resorted to for cattle, sheep, butter, cheese, bacon, linen cloth, hops, and other merchandise. The last, which holds three days, is the largest. It is 20 miles nearly W. of Birmingham, and 139 N. W. of London. Market on Saturday.

BRIDGETOWN, the capital of Barbadoes, situated in the S. W. part of the island, on Carlisle Bay, which is capable of containing 500 ships. The town lies at the entrance of St. George's Valley, which runs several miles into the country. Here is a free-school, an hospital, and a college. The houses, about 1500 in number, are very elegant, the streets are broad, and the wharfs and quays commodious and well fortified. This is the seat of the governor, council, assembly, and court of chancery. Lat. 13. 5. N. lon. 58. 38. W.

BRIDGEWATER, a town of Somersetshire, containing about 500 houses, and 3000 inhabitants. The streets are wide and well paved. It stands 12 miles from Start Point, where the Parret runs into the British Channel; from whence a spring tide flows 22 feet at the quay, at which time it rushes with much violence and roaring; the perpendicular height, as it presses along, being several feet. This sudden rage of the tide is called the Boar, and is frequent in all the rivers of the Channel, especially in the Severn. Ships of 200 tons burden come up to the town. They import, in large trows, the manufactures of Manchester, Liverpool, Birmingham, &c. which are conveyed from hence, in waggons, for the internal parts of Devonshire and Cornwall. About 40 vessels, from 30 to 100 tons, are employed in bringing coals from Wales to this place. The duties on custom-house imports amount to about 2500*£* a year. It is seated on the river Parret, 31 miles S. S. W. of Bristol, and 137 W. by S. of London. Markets on Thursday and Saturday, for corn, cattle, &c. and particularly for cheese.

BRIDLE, s. [bridel, Sax.] the bit, headstall, fillet, throat-band, reins, and nose band, which are fastened on a horse's head to manage and govern him. Figuratively, a restraint, curb, check.

To BRIDLE, v. a. [bridlian, Sax.] to manage a horse by means of a bridle. Figuratively, to check; or restrain; or keep within bounds. Used neuterly, to hold up the head in an affected manner, applied to the attitudes of a woman.

BRIDLINGTON, or BURLINGTON, a sea port of Yorkshire, seated on a pretty large bay, near Flamborough Head. It has a commodious quay for ships, and is a place of good trade. It is 36 miles N. of Hull, and 208 N. of London. Market on Saturday.

BRIDPORT, a small neat town in Dorsetshire. It has a safe port for about 40 vessels, and stands on a little hill near the English Channel. The number of houses is about 400; the market is remarkable for hemp, and it furnishes lines, twines, nets, sail-cloth, &c. to the Newfoundland fishery. It is 12 miles W. of Dorcester, and 135 W. by S. of London. Market on Saturday.

BRIEF, (breef) a. [bref, Fr.] appropriated to language, short, concise, opposed to diffusive or verbose.

BRIEF, s. [from brief, Belg.] a short and expressive account or description. In law, a writ whereby a person is summoned to answer to any action; an abridgment of a client's case, containing in a concise manner the proofs and objections that may be made by the contrary party, with answers to them, wrote out for the instruction of a counsel on a trial. In canon law, letters patent, generally read in churches, giving a licence for making a collection all over the kingdom for any public or private loss, the money for which is collected by the churchwardens.

BRIEFLY, ad. in few words; concisely.

BRIEFNESS, s. the quality of expressing a thing in a few words; conciseness; shortness.

BRIER, s. [brær, Sax.] in botany, a kind of prickly tree, distinguished popularly into sweet or wild; and being a species of the rose, see that article.

BRIERY, a. full of briers, thorns, or prickly plants.

BRIGADE, s. [brigade, Fr.] in the military art, a part or division of an army, whether horse or foot, under the command of a brigadier. A brigade of an army, is a body of horse of ten or thirteen squadrons, or five or six battalions of foot: a brigade of a troop, is a third part of it, when consisting of fifty soldiers; but only a sixth, when it consists of one hundred: that is, a troop divided into three brigades in the former case, and into six in the latter.

BRIGADE-MAJOR, s. an officer appointed by the brigadier to assist him in the management and ordering of his brigade; and he there acts as a major does in any army.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL, s. an officer commanding a brigade of horse or foot, and ranking next below a major-general.

BRIGANDINE, s. [from brigand, Fr.] a kind of ancient defensive armour, consisting of thin pliable plates, like scales; a coat of mail.

BRIGANTINE, s. [brigantin, Fr.] a small, light, flat, open vessel, with twelve or fifteen benches on each side for rowers, going both with sails and oars, fit for boarding, or giving chace, and chiefly used by the Corsairs.

BRIGG, a town in Lincolnshire, with a good market on Thursday for cattle and provisions. It is seated on the river Ankam. Some call it Glamford-bridges. It is 25 miles N. of Lincoln, and 153 N. of London.

BRIGHT, a. [beort, Sax.] shining, splendid; glistering with light. Figuratively, strong, clear; or that which introduces more light into the mind. Noble, shining, illustrious, or that which sets a person in a conspicuous point of view, applied to action. Applied to sagacity, quick, penetrating.

BRIGHTHELMSTON, or BRIGHTON, a town of Sussex, on the coast, much resorted to in the bathing season. The Steine is a fine lawn, or public walk. Brighton, in time of peace, is the station of the weekly packet-boats to and from Dieppe. It is 56 miles S. of London, and 74 N. W. of Dieppe. Market on Thursday.

To BRIGHTEN, v. a. to make a thing shine which was dull, or covered either with rust or dust. Figuratively, to disperse. To make famous; to render conspicuous; to heighten, applied to character. Used neuterly, to shine again after being obscured.

BRIGHTLY, ad. with splendour; with lustre. Figuratively, in such a manner as will raise an advantageous idea of ourselves.

BRIGHTNESS, s. the lustre which appears on the sight of burnished metals, or cut diamonds; splendor. Figuratively; goodness; sagacity; perfections that make a person conspicuous. "The brightness of his parts." Prior.

BRILLIANCY, s. [from brillant, Fr.] greatness of lustre, or splendor which dazzles the eyes.

BRILLIANT, a. [brillant, Fr.] sparkling or reflecting the rays of light with great lustre.

BRILLIANT, s. [from briller, Fr.] a diamond quite flat underneath, and cut on its upper part in triangular faces, the uppermost ending in a point.

BRIM, s. [brymme, Sax.] the edge or extremity of a thing. Applied to the hat, that part which is cocked or turned upward. Applied to any vessel, or drinking glass, the uppermost part or edge. Figuratively, the surface of any liquor or fluid. The top of a bank washed by a river.

To BRIM, v. a. to fill full; to fill up to the brim. Neuterly, to be full to the top.

BRIMFUL, a. full to the top. Figuratively, ready to run over by being charged too full.

BRIMMER, s. a vessel or bowl filled up to the brim.

BRIMMING, a. filled to the top.

BRIMSTONE, s. in natural history, a fat, unctuous, mineral, yellow substance, dry, solid, and friable, melting with gentle heat, inflammable, and when fired in the open air, burning almost all away with a blue flame, and a noxious vapour; endued with an electric power, and not dissoluble in an acid menstruum.

BRINDED, part. [from brin, Fr.] streaked; marked with streaks or branches; tabby.

BRINDISI, the ancient BRUNDUSIUM, a decayed city of Naples, 35 miles NW. of Otranto.

BRINDLE, s. applied to the streaks upon the skin of a beast, of a different or darker colour than the other parts.

BRINDLED, part. marked with streaks of a different or darker colour, applied to the skin of a beast.

BRINE, s. [brine, Sax.] any salt liquor; sea-water. Figuratively, the sea; tears. The liquor or pickle which proceeds from salted meat.

To BRING, v. a. [pret. I brought, part. pass. brought; bringan, Sax.] to cause a person to come, or to fetch a thing to another, distinguished from carry, because it may then be done by another; but the word bring implies that a thing is done by one's self. Figuratively, to procure; to produce. Used with the particle in, to introduce. Used with back, to make a person or thing return; to recover; to recall. Used with to, to lead, or conduct; to induce, to prevail upon. Used with about, to accomplish. Used with off, to clear from any charge; to free from danger. Used with over, to prevail on, or induce a person to alter his sentiments; to convert or seduce. Used with out, to discover a thing which is concealed. Used with under, to subdue, vanquish, or tyrannize over. Used with up, to instruct; educate; to teach; to introduce a fashion; to advance, or come forward with, applied to an army. "Bring up your men." Shak. SYNON. To bring implies conveying a thing ourselves from one place to another, in opposition to the word send. To fetch implies going to a place in order to bring.

BRINISH, a. [brine and ish, Sax.] like brine; saltish.

BRINK, s. [brink, Dan.] the extreme edge of a river; precipice, &c. Figuratively, the highest degree of danger.

BRINN, or BRUNN, a city and circle of Moravia, 32 miles SW. of Olmutz.

BRINY, a. tasting saltish, or like brine, or any other liquor that resembles it.

BRIONY, s. See BRYONY.

BRISK, a. [brusque, Fr.] lively, gay, airy; full of vivacity and spirits, applied to the disposition. Vigorous, full of activity and power, applied to action. Sparkling, mantling, applied to liquors. Bright, glaring, and strongly affecting the sight, applied to colours.

To BRISK UP, v. n. to advance in a sprightly, lively, and nimble manner.

BRISKET, s. [brichet, Fr.] the breast of an animal, particularly that part which lies next to the ribs.

BRISKLY, ad. in a brisk, lively, active, and spirited manner.

BRISKNESS, s. a light, airy, and cheerful disposition; vivacity or liveliness; activity, gaiety.

BRISTLE, s. [bristl, Sax.] the strong hair which grows and stands upright on the back of a boar, &c.

To BRISTLE, v. a. to erect the bristles upright when enraged, applied to a hog. Figuratively, to grow angry; to advance to an enemy in order to attack him, or revenge an affront, used with the particle up. Neuterly, to stand erect like the bristles of a hog.

BRISTLY, a. in botany, encompassed with a substance resembling hairs. Thick set with hairs or bristles.

BRISTOL, a city and sea-port, partly in Gloucestershire, and partly in Somersetshire, to which last it was accounted to belong, before it formed a separate jurisdiction. In wealth, trade, and population, it has long been reckoned the second in England; the custom-house receipts, for Liverpool, however, have of late years considerably exceeded those of Bristol. It is seated at the confluence of the Avon and Frome, about nine miles from the place where the Avon discharges itself into the Severn. Ships of considerable burden come up to the quays; but there are now very great improvements making in the docks, quays, and river, which will make it one of the safest and most commodious ports in the kingdom; these improvements are carried on with great spirit and activity, and no expence is spared: the whole, when completed according to the present excellent and extensive plan, will, it is said, amount to near one million sterling. The trade of Bristol is extensive; sending 2,000 ships yearly to different parts of the world. The streets are mostly narrow, but here are some elegant squares, and the new parts of the town are magnificent; they are built of stone, and much in the same style as Bath. Like it, they also extend range above range, till they have reached the summit of the hill against which the Gloucester side of the city stands. The prospects in the vicinity of Bristol are delightful, and the banks of the Avon, the lofty rocks, through which it finds a passage to the sea, covered with herbage and trees, and presenting the most awful precipices, are highly romantic. They have plenty of coal from Kingswood and Mendip Hills, and the glass-houses, founderies, sugar-works, &c. are numerous. The hot-well is resorted to for the cure of several diseases, and is about a mile from the town, on the side of the river Avon. St. Vincent's Rock, above this well, is noted for a sort of soft diamonds, called Bristol-stones. They make use of sledges instead of carts, which, from their weight and friction, seem a heavy load in themselves; neither do the horses pull together, the hind horse being perpetually raising the fore part of the sledge, and the fore horses perpetually pulling or pressing him to the ground. It ought to be observed, however, that a part of the town having been built upon a morass, carts and waggons are not allowed to ply there, from the apprehension of their shaking and endangering the buildings. Bristol is 40 miles nearly S. of Hereford, 78 N. E. of Exeter, 34 S. W. by S. of Gloucester, 50 S. S. W. of Worcester, 12 W. N. W. of Bath, and 117 W. of London. Lat. 51. 28. N. lon: 2. 36. W. Markets on Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday.

BRI'STOL-STONE, s. a kind of soft diamond found in Vincent's Rock, near Bristol.

BRI'TAIN (GREAT) the title given to England and Scotland, since the union of the two kingdoms. See ENGLAND and SCOTLAND.

BRITAIN (NEW) called also Terra Labrador, and Eskimaux, a country in North America, between the river of St. Lawrence and Hudson's Bay. It is subject to Great Britain; but we have no settlement in it, nor are there any inhabitants but a rude savage sort of people, called Eskimaux, who have neither laws nor religion. They have no houses, but live in caves and holes in the sides of hills, and are the only people in America that have beards, which almost hide their faces. The chief produce is skins and furs.

BRI'TISH, a. belonging to Britain.

BRI'TTLE, a. [brittan, Sax.] that breaks or crumbles to pieces with the least force or violence.

BRI'TTLENESS, s. that quality which renders a thing easy to break.

BRIZE, s. the same with the gadfly.

BROACH, s. [broche, Fr.] an instrument or stake forced through a joint of meat, by means of which it is turned round, and its parts are successively exposed to the action of the fire, in roasting; a musical instrument, which is played upon by means of a handle that turns a cylinder round on its axis, and gives motion to the several keys by pieces of wire fixed perpendicularly on its surface.

To BROACH, v. a. to spit; to pierce with a spit. Figuratively, to force a spicket or cock into a vessel in order to draw the liquor; to tap; to open; to wound, so as to let out blood. A low expression, alluding to the tapping a vessel. To be the author of, applied to doctrine or opinion.

BRO'ACHER, s. a spit or stake to roast meat on. Figuratively, the first inventor, author, or founder of any opinion or doctrine.

BROAD, (brōd or brawd) a. [brad, Sax.] wide, or the extent between the sides of a thing; distinguished from length, which is the extent or space between the two ends. Figuratively, large or great. "A broad mixture of folly." Locke. Diffusive, clear, and bright. "Appears in the broadest light." Decay of Piety. Coarse, gross, obscene, applied to language. "In some places he is broad and fulsome." Dryd. With the eyes wide and open. "He was broad awake." Bold, not delicate; not reserved. Broad as long, implies equal on the whole. SYNON. By broad is understood extended each way: as, broad cloth; a broad brimmed hat. By wide is meant broad to a certain degree; as, three inches wide; four feet wide.

BROADALBINE, a county of Scotland, bounded on the N. by Athol, on the E. by Gaurie, on the S. by Perthshire, and on the W. by Argyleshire.

BRO'AD-CAST, s. denotes the method of cultivating corn, turnips, pulse grasses, &c. by sowing them with the hand in which method they are scattered over the ground at large, and thence said to be sown in broad-cast. This is called the old husbandry, to distinguish it from the drill, horse-hoeing, or new husbandry.

BRO'AD-CLOTH, s. a manufacture made of sheep's wool of our own growth, mixed with that of Segovia in Spain, the staple commodity and honour of this nation, so called from its breadth, which is so great that it is weaved by two persons, who sit at each side, and fling the shuttle to one another.

BRO'AD-EYED, a. that can see to a great distance round; or has a very large prospect in sight. "In spite of broad-eyed watchful day." Shak. This conveys a noble image to the mind, and is an elegant use of the term.

BRO'AD-LEAVED, a. that has broad leaves.

BRO'ADLY, ad. in a broad manner.

BRO'ADNESS, s. breadth; the extent between the selvages or list of cloth; the space between the sides of a thing. Figuratively, obscene, immodest.

BRO'AD-SHOULDERED, a. measuring much, or of great width between the shoulders.

BRO'ADSIDE, s. the firing all the guns on one side of a ship into an enemy's vessel. Figuratively, an attack; or a positive and unexpected charge of something criminal, by way of accusation or reply.

BRO'ADSWORD, s. a sharp edged cutting sword, with a broad blade.

BRO'ADWATER, a village on the sea-coast of Sussex.

BRO'ADWISE, ad. according to the direction of the breadth.

BROCA'DE, s. [brocado, Span.] a stuff of gold, silver, or silk, raised and embellished with flowers, foliages, or other ornaments.

BROCA'DED, a. woven with flowers, or ornaments of various colours. Figuratively, drest in brocade.

BRO'CAGE, s. money gained by promoting bargains; or what is given a broker for commission; the trade of buying and selling second-hand things.

BRO'CCOLI, s. [Ital.] in botany, a species of cabbage.

BROCK, s. [broc, Sax.] a badger; also, a hart of the third year; also, a hind of the same year, a brock's sister.

BRO'CKET, s. a red deer of two years old.

BROGUE, (brōg) s. [brog, Ir.] a wooden shoe; a corrupt or vicious manner of speaking or pronouncing.

To BROI'DER, v. a. [brodir, Fr.] to adorn with figures of needlework.

BROIL, s. [from brouiller, Fr.] a quarrel, contest, tumult, or war.

To BROIL, v. a. [broder, Fr.] to dress meat either by placing it immediately on the coals, or on a gridiron over a fire. Neuterly, to overheat by immoderate exercise. Used improperly for to burn.

BRO'KERAGE, s. the fee or pay given to a broker for negotiating business.

To BROKE, v. n. [of uncertain etymology. Skinner seems inclined to derive it from to break, because broken men turn factors or brokers. Causabon derives it from the Greek; but Mr. Lye more properly deduces it from a Saxon word, signifying to procure] to transact business, or buy and sell for another at a certain sum per cent.

BRO'KENHEARTED, a. in a condition which admits of no comfort; dejected, in despair; disconsolate.

BRO'KENLY, ad. in an unconnected manner; without any connection; by loose sentences.

BRO'KEN MEAT, s. fragments, or pieces of meat taken from a table.

BRO'KER, s. one who buys or sells, or transacts business for another. By abuse, the word is applied to those who deal in second-hand goods. Exchange-broker, is one who concludes bargains for others, relating to the remitting of money, or bills of exchange. Stock-brokers, are those who buy or sell, for others, parts or shares in the joint stock of any public company, as the Bank, South-sea, &c. Pawnbrokers, are those who lend money to the necessitous, upon a pledge of goods given as security.

BRO'MLEY, a town in Kent, whose market is on Thursday; on the road to Tunbridge; distant from London 9 miles.

BRO'MLEY, in Staffordshire. See ABBOT'S BROMLEY.

BRO'MSGROVE, a town of Worcestershire, with considerable manufactures of worsted, linsey, linen cloths, fish hooks, needles, and nails. It is situated near the rise of the river Salwarp, 15 miles NE. by N. of Worcester, and 115

BARCLAY'S DICTIONARY, WORD BROKEN HEARTED.

N. W. of London. A good market on Tuesday for corn, cattle, and provisions.

BRO'MYARD, a town of Herefordshire, situated in a country full of orchards, 16 miles N. E. of Hereford, and 125 W. NW. of London. Market on Monday.

BRO'NCHIA, (brônkia) s. [Gr.] in anatomy, the ramification of the trachea; or certain branches or hollow tubes belonging to the windpipe, that are dispersed through the lungs.

BRO'NCHIAL, (brónkial) a. belonging to the throat.

BRONCHOCELE, (brônkocele) s. [from bronchos, windpipe, and kele, swelling, Gr.] in surgery, a tumour arising in the anterior part of the neck, occasioned by some humour, or some violence, as straining in labour, lifting weights, &c. Several individuals who were afflicted with a modification of this disorder, were exhibited throughout England some years since, under the name of monstrous craws.

BRONCHOTOMY, (bronkótomy) s. [from bronchos, windpipe, and temno, to cut, Gr.] the operation which opens the windpipe by incision, necessary in many cases, especially in a violent quinsy, to prevent suffocation from the great influence or tumour of the parts.

BRONTOLOGY, s. [from bronte, thunder, and logos, a discourse, Gr.] a discourse on thunder.

BRONZE, s. [bronze, Fr.] a metal compounded of copper, tin, and zinc, which is employed for various uses, as making bells, cannons, and statues. The proportions of the component metals being varied to suit the purposes to which the bronze is applied. Also a kind of colouring prepared by the colourmen of Paris, in imitation of bronze. There are two sorts of it, the red, made of copper dust and red ochre, and the yellow, which is made of the finest copper dust alone.

BROOCH, s. [broke, Belg.] a jewel; an ornament of jewels. Figuratively, an ornament; glory.

To BROOD, v. a. [bredan, Sax.] to hatch, or sit upon in order to hatch; to sit like a hen hatching her eggs; beautifully applied in the following sentence: "Where brooding darkness spreads its jealous wings." Milt. To sit near, and watch with great anxiety. Used actively, to hatch. Figuratively, to cherish or keep alive by incessant anxiety.

BROOD, s. [brod, Sax.] the young of fowls, fishes, or small land animals; a parcel of chickens hatched by one hen at one time. Figuratively, offspring, children; productions.

BROO'DY, a. inclining to hatch, or to sit on eggs to hatch them.

BROOK, s. [broc, Sax.] a small and shallow running water. SYNON. Rivulets and brooks are certain species of streams which are running waters, with this difference, that a rivulet runs between banks, whereas a brook winds its way through the meadows, or by a hedge-side. A rivulet is a much larger stream than a brook.

To BROOK, v. a. [brucan, Sax.] to bear without resentment or complaint; to put up with. Applied to misfortunes, or affronts, to endure.

BROO'KLIME, s. a sort of water speedwell, very common in ditches, and not much unlike water-cress.

BROOM, s. [brom, Sax.] in botany, the genista, Lat. genet, Fr. Linnæus ranges it in the third section of his 17th class. There are 10 species. Likewise an utensil made with the twigs of the above-mentioned plant, and used in sweeping houses or streets.

BROO'MGRASS, s. a genus of the grasses called by Linnæus brooms. The English species are numerous.

BROO'MING, or BREAMING, s. the burning the filth a ship has contracted, with straw, reeds, broom, &c. when she is on the careen.

BROO'MRAPE, s. an herb with gaping blossoms found amongst broom.

BROO'MSTAFF, s. the staff to which the twigs of a broom are bound, to make a besom; the handle of a broom; named more generally in London a broomstick.

BROO'MY, a. full of, or abounding in broom.

BROTH, s. [broth, Sax.] a kind of soup, made by boiling meat down in a small quantity of water.

BROTHEL, or BROTHEL-HOUSE, s. [bordel, Fr. bordilla, Ital. so called from their having been formerly built near, or upon the banks of rivers] a house inhabited by prostitutes, and set apart for the purpose of lewdness.

BROTHER, s. [brethren and brothers in the plural, the former of which seems confined to the Scriptures; brother, Sax.] a term of relation between two male children sprung from the same father or mother, or both. Among the ancients, this term was used with greater latitude than at present, and signified even first cousins; in this sense it is used in Scripture, when mention is made of our Lord's brethren. Figuratively, a person united by the most ardent affections of friendship; one of the same trade; a person resembling another in qualities or conduct. Among divines, taken for man in general, alluding to our being all descended from one common parent.

BROTHERHOOD, s. the state or condition of a brother; the relation in which one brother stands with respect to another. Figuratively, men living together in the same house, and professing the same principles, applied to monks or friars; men incorporated together by the same charter; men of the same trade.

BROTHERLY, a. that suits or belongs to a brother.

BROTHERLY, ad. after the manner of a brother. Figuratively, in a very affectionate manner.

BROUGH, or BURGA upon STANMORE, a town of Westmoreland, 6 miles from Appleby. Market on Thursday.

BROW, (the ow is pron. like ow in now, how) s. [bruva, Sax.] the arched collection of hairs over the eye in human creatures. Figuratively, the looks, air, or appearance of the countenance. Applied to a hill, the verge, or extremity of its surface.

To BROWBEAT, v. a. to endeavour to awe a person by stern and haughty looks or words.

BROWN, (the ow is pron. as in cow) a. [brun, Sax.] sunburnt, of a colour which may be made of a mixture of black with another colour. Figuratively, dark, gloomy. Used as a substantive, dark, or dusty colour.

BROWNISH, a. somewhat brown; inclining to brown; of a faint brown.

BROWNISTS, in church history, a religious sect, which sprung up in England towards the end of the 16th century. Their leader was one Robert Brown, a native of Northampton. They separated from the established church, disliking its discipline and form of government. They were equally averse to episcopacy and presbyterianism. They condemned the solemn celebration of marriages in churches; and maintained that matrimony being a political contract, the confirmation of it ought to proceed from the civil magistrate. They rejected all forms of prayers, and affirmed that the Lord's Prayer ought not to be recited as a prayer, it being only given as a model by which we are to form our prayers. They were persecuted with great severity by queen Elizabeth, who put several of them to death. The greater part of their sentiments were adopted by the Independents, who do not however hold them with equal severity.

BROWNNESS, s. that idea or sensation which is excited in the mind on seeing a brown colour.

BROWNSTUDY, s. gloomy meditations.

To BROWSE, (brouze) v. a. [brouser, Fr.] to feed on herbs, leaves, or grass. To crop or eat, applied to cattle. Neuterly, to feed or eat, used with on or upon.

BROWSE, (brouze) s. pasture; properly leaves or shrubs fit for goats and other animals to eat.

BROW-SICK, a. dejected; hanging the head.

BRUGES, a large city of the ci-devant Austrian Flanders, formely the English staple for wool, and the centre of communication between the Lombards and the Hanseatic merchants. Its trade however, having for many years declined, the population of Bruges is by no means equal to its extent. It is eight miles North East of Ostend.

To BRUISE, (bruze) v. a. [briser, Fr.] to crush or hurt by any thing blunt, which does not cut the skin, or let the blood out; to crush by any weight; to beat in a mortar, so as only to crush or destroy the form of a thing, without reducing it to powder.

BRUISE, (bruze) s. a hurt whereby the skin is not broke.

BRUISEWORT, s. an herb, the same with comfrey.

BRUIT, (brūt) s. [bruit, Fr.] a report, rumour, or noise; something which is the common topic of conversation.

To BRUIT, (brūt) v. a. to spread abroad; to divulge; to rumour. Both the verb and the noun are seldom used.

BRUMA, or BRAHMA, s. the idol of the Brachmans, who, they say, produced as many worlds as he has considerable parts; the first world, which is above the heavens, being formed of his brain; the second of his eyes; the third of his mouth, &c.

BRUMAL, a. [brumalis, Lat.] belonging to the winter.

BRUNETTE, s. [the plural brunettes, according to Addison; Fr.] a person of a brown complexion; generally applied to the female sex.

BRUNION, s. [brugnon, Fr.] a sort of fruit between a plum and a peach.

BRUNSBUTTLE, a city of Holstein in Lower Saxony, seated at the mouth of the Elbe, 13 miles NW. of Gluckstadt.

BRUNSWICK, the duchy of, a country of Germany, fertile both in corn and pastures, and divided into three principalities, Wolfen buttle, Grubenhagen, and Celenberg, which also comprehended the duchy of Gottingen. The principality of Wolfen buttle had its own dukes; but the other two belonged to the elector of Hanover. The territories of the house of Brunswick were more extensive; the principal of which were the duchies of Brunswick and Lunenberg, with the county of Danneberg, annexed thereto.

BRUNSWICK, a populous city, capital of the duchy of Brunswick, and the residence of the prince of Brunswick Wolfenbuttle, seated on the river Ocker, 7 miles N. of Wolfenbuttle, and 47 W. NW. of Magdeburg.

BRUNSWICK, a city of New Jersey, in N. America, on the SW. bank of the Raritan river, 12 miles above Perth Amboy. The inhabitants have a considerable inland trade, and many small vessels. Here is also a flourishing college, called Queen's College. Lat. 40. 20. N. lon. 74. 10. W.

BRUNSWICK NEW, the NW. division of Acadia in North America. It is separated from Nova Scotia by the river St. Croix on the E. having Canada on the W. and N. and the Straits of New York and New England on the S. Its capital is Frederick's Town. Since the conclusion of the American war, the emigration of loyalists to this province from the United States has been considerable. Large tracts of land have been cultivated, and several new towns laid out, among which are Shelburne, Parr Town, Digby, and New Edinburgh. The province is now rapidly advancing in population and fertility.

BRUNT, s. [brunst, Belg.] the onset, attack, or shock of an enemy; the force, violence, and stroke of a cannon. Generally used with the verb bear. To bear the brunt, is to sustain the attack of an enemy. Figuratively, any difficulty, or cross and unexpected accident.

BRUSH, s. [brasse, Fr.] an instrument made of bristles or hair fastened to wood, used for sweeping rooms, cleaning clothes, or painting. Figuratively, a slight attack or skirmish in war.

To BRUSH, v. a. to clear a thing of dust by means of a brush; to touch in one's passage. Used with up, to paint, to make a thing look well by a brush. Used neuterly, to pass quick and close to a person, joined with the particle by. "Brush'd regardless by." Dryd. To skim upon the surface; to pass along so as just to touch the surface in the passage, used with over.

BRUSHER, s. a person who makes use of a brush; one who cleans with a brush.

BRUSHWOOD, s. rough, woody thickets.

BRUSHY, a. rough or shaggy like a brush.

BRUSSELS, a large city in Flanders, capital of the late Austrian Brabant, about 7 miles in circumference. The streets are spacious, and the houses pretty high. In Brussels are 7 squares or market-places. The great market place is elegant and beautiful. The public buildings are sumptuous, and here are numerous fountains. Brussels is celebrated for its lace, camlets, and tapestry. It is seated on the river Senne, 22 miles S. of Antwerp, 26 S. E. of Ghent, and 148 N. by E. of Paris. Lat. 50. 51. N. lon. 4. 28. E.

To BRUSTLE, v. a. [brasthan, Sax.] to crackle; to make a noise like the rustling of armour, or that of rich silks. Figuratively, to swagger, hector, or approach a person in a threatening manner.

BRUTAL, a. [brutal, Fr.] that belongs to a beast, opposed to rational. Figuratively, inhuman, cruel, savage; without, or contrary to, reason and the principles of humanity.

BRUTALITY, s. [brutalité, Fr.] a disposition or behaviour contrary to the laws of reason and dictates of politeness and humanity; churlishness, savageness.

To BRUTALIZE, v. n. [brutaliser, Fr.] to grow morose, savage, inhuman, and like a brute. Actively, to make brutal.

BRUTALLY, ad. inhumanly; churlishly.

BRUTE, a. [brutus, Lat.] senseless; savage; inhuman; void of all the tender and social affections; not having the use of reason; rough; uncivilized.

BRUTE, s. an animal without the principle of reason; a beast. Figuratively, applied to men as a term of the most mortifying reproach, and implying a person void of humanity, and an enemy to reason.

BRUTISH, a. resembling a beast, either in form or qualities. Figuratively, rude; inhuman; senseless; stupidly ignorant; regardless of reason, or contrary to its dictates.

BRUTON, a town of Somersetshire, with a market on Saturday. It is seated on the river Brew, and is a well built and well inhabited town, with a handsome church, a free-school, and a stately alms-house, and has a manufacture of serges and stockings. It is situated 12 miles SE. of Wells, and 109 W. of London.

BRYONY, s. [bryonia, Lat.] The white bryony is a plant with hand-shaped leaves, rough with callous points on both surfaces, found in hedges. The black bryony has heart-shaped undivided leaves, and is the same with ladyseal.

BUB, s. a cant word for strong malt liquor.

BUBBLE, s. [bobbel, Belg.] a small bladder of water; a little round drop of any fluid filled and expended with air, and destroyed by the least touch. Figuratively, something easily destroyed; a cheat, or the person cheated.

To BUBBLE, v. n. to rise in bubbles; to make a gentle noise as it runs, applied to water issuing from some narrow place, or its fountain head. Actively, to cheat, or defraud by projects of imaginary advantages.

BUBBLER, s. one who cheats by projects, promising great advantages for the loan of money.

BUBO, s. [from boubon, the groin, Gr.] a tumour or swelling, attended with an inflammation in the groin, &c. A malignant bubo is owing to some contagious disease, or venereal taint. A mild bubo takes its rise from the stagnation of glutinous and inspissated blood.

BUBONOCELE, commonly called A RUPTURE, s. [from boubon, the groin, and kele, a swelling, Gr.] in surgery, a tumor in the groin, formed by the prolapsus, or falling down of the intestines, omentum, or both, through the processes of the peritonæum, and rings of the abdominal muscles.

BUCCANEERS, or BUCCANIERS, s. a cant word for the privateers and pirates in America. The term was derived from the manner in which these free-booters, who were many of them savages, were accustomed to prepare their meat, by hanging it in the smoke, which they called buccaning it.

BUCEROS, s. in natural history, a species of raven found in the East Indies, China, and Tartary, distinguished by its large head, and a very considerable swelling towards the base of its beak.

BUCHAN, a district of Aberdeenshire, in Scotland.

BUCK, s. [buck, Brit.] the male of the fallow deer, rabbits, hares, goats, &c. Among deer it is as corpulent, and has horns like a hart, different only in size, and growing out of the head like fingers in the hand. Likewise a cant name of a club or society, so called from their use of these hunting terms, calling their president the grand buck, &c.

BUCK, s. [bauche, Teut.] ley made of ashes for washing linen. Figuratively, linen.

To BUCK, v. a. when from buck, signifying a deer, it denotes to copulate; and when from buck, signifying ley, it implies to wash clothes in ley.

BUCKBEAN, s. the fringed water-lily. Also a sort of trefoil, frequent in ponds and pits.

BUCKENHAM, a town of Norfolk, with a market on Saturday.—12 miles E. of Thetford, 96 N. E. of London.

BUCKET, s. [baquet, Fr.] a wooden vessel resembling one half of a barrel or pipe, fitted with a handle formed like a semi-circle, and used to draw water out of a well; likewise a leathern vessel of the same form, used in fires to serve the engines with water. See PAIL.

BUCKINGHAM, the chief town of Buckinghamshire, with a market on Saturday. It is situated on a low ground, on the river Ouse, by which it is almost surrounded, and over it are three handsome stone bridges. There was formerly a strong castle in the middle of the town. There is a county jail, built not many years since. It is a corporation, sends two members to parliament, and had the title of a duchy. It is 25 miles N. E. of Oxford, and 57 N. W. of London.

BUCKINGHAMSHIRE a county of England, bounded on the N. by Northamptonshire, on the E. by Bedfordshire, Hertfordshire, and Middlesex, on the W. by Oxfordshire, and on the S. by Berkshire, from which it is separated by the river Thames. It is about 39 miles in length, and 18 in breadth, it contains 8 hundreds, 185 parishes, 15 market-towns, of whom six send members to parliament, and above 111,400 inhabitants. The air is healthy, and the soil is rich being mostly chalk or marl. The most general manufacture is bone-lace and paper. The principal rivers besides the Thames, are the Ouse and Coln; the chief town is Buckingham.

BUCKLE, s. [buccel, Brit.] an instrument made of a link of metal with a tongue and catch, used to fasten the straps of shoes, the harness of horses, &c. A curled lock of hair; or hair in a state to make it curl.

To BUCKLE, v. a. to fasten with a buckle. Figuratively, to marry, or join. To confine, used with the particle in. To apply to, used with to. To comb a wig in curls; to prepare hair for taking a curl.

To BUCKLE, v. n. [buchen, Teut.] to bend or bow under a weight, used with under. Figuratively, to bend one's inclinations, to apply, or attend to.

BUCKLER, s. [from bucularium, the middle point of a shield, barbarous, Lat.] a shield still used by the Spaniards in their night-walks.

BUCKMAST, s. the fruit or mast of the beach-tree.

BUCKRAM, s. [bougran, Fr.] a thick sort of linen or hempen cloth, stiffened with gum, chiefly used in the linings of clothes, to sustain and make them keep their form.

BUCKTHORN, s. a tree that bears a purging berry.

BUCKWHEAT, a plant, otherwise called French wheat.

BUCOLIC, s. [from boukolikos, belonging to oxen, Gr.] pastoral poetry.

BUD, s. [bouton, Fr.] in botany, the small swellings or prominences on the bark of a tree, which turn to shoots, &c. Among gardeners, it denotes the first tops of sallad plants; and in husbandry, a weaned calf of the first year, being so named from the budding of its horns. Figuratively, the beginning, first appearance, tender and immature state of a thing.

To BUD, v. n. to swell with gems or little prominences. Applied to vegetables, to put forth shoots. Figuratively, to be in the bloom of youth. Actively, in gardening, to inoculate by inserting a bud into a tree.

BUDA, or OFFEN, the capital of Lower Hungary, situated on the side of a hill, on the W. bank of the Danube, opposite Pest; formerly the residence of the kings of Hungary. The public buildings are elegant, its warm baths very magnificent, and in the adjacent country are vineyards, producing a red wine in great estimation. It is 125 miles E. S. E. of Vienna, and 560 N. W. of Constantinople. Lat. 47. 25. N. lon. 18. 22. E.

BUDDA, one of the Ceylonese gods, whom they suppose to have arrived at supremacy, after successive transmigration, from the lowest state of an insect, through the various species of living animals. There have been three deities of this name, each of which is supposed to reign as long as a bird is employed in removing a hill of sand half a mile high and six miles round, by a single grain in a thousand years.

BUDDESDALE, a town of Suffolk, with a market on Thursday. It is seated in a valley, and has a small chapel, and an endowed grammar-school. It is 15 miles N. E. of Bury, and 87 N. E. of London.

BUDDLE, s. a place where miners wash their ore to fit it for the furnace.

To BUDGE, v. n. [bouger, Fr.] to stir; to move.

BUDGE, s. the fur of lambs.

BUDGE, a. stiff; surly; formal.

BUDGET, s. [bougette, Fr.] a small bag; that which is contained in a budget; a store or stock.

BUDLEY, a town of Devonshire, situated on the river Otter, near its mouth. Market on Monday.

BUENOS AYRES, (so called on account of the salubrity of the air) is one of the most considerable sea-ports of South America, and capital of the province of Paraguay, or La Plata, and the seat of a viceroy. Its situation is on the south side of the river La Plata, 50 leagues within its mouth, (where the river is seven leagues broad) in a country truly paradisaical, being overspread with a beautiful verdure as far as the eye can reach. It contains upwards of 70,000 inhabitants; and provisions are in the greatest abundance. The streets are straight and broad, and the buildings tolerably regular. The productions of the country are, indigo, tobacco, vincenta wool, cotton, tiger skins, seal skins, copperas, figs, dried tongues, dried beef, hams, saffron, cochineal, cocoa, hemp, hair, wheat, gums, drugs, gold, silver, and precious stones, besides tallow and hides, which may be considered the great staple, 1,500,000 of the latter being annually exported.—On June 28th, 1806, this town and its dependencies surrendered to an English squadron under Sir Home Popham, seconded by about 1500 land forces commanded by major-general Beresford; and treasure to the amount of more than a million of dollars fell into the hands of the victors, and was conveyed to England. But scarcely did the mercantile speculations which this conquest had invited begin to abate, when the mortifying intelligence was received, that the Spaniards had, with a far superior force, retaken the place on the 12th of August following; by which the British army became prisoners of war, and captured property (not removed) to the amount of more than three millions of dollars, fell again into their hands. On July 5th, 1807, this place was again attacked by the British, under general Whitelock; but the consequences were disastrous: the troops being imprudently marched directly into the town, were fired upon on all sides; and after suffering severely in this situation, the total evacuation of S. America was agreed to on the day following.—Lat. 34. 35. S. lon. 58. 26. W.

BUFF, s. [from buffalo, Fr.] a sort of leather prepared from the skin of the buffalo; used for waist belts, pouches, and military accoutrements.

BUFFALO, s. [Ital.] an animal of the ox kind, but wild, with large, crooked, and resupinated horns; equal in size to our largest oxen, with an aspect fierce and terrible, the eyes big and prominent, the ears long and patulous, the neck thick and short, the flesh hanging loose under the throat. It is a native of the East, but brought into Italy, and other parts of Europe, where it is used as a beast of burden and draught.

BUFFET, s. [buffeto, Ital.] a blow on one side of the head given with the fist. Figuratively, indignity, persecution, or hardship.

BUFFET, s. [buffet, Fr.] a kind of cupboard or closet formed with an arch at the top, and furnished with shelves, used to place china and plate in for show and ornament.

To BUFFET, v. a. [buffeter, Fr.] to strike on the head with the hand; to box. Figuratively, to strike any thing forcibly with the hand. Used neuterly, with the particle for, to box, or fight with the fists.

BUFFETER, s. one who fights with his fists; a boxer.

BUFFLEHEADED, a. that has a head like a buffalo. Figuratively, dull, stupid.

BUFFOON, s. [buffon, Fr.] one who endeavours to excite laughter by low jests and antic postures; a merry-andrew, a jack-pudding.

BUFFOONERY, s. the using low jests, ridiculous pranks, or scurrilous mirth, to extort a laugh from the company.

BUFONITÆ, s. in natural history, a kind of extraneous fossils, called lycodontes, or wolf's teeth.

BUG, s. [bug, Brit.] an insect of a roundish flat form, a darkish red colour, which breeds in household stuff and blisters where it bites, is produced from a nit, and stinks when killed. Likewise a flying insect formed like a beetle, named a May bug, or May fly.

BUG, or BUGBEAR, s. [from bug, Brit.] an object which raises terror; a walking spectre; a ghost; generally applied to the imaginary terror used to frighten children.

BUGGINESS, s. the state of being infected with bugs.

BUGGY, a. abounding with bugs.

BUGLE, or BUGLE-HORN, s. a small bending horn; a hunting horn.

BUGLE, s. a shining bead, of a cylindrical form, and made of glass. Also a plant.

To BUILD, (bild) v. a. [the preter. I built, or have built; bilden, Belg.] to make or raise houses, &c. Figuratively, to raise on any thing as a support or foundation.

BUILDER, s. one who constructs or raises houses, &c.

BUILDING, s. a fabric or place erected for shelter from the weather, for dwelling, or for the purposes of religion, security, or magnificence. Building is used, in its primary sense, for the art and act of raising edifices.

BUILTH, a town of Brecknockshire, pleasantly situated on the river Wye, over which it has a bridge, into Radnorshire. It consists of about 100 houses, and its inhabitants have a trade in stockings and flannels. It is 16 miles N. of Brecknock, and 171 W. N. W. of London. Markets on Monday and Saturday.

BULAM, a fertile island of Africa, about 8 leagues long, and 3 broad, at the mouth of the Rio Grande. An attempt has been lately made to colonize it by free negroes, under the direction of the Bulam Association in England; as also to establish a friendly intercourse with the natives, and a trade unpolluted by slavery; but the settlement was destroyed by Africans from the continent.

BULB, s. [bulbus, Lat.] in botany, a thick root, nearly round; of which there are two species. 1. The tunicated, or coated. 2. The squamous, or scaly.

BULBACEOUS, a. [bulbaceus, Lat.] the same as bulbous, but not so proper.

BULBOUS, a. [bulbosus, Lat.] that resembles or contains a bulb; that has a round root.

BULFINCH, s. a song-bird; so called from its red colour; noted for imitating wind music, particularly the flageolet.

BULGARIA, a province of Turkey in Europe, bounded on the N. by Wallachia, on the E. by the Black Sea, on the S. by Romania and Macedonia, and on the W. by Servia. The principal towns are Viddin, Sophia, Nicopoli, and Silistria; the last of which is partly inhabited by Tartars.

To BULGE, v. n. [originally written bilge, which signified the lower part of a ship] to spring a leak by striking the bottom on some rock or place which makes a hole, or forces off some of the timber, applied to a ship; to founder. To stick or jut out, used with the particle from.

BULIMY, s. [from bous, an ox, and limos, hunger, Gr.] in medicine, an enormous appetite, attended with faintings, and coldness at the extreme parts.

BULK, s. [bulcke, Belg.] size, dimensions. Used with the word people, &c. the greatest part, and sometimes the vulgar. The human frame. Applied to a ship, the whole space in the bow for the stowage of goods; likewise the cargo. To break bulk, is to open or unload any part of the cargo.

BULK, s. [bielcke, Dan.] in building, a part of a building projecting from the window, like a table, and used either for placing commodities on, by way of show; or for porters to pitch their burdens.

BULKINESS, s. the largeness of a thing; the greatness of size or dimensions.

BULKY, a. of great size or stature.

BULL, s. [bulle, Belg.] the male of black cattle, kept generally for propagating the species; any thing made in the form of a bull. In astronomy, one of the twelve signs of the zodiac, into which the sun enters in April. A blunder or contradiction. In ecclesiastic history, an instrument made out the Roman or pope's chancery, sealed with lead, and of the same nature with the edicts of secular princes. The seal presents on one side the heads of St. Peter and St. Paul, and on the other, the name of the pope, and the year of his pontificate.

BULL, in composition, sometimes denotes largeness, as bull head, and in such cases it is not to be looked on as derived from the English noun, but from the Greek particle.

BULLACE, s. a wild sour plum.

BULL-BAITING, s. [from bul and batan, Sax.] the worrying or teazing a bull, by setting dogs on him.

BULL-DOG, s. a species of dogs of a strong make, round head, noted for never quitting its hold whenever it has fastened, and used in baiting bulls, which they generally seize by the nose, and pin to the ground.

BULLET, s. [boulet, Fr.] an iron or leaden ball or shot used to load guns with. According to Mr. Derham, a bullet shot out of a great gun flies a mile in a little above seventeen half seconds, and reckoning the sun's distance 86,051,398 English miles, would be thirty-two years and a half in its passage to it, in its full force. Red-hot bullets are heated in a forge, and used to set a place on fire, containing combustibles. Hollow bullets are made cylindrical, with an opening and fusee at one end, which giving fire to the inside, when in the ground it bursts, and has the same effect as a mine. Chain bullets are two bullets joined by a chain three or four feet long. Branch bullets, two balls joined by a bar of iron five or six inches apart; and two-headed bullets, named likewise angles, are the two halves of a bullet joined by a bar or chain; they are chiefly used in sea-fights, to cut the rigging, masts, &c.

BULL-HEAD, s. figuratively, a stupid person. In natural history, a fish, called likewise the miller's thumb: its head is broad and flat, disproportionate to its body.

BULLION, s. [billon, Fr.] gold and silver in the mass, neither wrought nor coined; so named either when they are first melted from the ore, or after they are refined and cast into ingots, or bars.

BULLOCK, s. the same with the ox, or gelded bull.

BULLY, s. a person who makes use of threatening expressions, and insolent behaviour, with great show of courage, but possessed of great cowardice. In low language, used for one who attends a strumpet, and espouses her quarrels.

To BULLY, v. a. to behave with noisy insolence and personated courage, in order to frighten a person into any measure or compliance.

BULRUSH, s. a large rush, growing in the sea, rivers, and in moist places.

BULWARK, s. [bolwerke, Belg.] a fortification or bastion. Figuratively, a security or protection.

BUM, s. [bomme, Belg.] that part of the posteriors on which a person sits. Used in composition, to convey the idea of reproach, or something low and despicable, as in the following word, bum-bailiff.

BUMBAILIFF, s. a person employed to execute a writ, or arrest a person; a bailiff of the meanest sort.

BUMP, s. a swelling occasioned by a blow.

To BUMP, v. a. to kick a person, or strike him with the knee in the breech. To make a loud noise; applied to that made by the bittern.

BUMPER, s. [perhaps a corruption from bon pere, it being customary in Italy to drink the pope's health in full glasses] a cup or glass filled up to the brim, or as full as it can hold.

BUMPKIN, s. [boomken, Belg.] a person who has not had the benefit of a polite education, but is gross in his conceptions, rude or unpolished in his behaviour, and void of experience with respect to the world; a rustic, or clown.

BUNCH, s. [buncker, Dan.] any prominence, hard knob, or swelling, rising above the surface of a thing. Many things of the same kind growing together. A cluster, applied to vegetables. Several things collected, or tied together at one of their extremities.

To BUNCH, v. n. to grow in knobs or protuberances. To swell, used with out.

BUNCHBA'CKED, a. having bunches on the back; hump-backed; crooked, owing to the dislocation of the back or shoulder bones.

BUNCHINESS, s. the quality of being uneven with respect to surface; growing in knobs or clusters, opposed to smoothness.

BUNDLE, s. [byndle, Sax.] a parcel of goods, or collection of things wrapped or tied together, including the secondary idea of being easily portable.

To BUNDLE, v. a. to tie or wrap several things together. Figuratively, to be included or collected together; to be comprehended or connected.

BUNG, s. [bing, Brit.] a stopple of wood, cork, &c. for the bung-hole of a cask.

To BUNG, v. a. to stop a barrel close at its largest vent or hole.

BUNGAY, a town in Suffolk, with a market on Thursday. It is seated on a spot watered by the river Waveny, which separates it from Norfolk. It has two parish churches, one of which is handsome, and in the midst of the town are the ruins of a famous nunnery. It is a good trading town, and the women are employed in knitting worsted stockings. The market is large for corn. It is 14 miles S. of Norwich, and 107 N. of London.

BUNGHOLE, s. a large round hole in a barrel by which it is filled.

To BUNGLE, v. n. to perform any thing in a clumsy awkward manner. Used actively, to botch. Figuratively, to palliate grossly, joined with the particle up.

BUNGLE, s. a botch; an awkward and clumsy performance.

BUNGLER, s. a bad workman; one who does a thing in an ignorant, awkward, or clumsy manner.

BUNGLINGLY, ad. in a bad, clumsy, ignorant, or awkward manner.

BUNN, s. [bunnelo, Span.] in pastry, a cake composed of yeast, flower, and carraway seeds.

BUNT, s. [corrupted according to Skinner from bent] the middle part of a sail formed into a bag, or pouch, that it may contain more wind. Bunt-lines are small lines fastened to the foot, and reeved through little blocks seized to the yard, serving to hoist up the bunt of the sail, that it may be furled with greater ease.

To BUNT, v. n. to swell, used with the particle out.

BUNTER, s. [a cant word] a woman who picks up rags in the street. Used figuratively, as a term of reproach, to convey the idea of a dirty, nasty, mean, and low lived creature.

BUNTING, s. the stuff of which a ship's colours are made. Also a bird of the lark kind.

BUNTINGFORD, a town of Hertfordshire, with a market on Monday. It is a large thoroughfare on the N. road, 7 miles S. of Royston, and 31 N. by W. of London.

BUOY, (boy) s. [boüe, or boye, Fr.] a piece of wood or cork, and sometimes an empty barrel, well closed, floating in the water, tied to a cable fastened to the bottom of the sea, in order to inform pilots and mariners where anchors are dropped in the harbours, where the wrecks of ships are sunk, together with shallow places, sand-banks, and other impediments. The mast buoy is made of a piece of a mast or other piece of wood, which stands out of the water. Buoy is sometimes used for a sea mark, which shews the dangers of difficult passages.

To BUOY, v. a. (boy) to raise above the surface of the water; to keep afloat. Figuratively, to keep any principle or thing from subsiding, or sinking under oppression. To cause a thing to ascend by its specific lightness. Neuterly, to float. Figuratively, to surmount or get the better of all difficulties or impediments.

BUO'YANCY, (boyancy) s. the quality of floating; or that quality which prevents a thing from subsiding, sinking, or descending. The degree of buoyancy depends on the lightness of a substance compared with that of the medium in which it floats, thus cork will swim in water, and vapour will ascend in air, because the specific gravity of cork is less than that of water, and the specific gravity of vapour less than that of common air.

BUO'YANT, (bóyant) a. floating; light; that will not sink. Figuratively, animating or that keeps from dejection.

BURBOT, s. a river fish full of prickles.

BURDEN, s. [spelt more properly burthen; brythen, Sax.] a load, supposed to be as much as a man or a horse can carry. Figuratively, a difficulty, oppression, affliction, or any thing that affects a person with weariness, or becomes irksome; the number of tons or weight a ship can carry. In trade, applied to steel, 180lb. In music, the drone or base of an organ, bagpipe, &c. and the pipe or string which sounds it; hence the words which are repeated at the end of every stanza, are called the burthen of a song. SYNON. By the word burthen we understand a weight possible to be borne; by load, a weight more than we are able to bear. A light burthen is no inelegant expression; but a light load certainly is.

To BURDEN, v. a. to load; to encumber, or put a person to great expence.

BURDENER, s. one who loads. Figuratively, an oppressor.

BURDENOUS, a. that makes a load heavy. Figuratively, grievous, oppressive, irksome; putting a person to great expence, without being of any service to him.

BURDENSOME, a. applied to a very pressing load on the body. Figuratively, applied to afflictions, or the trouble one person gives another, afflicting the mind with great anxiety and distress.

BURDENSOMENESS, s. applied to loads, weight or heaviness. Figuratively, applied to calamities and inconvenences.

BURDOCK, s. a very common plant, with heart-shaped leaves, and purple blossoms; the same with the clot-bur.

BUREAU', (burō) s. [Fr.] a chest of drawers, with the top sloping, and furnished with pigeon-holes to keep writings in.

BURFORD, a town of Oxfordshire, with manufactories of duffels, rugs, and saddles. It is seated on the river Windrush, 71 miles from London. Market on Saturday.

BURGAGE, s. in law a tenure proper to cities and borough towns, whereby lands are held of the king, or other lord, at a certain yearly rent.

BURGAMOT, s. [bergamotte, Fr.] a species of mellow juicy pear. A kind of perfume.

BURGEOIS, (boorjois) s. [bourgeois, Fr.] a small type used by printers. A citizen, a burgess.

BURGESS, s. [bourgeois, Fr.] an inhabitant of a borough or city; or a representative of a borough town in parliament.

BURGH, s. a corporate town or borough.

BURGH, a town of Lincolnshire, 12 miles N. N. E. of Boston, and 133 N. of London. Market on Thursday.

BURGHER, s. [from burg and wær, Sax.] one who has the right of a citizen, or a vote for a parliament-men.

BURGHERSHIP, s. [from burgher, and scyp, Sax.] the dignity, privilege, or office of a burgher.

BURGLARY, s. in law, a felonious breaking and entering a person's house in the night-time, with an intent to commit some felony, whether it be executed or not. If the offence happen in the day-time, it is then called house-breaking, by way of distinction. A reward of 40*l.* is given for apprehending persons guilty of this crime, by 5 Ann. c. 51.

BURGOMASTER, (most properly spelt burghermaster) s. [burgher, and master, Belg.] the chief magistrate of the towns of Holland, Flanders, and Germany, and answers to an alderman and sheriff of London.

BURGOS, a city of Spain, capital of Old Castile, seated partly on a mountain, and extending to the river Arlanzon. The squares, public buildings, and fountains are magnificent, and the walks agreeable. Many manufactories are carried on here. It is 95 miles E. by S. of Leon, and 117 N. of Madrid. Lat. 42. 20. N. lon. 3. 30. W.

BURGUNDY, a ci-devant province on the W. of France. It is fertile in corn, fruits, and excellent wine, and is now formed into the departments of Aube, Côte d'Or, Saone, and Loire, and Yonne.

BURIAL, s. the interring or placing a dead body in the ground. Figuratively, the placing any thing in the earth, or under the water. The burial service is an office of the church, performed at the grave and interment of one of its members.

BURIER, s. he that places or inters a corpse in the grave. Figuratively, that which removes any corpse or other things out of sight. Seldom used.

BURINE, s. [Fr.] a tool used by engravers to make their marks, or etch on metal.

To BURL, v. a. to dress clothes as fullers do.

BURLESQUE, (burlêsk) s. [Fr.] a droll, ludicrous kind of poetry, wherein both persons and things are represented in such a ridiculous light as to excite laughter.

To BURLESQUE, (burlêsk) v. a. to turn, to ridicule; to represent a person or thing in a ludicrous and ridiculous manner.

BURLY, a. tall, or over-grown, applied to stature. Of large dimensions, or very wide, applied to breadth. High-sounding, swelling, or pompous, applied to style.

To BURN, v. a. preter. I burnt, or have burnt; [bernan, Sax.] to consume or destroy by fire; to occasion a wound by fire, or any hot solid body. Neuterly, to be on fire; to kindle. Figuratively, to shine as if in flame. To be violently agitated or inflamed by passion; to make the cheeks glow with heat, or consume like latent fire.

BURN, s. a wound or hurt received from fire.

BURNET, s. a plant, the same with pimpinella.

BURNHAM, a town of Norfolk, seated near the sea, with a good harbour, and a considerable trade in corn, 32 miles N. W. of Norwich, and 126 N. E. of London. Market on Saturday.

BURNHAM, a fishing town of Essex, at the mouth of the river Crouch, which is here called Burnham Water. The Wallfleet and Burnham oysters, are the product of the creek and pits of this river. It is 40 miles E. by N. of London

BURNING, s. the action of fire on some substance, whereby the minute parts are forced from each other, put into violent motion, and some of them assuming the nature of fire themselves, fly off to their proper sphere, while others either ascend in vapours, or are reduced to ashes. Figuratively, flame or fire.

BURNING-GLASS, s. a convex glass which collects the rays of the sun into a point, where wood or other combustible matter being placed, is set on fire. As a wood fire is 45 times hotter than that of the summer-sun, a glass must condense the rays of light 35 times to burn. The burning-glasses made of looking-glasses are much more powerful than those made by lenses, or glasses that transmit the rays of light through them.

To BURNISH, v. a. [burnir, Fr.] to polish any substance so as to make it shine. Neuterly, to grow bright or glossy; to shine with splendor.

BURNISHER, s. one who burnishes or polishes; an instrument used by polishers.

BURNISHING, s. the polishing metals to make them glossy, or shining.

BURNLEY, Lancashire; here are large woollen and cotton manufactures, printing houses, dying houses, mills, &c. It is seated in a very healthy situation, near the Leeds and Liverpool canal, 45 miles S. E. of Lancaster, and 208 N. N. W. of London. Market on Monday.

BURNT, part. pass. of BURN.

BURNT-ISLAND, a town of Fifeshire, with a good, deep, and large harbour. It is seated on a stupendous rock, on the Frith of Forth, 10 miles N. W. of Edinburgh.

BURR, s. the lope or lap of the ear; likewise a sweetbread of meat, especially that of veal.

BURR-REED, s. a kind of plant found in wet ditches, and on banks of rivers.

BURREL, s. [from beurre, Fr.] in gardening, a species of pear, called likewise the red butter pear.

BURREL-FLY, s. in natural history, a winged insect very troublesome to cattle, called likewise the ox fly, gad-bee, or breese.

BURREL-SHOT, s. a sort of case shot, or small bullets, nails, stones, pieces of old iron, &c. put into cases, to be discharged from a piece of ordnance.

BURROW, BERG, BURG, BOROUGH, BURGH, s. [burg, Sax.] a corporate town which sends members to parliament, and formerly applied only to fortified places. The holes made in the ground by rabbits.

To BURROW, v. a. to make holes in the ground like rabbits.

BURSA, anciently Brusa, one of the largest and most beautiful cities of Natolia, containing about 40,000 Turks, 400 families of Jews, 500 of Armenians, and 300 of Greeks. It stands at the foot of mount Olympus, on the edge of a fine plain, covered with mulberry, and various other fruit trees, of the Ottoman dominions. The mosques and caravanseras are elegant, and every house has its fountain. The bezestine is a large structure, full of warehouses and shops, containing all the commodities of the East, beside their own manufactures in silk, stuffs, beautiful carpets, &c. Here, indeed, are the best workmen in Turkey, who are excellent imitators of the tapestry of Italy and France. Bursa is the capital of a province of Natolia Proper, called by the Turks Beesangil, and anciently Bithynia. It is 60 miles S. of Constantinople. Lat. 32. 22. N. lon. 29. 5. E.

BURSAR, s. [bursarius, Lat.] an officer in a college, who receives its monies, and keeps its accounts; a treasurer.

BURSE, s. [bourse, Fr.] an exchange, or place where merchants assemble to transact business.

BURST, s. a separation of the parts of a thing with violence, and attended with noise; an explosion; a sudden and violent action of any kind.

To BURST, v. n. preter. I burst, have ourst, or bursten; [bustan Sax.] to separate or fly asunder with violence; to quit or break away, with the particle from. Used with into, to come in suddenly "She burst into the room." To break, separate and disunite with suddenness and violence.

BURST, or BU'RSTEN, [part. of BURST] in surgery, applied to one who has a rupture.

To BU'RTHEN, v. a. } See BURDEN.
BU'RTHEN, s. }

BU'RTON, a town of Westmoreland, 11 miles N. of Lancaster, and 247 N. N. W. of London. It communicates with all the late inland navigations. Market on Tuesday.

BU'RTON CONSTABLE, a town of Yorkshire, situated between Midland and Richmond. Market on Friday.

BU'RTON STATHER, a small town of Lincolnshire, seated on a hill, near the Trent, on which it has several mills, 30 miles N. W. of Lincoln, and 161 N. by W. of London. Market on Monday.

BU'RTON UPON TRENT, a town of Staffordshire, situated on the river Trent, over which it has a bridge of freestone, a quarter of a mile in length. It consists chiefly of one long street, and has long been noted for its excellent malt and ale, great quantities of which last are exported to London, Leith, the Baltic, &c. It has also manufactures in woollen and cotton, of hats, spades, and other articles, besides forges for forming iron bars. The houses are about 750, and the inhabitants 4000. Besides the Trent, it communicates, by canals, with Liverpool, Bristol, Coventry, and all the late inland navigations. It is 11 miles S. W. of Derby, and 134 N. N. W. of London. A well supplied market for corn and provisions on Thursday.

BU'RWELL, Cambridgeshire, 3 miles N. of Newmarket Heath. On the 8th of September, 1727, a melancholy event took place here: 160 persons, among whom were several young ladies of fortune, being assembled in a barn, on the exhibition of a puppet show, the place took fire, by a careless accident, when only five or six escaped; the bodies of the dead were so disfigured by the fire, and the fall of the roof, &c. that their friends could not recognize them, and they were promiscuously interred in one large grave. A tablet has been here erected in the church to perpetuate the event.

BURY, (common pron. berry, in this and the four next words) s. [burg, Sax.] a dwelling-place or house. Added to the Saxon names, implies that the person or company resided or lived there; thus Aldermanbury seems to intimate that the aldermen resided formerly in that place.

To BU'RY, v. a. to inter a corpse in a grave; to inter with funeral rites; to cover with earth. Figuratively, to conceal or hide.

BU'RYING-PLACE, s. a place set apart for interring bodies; a church-yard.

BU'RY, a town of Lancashire, noted for its manufacture of fustians, half thicks, kerseys calicoes, &c. A melancholy event happened here, July 5th, 1787, by the fall of the theatre, by which more than 300 persons were buried in the ruins: some escaped unhurt; many were killed, and others greatly bruised. Bury is seated on the Irwell, near a canal which goes to Manchester, 36 miles S. E. of Lancaster, and 190 N. N. W. of London. Market on Thursday.

BU'RY ST. EDMUNDS, a town of Suffolk, which contains two parish churches, about 1000 houses, and 7000 inhabitants. It owes its name to a celebrated abbey one of the largest and richest in the kingdom, founded in honour of Edmund, king of the East Angles, who was born, crowned, murdered, and buried here. It is situated in a healthy delightful spot, affording beautiful prospects, (from which it has been called the Montpellier of England) 14 miles nearly E. of Newmarket, and 72 N. N. E. of London. Large market for corn, fish, fowl, &c. on Wednesday and Saturday.

BUSH, [bois, Fr.] a thick shrub.

To BUSH, v. n. to grow thick; to grow in a great number close together.

BU'SHEL, s. [baisseau, Fr.] a measure of capacity for dry goods, as corn, salt, fruit, coals, &c. containing eight gallons, or four pecks, or the eighth part of a quarter of corn, &c.

BU'SHY, a. full of branches. Figuratively, short, but growing in great numbers.

BU'SILESS, (biziless,) a. without employ; at leisure. Figuratively, without the fatigue which attends business.

BU'SILY, (bizily) ad. in an officious inquisitive manner. With an air of seeming hurry from the multiplicity of business.

BU'SINESS, (bisness, or bizness) s. employment; a man's peculiar trade or profession; affairs or concerns. After d., properly, service, advantage, or a means of attaining an end. "A perpetual spring will not do their business." Bent. To do a man's business, is a low and familiar phrase for killing, destroying, or ruining him. SYNON. Business implies an object of industry; affairs, an object of concern. The first implies the hands; the second the mind. The word business, by its having no plural number, intimates a particular employ. By the singular of affairs being seldom in use in the sense before us, that word is understood to mean a variety of transactions.

BUSK, s. [busque, Fr.] a piece of steel or whalebone, worn at the stomacher of a woman's stays, in order to keep them in the proper form, and strengthen them.

BU'SKIN, s. [broseken, Belg.] a kind of short boot worn by the ancients, covering the foot and leg as far as the middle, laced or fastened before; was worn by the dramatic performers in tragedy, and distinguished from the sock worn in comedy, which was of a thinner sole, and consequently lower. Figuratively, tragedy.

BU'SKINED, a. dressed in buskins.

BUSS, s. [from bus, Ir.] a salute given by the lips; distinguished from a kiss, which is given with a greater show of distance or ceremonious kindness. In fishery, a small vessel from 48 to 60 tons burden, used in the herring fishery, from busse, Teut.

To BUSS, v. a. to salute a person with the lips. Figuratively, to touch.

BU'SSARAH, BA'SSORAH, or BA'SRAH, a considerable city and sea-port of Turkey in Asia, in Irac Arabi, on a canal, navigable for vessels of 50 tons, to the Euphrates, 40 miles N. W. of the gulf of Persia. The inhabitants are computed at 50,000.

BUST, s. [busto, Ital.] in sculpture, the figure of a person in relievo, containing only head, shoulders, and stomach, usually placed on a pedestal or console. The Italians use the term for the trunk of the human body, from the neck to the hips.

BU'STARD, s. [bistarde, Fr.] a large wild fowl, which runs very swiftly, and does not readily take to flight.

To BU'STLE, v. n. to set about a thing with activity; to make a great noise or stir about any thing.

BU'STLE, s. a hurry of business; a noise or tumult.

BU'STLER, s. an active, industrious, stirring man.

BU'SY, (bizy, or bissy) a. [from busgian, Sax.] engaged in any employment; active, diligent, officious.

To BU'SY, (bizy) v. a. to keep a person employed; to employ.

BU'SYBODY, (bizy body) s. an officious person meddling with the concerns of other people, offering assistance, and giving advice, without being asked.

BUT, conj. [bute, butan, Sax.] when it diverts or breaks off the thread of a discourse, so as to pursue a different topic, it intimates a stop of the mind, and signifies howbeit. "But to say no more." When applied to limit or restrain the sense to what is expressed, exclusive of all others, it signifies only. "I saw but two planets." When used to imply a thing to be otherwise than it should be, it signifies yet, or nevertheless. "You pray, but it is not that God would bring you to the true religion." Joined with did, or had, it denotes only. "Did but men consider." Tillots. After a comparative noun it has the force of than. "No sooner up, but he privately opened the gate." Guard. No. 167. After the auxilliary verb be, preceded by a negative, it implies otherwise than. "It cannot be but nature has some director." Hooker. Joined with for, it implies, without, or had it not been for. "And but for mischief, you had died for spite." Dryd. After a negative, or question implying a negative it denotes an exception, except. "Who can it be, ye gods, but perjur'd Lycon?" Smith's Phæd.

BUT, s. [bout, Fr.] a limit or boundary. In sea-language, the end of any plank which joins to another on the outside of a ship under water.

BUT-END, s. the broad or blunt end of a thing, or the end on which it rests.

BUTCHER, s. [boucher, Fr.] one who kills, cuts up, and sells the flesh of cattle in a market or his own house. Butcher, is used figuratively for one who is of a barbarous disposition, delights in murder, or the slaughter of mankind.

To BUTCHER, v. a. to slay or kill a beast. Figuratively, to murder one of the human species in a barbarous and cruel manner.

BUTCHER-BIRD, a small bird of prey; the shrike.

BUTCHERLY, ad. in a cruel, barbarous, or bloody manner.

BUTCHER'S-BROOM, s. a tree, the same with the knee-holly.

BUTCHERY, s. the trade of a butcher. Figuratively, the commission of murder, attended with excessive cruelty; cruelty; barbarity.

BUTESHIRE, a county of Scotland, consisting of the islands of Bute, Arran, and Inchmarnoc, which lie in the Frith of Clyde, S. of Argyleshire. They are fertile in corn and pastures; and there is a considerable herring fishery on their coasts. The chief town is Rothsay.

BUTLER, s. [formerly spelt bottiler, that is, one who fills bottles, bouteiller, Fr.] a servant who has the care of the wine and other liquors used in a family.

BUTLERAGE, s. the duty upon wines imported, claimed by the king's butler.

BUTLERSHIP, s. the office of a butler.

BUTMENT, s. [aboutement, Fr.] in architecture, supporters, on or against which the feet of an arch rest; likewise the little places taken out of the yard or ground-plot of an house for a buttery or scullery.

BUTT, s. [butt, Sax.] a vessel or barrel containing 126 gallons of wine, 108 of beer, and from 15 to 22 cwt. of currants.

BUTT, s. [but, Fr.] the place or mark which a person is to hit in shooting. Figuratively, the point or object to which any person's measures are made by a push in fencing; a person who is the object of ridicule to a whole company.

To BUTT, v. a. to strike or give a blow with the head, applied to the method of attack used by a ram.

BUTTER, s. [buttere, Sax.] a fat and unctuous substance, made from cream by churning. Suffolk, being a good soil, is famous for very good butter. Butter of antimony, of bismuth, &c. are chemical preparations of those substances, so called on account of their consistence resembling that of butter.

To BUTTER, v. a. to spread or pour butter upon any thing.

BUTTERBUMP, s. a fowl; the same with bittern.

BUTTERBUR, s. [petasites, Lat.] a plant used in medicine, and grows wild in great plenty by the sides of ditches.

BUTTERFLOWER, s. a yellow flower, with which the fields abound in the month of May.

BUTTERFLY, s. [butterfluge, Sax.] in natural history, a beautiful insect produced from an egg, eruca-worm, caterpillar, and nymph or aurelia. The wonders of the different stages before it arrives to its maturity, and the profusion of splendor which appears in its structure, when applied to the butterfly state, would require too much room to expatiate on here.

BUTTERJAGS, s. a plant, the same with the yellow medick, or snail-shell.

BUTTERIS, s. in farriery, an instrument of steel set in a wooden handle, used in paring the foot, or cutting the hoof of a horse.

BUTTERMERE WATER, a lake of Cumberland, near the source of the Cocker. The lakes of Buttermere and Lowswater are not so extensive as those of the Derwent or Keswick, but quite as beautiful, and the country about them is as mountainous and romantic as Borrowdale.

BUTTERMILK, s. the whey separated from the cream in making butter.

BUTTERPRINT, s. a piece of carved wood used to mark butter.

BUTTERWORT, s. in botany, the pinguicula.

BUTTERY, a. having the appearance or qualities of butter.

BUTTERY, s. the room where provisions are laid up.

BUTTOCK, s. the broad, thick, fleshy part of a man, or beast, joining to the hip. The buttock of a ship is her full breadth right astern.

BUTTON, s. [bottun, Brit.] a small flattish round ball made of metal, or wood covered with silk or hair, sewed to the clothes to fasten any part of dress together. Figuratively, a knob or ball. In botany, the round head of a plant; a bud. In carpentry, a piece of wood moving upon a nail or screw, used to keep a door close. In smithery, a brass knob of a lock, serving to open or shut a door. In chemistry, the small round piece of metal, which is found at the bottom of a crucible, after a metalic ore or an oxyde of metal has been reduced. In confectionary, a small sweet cake. In natural history, the sea-urchin, a kind of crab-fish, with prickles instead of feet.

To BUTTON, v. a. to sew buttons on a garment; to close or fasten the parts of a garment together with buttons. Figuratively, to inclose.

BUTTONHOLE, s. the hole made in a garment to receive and fasten the button in.

BUTTRESS, s. [from aboutir, Fr.] in architecture, a kind of butment serving to prop or support the side of a building or wall. Figuratively, a prop, or support of any opinion or cause.

To BUTTRESS, v. a. to prop, support, or secure from falling.

BUTWINK, s. a bird.

BUTYRA'CEOUS, or BUTY'ROUS, a. [from butyrum, Lat.] having the properties or qualities of butter.

BU'XOM, a. [buesum, Sax.] obedient; tractable. Figuratively, void of resistance; yielding, or giving way. Gay, lively, brisk, wanton, jolly.

BU'XOMLY, ad. in a wanton, lively, gay, or amorous manner.

BU'XOMNESS, s. wantonness, gaiety.

BU'XSTEAD, or BUCKSTEAD, a village in Sussex, 10 miles S. S. E. of East Grinstead.

BU'XTON, a town in Derbyshire, one of the wonders of the Peak, having nine wells that rise near the source of the river Wye. Their waters were noted in the times of the Romans. Although hot and sulphureous, they are palatable; they create an appetite and remove obstructions, and, if bathed in, afford relief in scorbutic rheumatisms, nervous cases, &c. It is much resorted to in summer. The public rooms are in an elegant building, erected by the Duke of Devonshire. It is of the Doric order, and under it are a piazza and shops. Buxton has a manufacture of cotton, and is situated in an open, healthy country, with a variety of fine views, 28 miles from Manchester, 22 N. W. of Derby, and 160 N. N. W. of London.

To BUY, (by) v. a. [bicgean, Sax.] to purchase a thing by money, or the exchange of any other commodity. Figuratively, to exchange one thing for another. To bribe, or corrupt by bribery.

BU'YER, (by'er) s. he that purchases a thing with money, &c.

To BUZZ, v. n. [bizzen, Tent.] to hum, or make a noise like bees, flies, or wasps.

To BUZZ, v. a. to whisper. Used with abroad, to divulge, publish, or spread a report or rumour.

BUZZ, s. the humming sound of bees; a whisper, or talk,

BU'ZZARD, s. [busard, Fr.] a degenerate kind of hawk. Figuratively, a person of mean parts; a blockhead or dunce.

BU'ZZER, s. a secret whisperer, or one who endeavours, by false rumours, to alienate the affections of another.

BY, prep. [bi, big, Sax.] after words signifying action, it implies the agent, cause, means, manner; and is used after verbs neuter for the instrument. After quantity it expresses the proportion. At the end of a sentence, it implies imitation or conformity. "A model to build others by." Arbuth. After an adjective of the comparative degree, it denotes the difference. "Shorter by the head." Applied to place or situation, it denotes nearness. Joined to the pronouns himself, herself, &c. it signifies the exclusion or absence of all others. After keep, it signifies, possession, or ready for use. "He kept some of the spirit by him." Boyle. In forms of swearing, it signifies a particularizing, or specifying the object. Used adverbially, it signifies near, or at a small distance, applied to place. Passing, applied to motion; and presence, when used with be. "I will not be by." Shak. By and by, signifies a short time, or shortly. Used substantively, for something which is not the direct or immediate object of a person's regard; generally used with the preposition by. "By the by." Dryd. This word is commonly wrote bye, and as it distinguishes it from the preposition, should be generally adopted for the sake of perspicuity.

BY, or BYE, in composition, implies something out of the direct way, as by-road; something irregular, private, or selfish, as by-end; something private, opposed to that which is by public authority, as a by-law.

BY-END, s. private, or self-interest, opposed to public spirit, and conveying an idea of reproach.

BY-GONE, a. past: peculiar to the Scotch.

BY-LAW, s. a law made by corporations, or court-leets, for the better government of cities, &c. in cases which are not provided for by the public laws, but no ways opposite or contrary to them.

BY-MA'TTER, s. something which is accidental, and has no connection with the main subject.

BY-NAME, s. a nickname, name of reproach, or accidental appellation.

BY-PAST, a. past: peculiar to the Scotch.

BY-PATH, s. a private path, opposed to a public path.

BY-ROAD, s. an unfrequented road.

BY-WAY, s. a private and obscure way.

BY-WORD, s. [bi-word, Sax.] a saying, proverb, or term of reproach.

BYZA'NTINE, s. See BIZANTINE.

C.

C THE third letter in the English alphabet, is supposed by some to have been borrowed from the Hebrew, by others from the Grecian. It is sounded by pressing the breath between the tongue, raised to the roof of the mouth near the palate, and the lips open. Before the vowels, a, o, u, and all consonants, it is pronounced hard, though somewhat softer than the k, as in cage, cat, cut: but before i, e, and y, it has a sound like the s, but somewhat more sharp, as in cit, cell, cyder; before an h, it has a peculiar sound, between the hardness of the k and the softness of the s, as in chain, cheese; but in words derived from the French, it is sounded like an s before h, as in chaise, chicane, which are pronounced shaize, shicane. It has been customary to add a k to it, when it comes at the end of words, as in logick; but moderns seem now to have dropped it as useless, writing logic, critic, music, &c. which is certainly to be commended, not only as being more agreeable to the etymology of words derived from the Latin, but likewise confirmed by the practice of the Anglo Saxons, from whom we have borrowed the best part of our language. Used as a figure, it stands for 100, and when double CC, 200. When placed before a name, it signifies Caius, Cæsar, &c. With Roman lawyers, it signified to condemn from condemno. See A. When doubled, it signifies consuls. In commerce, it is used by merchants to mark their books. In music, it denotes the highest part of a thorough bass.

CAB, s. [Heb.] a Hebrew measure, containing about three pints English, or the eighteenth part of an ephah.

CABA'L, s. [cabale, Fr.] a body of men united in some design to disturb or change the administration of a state, distinguished from party, in the same degree as few from many. Figuratively, an intrigue or plot to introduce a change in an administration.

To CABA'L, v. n. [cabaler, Fr.] to form plots.

CA'BALA, s. [Chald.] properly signifies tradition, and is the name of a mysterious kind of science, thought to have been delivered by revelation to the ancient Jews, and transmitted by oral tradition to those of our times; serving for interpretation to the books both of nature and Scripture. It consisted principally in the combination of particular words, letters, and numbers, by means whereof the rabbins pretended to discover things future, and to see clearly into the sense of many difficult passages of Scripture.

CA'BALISTS, s. a sect among the Jews who interpret Scripture.

CABALI'STIC, or CABALI'STICAL, a. relating to the cabalists; mystical.

CABA'LLER, s. one who enters into plots and intrigues to disturb and change the administration of any government.

CA'BARET, s. [Fr.] in France, is a tavern.

CA'BBAGE, s. in botany, the brassica, a kitchen plant with large, fleshy, and glaucous-coloured leaves. Linnæus ranges it in the second sect of his 15th class, joining the turnip, navew, and rocket to it; and its species are eight: the varieties of the first being eleven, and those of the third sort two.

To CA'BBAGE, v. a. to defraud a person of part of his cloth. Neuterly, to form a head; as, the plants begin to cabbage.

CA'BIN, s. [chabin, Brit.] a little hut or cottage. On board a ship, small apartments, of different dimensions, for the officers to lie in.

To CA'BIN, v. n. to live in a cabin. Figuratively, to live or lie in any narrow or small place.

CA'BINED, a. belonging to a cabin. Figuratively, narrow, or belonging to a bed-chamber.

CA'BINET, s. [cabinet, Fr.] among joiners, a kind of press or chest with several doors and drawers for preserving curiosities, or keeping clothes. Figuratively, a room in which private consultations are held. Hence a cabinet-council is that which is held with great privacy, and wherein the most important articles which concern a state are determined.

CA'BINET-MAKER, s. one who makes cabinets, chests of drawers, and other wooden furniture for chambers, or dining rooms.

CA'BLE, s. [cabl, Brit.] a thick, large, strong, three-strand rope, from three to twenty inches in diameter, fastened to an anchor to hold the ship when she rides. When two pieces of cable are spliced together, it is called a shot of the cable.

CA'BLED, a. belonging to, or resembling cables. Cabled flutes, in architecture, are those which are filled up with pieces in the form of a cable. In heraldry, a cabled cross is that which is formed of the two ends of a ship's cable.

CABO'CHED, a. in heraldry, applied to the head of a beast cut off behind the ears by a section parallel to the face.

CA'BUL, CABULI'STAN, or ZABULI'STAN, anciently a province of Persia, but now a separate kingdom. It is bounded on the W. and SW. by Persia, on the N. by Usbeck Tartary, and on the E. and S. by India. The country consists of mountains constantly covered with snow, hills of moderate height and easy ascent, rich plains, and stately forests, and these enlivened by numerous streams. It produces every article necessary for human life, with a variety of delicate fruits and flowers. The city of Cabul is the capital of the province. It is situated near the foot of the Himdoo-Ko, or Indian Caucasus, near the source of the Attock. Its situation is romantic and pleasant, having within its reach the fruits and productions of the temperate and torrid zones. It has spacious caravanseras and palaces; and is 580 miles NW. of Delhi, and 176 NE. of Candahar. Lat. 34. 36. lon. 69. 58. E.

CA'BURE, in natural history, a small beautiful Brazilian bird, of the owl kind.

CA'BURNS, s. small ropes used in a ship.

CA'CAO, or CA'COA, s. a nut about the size of a common almond, the fruit of a tree very common in the West Indies. The fruit, if good, has a brown and pretty even skin or peel; and when it is taken off, the kernel must appear full, plump, and shining, of a hazel-nut colour, very dark on the outside, a little more reddish within, of a bitterish and astringent taste, without any greenish or musty savour. It is one of the most oily fruits which nature produces, and never grows rank, how old soever it be. Of this fruit is made an excellent conserve, as also chocolate.

CA'CHALOT, in natural history, a genus of animals of the cetaceous kind, one of which yields the spermaceti, and is commonly called the spermaceti whale.

CACHE'XY, (kakéksy) s. [from kakos, evil, and exis habit, Gr.] an ill habit of body, or such a distemperature of the humours as hinders nutrition, and weakens the vital and animal functions.

CACHE'CTIC, or CACHE'CTICAL, (kakéctic or kakéktical) a. having an ill habit of body.

CACHINNA'TION, (kakinnáshon) s. [cachinnatio, Lat.] a loud laughter, or what we call a horse laugh.

CA'CKLE, s. the noise made by a goose or fowl.

To CA'CKLE, v. n. [kaeckelen, Brit.] to make a noise like a goose; applied likewise to that of a hen. Figuratively, to laugh heartily.

CA'CKLER, s. a fowl that cackles. Figuratively, a person who divulges a secret; a tell-tale; a tattler.

CACOCHY'MY, (kakoky'my) s. [from kakos, ill, and chumos a humour, Gr.] in medicine, a vicious or corrupt state of the vital humours.

CACODE'MON, s. [from kakos, evil, and daiman, a demon, Gr.] an evil spirit, or ghost; any imaginary frightful monster, created in the minds of fearful and superstitious people. With astrologers, it is the twelfth horse in a scheme of the heavens, so called from the pretended terror of its prognostication.

CACOETHES, s. [from kakos evil, and ethos manners, Gr.] in medicine, an epithet applied by Hippocrates to malignant and difficult distempers. In surgery, it is an inveterate disease, breaking out in boils or blains, hardly curable.

CACO'PHONY, (kakófony) s. [from kakos ill, and phone sound, Gr.] in grammar and rhetoric, the meeting together of letters, syllables, or words, which form a harsh and disagreeable sound.

To CACU'MINATE, v. a. [cacumino, Lat.] to sharpen.

CADA'VEROUS, a. [cadaverosus, Lat.] having the appearance or qualities of a dead body.

CA'DDIS, s. a kind of tape or ribbon. In natural history, a kind of worm or grub found in a case of straw, derived from coddc, Sax. a bag.

CADE, a. soft, tender, tame, delicate. In husbandry, a cade lamb, is one that is bred in a house; a house lamb. Hence, to cade, the verb, to bring up tenderly.

CADE, s. [cadus, Lat.] a cag, cask, or barrel. A cade of herrings is a vessel containing 500, and a cade of sprats, 1000.

CA'DENCE, s. [cadence, Fr.] a fall, decline, or descent. In music, cadence is a certain rest either at the end of a song, or of some of its parts into which it is divided, as into members or periods. Cadence, in dancing, is when the several steps and motions follow or answer to the different notes or measure of the music.

CA'DET, s. [cadet, Fr.] the younger son of a family, is a word naturalized in our language from the French. Among the military men, it denotes a young gentleman, who serves in a marching regiment, as a private man, at his own expense, with a view to acquire knowledge in the art of war, and to obtain a commission in the army.

CA'DEW, or CA'DEWORM, s. in natural history, a kind of worms, which in time change into butterflies.

CA'DI, s. a magistrate among the Turks.

CADI'LLACK, s. a sort of pear.

CA'DIZ, a large, rich, and ancient city, of Andalusia, first built by the Phenicians, who called it Gadez; seated on an island, from which it has a communication with the continent by a bridge. The bay formed by it is 12 miles in length and 6 in breadth. It is the emporium of the Spanish foreign trade. Here the galleons and register ships are fitted out for Terra Firma and La Plata, and the flota for Mexico; and here the bullion of America is imported, to be distributed to the foreign merchants, who principally supply the outward bound fleets with their cargoes. Cadiz contains 50,000 inhabitants, has manufactures of linen and salt, and is 45 miles N. W. of Gibraltar, and 90 W. by S. of Malaga. Lat. 36. 31. N. lon. 6. 6. W.

CA'DMIA. s. a recrement of copper ore produced in furnaces, when that metal is separated from its ore.

CADU'CE, or CADU'CEUS, s. [Lat.] among the Romans, was a white staff or wand, carried by those officers who went to proclaim peace with any people with whom they had been at variance. Also, a rod entwisted by two serpents, borne by Mercury, as the ensign of his quality and office, given him, according to the fable, for his seven-stringed harp. The poets ascribe to this rod the properties of laying men asleep, raising the dead, &c.

CÆCUM, s. [Lat.] in anatomy, one of the three portions of the larger intestines.

CA'EN, a city, capital of the department of Calvados, containing about 4000 inhabitants. Before the revolution, it was the capital of Lower Normandy, and had a celebrated university, founded by Charles VII. It is situated on the rivers Orne and Odon, (the former of which runs through the town, the tide bringing up large vessels) 65 miles W. by S. of Rouen, and 125 NW. of Paris.

CAERFI'LLY, a small straggling town of Glamorganshire, seated between the rivers Taff and Rumney, 5 miles N. of Llandaff. One half of a round tower, here, part of its large ancient castle, overhangs its basis more than 9 feet, and is reckoned as great a curiosity as the leaning tower of Pisa in Italy. Market on Thursday.

CAERLE'ON, a town of Monmouthshire, once the metropolis of all Wales, and the see of an archbishop till the year 521, when it was removed to Menevia, now St. David's. It is situated on the river Usk, 26 miles from Bristol, (to and from which trading vessels sail regularly every week) and 148 W. of London. Market on Thursday.

CA'ERWIS, a town of Flintshire, in N. Wales, with a market on Tuesday. It is seated on an ascent; and though it is but a small place, the market is very good for corn and provisions. It is 5 miles E. of St. Asaph, 5 W. of Flint, and 203 N. W. of London.

CÆSTUS, s. [Lat.] a large gauntlet made of raw hides, used in combats with the ancients; they were studded with nails, or strengthened with lead or plates of iron, and surrounded the hands, wrist, and arm, to guard them from blows, and prevent their being broken or dislocated.

CÆSURA, s. [Lat.] a figure in poetry, by which a short syllable after a complete foot is made long.

CA'FFA, a town, the largest in the Crimea, containing 5 or 6,000 houses; it is the Theodosia of the ancients, a name which has been restored to it by the Russians. From 1226 to 1474, it was in the hands of the Genoese, when its commerce was at such a height, that it exceeded even Constantinople itself in this particular. It is seated on the Black Sea, 150 miles NE. of Constantinople. Lat. 45. 8. N lon. 35. 45. E.

CAFFRA'RIA, an extensive country of Africa, divided into Caffraria Proper, and the country of the Hottentots. The former is S. of the tropic of Capricorn, and extends along the Indian Ocean to the mouth of the Great Fish River, in lat. 30. 30. S. By this river it is divided from the country of the Hottentots; its other boundaries are uncertain. The Caffres are tall, active, and robust, and evince great courage in attacking lions and other beasts of prey. Their complexions are black; their clothing consists of hides of oxen, which are as pliant as cloth. The men employ much of their time in hunting, the women in cultivating the land; they also make earthen ware and curious baskets. The country is fertile, and they have large herds of cattle, which are small, but very docile, coming at a whistle. They have no priests, yet undergo, at 9 years of age, the initiatory rite of the Hebrews. The interior parts are little known.

CA'FTAN, s. [Pers.] a Persian or Turkish vest or garment.

CAG, s. a barrel or wooden vessel, containing four or five gallons. Sometimes written keg.

CAGE, s. [cage, Fr.] an inclosure of twigs or wire, in which birds are kept; a place for wild beasts, inclosed with pallisadoes; a prison for people guilty of petty crimes.

To CAGE, v. a. to inclose or confine in a cage.

CAI'MAN, s. the American name of a crocodile.

To CAJO'LE, v. a. [cajoler, Fr.] to flatter, soothe, or coax including the idea of dissimulation.

CAJO'LER, s. a flatterer, or wheedler.

CAIOSTER, a town in Lincolnshire, 155 miles from London.

CAI'RO, GRAND CAIRO, or EL KAHERA, the capital of Egypt, consists of 3 towns, about a mile apart, Old Cairo or Mesra, New Cairo, and the Port of Bulac. The inhabitants are about 300,000. Old Cairo is a small place, though it be the harbour for boats that come from Upper Egypt. New Cairo is about a mile from the river, and is 7 miles in circumference. It has 3 or 4 grand gates, but the streets are narrow, and the best houses are generally built round a court, having their windows within the inclosed court, and presenting only a dead wall to the street. The calash is a canal which conveys the waters of the Nile into the city; it is about 20 feet broad, and has houses built on each side of it. Here are several public bagnios and caravansaries, and about 300 mosques, the lofty minarets of which present a very picturesque appearance. In the 15th century, this was one of the richest and most flourishing cities in the world; it has since declined, but the Europeans have still their consuls and factors here. It is seated near the E. bank of the Nile, 100 miles S. of its mouth. Lat. 30. 3. N. lon. 31. 23. E.

CAISSON, s. [Fr.] a chest of bombs, or powder, laid in the enemy's ways, to be fired on his approach. Also a wooden frame, or chest, used in laying the foundations of the piers of a bridge.

CAITHNESS, the most northerly county of Scotland, bounded on the W. by Sutherlandshire; on the N. by the Pentland Frith, which divides it from the Orkney Islands; and on the S. E. by the German Ocean. Its greatest extent is 35 miles from N. to S. and 20 from E. to W. The S. W. part is mountainous, and the abode of wild roes and other animals; the rocky summits shelter eagles, and other birds of prey, and the lakes are resorted to by swans and various water-fowl. On the S. W. this county ends in the promontory called the Ord of Caithness. Along the side of this steep hill, impending above the sea, a winding road has been cut, which is the only entrance into this county from the S. The climate is good, and the soil round the coast very improveable: here the English is spoken; but in the Highlands the Erse prevails.

CAITIFF, s. [from cattivo, Ital.] a criminal who is guilty of meanness; a despicable, contemptible villain.

CAKE, s. [caecen, Brit.] a rich kind of baked bread, generally thin and round. Figuratively, any thing composed of flour and baked, made in a thin and flattish form.

To CAKE, v. n. to harden like dough in the oven.

CALABA'SH-TREE, s. in botany, a large tree growing from twenty-three to thirty feet high. The shells of the fruit are used by the negroes for cups; as also for instruments of music, by making a hole in the shell, and putting in small stones, with which they make a sort of rattle.

CALABAR, a country of Upper Guinea, with a town and river of the same name, where the Dutch have a factory. Lat. 16. N. lon. 10. E.

CALABRIA, a country of Naples, divided into Ultra and Citra; or Farther Calabria, of which Reggio is the capital, having Calabria Citra on the N. and the Mediterranean on the E. S. and W.; and Hither Calabria, of which Cosenza is the capital, being bounded on the N. by Basilicata, on the E. by the Gulph of Tarento, and on the S. by Calabria Ultra. It is rich in vegetable and mineral productions, but liable to earthquakes. One of the most terrible upon record happened here and in Sicily, in 1783. Besides the destruction of many towns, villages, and farms, above 40,000 persons perished by this calamity. Mountains were levelled and valleys formed in an instant; new rivers began to flow, and old streams were sunk into the earth, and destroyed; plantations were removed from their situations, and hills carried to places far distant. At Scilla, a wave, which had swept the country for 3 miles, carried off, on its return, 2473 of the inhabitants.

CA'LAHORRA, a city of Old Castile, situated near the Ebro, on the borders of Navarre.

CA'LAIS, a strong town of France, in Lower Picardy, with a citadel, and a fortified harbour. It is built in the form of a triangle, one side of which is towards the sea. The citadel is as large as the town, and has but one entrance. It is a trading place, with handsome streets, and several churches and monasteries; the number of its inhabitants is reckoned about 5000. It was taken by King Edward III. in 1347; and was lost in Queen Mary's time in 1557. It was bombarded by the English in 1696, without doing much damage. The fortifications are good; but its greatest strength is its situation among the marshes, which may be overflowed at the approach of an enemy. The harbour is not so good as formerly, nor will it admit vessels of any great burden. In time of peace there are packet-boats going backward and forward twice a week, from Dover to Calais, which is 21 miles distant. It is 25 miles W. of Dunkirk, and 152 N. of Paris. Long. 2. 1. E. lat. 50. 58. N.

CALAMA'NCO, s. a kind of woollen stuff, with a glossy surface.

CALA'MBA, s. in commerce, a kind of wood brought from China, usually sold under the denomination of lignum aloes.

CA'LAMINE, s. [lapis calaminaris, Lat.] the ore of zinc, which is a hard, heavy, mineral substance, appearing of a stony nature, but a lax and cavernous structure, generally found in loose masses, from the size of a walnut to those of three pounds and upwards.

CA'LAMINT, s. [calamintha, Lat.] in botany, a species of the melissa or baum, which grows naturally in the mountains of Tuscany. It has forked fruitstalks, growing at the base of the leaves, and bluish white blossoms. It is found by road sides and in corn fields, and flowers in August.

CALA'MITOUS, a. [calamitosus, Lat.] involved in misfortunes; wretched; unfortunate; unhappy, oppressed with misery, applied to persons. Fatal, noxious, unwholesome, or productive of misery or distress, applied to things.

CALA'MITY, s. misfortune, affliction, distress, the cause of misery. SYNON. Each of these words denote a sad event; but that of misfortune is applied to casualties and outward circumstances, things detached from us. Disaster respects properly personal accidents. Calamity implies something more general.

CA'LAMUS, s. [Lat.] in botany, a reed, or sweet-scented wood. See SPRICEWORT.

CALA'SH, s. [caleche, Fr.] a light four-wheeled uncovered carriage, driven by the traveller himself.

CA'LCEATED, a. [calceatus, Lat.] shod; fitted with shoes.

CALCA'REOUS, a. [calcarius, Lat.] that partakes of the nature and qualities of calx or lime.

CALCEDO'NIUS, s. [Lat.] a precious stone of the agate kind.

CALCINA'TION, s. [Fr.] the act of reducing any matter into a subtile white powder, by means of fire.

CALCINA'TORY, s. a vessel used in calcining.

To CALCINE, v. a. [from calx, Lat.] to make a thing easily powdered by means of fire; to burn in the fire to a substance which a small force will crumble; to reduce to ashes; to burn to a cinder. Figuratively, to consume or destroy.

CALCO'GRAPHY, s. [from chalkos, brass, and grapho, to write, Gr.] the art of engraving on brass, or copper plates.

To CA'LCULATE, v. a. [calculer, Fr.] to find out the value or amount of any thing by arithmetic; to compute or find the situation of the planets; to contrive or adapt to a certain end. Neuterly, to make a computation.

CALCULA'TION, s. an operation in arithmetic. Figuratively, a deduction of reason; the result of an arithmetical operation.

CA'LCULATOR, s. one who computes or calculates.

CA'LCULA'TORY, a. belonging to calculation or computation.

CA'LCULOSE, or CA'LCULOUS, a. [from calculus, Lat.] stony, gritty; having the stone or gravel.

CA'LCULUS, s. [Lat.] a little stone, anciently used in calculations. In medicine, a stone in the kidney, ureters, or bladder.

CALCU'TTA, or FORT WILLIAM, the emporium of Bengal, and seat of the governor-general of India, is seated on the W. side of Hoogly River, at about 100 miles from its mouth, which is navigable up to the town for large ships. In the beginning of the last century it was a village, but now it is an extensive city, supposed to contain 500,000 inhabitants. The houses variously built, some of brick, others with mud, and a greater number with bamboos and mats, make a motley appearance; and the mixture of European and Asiatic manners, observed in Calcutta is wonderful; coaches, phætons, hackeries, (two-wheeled carriages drawn by bullocks) palankeens carried by the natives, the passing ceremonies of the Hindoos, and the different appearances of the faquirs, form a diversified and curious scene. Here the governor-general and council of Bengal reside, who have a control over the precidences of Madras, Bengal, and Bencoolen. The houses have, many of them, the appearance of palaces or temples, and the inhabitants are very hospitable. The situation of this city is not happily chosen; for it has extensive muddy lakes and a vast forest close by it, from which, in so hot a climate, unwholesome vapours must arise. Here are four judges, who dispense justice according to the laws of England. Calcutta is 1030 miles N. E. by N. of Madras. Lat. 22. 23. N. lon. 88. 28. E.

CA'LDRON, or CAU'LDRON, s. [chaudron, Fr.] a large vessel to heat water, or dress victuals in; a pot.

CALEDO'NIA, the ancient name of Scotland.

CALEDO'NIA, NEW, a large island in the S. Pacific Ocean, extending from lat. 19. 0. to 23. 0. S. and from lon. 164. 0. to 168. 0. E. The inhabitants are strong and active; their clothing is a wrapper made of the bark of a tree, or of leaves. They subsist chiefly on roots, and cultivate the soil with some art and industry. From the hills, the summits of which many of them are covered with wood, spring a number of rivulets, which fertilize the plains. Plantains and sugar-canes are not plentiful; bread-fruit is very scarce and the cocoa-nut trees are but thinly planted; but their yams and taras are in great abundance.

CALEDO'NIANS, the ancient inhabitants of the north of Scotland.

CALEFA'CTION, s. [from calefacio, Lat.] the act of heating any thing; the state of being heated.

CALEFA'CTIVE, or CALEFA'CTORY, a. that heats, or has the power of heating.

To CA'LEFY, v. n. [calefio, Lat.] to grow hot; to be heated. Actively, to make hot.

CA'LENDAR, s. [calendarium, Lat.] a table containing the days, months, festivals, &c. happening in the year. The Roman calendar, from which ours is borrowed, was composed by Romulus, who made the year consist of no more than 304 days; Numa Pompilus corrected his error, by making it consist of 12 lunar months, of 30 and 29 days alternately, which made 354 days; but being fond of an odd number, he added one day more, which made it 355 days; and that the civil year might equal the sun's motion, he added a month every second year. Julius Cæsar, as a farther improvement, made the year consist of 365 days, and left the six hours to form a day, at the end of every fourth year, which was added to the month of February. This calendar was called the Julian, or old style, in opposition to the new style, introduced by Gregory XIII. who finding the Julian gone too forward, cut off ten days from the calendar; and to remedy this defect for the future, left out one bissextile day every 100 years, making every fourth hundred a leap year. By act of parliament, to remedy the inconveniences arising from the differences of style, this kingdom adopted the Gregorian, or new style, by leaving out eleven days of the month of September in the year 1752. The new French calendar commenced on the 22d of September 1792. According to it, the year commences at midnight, the beginning of that day in which falls the true autumnal equinox for the observatory of Paris. The year is divided into 12 equal months of 30 days each; after which five supplementary days are added, to complete the 365 days of the ordinary year; these five days do not belong to any month. Each month is divided into three decades of 10 days each; distinguished by 1st, 2d, and 3d decade. In this calendar, the months and days of them have new names, taken from the circumstances of the seasons; the first of the three months of the year, of which the autumn is composed, from the vintage, is called vindmiaire; the second brumaire, from the mists and low fogs which take place from October to November. There are other particulars respecting this calendar, which it is not thought necessary to detail here, and which, indeed, can be learned only by an almanack. This calendar has been abolished by the French government, and the old one was resumed on the 1st of January, 1806. Calendar is also used for the catalogue of saints, anciently kept in the churches, especially those who were honoured in that particular church where the calendar was deposited. Calendar of prisoners, is a list of all their names, with their separate judgments in the margin, which the judge signs, and the execution of which is committed to the respective sheriff.

CA'LENDER, s. a hot press, made use of to press, smooth, or water manufactures of silk, woollen, or linen. The calender consists of two large wooden rollers, round which the pieces of stuff are wound; these are put between two large, close, polished planks of wood, the lower serving as a fixed base, and the upper moveable by means of a wheel, like that of a crane, with a rope fastened to a spindle, which makes its axis; this upper part is of a prodigious weight, sometimes twenty or thirty thousand pounds. It is the weight of this part, together with its alternate motion, that gives the polish, and makes the waves on the stuffs, by causing the cylinders on which they are put to roll with great force over the lowest board. The rollers are taken off and put on again by inclining the machine. In natural history, the word is applied to an insect, which preys on corns, leaving nothing but the husks, and giving the flour of it a very bad taste.

To CA'LENDER, v. a. [calendrer, Fr.] to smooth, water, or dress any manufacture in a hot press or calender.

CA'LENDERED, a. applied to corn, devoured by the calender, an insect.

CA'LENDERER, s. one who presses, smooths, or waters manufactures in a hot press or calender.

CA'LENDS, s. it has no singular, [calendæ, Lat.] the first day of the month among the Romans; they were reckoned backwards, thus: the first day of February was called the calends of February, the thirty-first of January the second of the calends of February, and so on to the 13th, when the ides commenced.

CA'LENTURE, s. [from caleo, Lat.] in medicine, an inflammatory fever, frequent at sea.

CALF, s. plural calves; [cealf, Sax.] the young of a cow. The swelling fleshy part of a man's leg. A dolt or stupid wretch, by way of contempt.

CA'LIBER, s. [calibre, Fr.] the extent or diameter of any round thing; an instrument used by carpenters. Among the gunsmiths, wooden calibers are models by which they cut the stocks whereon they mount their guns, pistols, &c. Steel calibers are instruments with which they turn and file their screws. In gunnery, the diameter of the mouth or bore of a piece of cannon, or of the ball it carries. Caliber compasses, a pair of compasses, with the legs bent inwards, furnished with a tongue, which moves on a rivet on one of its legs, and is used to take the dimensions of the bore of a cannon, together with the size and weight of the ball it can carry.

CA'LICE, or CHA'LICE, s. [calix, Lat.] a cup, appropriated to the cups or vessels which the communicants drink out of at the Lord's supper.

CA'LICO, s. [from Calicut, in India] a kind of linen manufacture imported by the East India company.

CA'LID; a. [calidus, Lat.] hot, burning, fervent:

CALI'DITY, s. [caliditas, Lat.] heat.

CA'LIF, or CA'LIPH, s. [khalifa, a vicar or successor, Arab.] a title given to the successors of Mahomet among the Saracens, by whom it is accounted the supreme ecclesiastical dignity; or, among the Mahometans, a sovereign dignity, vested with absolute authority in all matters relative both to religion and polity.

CALIFO'RNIA, a large and fertile peninsula of N. America, on the Pacific Ocean, reaching nearly from the 23rd to the 46th degree of lat. and from 10 to 40 leagues wide. It is claimed by the Spaniards, who have a number of villages here. St. Maria, St. Ignatio, St. Isidoro, &c.

CALIGA'TION, s. [from caligo, Lat.] darkness, cloudiness, dimness of sight.

CALI'GINOUS, a. [caliginosus, Lat.] dark, dim, cloudy, obscure.

CALI'GINOUSNESS, s. darkness; obscurity.

CALI'GRAPHY, s. [from kalos, fair, and grapho, to write, Gr.] a neat and handsome hand, applied to writing; beautiful writing

CA'LIVER, s. a hand-gun, harquebuse; a small gun used at sea.

CA'LIX, s. [Lat.] in botany, the outward greenish cover which encompasses the petals and other parts of a flower.

CALI'XTINS, s. in church history, a sect of Christians in Bohemia and Moravia; the principal point in which they differed from the church was the use of the chalices, or communicating in both kinds. It was also a name given to those among the Lutherans, who followed the sentiments of George Calixtus, a celebrated divine, who opposed the opinion of St. Augustine on predestination, grace, and free-will.

To CALK, (caulk) v. a. [from calage, Fr.] to stop the seams or other leaks of a ship with oakum or tow, to keep the water out.

CA'LKER, (caùlker) s. the person who stops the leaks of a ship.

CA'LKING, (caulking) s. stopping the leaks or streams of a ship with oakum or tow, which is afterwards covered with a mixture of tallow, pitch and tar, as low as it draws water.

To CALL, (caul) v. a. [calo, Lat.] to name. Used with on and upon, to visit or go to a person's house. In divinity, to receive a mission from God; and used with upon, to implore; to pray to in distress, with confidence of assistance. To call back, to revoke. To call over, to read aloud a list or muster roll. To call names, to abuse a person by some reproachful term or word. To call in, applied to money, to collect or demand a sum lent. Joined with out, to challenge provoke, or excite to combat or danger.

CALL, (caul) s. an address by word of mouth. Figuratively, a mission from God. In law, a nomination or admission. Used with upon, a claim or demand. Within call, not far off; within hearing. An instrument imitating the notes of birds, and used by bird catchers to bring them into their traps. The English name for the mineral called tungster or wolfram by the Germans.

CALLA'O, a city, the port of Lima, in Peru, with a large beautiful and safe harbour. Lat. 12. 9. S. lon. 77. W.

CA'LLING, (caùlling) s. the business or trade a person professes; station, employment, or profession; divine vocation; invitation to the true religion.

CA'LLINGTON, or KELLINGTON, a town in Cornwall, with a woollen manufactory. It is seated on the river Tamar, 12 miles S. of Launceston, and 217 W. by S. of London. It is not inferior to the best half of the Cornish boroughs for wealth and buildings, having one very good broad street, a market-house, and neat church. Market on Wednesday.

CALLI'OPE, [Gr.] the muse who presides over rhetoric and heroic verse.

CA'LLIPERS, s. See CALIBER, of which this is a corruption.

CALLO'SITY, s. [callosité, Fr.] in anatomy, a hardness of the skin, owing to hard labour, or frequent rubbings whereby it becomes insensible.

CA'LLOUS, a. [callus, Lat.] indurated; hardened; having the pores shut up. Applied to the mind or conscience, not to be moved by threats or promises.

CA'LLOUSNESS, s. insensibility of the body, wherein the skin grows into knobs, and loses all sensation; the hardness of the juices which knit together the extremities of a broken bone. Figuratively, insensibility, applied to the mind.

CA'LLOW, a. unfledged; without feathers.

CA'LLUS, s. [Lat.] See CALLOSITY.

CALM, a. [calm, Belg.] undisturbed by tempests or violent winds, applied to the sea and elements. Undisturbed by boisterous passions, applied to the mind. Substantively, used for a freedom from tempests or winds at sea.

To CALM, v. a. to put an end to a tempest. Figuratively, to soothe or pacify; to appease.

CA'LMER, s. the person or thing which reduces from a state of turbulence or violence to one of quietness, rest, and serenity.

CA'LMLY, ad. free from violence, furiousness, or tempestuous commotion. Figuratively, in a serene, cool manner.

CA'LMNESS, s. a state of quiet free from the disturbance of violent winds. Figuratively, a state of cool and sedate tranquillity; mildness.

CALNE, a town of Wilts. with a manufactory of cloth, situated on a river of the same name, 12 miles W. of Marlborough, and 88 W. of London. Market on Tuesday,

CA'LOMEL, s. [from kalos, fair, and melas, black, Gr.] in chymistry, a name given to mercury sublimated a fourth time or upwards, which makes it more gentle in its operation, and fits it to act as an alterative.

CA'LORIC, s. in chymistry, the matter of heat.

CALORI'FIC, [calorificus, Lat.] that has the power of heating.

CA'LORIMETER, s. in chymistry, an instrument for ascertaining the quantity of caloric disengaged from any substance that may be the object of experiment.

CALO'TTE, s. [Fr.] a cap or coif of hair, worn first by cardinal Richelieu. A red calotte is become the badge of a cardinal. In architecture, a red cavity or depressure in form of a cap or cup, lathed and plastered, used to diminish the rise or elevation of a chapel, cabinet, alcove, &c.

CALO'YERS, s. [from kalos, fair, good, Gr.] monks of the Greek church, who live a very retired and austere life, eat no flesh, keep four lents, and never break their fasts till they have earned that meal by their labour.

CA'LTROPS, s. [co'traype, Sax.] an instrument with four iron spikes, disposed in such a manner that one of them will always be upright, and three of them in the ground. They are used to annoy, embarrass, and wound the horses' feet of the cavalry. In botany, a plant so called from its resembling the instrument just described, and being very troublesome to cattle by pricking their feet.

To CALVE, v. n. to bring forth a calf.

CALVES SNOUT, s a plant, called also snapdragon.

CA'LVILLE, s. [Fr.] a sort of apples.

CA'LVINISTS, s. in church history, are those who follow the opinions of John Calvin, one of the principal reformers of the church in the sixteenth century, a man of great parts and industry, and of considerable learning. The term Calvinist is at present applied with several degrees of limitation. In its strictest sense, it is appropriated to those who imbibe the sentiments of the reformer both as to doctrine and discipline. This was the case with the churches of Geneva, Holland, Scotland, and several parts of Germany and Switzerland; but many of the modern members of these churches entertain sentiments very different to those of Calvin. In England, all those are called Calvinists, whatever be their opinions concerning church government, who maintain the doctrines of unconditional election, irresistible grace, and the perseverance of the saints. In the Trinitarian controversy, the epithet Calvinistic is applied to all who take the orthodox side of the question.

CA'LUMET, s. a symbol of peace among the Indians of North America. It is made of a red stone, like our marble; the head resembles that of a tobacco pipe, but larger, and is fixed in a hollow reed, to hold it for smoking. They adorn it with fine wings of various colours, and is the Calumet of the sun, to whom they present it, especially if they want fair weather, or rain. This pipe is a pass or safe-conduct amongst all the allies of the nation that has it given. In all embassies the ambassador carries it as an emblem of peace, and is always received with a profound regard; the savages being persuaded that a violation of the Calumet would be attended with some dire misfortune.

To CALU'MNIATE, v. n. [calumnior, Lat.] to accuse falsley; to charge without just ground. Actively, to slander.

CALUMNIA'TION, s. a false representation of a person's words and actions, in order to render his character suspected.

CALUMNIA'TOR, s. [Lat.] one who slanders another to ruin his reputation.

CALU'MNIOUS, a. slanderous; falsely accusing.

CA'LUMNY, s. [calumnia, Lat.] the falsely accusing of a person with crimes, or misrepresenting his words and actions, in order to make his character suspicious.

CALX, s. [Lat.] lime; an old term made use of to describe a metallic oxide.

CA'LYCLE, s. [calyculus, Lat.] a small bud of a plant.

CAMAI'EU, s. [camachuia, Ital.] a particular kind of onyx, which can be engraved either in relievo or creux; a kind of onyx, on which are represented landscapes.

CAM'BAY, a city of Guzerat in Hindoostan, situated on a gulf of the same name, which is full of rocks, covered at low water. The country abounds in corn, cattle, silk, &c. and cornelian and agate stones are found in the rivers. The inhabitants are noted for embroidery, some of their quilts have been valued at 40*l.* a piece. They trade in spices, elephants, teeth, silk stuffs, cotton and other merchandize, which are brought here from all parts, and sent to Acheen, Goa, Arabia, Persia, &c. It is subject to the Poonah Mahrattas, and is 57 miles nearly S. of Amedabad, of which it is the port. Lat. 22. 25. N. lon. 72. 10. E.

CA'MBER, s. a piece of timber cut arching.

CAMBO'DIA, or CAMBO'JA, a kingdom of Asia, S. of Loos, S. E. of Siam, and S. W. of Cochin China. Its principal river, and chief city, bear the same name. Lat. 13. 10. N. lon. 105. 5. E.

CAMBRA'Y, a large city in the department of the North, before the revolution the capital of Cambresis. It has a considerable manufactory of lace, linen, leather, soap, and cambrics, which took their name from this city. It contains 10 parishes, and about 3000 houses, and is seated on the Scheldt, which divides it into two, 22 miles S. E. of Arras, and 102 N. E. of Paris.

CA'MBRICK, s. [toile de Cambray, Fr.] a species of linen made of flax, very fine and white, at first manufactured at Cambray. The cambricks now allowed in this country are manufactured in Scotland and Ireland.

CA'MBRIDGE, the county-town of Cambridgeshire, and seat of a celebrated University, is situated on the river Cam, which divides it into two unequal parts. The university, contains 12 colleges and 4 halls. Its buildings are elegant, and its libraries and cabinets valuable and extensive. The town-hall and county-hall are the only buildings of note that do not appertain to the university. The streets are narrow, but well paved; and the houses, above 1200 in number are old; the market-place is spacious, and in it is a handsome stone conduit, to which water is conveyed by an aqueduct. Its chief trade is water-carriage from hence to Downham, Lynn, Ely, &c. Cambridge is 80 miles E. N. E. of Oxford, 17 nearly S. of Ely, and 51 N. by E. of London. Markets every day in the week, Sunday and Monday excepted.

CA'MBRIDGE, a village near Berkley in Gloucestershire, where the Danes attacked Edward the Elder, as they returned from a plundering excursion.

CA'MBRIDGE, a village of Massachuset's Bay, in North America. It has an university, which, with respect to its library, philosophical apparatus, and professorships, is the first literary institution in America. It has generally from 120 to 150 students, and is 4 miles W. of Boston.

CA'MBRIDGESHIRE, a county of England, bounded on the W. and S. W. by the counties of Bedford, Huntingdon, and Northampton; on the N. W. by Lincolnshire, on the N. E. by Norfolk, on the E by Suffolk, and on the S. by Essex and Herts. It is 50 miles in length, from N. to S. and 25 broad from E. to W. and contains 17 hundreds, 9 market towns, and 163 parishes. The air and soil vary; some parts, especially the southern and eastern, are pleasant and healthy; but the northern, or fenny country, is low and watery, the waters of the middle part of England, which do not run into the Thames or Trent, falling into these fens. See LEVEL (BEDFORD).

CAME, the preter. of the verb To Come.

CA'MEL, s. [gamel, Heb.] a large and very useful animal, an inhabitant of Arabia and the adjacent countries. It is particularly valuable on account of the heavy weights it can carry, and the long journeys it can perform without eating or drinking. It is only by means of the camel that the deserts of Arabia and the N. of Africa are at all habitable.

CAME'LEON, s. in natural history, a little animal of the lizard kind. Its tongue is half as long as itself, round as far as the tip, which is hollow, on that account called a trunk, and used by it in catching flies, on which it subsists. In chemistry, mineral cameleon is a greenish, friable powder, composed of manganese and potass, which changes its colour during its solution in water, being first blue, then yellow, afterward blue, reddish, brownish, and at last black. It then subsides and leaves the fluid colourless.

CA'MELFORD, a town of Cornwall, with a market on Friday for yarn, of which a great quantity is spun in this place and neighbourhood. It is seated near the river Camel, or Alan, 20 miles W. of Launceston and 229 W. by S. of London.

CAME'LOPARD, s. [camelus and pardus, Lat.] an Abyssinian animal taller than an elephant, but not so thick. He is so named, because he has a neck and head like a camel, and is spotted like a pard. He is called by the Italians giaraffa.

CA'MELOT, or CA'MBLET, or CA'MLET, s. [camelot, Fr.] a stuff made of goat's hair, with wool or silk, or both. The true oriental Camblet is made of the hair of a kind of goat, frequent about Angora in Syria; but no European Camblets are made of goat's hair alone. The Camblets of Brussels are considered as of the first rate excellency, and those of England claim the second.

CA'MERA OBSCURA, s. [Lat.] in optics, a machine representing an artificial eye, wherein the Images of external objects are exhibited distinctly, in their native colours, exact proportions, real situations, and in all their perspectives or foreshortenings. It is made sometimes by darkening the windows of a room, that look into a street, garden, &c. and making a small hole in the shutters, fixing therein a plain glass convex, or rather a tube with two glasses; for with only one glass the object will be represented upon the wall, a sheet, &c. hung on purpose, in an inverted posture.

CA'MERATED, a. [cameratus, Lat.] arched or vaulted.

CAMERA'TION, s. [cameratio, Lat.] a vaulting or arching.

CAMERO'NIANS, a sect or party in Scotland, who separated from the Presbyterians in 1666 and continued to hold their religious assemblies in the fields. The Cameronians took their denomination from Richard Cameron, a famous field preacher who, refusing to accept the indulgence to tender consciences granted by king Charles II. as such an acceptance seemed an acknowledgment of the king's supremacy, and that he had before a right to silence them, made a defection from his brethren, and even headed a rebellion in which he was killed. His followers were never entirely reduced till the revolution, when they voluntarily submitted to king William.

CAMISA'DO, s. [from camisa, Ital.] a military term, denoting an attack by surprise in the night, in which the assailants wear their shirts outward, as a distinction to know their own men from the enemy.

CA'MLET, s. See CAMELOT.

CA'MLINE, s. in botany, a species of myagrum, found in fields amongst flax, and also called gold of pleasure; it flowers in June.

CA'MOMILE, s. See CHAMOMILE.

CAMP, s. [camp, Fr.] the order of tents pitched by an army when they keep the field; the place where an army rests, or dwells in tents or barracks. A flying camp, is a strong body of horse, which always keep the field, and are continually in motion, either to cover any place, or to surprise or fatigue an enemy, and cause a diversion.

To CAMP, v. a. to fix tents, and remain in a field, applied to an enemy.

CAMPA'IGN, (campâin) s. [campagne, Fr.] that space of time during which an army keeps the field, without going into winter quarters.

CAMPA'NULA, s. in botany, the bell-flower of which there are several kinds.

CA'MPBELTON, a large and increasing town of Argyleshire, situated on a bay of the same name, towards the Southern extremity of the peninsular of Cantyre. It has a considerable trade, being the general rendezvous of the fishing vessels that annually visit the W. coast. The bay is beautiful, capacious, and safe, being 2 miles in length, half a mile in width, and having from 5 to 9 fathom water, with a stiff clay bottom; it is also land-locked on every side, and screened at the entrance by a lofty small island, which breaks the violence of the winds and the force of the waves, Lat. 55. 29. N. lon. 5. 42. W.

CA'MPDEN, a town in Gloucestershire, with a market on Wednesday. It is large, but a poor town, gives title to a viconnt, and sends two members to parliament. It is 18 miles N. E. of Gloucester, and 86 N. W. by W. of London.

CA'MPHIRE, or CA'MPHOR, (kamfire or kamfor) s. [camphora, Lat.] in pharmacy, a white crystalline substance, of a very strong taste and smell, obtained in the East, from a species of laurel. It is so inflammable that it burns even on water.

CA'MPHORATE, or CA'MPHORATED, (kâmforated) a. that has camphire mixed with it.

CAMPHO'RIC, a. belonging to camphor.

CA'MPION, s. a plant of which there are several species.

CAN, s. [canne, Sax.] a drinking vessel, or cup made of wood in the form of a cask or barrel. Figuratively, any drinking vessel not made of earth.

CAN, v. n. [konnen, Belg.] It is sometimes, but seldom, used as an absolute verb, but constantly joined with another verb, as a sign of the potential mood. Its present is declined thus: I can, thou canst, he can, we can, &c. and its preter. I could, thou couldst, &c. to be able; to have power sufficient to do an action. Though taken as a sign of the potential mood, yet it differs very much from may; may denoting right, lawfulness, or a permission to do a thing; but can, the power or strength of the doer or agent, and with the verb active is applied to persons; as I can do it; but with the passive, relates to things; as, it can be done.

CA'NADA, a country of North America, N. of the United States, extending about 700 miles in length from N. E. to S. W. and about 200 in breadth. It is subject to Great Britain; and the religious establishment is that of the church of Rome. By an act of parliament in 1701, the country was divided into Upper Canada, of which Montreal is the capital; and Lower Canada, of which Quebec is the chief city; and a constitution, partly resembling that of England, was given to each of these provinces. The winter here for six months is very severe; the cleared lands are very fertile, and the vegetables various, and corn ripens in two months time, vegetation being always wonderfully accelerated where the season is short. Furs and skins are obtained here in great quantities, (the Canadian merchants having of late years, interfered greatly even with the Hudson's Bay Company, exploring numerous nations inland, and sending many large canoes into the interior country.) The rivers, lakes, and bays, are numerous, large, and deep, and well supplied with fish. Here are several ancient and extensive forests, and the tribes of Indians are numerous.

CANA'ILLE, s. in France, the lowest rank of people; the vulgar.

CANA'L, s. [canalis, Lat.] a place cut in a garden to receive water from a river or pipes; a hollow place cut for the reception of the sea, any tract of water made by art. In anatomy, a duct or passage through which any of the juices flow.

CANA'L, (THE DUKE OF BRIDGEWATER'S,) a stupendous work, begun in 1758, at Worseley Mill, 7 miles from Manchester, where at the foot of a mountain, composed in a great measure of coal, a bason is cut, capable of containing all the boats, and a great body of water, which serves as a reservoir to the navigation. The canal runs through a hill, by a subterraneous passage, nearly three quarters of a mile, to the duke's coal works. In some places it is cut through the solid rock; in others arched over with brick. Air funnels, some of which are 37 yards perpendicular, are cut at certain distances through the rock to the top of the hill. At Barton Bridge, 3 miles from the bason, is an aqueduct, which, for upwards of 200 yards, conveys the canal across a valley, and also more than 40 feet above the navigable river Irwell. There are three arches over this river; the centre one is 63 feet wide, and 38 high, admitting the largest barges to pass underneath with their masts and sails standing. At Longford Bridge, the canal turns to the right, and crossing the river Mersey, passes near Altringham, Durham, Grapenhall, and Kaulton, into the tide-way of the Mersey, at Runcorn Gap, whence the barges can pass to Liverpool at low water. This navigation is 29 miles in length; it falls 95 feet, and was finished in 5 years, under the direction of that excellent engineer, Mr. Brindly. Coals, which, before this canal was finished, were retailed in Manchester at 7d. per hundred weight, were sold, soon after its completion, (seven score to the hundred weight) at 3d.

CANA'L, (THE GRAND TRUNK, or STAFFORDSHIRE CANAL,) was begun in 1766, under the direction of Mr. Brindley, in order to form a communication between the Mersey and the Trent, and of course between the Irish Channel and the German Ocean. It is 92 miles in length, from the Duke of Bridgewater's canal, at Preston on the Hill, in Cheshire, to Wildon Ferry, in Derbyshire, where it communicates with the Trent. It is carried over the river Dove in an aqueduct of 23 arches, and the ground is raised for more than a mile to a considerable height; it is also carried over the Trent by an aqueduct of 6 arches; at Harecastle Hill, it is conveyed under ground a mile and a half; at Barton, in Cheshire, a subterraneous passage is effected of 560 yards in extent, and in the same neighbourhood another of 350: and at Preston on the Hill, where it joins the duke's canal, it passes under ground 1241 yards. From the neighbourhood of Stafford, a branch is made from this canal, to near Wolverhampton, and to join the Severn near Kidderminster: from this again two other branches are carried, one to Birmingham, and the other to Worcester. Since the establishment of these canals, many other extensive ones have been projected and executed in most of the inland, and some of the maritime counties.

CANA'L, (THE GRAND,) in Ireland commences in Dublin, at the west end of the town, and is intended to be carried to the river Shannon. It already communicates with the Barrow, whereby a communication is opened between the metropolis and Athy, Carlow, Ross, Waterford, Clonmel, &c. There are passage-boats daily from the city to Sallans, Monastereven, and Athy, and from these places to Dublin; and vessels carrying goods are continually passing and repassing. The execution of this work was an arduous business; besides having to cut through hard and rocky strata, and construct aqueducts over the valleys and rivers, they had to carry it through a long tract of turf bog, which, for a considerable time, baffled their efforts, as, from its fluid-like consistence, it was pressed into, or filled up, the cut or channel, whenever they ceased digging. These difficulties, however where surmounted, and the canal itself has proved such a drain to the bog, as to enable the people to reclaim a great extent of it, and bring it under cultivation. By a branch, which has been carried at an immense expence, by a circuitous course, round the S. side of the city, the Grand Canal now communicates with the harbour of Dublin. There are other canals and modes of inland navigation by the rivers and lakes, both in the N. and W. of Ireland. The Royal Canal on the North side of Dublin is not yet completed.

CANA'L, (THE GREAT) in Scotland, forms the long-wished for junction between the Forth and the Clyde. This bold design, conceived above a century ago, is now successfully executed upon a scale far above the usual dimensions of the largest canals in England, and admits of vessels constructed for foreign trade, provided the breadth of the beam be somewhat less than 20 feet, and their draught of water a little under 8. The extreme length of this canal from the Forth to the Clyde, is 35 English miles. In the space of 30 miles it is carried over 36 rivers and rivulets, besides two great roads, by means of 38 aqueduct bridges. In the course of this inland navigation which may be performed in less than 18 hours, many striking scenes present themselves to view. But above all others, the stupendous aqueduct bridge over the Kelvin, near Glasgow, 400 feet in length, carrying a great artificial river over a natural one in a deep valley, where large vessels sail along at the height of 70 feet above the bed of the river below, is one of the features of this stupendous work, which gives it a pre-eminence over any of a similar nature in Europe. Yet, however singular and striking this may appear with respect to picturesque beauty, the utility of this communication between the Eastern and Western Sea to navigation and commerce, is a more important consideration, as it shortens the nautical distance 300, and in some cases 1000 miles, and affords a safe and speedy navigation, particularly at the end of the season, to vessels bound to Ireland or the western ports of Great Britain, that are too long detained in the Baltic, and that cannot attempt the voyage round by the North Sea, without danger of shipwreck, or the market being lost from delay.

CANALI'CULATED, a. [canaliculatus, Lat.] made like a pipe or gutter; channelled.

CANANO'RE, a large sea port on the coast of Malabar, ceded to the English by Tippoo Sultan in 1792. Lat. 12. 0. N. lon. 75. 14. E.

CANA'RY, s. a sort of wine brought from the Canaries, now called sac. Also a sort of grass, so called on account of its seeds being found to be the best food for the canary-bird. Also an old dance.

CANA'RY-BIRD, s. a singing bird, formerly peculiar to the Canaries, of the linnet kind, of a yellow, or yellowish green colour, a very loud note, and of great boldness.

CANA'RY ISLANDS, in the Atlantic Ocean, near the continent of Africa, are 7 in number, namely, Grand Canary, the chief, 42 miles long and 27 broad; its capital, Canary, is a well-built town: Palma, Ferro, Gomero, Teneriffe, Fuerfaventura, and Lancerota; to which however may be added several smaller isles, as Graciosa, Roccas, Allegranza, St. Clare, Inferno, and Lobos. They are subject to the Spaniards, and produce wheat, sugar-canes, wine, and excellent fruits, and it is hence that the Canary birds originally came Lat from 27. 30. to 29. 30. N. lon. from 12. 0. to 17. 50. W.

To CA'NCEL, v. a. [canceller, Fr.] to cross a writing, and thereby render it of no effect. Figuratively, to destroy a deed by tearing off the seal or name; to efface or obliterate.

CANCELLA'TION, s. an expunging or annulling the power of an instrument.

CA'NCER, s [Lat.] in astronomy, a sign of the Zodiac, into which the sun enters on the 21st of June, and represented on globes by the figure of a crab, in order to express the returning of the sun, or its coming back to the equator from thence; or from its seeming not to advance, but rather to go back for some days when in the solstitial point, in which respect it imitates the motion ascribed to that animal. The stars in this constellation, according to Flamstead, are 71. The tropic of Cancer is a less circle of the sphere, parallel to the equator, and passing through the beginning of the sign Cancer; the inhabitants within this space have the sun perpendicular or vertical twice a year, and are situated in the Torrid Zone. In surgery, a roundish hard ragged, immoveable swelling, of an ash or bluish colour, encompassed round with branched turgid veins, full of black foul blood, so called, as some say, from the resemblance which the turgid veins, shooting from it bear in figure to the crab-fish, or according to others, because like the crab, whence once it has got hold, it is scarcely possible to drive it away.

To CA'NCERATE, v. n. to grow cancerous; to turn to a cancer.

CA'NCEROUS, a. having the virulence of a cancer.

CANDA'HAR, a kingdom of Asia, between Persia and the river Indus. Its capital is Candahar, a rich trading town situated on the river Hermend, in the road from Ispahan to Delhi, 140 miles S. W. of Cabul. Lat. 33. 0. N. lon. 65. 30. E.

CA'NDENT, a. [candens, Lat.] hot; in the highest degree of heat next to fusion.

CA'NDIA, an island in the Mediterranean, formerly Crete, S, of the Archipelago, about 150 miles in length, and from 15 to 35 in breadth. It produces corn, wine, oil, wool, silk and excellent honey, and is chiefly inhabited by Greeks. Mount Ina, in the middle of the island, is a huge, barren, sharp pointed eminence. Its capital, Candia, though formerly populous, is now in a manner deserted, there being little but rubbish, except at the bazaar or market-place, and the harbour being only fit for boats. It is 500 miles from Constantinople. Lat. 35. 10. N. lon. 25. 23. E.

CA'NDID, a. [candidus, Lat.] white. Figuratively, impartial; mild; uninfluenced by sinister motives, malice or prejudice.

CA'NDIDATE, s. [from candidus, white, Lat. because candidates for offices among the Romans used to appear in white robes.] one who solicits the votes of others, in order to attain any place or office conferred by a majority ; one who opposes another ; a competitor.

CA'NDIDLY, ad. in an impartial manner; without prejudice, malice, or envy ; fairly.

CA'NDLE, s. [candela, Lat.] a wick of cotton covered with wax, spermaceti, or tallow, of a cylindrical form, used to supply the want of day-light. Sale by the candle, or inch of candle, is an auction which lasts only while a piece of candle lighted for that purpose continues burning, the last bidder before it is extinct being adjudged the purchaser.

CA'NDLEBERRY-TREE, s. a species of sweet willow.

CA'NDLELIGHT, s. the light afforded by a candle.

CA'NDLEMAS, s. a festival appointed by the church, to be observed on the second of February, in honour of the purification of the blessed virgin Mary. It was celebrated by the ancient Christians ; who, on that day, used abundance of lights in their churches, and procession, in memory, as is supposed, of our Saviour's being on that day declared to be a light to lighten the Gentiles. In imitation of which, the Roman Catholics, on this day, consecrate all their tapers and candles which they use in their churches during the whole year.

CA'NDLESTICK, s. a household utensil contrived to hold one or more lighted candles.

CA'NDOCK, s. a weed that grows in rivers.

CA'NDOUR, s. [candor, Lat.] a temper of mind unsoured by envy, unrilled by malice, and unseduced by prejudice ; sweet without weakness, and impartial without rigour.

CA'NDY, a kingdom of Ceylon, containing about a quarter of the island. It is mountainous, and abounds with rivulets, which the inhabitants are dexterous in turning to water their land, which is fruitful in rice, pulse, and hemp. The king is absolute, and his subjects are idolatrous. Its capital is of the same name, but is not the residence of the king. Lat. 7. 45. N. lon. 80. 52. E.

To CA'NDY, v. a. to preserve by boiling in sugar ; to melt and crystallize sugar several times, to render it hard and transparent. Figuratively, to freeze, to be covered with a hard substance, or flakes. To flatter, or make use of soothing and insinuating expressions. Neuterly, to grow hard ; to grow thick, or be covered with flakes.

CA'NDY, s. a preparation of sugar, made by melting and crystallizing it six or seven times over, to make it hard and transparent.

CANE, s. [canna, Lat.] in botany, a kind of reed growing in several joints, and of different dimensions. The bamboo, which grows in the Indies, especially at Bengal, to a prodigious size, is wrought into bowls, or other household utensils, by the inhabitants; the smaller sort is made into fishing rods. The walking cane is that which grows in the East Indies ; those which are without joints are by far the best, and more elastic. Hence the word signifies, figuratively, a walking staff.

To CANE, v. a. to beat a person with a cane, or a walking-staff.

CANES VENATICI, in astronomy, the Grey-hound, two constellations in the northern hemisphere.

CANI'CULA, s. [Lat.] in astronomy, the name of one of the stars in the constellation of Canis Major, called the Dog-star ; from whose heliacal rising with the sun, that is, its emersion from the sun's rays, the ancients reckoned their dog-days, and the Egyptians and Ethiopians began their year.

CANI'CULAR, a. [canicularis, Lat.] of or belonging to the dog-days. The canicular days are a certain number of days preceding or ensuing the heliacal rising of the Canicula or Dog-star.

CA'NINE, a. [caninus, Lat.] having the properties of, or resembling a dog. Canine hunger, in medicine, is an appetite which cannot be satisfied.

CA'NINE-TEETH, s. [dentes canini, Lat.] in anatomy, two sharp edged teeth in each jaw, between the incisores and molares, so called from their resembling the correspondent teeth in a dog.

CA'NIS MAJOR, s. [Lat. the great Dog] in astronomy, a constellation in the southern hemisphere consisting, according to Flamstead, of 32 stars, of which Sirius is the principal.

CA'NIS MINOR, s. [Lat. the lesser Dog] a constellation in the southern hemisphere, of which Procyon is the principal star.

CA'NISTER, s. [canistrum, Lat.] in its primary sense, which is now obsolete, a basket. In its secondary, a small box or receptacle made of tin, or other metal, or porcelain, to hold tea, sugar, &c.

CA'NKER, s. [cancer, Lat.] in natural history, a small worm which preys upon fruit, joined with the word worm. In medicine, a speck made by a sharp humour, which eats or corrodes the flesh like a caustic, and is common to children ; a corrosive humour. Figuratively, that which gradually and inevitably destroys. A disease incident to trees, which makes the bark rot and fall off. Applied to brass, a kind of rust or verdigrease, which covers its surface with a green colour.

To CA'NKER, v. a. to rust, or grow green, applied to brass or other metals ; to be corroded or grow foul or corrupt. Actively, to corrode ; to pollute ; to eat or gnaw ; to infect ; including the idea of acrimony.

CA'NNABINE, a. [cannabinus, Lat.] hempen.

CA'NNEL-COAL, s. a substance which is often confounded with jet. It is dug up in many parts of England in great abundance, particularly in Lancashire, where it is burnt as common fuel. It is worked into toys and utensils of various kinds under the name of jet. In medicine, it is good in the colic, as an emollient and discutient.

CA'NNIBAL, s. one who lives upon human flesh.

CA'NNIBALLY, ad. after the manner or practice of cannibals.

CA'NNON, s. [canon, Fr.] a hollow, cylindrical instrument, made of a mixt metal, furnished with a touch-hole, and used to shoot a ball by the force of gunpowder. It is uncertain when cannons were first invented, but they were used at the battle of Cressy in 1346 when there were five cannons in possession of the English.

CA'NNON-BALL, CA'NNON-BULLET, or CANNON-SHOT, s. the ball or bullet with which a cannon is charged.

To CANNONA'DE, v. a, to attack with or fire cannon against. Neuterly, to batter or attack with great guns.

CANNONI'ER, (cannonéer) s. the person who discharges or fires a cannon.

CA'NNOT, not able, not having power enough for the performance of a thing. Joined with but, it implies necessity, and signifies must. "I cannot but believe." Locke.

CANO'A, or CANO'E, (canóo) s. an Indian vessel or boat, made of the trunk of a tree, dug hollow ; pieces of bark sewed together ; or of the small sticks of a pliant wood, covered with seal skins.

CA'NON, s. [kanon, a rule, Gr.] in ecclesiastical history, a law or rule relating either to the doctrine or discipline of a church, enacted by a general council, and confirmed by the principal magistrate. Applied to scripture, such books as are believed to be really inspired. A law or rule in any science. In surgery, an instrument used in sewing up wounds. In geometry and algebra, a general rule for the solution of all questions of the same nature. A person who possesses a prebend, or revenue allotted for the performance of divine service in a cathedral or collegiate church.

CA'NONESS, s. in the Romish church, a woman who enjoys a prebend, and lives after the manner of Secular Canons, without being obliged to renounce the world, or make any vows.

CANO'NICAL, a. [canonicus, Lat.] applied to ceremonies and discipline, those which are established by the laws of the church. Applied to books, those which are generally allowed to be divinely inspired. Applied to time, or hours, those which are prescribed or limited by the church, for the performance or celebrating of, any ceremony or act of religion.

CANO'NICALLY, ad. in a manner agreeable to the prescriptions and laws of the church.

CA'NONIST, s. one who makes the canons his peculiar study; a professor of the canon law.

CANONIZA'TION, s. in the Roman church, a declaration of the pope's, whereby, after some solemnity, a person who has been eminent for an exemplary life, and a supposed power of working miracles, enters into the list of the saints.

To CA'NONIZE, v. a. to enter a person's name in the list of saints; to make a saint.

CA'NONRY, or CA'NONSHIP, s. an ecclesiastical benefice in some cathedral or collegiate church, which has a prebend, or stated allowance out of the revenues of such church, commonly annexed to it.

CA'NOPIED, a. covered above with a canopy, spread above, or over the head.

CA'NOPY, s. [canopeum, Lat.] any thing which is extended over the head.

To CA'NOPY, v. a. to form a canopy over a person's head; to cover with a canopy.

CANO'ROUS, a. [canorus, Lat.] giving to singing; musical; tuneful.

CANT, s. [cantus, Lat.] applied to language, a dialect made use of by beggars and vagabonds, to conceal their meaning from others; a whining tone of voice; a particular form of speaking peculiar to any body of men; a whining, formal pretension to goodness, generally attended with hypocrisy.

To CANT, v. n. to make use of the dialect, absurd jargon, or private gibberish, of vagabonds and thieves; to speak or read in a whining tone; to endeavour to impose upon a person by a formal pretence of uncommon piety; to flatter.

CANTA'TI, s. [Ital.] in music, a song composed of recitative airs, and a variety of motions, generally for a single voice, with a thorough bass; sometimes for two, three, or more voices, with different instruments.

CANTA'TION, s. [cantatio, Lat.] the act of singing.

CA'NTER, s. one who endeavours to pass himself upon the world as a religious person, by a fair outside, and formal appearance of religion, without obeying it in his heart.

CA'NTERBURY, an ancient city of Kent, the see of an archbishop, primate of all England. The cathedral is a large superb structure, and was once very famous for the shrine of Thomas Becket. The silk manufactures first introduced by the French refugees, are still carried on here, though on the decline; the principal manufactures are worsted and Canterbury muslins, made of silk and cotton. It is also noted for its fine brawn, and the adjacent country produces abundance of hops. It is situated on the river Stour, 26 miles S. E. by E. of Rochester, and 56 from London. Markets on Wednesday and Saturday.

CA'NTERBURY-BELLS, s. a species of bell-flower, frequent in gardens.

CANTHA'RIDES, s. [plural of cantharis, Lat.] in natural history and pharmacy, called Spanish flies, but properly a beetle formed from an egg, which produces a worm, that is peculiar to the fig-tree, pine-tree, white brier, and poplar, whose juices being very corrosive or biting, are by Bacon supposed to be the cause of its corrosive or caustic quality. It is needless to mention their service in blisters, or the danger of too free a use of them since experience has confirmed the former, and given us too many dreadful examples of the latter.

CA'NTHUS, s. [Lat.] the corner of the eye, formed by the meeting of the eyelids.

CA'NTICLE, s. [from canto, to sing, Lat.] a song; applied to some hymn in scripture, and used in the plural to signify Solomon's song.

CANTILIVERS, s. in building, pieces of wood framed into the front or sides of a house, to sustain the mouldings or eaves over it.

CA'NTING, s. a sea-phrase, which denotes the act of turning any thing about, or over. Canting-arms, in heraldry, are those which express their owner's surname.

CA'NTLE, s. [kant, Belg.] a piece with corners.

CA'NTLET, s. a piece; a fragment.

CA'NTO, s. [Ital.] a division, section or book of a poem. In music, a song, or the treble part of it.

CA'NTON, or QUANO TCHEOU, a large, populous, and wealthy city of China, seated on one of the finest rivers in the empire. It is the capital of the province of Quantoug, and the centre of the European trade in that country. It consists of three towns, divided by high walls. Temples, magnificent palaces, and courts, are numerous. The streets are long and straight, paved with flag-stones, and adorned with lofty arches. The houses are remarkably neat, but consist of only one story, and they have no windows to the streets. The covered market-places are full of shops. They have manufactures of their own, especially of silk stuffs. The number of inhabitants is computed at 1,000,000, many of whom reside in barks, which form a kind of floating city; they touch one another, and are so ranged as to form streets. Each bark lodges a family and their grand children, who have no other dwelling. At break of day, all the people who inhabit them depart to fish, or to cultivate their rice. Lat. 23. 8. N. lon. 113. E.

CA'NTON, s. [canton, Fr.] a small part of a city detached from the rest; a parcel or division of land; a district or part of a country governed by its own chief or magistrates; a small community or clan. In heraldry, a square portion of an escutcheon separated from the rest, when on the left side, called sinister; and like the space between the cross or saltier.

To CA'NTON, v. a. to divide into small parts, parcels, or districts, used with the particle into, and sometimes both with out and into.

To CA'NTONIZE, v. n. to parcel out; to allot in small divisions, used with among.

CA'NTRED, or CA'NTREF, s. a British word, which signifies a hundred villages.

CA'NTYRE, a peninsula of Argyleshire, 50 miles long, from N. to S. and from 5 to 8 broad.

CA'NVASS, s. [canevas, Fr.] very clear unbleached cloth of hemp or flax, wove in little squares, used for working tapestry by the needle; for blinds of windows, towels, and to cover stays, &c. likewise a coarse cloth of hemp, of which sails are made, Canvass, also is the cloth on which painters usually draw their pictures.

To CA'NVASS, v. a. [canvasser, Fr.] to search a truth to its first principles; to inquire into; to examine; to debate, or dispute; to controvert; Used neuterly, to solicit; to ask people for their votes or interest at an election.

CA'NUTE, or CNUTE, upon Edmund's death became master of the whole kingdom, and was proclaimed king in 1017; and all the lords, both English and Danes, swore allegiance to him. After his coronation, he divided England into four parts, Mercia, Northumberland, East-Anglia, and Wessex. Over the three former he appointed dukes or earls, and the last he governed himself. To the end that justice might be impartially administered, he declared, that for the future there should be no distinction made between the English and Danes. He denounced the severest punishments against malefactors of what nature soever, without respect of persons. He sent Edmund's two sons into Denmark, under pretence of travelling; but a worse design was supposed to be at the bottom of it. However, the king of Hungary, at whose court they were, after having first been in Sweden, took care of their education, and gave one of his daughters in marriage to Edmund, the eldest, who died soon after; and to Edward he gave his sister-in-law, Agatha, daughter of the emperor Henry II. by whom he had five children, Edgar, Atheling, Margaret, and Christian, and two died in Hungary. He built a stately church over the grave of St. Edmund, the East-Anglian king, who was killed by the Danes, and very much enlarged the town of St Edmundsbury. In 1031, he took a journey to Rome, where he made large presents to the churches, and confirmed all his predecessors had done, both for the church of Rome and the English college. There is an instance of his piety and good sense transmitted to us, which is, that as he was walking one day by the sea-side, at Southampton, and his flatterers were extolling him to the skies, and even comparing him with God himself; he, to convince them of their folly and impiety, caused a chair to be brought to him, and seating himself where the tide was about to flow, he turned himself to the sea, and said, "O sea, thou art under my jurisdiction, and the land where I sit is mine; I command thee to come no farther; nor to presume to wet thy sovereign's feet." But the tide coming on as usual, he, from thence, took occasion to let his base flatterers know that none but the King of Heaven, whom the sea and land obey, deserved the titles they impiously bestowed on him. After which, it is said, he would never wear his crown, but caused it to be put on the head of a crucifix at Winchester. Canute died in the 19th year of his reign, in the year 1036. He left three sons, Sweyn, who had Norway; Harold, England; and Hardicanute, Denmark. Gunilda, his daughter, was married to the emperor Henry IV.

CA'NY, a. abounding in canes; consisting of canes.

CA'NZONET, s. [canzonetta, Ital.] a little song.

CAOU'TCHOUC, s. in natural history, a very elastic resin, the produce of a tree which grows along the banks of the river of the Amazons. It is popularly called rubber, and lead-eater.

CAP, s. [cap, Brit.] a part of dress made to cover the head; the ensign of a cardinalate. When the Romans gave a slave the cap, it entitled him to liberty. Students at law, physic, &c. as well as graduates in most universities, wear caps. Doctors are distinguished by peculiar caps, given them in assuming the doctorate. In Italy, the cap is used as a mark of infamy. At Lucca, the Jews are distinguished by a yellow cap, or an orange colour. In France, bankrupts were formerly obliged to wear, ever after, a green cap. It also signifies a square piece of timber, put over the head of a mast to keep it steady. In gunnery, a piece of lead laid over the touch hole to preserve the prime. Cap of maintenance, one of the regalia carried before the king at a coronation. In botany, the membranaceous empalement of funguses surrounding the pillar.

To CAP, v. a. to cover the top of a thing; to pull off a cap in play.

CAP-A-PI'E, or CAP-A-PE', [cap-à-pie, Fr.] from head to foot all over, used with the verb arm.

CA'P-PAPER, s. a sort of coarse, thick, brownish paper.

CAPABI'LITY, s. the quality of being able to undertake or perform a thing.

CA'PABLE, a. [capable, Fr.] endued with power or understanding equal to an undertaking; susceptible; fitted for, or adapted to.

CAPA'CIOUS, a. [capax, Lat.]applied to bodies of large dimensions, or of a large cavity, able to contain much. Applied to the mind, extensive, or containing a great stock of knowledge.

CAPA'CIOUSNESS, s. the quality of containing or receiving a great number of things or large bodies.

To CAPA'CITATE, v. a. to render a person fit by instruction, discipline, study, or exercise; to qualify a person for an undertaking.

CAPA'CITY, s. [capacité, Fr.] the dimensions of other bodies. Applied to the mind, understanding; a power of receiving instruction; a state, condition, or character.

CAPA'RISON, s. [from caparazon, Span.] the clothing or covering spread over any horse of state, or sumpter horse.

To CAPA'RISON, v. a to dress a horse in its housings for show and ostentation. Figuratively, to adorn a person with pompous and splendid dress.

CAPE, s. [cape, Fr.] in geography, a piece of land running or projecting into the sea; a head-land, or promontory; the neck piece of a coat.

CAPE CA'PRICORN, in New South Wales; it is exactly under the line which bounds the Tropic of Capricorn.

CAPE COAST CASTLE, a fortress belonging to the English, on the coast of Guinea, in Africa. The natives wear nothing but a thin covering round their waists. Lat. 4. 56. N. lon. 10. W.

CAPE DESEA'DO, a head-land of Terra del Fuego, in the most southern part of America. Lat. 55. 48. S. lon. 74. 18. W.

CAPE DOU'GLASS, a very lofty promontory in the N. W. part of America, on the North Pacific Ocean, discovered by Capt. Cook. Lat. 48. 15. N. lon. 153. 50. W.

CAPE FLA'TTERY, a cape on the N. W. coast of America. Lat. 48. 15. N. lon. 124. 22. W.

CAPE FINISTE'RRE, a head-land of Galicia, in Spain. Lat. 42. 51. N. lon. 9. 12. W.

CAPE FRA'NCIS, a celebrated place of the island of St. Domingo, in the West Indies, near which is a flourishing town. Lat. 19. 57. N. lon. 72. 5. W.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE, the most southerly point of the continent of Africa, and very rocky, lies in 34. 29. S. lat. and 18. 23. E. lon. Upwards of 30 miles to the N. of it is the Cape town, which is neat and well built, rising in the midst of a desert, encompassed by black and dreary mountains. The public offices of the Dutch East-India company are situated next the water, and the private buildings lie beyond them on a gentle ascent. The streets are broad and regular, intersecting each other at right angles; and the houses are mostly built of stone, cemented together with a glutinous kind of earth, which serves as mortar, and afterwards is neatly plastered and whitewashed with lime. Their slaves, a few Hottentots excepted, were originally brought from the East Indies, and principally from Malacca. There is here a very large hospital for the sailors belonging to the Dutch East India Ships, which touch here. It is situated close to the company's garden, and is an honour and ornament to the town. There are two churches here; one large, plain, and unadorned, for the Calvinists, the prevailing sect; and a smaller one for the Lutherans. The only landing-place is at the E. end of the town, where there is a wooden quay, which runs some paces into the sea, with several cranes on it for the convenience of loading and unloading the scoots that come alongside. Close to this quay, on the left hand stands the castle and principal fortress; a strong extensive work, having excellent accommodations for the troops, and for many of the civil officers belonging to the colony. Within the gates, the Dutch East India company lately had their principal stores; which were spacious, as well as convenient. This fort covers and defends the east part of the town and harbour, as Amsterdam Fort does the west part. The latter, which has been built since commodore Johnstone's expedition, and wherein both French and Dutch judgment have been united, to render it effectual and strong, is admirably planned, and calculated to annoy and harass ships coming into the bay. Some smaller detached fortifications extend along the coast both to the E. and W. and making landing, which was not the case before the American war, hazardous and difficult. In a word, Cape Town is at this time, fortified with strength regularity, and judgment. The ground behind the town gradually rises on all sides towards the mountains, called the Table Mountain, which is the highest; the Sugar Loaf, so named from its form; the Lion's head; Charles Mount; and James Mount, or the Lion's Rump. The view from the Table Mountain is extensive and picturesque; and all along the valleys are scattered a number of fine plantations. The cultivated country beyond the mountains is of great extent, and forms six different establishments. The soil is uncommonly productive, and the climate benign, and favourable to vegetation. The spring commences here in October. Provisions are very reasonable at the Cape. A late traveller says, that he saw 18lb. of mutton sold for about 6d. sterling; a whole ox for two guineas and a half, or three guineas; and corn and other things in proportion. Fish, and game brought from the country, are in great abundance. In September, 1795, the town and colony surrendered to an English squadron, under Sir G. K. Elphinstone, seconded by about 8000 land forces under Majors General Clark and Craig, on terms of capitulation. At the peace, it was restored to the Dutch; but on the 10th of January, 1806, it was again taken by an English force, under admiral Sir Home Popham, and general Sir David Baird.

CAPE HORN, the southern extremity of Terra del Fuego. Lat. 55. 58. S. lon. 67. 26. W.

CAPE NORTH, the most northern promontory in Europe, in the island of Maggero, on the coast of Norway, Lat. 71. 10. N. lon. 26. 2. E.

CAPE PA'LMAS a promontory on the Guinea coast, Africa. Lat. 4. 10. N. lon. 6. 10. W.

CAPE PRINCE OF WALES, the most western extremity of America hitherto known, discovered by Capt. Cook, in 1778. Lat. 65. 46. N. lon. 168. 15. W.

CAPE DE VERD, a cape on the coast of Negroland, in Africa. Lat. 14. 45. N. lon. 17. 28. W.

CAPE DE VERD ISLANDS, so called from their being situated on the westward of the above cape, about 300 miles. They lie between 23 and 26 degrees of W. lon. and between 15 and 18 degrees of N. lat. Many of these islands are little more than barren rocks. They were discovered by Antonio Noel, a Genoese, in the service of Portugal, in 1460. The natives are of a middle stature, ugly and almost perfectly black; their hair is woolly and frizzled, and their lips thick. A company of merchants, belonging to Lisbon, have the exclusive right of trading to these islands; and they keep an agent here for that purpose, who perfectly tyrannizes over the inhabitants, and sells the wretched commodities carried from Portugal at exorbitant prices.

CA'PEL, a village near Dorking in Surry, where it is recorded that a mountain, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, divided, one part of it remaining, and the other part being moved down to the borders of a farm, leaving the land through which it passed full of hills and dales.

CA'PER, s. [from caper, Lat. a goat] in dancing, a spring or leap in which the feet are moved across each other several times before a person reaches the ground again.

CA'PER, s. [capparis, Lat.] the flower bud of the caper-bush, a well known pickle brought from the neighbourhood of Toulon in France.

To CA'PER, v. n. to cross the feet several times in the air in a leap, applied to dancing; to skip for joy; to dance with great activity.

CA'PERER, s. one who cuts capers in dancing.

CA'PIAS, s. [Lat.] in law, a writ of two sorts, one before judgment, called capias ad respondendum; the other is a writ or execution after judgment.

CAPILLA'CEOUS, a. See CAPILLARY.

CAPI'LLAMENT, s. [from capillus, a hair, Lat.] in botany, the small threads or hairs which grow in the middle of a flower, adorned with little herbs at the top. Likewise the strings or threads about the roots of plants.

CAPI'LLARY, a. [from capillus, a hair, Lat.] resembling hairs. In botany, applied to such plants as have no main stem, their leaves arising from the roots, and producing their seeds in little tufts or protuberances on the back of their leaves; as the fern maiden-hair, of which the syrup of capillaire is made. In anatomy, applied to the minute arteries, which, in the brain, are not equal to one hair, and the smallest lymphatic vessels which are a hundred times smaller than the smallest arteries. In physic, capillary tubes are those whose diameter is one half, one third, or one fourth of a line, or the least that can be made.

CAPILLA'TION, s. [from capillus, Lat.] a dividing into branches as small as hairs; a small ramification.

CA'PITAL, a. [capitalis, Lat.] in its primary sense, that belongs or relates to the head. Applied to crimes, that affects a person's life; criminal in the highest degree; chief or principal. Capital stock, the fund of a trading company.

CA'PITAL, s. among merchants, the sum of money brought in by each party to make up the common stock. Likewise, the money which a merchant first brings into trade on his own account. In geography, the chief city of a kingdom, or residence of its monarch. Applied to letters, large; such as are written at the beginnings of heads of books.

CA'PITALLY, ad. in such a manner as affects a person's life. Capitally convicted, is applied to a person who is cast for his life, or condemned to die. Applied to productions of art, in a perfect, high finished, or excellent manner.

CAPITA'TION, s. [from caput, head, Lat.] a numbering by the heads; a certain sum of money imposed at so much per head; in exigencies of state.

CAPI'TULAR, s. [from capitulum, a small chapter, Lat.] a book divided into chapters; also a collection of civil and canonical laws.

To CAPI'TULATE, v. n. [from capitulum, a short chapter or article, Lat.] to draw articles, to set down the heads of a remonstrance, to make head. Mostly used by moderns for surrendering a place upon certain conditions.

CAPITULA'TION, s. the surrender of a place upon certain conditions.

CAPI'VI-TREE, s. [capaiba, Lat.] a tree growing in the Spanish West Indies, which yields a balsam called the balsam of capivi.

CA'PON, s. [capa, Lat.] a castrated cock.

CAPONNI'ERE, s. a work sunk on the glacis of a place about four or five feet deep to afford a passage from one work to another; the earth dug out serves for a parapet, and is made with hop holes and embrasures, covered with strong planks, on which are clays, or hurdles, that support the earth which covers all. It holds 15 or 20 men, who fire through these embrasures.

CAPO'T, s. [Fr.] at piquet, when one party wins all the tricks.

To CAPO'T, v. a. to win all the tricks at the game of piquet.

CAPOUCH, s. [capuce, Fr.] a monk's hood.

CAPRE'OLATE, a. [from capreolus, Lat.] in botany, applied to those plants which turn, wind, and creep along the ground, by means of their tendrils, as gourds, melons, cucumbers, &c.

CA'PRICE, (capreéss) [caprice, Fr.] or CAPRI'CHIO, s. [Span.] sudden change of sentiment, not founded on reason; a whimsey, freak, or fantastic humour.

CAPRI'CIOUS, a. [capricieux, Fr.] applied to a variable and inconstant behaviour, founded on mere whim and fancy; applied also to a sudden and frequent change of opinion or sentiment, inconsistent with reason.

CAPRI'CIOUSLY, ad. in a whimsical, humoursome, fanciful manner.

CAPRI'CIOUSNESS, s. the quality of changing or commanding, according to the starts of fancy, without any regard to reason or propriety.

CA'PRICORN, s. [capricarnus, Lat.] in astronomy, the tenth sign of the zodiac, represented on ancient medals in the form of a goat with the hinder parts of a fish; for the sun entering that sign on the winter solstice, from whence he begins to ascend towards the northern hemisphere, the hieroglyphic sign of a goat, which is fond of climbing, and ascends as it browses, seemed to be proper to represent that circumstance.

CAPRIO'LES, s. [Fr.] are leaps that a horse makes in the same place, without advancing.

CA'PSICUM, s. in botany, Guinea or Bonnet pepper.

CA'PSTAN, s. [corruptly spelt capstern; cabestan, Fr.] a large cylinder or barrel, placed perpendicularly on the deck of a ship, and turned by four levers or bars, which cross it, serving, by means of a cable which winds round it, to draw up heavy burdens. It is likewise used to tow a ship, and to weigh the anchors.

CAPSULA'R, a. [from capsula, Lat.] hollow, like a chest or pouch.

CA'PSULATE, a. [from capsula, Lat.] inclosed as in a box. Capsulated plants, in botany, are such as produce their seeds in short dry pods or husks.

CA'PSULE, s. [from capsula, a little box or case, Lat.] in botany, a dry hollow seed-vessel that opens naturally in some determinate manner; as at the side by a small hole, in orchis and campanula: horizontally in pimpernel; longways in convolvolus; at the bottom in arrow-grass; or at the top as in most plants. In chemistry, capsules are small saucers of clay for roasting samples of ores, and for smelting them to ascertain their value.

CA'PTAIN, s. [captaine, Fr.] a military officer, whereof there are various kinds; as a captain of a troop or company, one who commands a troop of horse, and the other a company of foot, under a colonel. Captain General is he who commands an army in chief. Captain Lieutenant is one who commands a troop or company, in the room of another whose absence is dispensed with. Captain of a ship of war, is the commanding officer. Captain of a merchant ship more properly the master, is he who has the direction of the ship, crew, and cargo.

CA'PTAINRY, or CA'PTAINSHIP, s. the power over a certain district; the chieftainship. The rank or post of a captain.

CA'PTION, (kápshon) s. [from capio, Lat.] in law, the act of taking a person by a judicial process.

CA'PTIOUS, (kápshious) a. [captiosus, Lat.] given to cavils or forming objections; ensnaring; insidious.

CA'PTIOUSLY, (kápshiously) ad. in such a manner as shews a great inclination to raise objections; in a sly, insidious manner.

CA'PTIOUSNESS, (kápshiousness) s. the quality of forming cavils, or unnecessary objections; peevishness.

To CA'PTIVATE, v. a. [captivo, Lat.] to take prisoner. Figuratively, to charm or subdue by the power of superior excellence. To enslave; with to.

CA'PTIVATION, s. the act of taking a person prisoner; the state of a person taken prisoner.

CA'PTIVE, s. [captivus, Lat.] one taken prisoner in war. Figuratively, one charmed or subdued by the beauty or excellence of another.

CA'PTIVE, a. [captivus, Lat.] taken prisoner in war; in confinement; imprisoned. Figuratively, subdued, or kept under great restraints.

To CA'PTIVE, v. a. to take or make a person prisoner.

CA'PTIVITY, s. [captivité, Fr.] a state of servitude, owing to a person's being taken prisoner in war.

CA'PTOR, s. [from capio, Lat.] the person who takes a prisoner or prize.

CA'PTURE, s. [captura, Lat.] the taking of any prey; the thing taken. In law, the seizing a person for debt, or the apprehending a criminal.

CAPUA, a large city of Lavora, Naples, built in the ninth century, near the ruins of the ancient Capua. It is 15 miles N. of Naples.

CAPUCHINS, (Capuchéens) [from capuce or capuchon, a stuff cap or cawl wherewith they cover their heads, Fr.] monks of the order of St. Francis, founded by Matthew Baschi. They are clothed with brown or grey, are always barefooted, never go in a coach, and never shave their heads.

CA'PUT MORTUUM, s. [Lat.] a term signifying dead-heads, being that which remains in a retort after distillation or dryness. The modern term is Residuum.

CAPYBA'RA, s. a kind of cavy which resides much in the water, and is eaten by the Indians in South America.

CAR, s. [car, Brit.] a small carriage with one or two horses. Figuratively, used by the poets for a chariot, or genteel vehicle, in which a person is drawn.

CA'RABINE, or CA'RBINE, s. [carabine, Fr.] a small kind of fusee, or fire-arm, about two feet long in the barrel.

CARABINI'ER, (carabinéer) s. a sort of light horse, carrying longer carabines than the rest, used sometimes on foot.

CARA'CCAS, or St. Juan de Leon, a town and district of Terra Firma, bounded by the provinces of Venezuela, on the W. Cumana on the E. and the Caribbean Sea on the N. Lat. 10. 3. N. lon. 65. 10. W. This district has lately erected itself into an independent state, and has prepared to defend its liberties by arms.

CARACK, s. [caraca, Span.] a large ship of burden; a galleon.

CARA'NNA, s. a hard brittle resin, though some call it a gum. It is brought principally from New Spain, is of a dark colour, and bitterish taste. A fine odoriferous oil is distilled from it, esteemed a very powerful external remedy in cases of pain, tumours, and wounds.

CA'RAT, or CA'RACT, s. [carat, Fr.] a mark, that is to say, an ounce troy, divided into 24 equal parts, called caracts, and each caract into four grains, is a weight by which the mint-masters discover the fineness of gold. Caract, or carat fine, is the 24th part of the goodness of a piece of pure gold. Carat is a weight used by jewellers, equal to four grains, but lighter than the mark weight above.

CARAVA'N, s. [caravanne, Fr.] a body or company of merchants or traders travelling together in great numbers through deserts, or other dangerous places, in the East, for their mutual safety and defence. Their beasts are horses, but most commonly camels, and they are escorted by a chief or aga, with a body of janizaries.

CARAVA'NSARIES, s. a sort of public inns built on great roads in the East, for the accommodation of caravans; there being no inns for passengers, as in Europe. Some of these are very magnificent; and there are people who attend, to accommodate travellers: there is, however, no furniture, and in some places no other provisions but what the caravans bring with them. There are many of these in the great towns of Asia and Africa, especially in the Turkish and Persian dominions. They are generally built in the form of a square, and round a quadrangle, like a college.

CA'RAVEL, or CA'RVEL, s. [caravela, Span.] a round, light, old fashioned ship.

CA'RAWAY, s. [carum, Lat.] in botany, the seed is stomachic, diuretic, and carminative; one of the four hot seeds in the shops.

CA'RBON, s. in chemistry, the basis of charcoal.

CARBONA'DO, s. [Span.] meat cut across, or in squares, with a knife, to be broiled.

To CARBONA'DO, v. a. to cut across, in cookery. Figuratively, to cut or hack.

CA'RBONATES, s. in chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with carbonic acid.

CA'RBONATED, a. in chemistry, impregnated with carbon.

CARBO'NIC, a. in chemistry, belonging to carbon.

CA'RBONOUS, a. in chemistry, belonging to carbon. Carbonous oxide is common charcoal.

CA'RBUNCLE, s. a very elegant stone, of a deep red colour, with a mixture of scarlet, known among the ancients by the name of Anthrax. It is usually found pure and faultless, and is of the same degree of hardness with the sapphire, which is second only to the diamond; it is naturally of an angular figure, and is found adhering by its base to a very heavy and ferruginous stone of the emery kind. Its usual size is near a quarter of an inch in length; and two-thirds of that in diameter. In its thickest parts, when held up against the sun, it loses its deep tinge, and becomes exactly of the colour of burning charcoal, whence the propriety of the name which the ancients gave it. It bears the fire unaltered, without parting with its colour. It is only found in the East Indies, so far as is yet known, and there but rarely. Hill's History of Fossils. In surgery, the Anthrax, an inflammation which arises with a vesicle or blister almost like that produced by burning.

CA'RBUNCLED, a. set with carbuncles.

CARBU'NCULAR, a. resembling, or partaking of the qualities of a carbuncle.

CARBUNCULA'TION, s. carbunculatio, Lat.] the blasting of the young buds of trees or plants, either by excessive heat or cold.

CA'RBURETS, s. in chemistry, compound substances, of which carbon forms one of the constituent parts. Thus, plumbago, which is composed of carbon and iron, is called carburet of iron.

CA'RBURETTED, part. from the verb carburet, seldom used; formed into a carburet. See last article.

CA'RCANET, s. [carcan, Fr.] a chain or collar of jewels.

CA'RCASE, or CA'RCASS, s. [carquasse, Fr.] a dead body. Figuratively, a body or person in a reproachful sense; the decayed parts, ruins, or remains of a thing. In gunnery, a kind of bomb of an oblong form, filled with combustibles, and thrown from a mortar.

CA'RCELAGE, s. [from carcer, Lat.] fees paid by prisoners before they can be discharged.

CARCINO'MA, s. [from karkinos, a crab, and nemo, to feed, Gr.] a cancer.

CARD, s. [carte, Fr. charta, Lat.] in gaming, pieces of fine thin pasteboard, cut in oblong squares, on which are painted several marks and figures, and used in several games. A court card, is that which has the image of some person painted on it. In sea affairs, the upper part of the mariner's compass, on which the names of the winds are marked.

CARD, s. [kaarde, Belg.] an instrument or comb composed of several small pieces of iron wire, hooked in the middle, fastened by the feet in rows; they are generally used in pairs, placed with their points opposite to each other, having the materials between them, and serve to comb, disentangle, and range wool or flax, in a proper order for spinning.

To CARD, v. a. [kaerden, Belg.] to comb wool, &c. or make it fit for spinning, by drawing it through the card or comb. Neuterly, to game; or play inordinately at cards.

CA'RDAMOM, s. [cardamomum, Lat.] a medicinal seed, that assists digestion, strengthens the head and stomach, and is diuretic.

CA'RDER, s. one who combs or prepares wool by passing it through a card.

CA'RDIAC, a. [from kardia, the heart, Gr.] an appellation given to cordial medicines that strengthen and invigorate the heart, replenish the exhausted spirits with good humour, and excite motion where required, whereby the elasticity and tone of the fibres, which before were weakened and vitiated, are restored, and a brisker and freer circulation occasioned.

CARDIA'LGIA, or HEART-BURN, s. [from kardia, the heart, and algos, sorrow, Gr.] a disorder of the stomach, attended with anxiety, a nausea, and inclination to vomit.

CA'RDIFF, a compact and well-built town of Glamorganshire, with very extensive and considerable old walls, and a harbour three miles down the river; but vessels of 200 tons burden can come up to the town. This town has a considerable trade with Bristol and other places; and near it are works of cast and wrought iron. A canal, 25 miles in length, has been lately completed, from Cardiff to the iron-works at Merthyr Tidvil. Cardiff is the county-town of Glamorganshire, seated on the river Taff, or Tave, 3 miles from the Severn, 12 E. of Cowbridge, and 164 W. of London. Markets on Wednesday and Saturday.

CA'RDIGAN, the county-town of Cardiganshire, is large, populous, and pleasantly seated on the river Tivy, over which there is a handsome bridge. In its neighbourhood are iron and tin works, established about the year 1768. It is 33 miles N. E. by E. of St. David's, and 225 W. N. W. of London. Market on Saturday.

CA'RDIGANSHIRE, a county of South Wales, is bounded on the W. by Cardigan Bay, in the Irish Channel; on the N. and N. E. by Merionethshire and Montgomeryshire; on the E. and S. E. by Radnorshire and Brecknockshire; and on the S. by Carmarthenshire. It extends 42 miles in length, and 20 in breadth, and is divided into 5 hundreds, which contain 6 market towns, and 66 parishes. The air is milder here than in most parts of Wales. To the S and W. are plains fruitful in corn: but the N. and E. parts are a continued ridge of bleak mountains, yet there are pastures well stocked with sheep and cattle. Here is also plenty of tame and wild fowl, and it is well supplied with fish from the sea, and from its own lakes and rivers, near which there is a great number of otters. The mountains abound with lead and silver ore, mines of which have several times been worked to advantage. The principal rivers are the Tivy, Rydal, and the Istwith. Cardigan Bay lies on the coast.

CA'RDINAL, a. [cardinalis, from cardo, a hinge, Lat.] principal, chief, supreme. The cardinal points of the compass, are the north, south, east, and west, and the winds that blow from those points, are called the cardinal winds. Cardinal signs in the Zodiac are Aries, Libra, Cancer, and Capricorn. In arithmetic, cardinal numbers are such as express positively how many things there are, as 1, 2, 3, not their order, as 1st, 2d, 3d. In morality, the cardinal virtues are justice, prudence, temperance, and fortitude.

CA'RDINAL, s. an eminent dignity in the church of Rome, who has a voice in the conclave at the election of a pope. The cardinals, originally, were no more than deacons entrusted with the care of distributing the alms to the poor of the several quarters of Rome; and as they held assemblies of the poor in certain churches of their several districts, they took the title of those churches. They began to be called cardinals in the year 300, under pope Sylvester, by which appellation was meant the chief priests of a parish, and next in dignity to a bishop. This office grew more considerable afterwards, and gradually arrived to its present height. The cardinals composed the pope's council, and till the time of Urban VIII. were styled Most Illustrious; but by a decree of that pope, 1630, they had the title of Eminence conferred upon them. Also a beautiful American bird, so denominated from its shining red plumage.

CA'RDINAL-FLOWER, s. a plant with strap-shaped leaves, almost naked stem, and pale purple blossoms: found in lakes, in hilly countries, and flowering in July and August.

CA'RDINALATE, or CA'RDINALSHIP, s. the office and rank of a cardinal.

CA'RDUUS, s. [Lat.] See THISTLE.

CARE, s. [care, Sax.] attention to a particular subject; concern or anxiety of mind, arising from the uncertainty of something future, or the oppression of the present calamity; caution, protection, regard, and support, when followed with the particle of. A too great anxiety for the events of this world; an affectionate regard for a person. SYNON. Prudence signifies wisdom applied to practice; discretion is the effect of prudence, and means a knowledge to govern or direct one's self; by care we understand heed in order to preservation; caution implies a greater degree of wariness.

To CARE, v. n. to be anxious, solicitous, or concerned about any thing; to be disposed, or inclined; with for before nouns, and to before verbs.

To CARE'EN, v. a. [carêner, Fr.] to lay a vessel upon one side in order to calk, stop the leak, trim, or repair the other side. Neuterly, to be in a state of careening.

CAREE'R, s. [carriere, Fr.] a course or race; the ground on which a race is run: full speed: very swift motion.

CA'REFUL, a. abounding or perplexed with great solicitude, apprehensions, or anxiety.

CA'REFULLY, ad. in an attentive, cautious, circumspect, and diligent manner.

CA'REFULNESS, s. cautious, diligent, and constant application; heedfulness; vigilance.

CA'RELESS, a. without due attention, labour, application, caution, or concern; without thought, or premeditation,

CA'RELESSLY, ad. without anxiety: without care: with negligence: in a manner void of care.

CA'RELESSNESS, s. heedlessness; inattention, negligence; absence of care; manner void of care.

To CARE'SS, v. a. [caresser, Fr.] to embrace with great affection; to treat a person with great civility and endearment.

CARE'SS, s. an embrace of great affection; an endearing profusion of civilities and kind actions.

CA'RET, s. [Lat.] in grammar, a mark implying that something is omitted in writing or printing, which ought to come in where this sign (ʌ) stands.

CA'RGO, s. [chargo, Fr.] the lading of a ship; all the merchandises and wares on board a ship.

CARI'BBEE ISLANDS. See INDIES, WEST.

CA'RICATURE, s. in painting, is the concealment of real beauties, and the exaggeration of blemishes, but still so as to preserve a resemblance of the object.

CA'RIES, s. [Lat.] in medicine, the solution of continuity in a bone, attended with a waste of its substance, occasioned by the corrosion of some acrimonious matter.

CARIO'SITY, s. that quality of a bone which putrifies and wastes its substance.

CA'RIOUS, a. [cariosus, Lat.] rotten, generally applied to bones.

CARK, s. [cearc, Sax.] care; anxiety. Obsolete.

To CARK, v. n. [cearcan, Sax.] to be solicitous, careful, anxious.

CARLE, s. [ceorl, Sax.] a rude, brutish fellow; a churl; also an old man.

CA'RLINE THISTLE s. [carlina, Lat.] a biennial plant found in dry pastures, said to be an excellent remedy in hysterical cases.

CA'RLINGS, or CA'RLINES, s. in a ship, two pieces of timber, lying fore and aft, along from beam to beam, whereon the ledges rest, on which the planks of the ship are fastened.

CARLI'SLE, (Karlile) an ancient city, the capital of Cumberland, containing between 8 and 9000 inhabitants. It is pleasantly situated on a rising ground, in a fertile country, near the confluence of 3 fine rivers, the Eden, the Peterell, and the Canda, or Caude, all abounding with fish, and by which it is nearly surrounded. It has long been noted for making whips and fish hooks; there are also considerable quantities of printed linens, checks, cottons, fustians, hats, tanned leather, nails, coarse knives, stockings, &c. manufactured here. It is 60 miles S. of Edinburgh, and 301 N. N. W. of London. Market on Wednesday and Saturday.

CA'RLOW, or CATHERLOUGH, a county of Ireland, in Leinster, 28 miles in length, and 18 at its greatest breadth. It is bounded on the W. by Queen's county; on the N. and N. E. by Kildare and Wicklow; on the E. by Wicklow and Wexford; and on the S. S. E. and S. W. by Wexford and Kilkenny. It contains 50 parishes, about 8763 houses, and 44,000 inhabitants. Its chief town is Carlow, a neat place, seated on the E. side of the river Barrow, by which it communicates with Waterford river and the Grand Canal, 16 miles N. E. of Kilkenny.

CARLSCRO'NA, or CARLSCROON, a town of Blekinge, in S. Gothland, with a harbour large and commodious, but of difficult entrance, on account of the shoals and rocky sands at its mouth. The town mostly stands upon a small rocky island, which rises gently in a bay of the Baltic; the suburbs extend over another small rock, and along the mole, close to the bason, where the fleet is moored. The way into the town from the main land, is carried over a Dyke to an island, and thence along two long wooden bridges, joined by a rock. The town is spacious, and contains about 18,000 inhabitants; some of the buildings are of brick, but generally they are of wood. Here is a dock hollowed out of the solid rock, capable of receiving the largest vessels, and a covered one, whose bottom and sides are of hewn granite; rows of granite pillars support the roof, and bear rather the appearance of a collonnade to a temple, than of a receptacle for ships. In 1680 the town was founded; in 1724 the former dock, and in 1779 the latter was completed. According to the original plan, 3 basons and 30 docks, communicating by sluices, were intended, but a century will probably elapse before they can be completed. Carlscrona is 220 miles nearly S. of Stockholm. Lat. 56. 20. N. lon. 15. 25. E.

CA'RMAN, s. one who drives a cart, or keeps a cart for hire.

CARMA'RTHEN, a well built populous town, in former times the residence of the prince of S. Wales, and now usually reckoned the politest place in the principality. It is pleasantly situated, in a fertile country, on the river Towy (near its conflux with the Gwilly) over which it has a narrow stone bridge (but lately widened) of 7 arches, with a very commodious quay, to which vessels of 200 tons burden may come up; 24 miles S. E. of Cardigan, and 215 W. by N. of London. Markets on Wednesday and Saturday. Fairs on June 3, July 10, August 12, Sept. 9, Oct. 9, and Nov. 14.

CARMA'RTHENSHIRE, a county of S. Wales, 35 miles in length, and 26 at his greatest breadth, is bounded on the W. by Pembrokeshire; on the N. and N. E. by Cardiganshire and Brecknockshire; on the E. and S. E. by Brecknockshire and Glamorganshire; and on the S. by Bristol Channel. It contains 6 market towns and 87 parishes. It is fruitful in corn, grass, wood, coal, and sea-fish, especially salmon. The air is mild, it not being extremely mountainous.

CA'RMEL, a mountain in Palestine, standing on the skirts of the sea, and forming the most remarkable head land on all that coast. It extends from near St. Jean d'Acre on the S. a considerable way inland to the E.

CA'RMELITE, s. [Fr.] a sort of pear.

CA'RMELITES, or WHITE FRIARS, an order of our Lady of Mount Carmel, making one of the four orders of Mendicants. They pretend to derive their original from the prophets Elijah and Elisha. Their original rules contained 16 articles; one of which confined them to their cells, and enjoined them to employ themselves day and night in prayer; another prohibited the brethren having any property; another enjoying fasting, from the feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross till Easter, excepting on Sundays; abstinence at all times from flesh was enjoined by another article; one obliged them to manual labour; another imposed a strict silence on them, from vespers till the tierce the next day; however, these constitutions have in some respects been altered.

CARMI'NATIVES, s. medicines prescribed for the colic disorder, to dispel the wind.

CA'RMINE, s. a powder of a very beautiful red colour, bordering upon purple, and used by painters in miniature, though rarely, on account of its great price. The manner of preparing it is kept a secret by the colour makers, neither do any of those receipts which have been published at all direct us to the making of it.

CA'RNAGE, s. [carnage, Fr.] slaughter, havoc, or heaps of bodies slain in battle.

CA'RNAL, a. [charnal, Fr.] proceeding from, or belonging to the fleshy part of a man, opposed to spiritual. Figuratively, sensual, lustful, lecherous, volumptuous.

CARNA'LITY, s. lust, wantonness, propensity to lust; unchaste pleasure. Figuratively, immersed in sensuality.

CA'RNALLY, ad. in a gross sensual manner, opposed to spiritual.

CARNA'RVON, is a well built populous town of Carnarvonshire, with a celebrated castle, in a small dark room of which, not 12 feet long, nor 8 broad, Edward the II. was born: it is surrounded on all sides except the E. by the sea and two rivers, one of which is the Menay. The harbour is tolerably good, with 9 feet at low water. Carnarvon has no manufactures, but carries on a considerable trade with Ireland, Liverpool, Bristol, and London. It is 7 miles S. W. of Bangor, and 251 N. W. of London. Market on Saturday.

CARNA'RVONSHIRE, a county of North Wales, about 40 miles in length, and 20 in breadth, bounded on the W. and N. by the sea and the isle of Anglesea, on the E. and S.

E. by Denbighshire and Merionethshire and on the S. by Merionethshire and the sea. It has 7 hundreds, 68 parishes 5 market towns, and 1 city. The air is cold; this country being the most mountainous district in N. Wales. Its central part is entirely occupied by the lofty Snowden, and the several craggy summits, deep dells, moors, chasms, and lakes, which constitute its dreary region. Cattle, goats and sheep, are its rural riches. Foxes are the chief wild animals. Several copper mines have been worked in various parts, and there are some of these at present about Llanberris. Other places afford lead; and slates, with quantities of stones, excellent for hones, are dug near Snowden.

CARNA'TIC, The, a rich populous country of Hindoostan, extending along the coast of Coromandel to Cape Comorin, being 570 miles long, from N. to S. and from 120 to 75 wide.

CARNA'TION, s. [from caro, Lat.] in botany, a species of the clove-gilly flower. In painting, a lively red colour, resembling that of flesh newly cut.

CARNE'LION, s. [improperly spelt cornelian] in natural history, a precious stone, of which there are three species, a red, a yellow and a white; the red sort is again subdivided into two species, the pale being called the female, and the deep red the male carnelion.

CA'RNIVAL, s. [carnaval, Fr.] the season of mirth and luxury celebrated by the Italians, and especially at Venice, lasting from Twelfth day to Lent, and attended with balls, feasts, operas, concerts, and every thing which pomp, ostentation, or festivity, can furnish.

CARNI'VOROUS, a. [from caro and voro, Lat.] eating flesh; that lives on flesh.

CARNO'SITY, s. [carnosité, Fr.] in surgery, a fleshy, excrescence; a fungous or proud flesh.

CA'RNEOUS, or CA'RNOUS, a. [carneus, Lat.] fleshy, applied to animals. In botany, of a soft substance, similar to that of flesh in animals.

CA'ROL, s. [carola, Ital.] a song of joy, exultation, or festivity, applied to the rustic anthems of country singers at Christmas; any kind of song.

To CA'ROL, v. n. [carolare, Ital.] to sing with great joy and festivity. Actively, to praise in anthems or songs.

CAROLI'NA, a country of North America, divided into North and South, and comprehending two of the United States. It is bounded on the N. by Virginia, on the E. by the Ocean, on the S. by Florida, and on the W. by Louisiana, lying between 32 and 37 degrees N. lat. The chief produce is tobacco, indigo, and rice; but they are attempting to breed silk-worms for the production of silk. The animals, trees, fruits, plants, are much the same as in Virginia; particularly wild animals resembling a bull, with a very long hair, short legs, large bodies, and great bunches on their backs near the shoulders. Their horns are black and short, and they have a great beard under their muzzles, and so much hair on their heads that it hides their eyes, which gives them a hideous look. They have bears, whose flesh is esteemed good eating; and they make hams of their legs. Besides these they have cat-a-mountains, wild cats, wolves, a sort of tigers, beavers, otters, musk-rats, oppossums, racoons, minxes, water-rats, a kind of rabbits, elks, different from the European; stags, fallow-deer, several sorts of squirrels, foxes, and two sorts of rats. The birds are so numerous, that it would be tedious even to mention their names; and there are many sorts of fish quite unknown to these parts of the world. Their fruits and trees are much the same as in Virginia, and they have some of the best kind of fruits transplanted from Europe, which thrive well. The native Americans are of the same shape, colour, and stature, as in other parts of America; they being all of a red copper complexion, with coarse black hair, and no beards; and here, as in other places, each man has several wives. The other commodities of Carolina, not yet mentioned, are corn, naval stores, and skins; which last they purchase of the native Americans.

CA'ROLINE ISLANDS, in the Pacific Ocean supposed to be 30 in number, but little known. Lat. 6. to 10. N. lon. 136 to 156. E.

CARO'TED, a. [carotides, Lat.] applied to those two arteries which arise out of the ascending trunk of the aorta, near where the subclavian arteries arise.

CAROU'SAL, (caroùzal) s. a festival or holiday, celebrated with mirth, pomp, and festivity.

To CAROU'SE, (caroùze) v. n. [carousser, Fr.] to drink freely. Actively, to drink up lavishly; to drink a health.

CA'ROUSE, (caroùze) s. a drinking match; a large draught.

CAROU'SER, (carouzer) s. one who drinks freely; a toper.

CARP, s. [carpe, Fr.] a large fresh-water fish, remarkable for its being able to live a long time out of water. This fish, which is reckoned the most valuable of all for the stocking of ponds, was introduced into this country by Leonard Maschal, about the year 1514.

To CARP, v. n. [carpo, Lat.] to censure, find fault with, or blame, including the idea of forwardness and reproach.

CA'RPENTER, s. [charpentier, Fr.] one who performs the several offices of cutting, joining, flooring, or other woodwork, relative to houses, buildings, or ships.

CA'RPENTRY, s. the art of building either houses or ships with wood.

CA'RPER, a person fond of raising objections; a caviller, or censorious person.

CA'RPET, s. [kurpet, Belg.] a covering of stuff or other material, commonly spread over tables, or laid on floors. The phrase of a thing's being on the carpet, is to express its being in hand, in debate, or the object of consideration.

To CA'RPET, v. a. to spread with a carpet. Figuratively, applied with great elegance to the earth, to embellish or adorn with flowers and herbs.

CA'RPET-KNIGHT, a denomination given to men of peaceable professions, who are raised to the dignity of knighthood. They take the appellation carpet, because they usually receive their honours from the king's hands in the court, kneeling on a carpet. By this they are distinguished from knights created in the camp or field of battle on account of their military prowess.

CA'RPING, part. fond of cavilling; raising objections or finding fault; censorious; captious.

CA'RPINGLY, ad. in a captious and censorious manner.

CARPUS, s. [Lat.] an anatomical term for the wrist.

CARR, s. a light open chariot, also a kind of rolling throne, used in triumphs, and at the solemn entries of a princes.

CA'RRACK, a Portuguese vessel, trading to the East and West Indies, which is very large, round built, and fitted for fight as well as burden.

CARRIAGE, (in pron. the last r is dropped) s. [cariage, Fr.] a vehicle used to convey persons or goods from one place to another; the act of conveying things from one place to another; the price paid for the conveying of goods. Figuratively, personal address and behaviour; conduct, or practices; proceedings, or the manner of transacting any affair. The carriage of a cannon is, the frame of timber on which it is mounted.

CARRICK, a district of Scotland, bounded by the Frith of Clyde, on the N. W. and Galloway on the S. Bargeny is the capital town.

CARRICKFE'RGUS, the county town of Antrim, in Ulster, seated on a safe and spacious bay of the same name, called also Belfast Lough, with an excellent harbour, 83 miles N. of Dublin.

CA'RRIER, s. one who conveys or moves a thing from one place to another; one who conveys goods from one town or place to another. In natural history, a species of pigeons, so called from their carrying letters, &c. tied to their necks, to the place where they were bred, be it ever so remote.

CA'RRION, s. [charogne, Fr.] the flesh of a dead carcase; and putrified flesh, not fit for food. Figuratively, a coarse, gross, disagreeable person; a term of reproach.

CA'RRION, a. relating to a dead or putrified carcase; feeding on dead carcases.

CA'RRON, a river of Stirlingshire, rising on the S. side of the Campsey Hills, and flowing into the Frith of Forth, below Falkirk. Two miles from its source, it forms a fine cascade, called the Fall of Auchinlilly, and on its banks, one mile from Falkirk, are the celebrated Carron works, buildings of vast extent, founded in 1761, on a spot where there was not a single house; this is now the largest iron foundery in Europe, constantly employing about 1600 men. All sorts of iron goods are made in it, from the most trifling article for domestic use, to cannon of the largest caliber. The machinery, constructed by Mr. Smeaton, is the first in Great Britain for elegance and correctness.

CARRONA'DE, s. a short kind of ordnance, capable of carrying a large ball, and useful in close engagements at sea. It takes its name from the above-mentioned river Carron in Scotland, where it was first made.

CA'RROT, s. [carote, Fr.] a garden root; of which there are two sorts, the yellow and the orange; the last of which is reckoned by much the better.

CA'RROTY, a. red; applied to red haired people, from the resemblance of the colour of their hair to that of a carrot.

To CA'RRY, v. a. [charier, Fr.] to remove a thing from one place to another; to convey, transport, bear; to gain in competition, or rather resistance; to behave, conduct, obtain, import, support, sustain. Used with off, to kill or put an end to a person's life. To carry on, to prosecute, continue, or persevere in an undertaking, notwithstanding all oppositions. Joined with through, to support, or enable a person to sustain and surmount.

CART, s. [crat, Brit.] a land carriage with two wheels, drawn by horses. Figuratively, any vehicle or carriage.

CARTE BLANCHE, s. [Fr.] a blank paper; a paper or instrument to be filled up with such terms and conditions as the person to whom it is sent thinks fit.

CA'RTEL, s. [cartel, Fr.] certain terms or stipulations settled between persons at variance. In war, applied to the conditions made by enemies for the mutual exchange of prisoners.

CA'RTER, s. one who drives, and gets his living by driving a cart.

CARTE'SIANS, s. a sect of philosophers, who adhere to the opinions advanced by Des Cartes, and founded on the two following principles; the one metaphysical, the other physical; the first is, I think, therefore I am; the other is, that nothing exists but substance. The first of these principles is refuted by Mr. Locke; the other, by the principles of the Newtonian philosophy.

CARTHAGE'NA, a town of Murcia, seated on a bay of the same name, in which vast quantities of mackarel are caught. Here is a very large arsenal, with every requisite for building and fitting out ships of the line. The harbour is spacious and deep, being a bason hollowed by nature, and sheltered from the winds by several hills, placed round it at equal distances. It is 27 miles nearly S. of Murcia. Lat. 37. 38. N. lon 0. 36. W.

CARTHAGE'NA, a large and rich city, capital of the province of Carthagena, in the Terra Firma, which is bounded on the N. by the Caribbean Sea, on the E. by the river St. Martha, and on the W. by the Sea and the Gulph of Darien, with one of the best harbours in S. America, the entrance however is so narrow that only one vessel can enter at a time. The revenues of the king of Spain from New Granada and Terra Firma are brought to this place. Lat. 10. 27. N. lon 75. 22. W.

CA'RTHAGE, once a celebrated city of Africa, and rival of Rome, but now in ruins. It is 10 miles E. of Tunis, near the promontory called Cape Carthage.

CA'RT-HORSE, s. an unwieldy horse fit only for the cart.

CARTHU'SIANS, a religious order founded by one Bruno, in the year 1080. They are a branch of the Benedictines, remarkable for the austerity of their rule, which obliges them to a total abstinence from flesh, even at the peril of their lives, and to feed on bread, water and salt one day in every week. They must not keep any portion of their meat and drink till next day; their beds are of straw, covered with a felt; their clothing, two hair cloths, two cowls, two pair of hose, and a cloak all coarse. In the refectory, they are to keep their eyes on the dish, their hands on the table, their attention to the reader, and their hearts fixed on God. Women are not allowed to come into their churches.

CA'RTILAGE, s. [cartilago, Lat.] in anatomy, a smooth, solid, uniform, elastic substance, softer than bone, but more solid than any other part, without cavities for marrow, or any nerves or membranes for sensation.

CARTILAGI'NEOUS, or CARTILA'GINOUS, a. consisting of cartilages.

CA'RTMEL, a town of Lancashire, seated among the hills, called Cartmel Fells, near the river Ken and the Ken Sands, a sandy shore, which requires guides to direct strangers on their way. It has a harbour for boats, and a market on Tuesday and Saturday, for corn, sheep, and fish. It is 12 miles N. by W. of Lancaster, and 260 N. N. W. of London.

CARTOO'N, s. [cartone, Ital.] in painting, a drawing or sketch upon strong paper, to be chalked through upon a wall, in order to be painted in fresco.

CARTOU'CH, (cartóoch) s. [cartouche, Fr.] a case of wood three inches thick at the bottom, girt round with marlin, containing 48 musket balls, and six or eight balls of iron of a pound weight; being fired out of a hobit, or small mortar, for the defence of a pass; likewise used for a cartridge.

CA'RTRAGE, or CA'RTRIDGE, s. [cartouche, Fr.] a charge of powder wrapped up in thick paper, pasteboard, or parchment, used for charging fire-arms; or in flannel, for great guns.

CART-ROPE, s. a strong cord used to fasten the load on carts; proverbially, any thick cord.

CA'RTULARY, s. [from charta, Lat.] a place where papers or records are kept.

CA'RTWRIGHT, s. a maker of carts.

To CARVE, v. a. [ceorfan, Sax.] to cut or divide into several parts. Also, to dissect or cut up a fowl or joint of meat at a table. To cut flowers, knots, figures, or other devices, in wood or stone. Neuterly, to exercise the trade of a sculptor; to perform at table the office of supplying the company from the dishes.

CA'RVER, s. one who forms statues, or other likenesses, in wood, stone, or marble. In cookery, one who cuts the meat.

CA'RVING, s. the art of cutting images, or other likenesses, in wood, stone, or marble, CARU'NCLE, s. [caruncula, Lat.] in anatomy, a little piece of flesh. The caruncul\u00e6 lachrymales are two small eminences in the inner corners of the eyes.

CA'RUS, s. in medicine, is a species of the apoplexy, being a deprivation of sense and motion, affecting the whole body; yet the faculty of respiration is still left; in short, the Carus differs little from a lethargy.

CARYA'TIDES, s. in architecture, a kind of order of columns, or pilasters used by the ancients, made in the form or figure of a woman, dressed in long robes, and serving to support the entablement. It is said that the Greeks, having taken the city of Carya, led away their women captives, and to perpetuate their servitude, represented them in their buildings as charged with burdens such as those supported by columns.

CA'SAL, the chief city of Montserrat in Italy, formerly well fortified, and defended by a citadel, but deprived of its fortifications in 1695. It is 34 miles E. N. E. of Turin.

CASCA'DE, s. [cascade, Fr.] a fall of water from a higher to a lower place. They are either natural or artificial.

CASE, s. [caï se, Fr.] something made to cover or contain a thing; a covering, sheath, or box.

CASE, s. [casus, Lat.] the outward or external condition, circumstance, or state of a person; the state of a thing. In physic, the state of the body; used with the particle in, and the word good, fat and plump; and with the word bad, lean or emaciated. In law, the representation of any fact, question, or the whole arguings of counsel on a particular point or circumstance of a trial. Case, in grammar, implies the various changes which nouns in Greek and Latin undergo in their several numbers, to express the several views or relations under which the mind considers things with regard to one another. In case implies, if it should happen.

To CASE, v. a. to put in a case or cover. Figuratively, to surround or inclose, like a case. In building, to cover with materials different from those in the inside. To skin, or strip off the skin. Neuterly, to represent an affair in all the various lights it will bear; to put cases.

To CASE-HA'RDEN, v. a. to prepare iron, so as to render its outward surface hard, and capable of resisting the file, or any edged tool, to turn the surface of the iron into steel.

CA'SEMATE, or CA'ZEMATE, s. in fortification, a certain retired platform in the flank of a bastion; for the defence of the moat or face of the opposite bastion; a kind of vault or arch of stone-work.

CA'SEMENT, s. [casamento, Ital.] a window opening upon hinges.

CA'SEOUS, a. [coseus, Lat.] resembling cheese; cheesy.

CA'SERN, s. [caserne, Fr.] a little room or lodgment erected between the rampart and the houses, in a fortified town for the ease of the garrison.

CASH, s. [from caisse, Fr.] in commerce, the ready money a person is possessed of.

CA'SHEW-NUT, s. the nut of the cashew-tree, which grows in the West Indies. The nut is of the shape and size of a hare's kidney, the kernel sweet and pleasant, but between the layers of the shell is a caustic inflammable oil, which will blister the lips and tongue the moment it touches them.

CASHI'ER, (cashéer) s. a person who keeps the money at a banker's, or any public office.

To CASHI'ER, (cashéer) v. a. [cassir, Fr.] to discard; to deprive a person of his place or post for some mal-practice.

CA'SHNA, part of the extensive country called Soudan by the Arabs, and Negroland by the Europeans; a large kingdom in the interior of Africa, S. of Zaara, E. of Tombucton, and W. of Zamfara. It resembles Borneo in climate and natural productions, and in the colour, genius, religious profession, and government of the people. Its monkeys and parrots are numerous, and of various species. A thousand towns and villages are said to be included in this empire, which, like Borneo, consists of different tribes or nations, subject to the dominion of one sovereign. Its capital, of the same name, is about 800 miles nearly S. of Tripoli, in lat. 16. 20. N. lon. 12. E.

CASK, s. [casque, Fr.] a round hollow cycloidal vessel, used for keeping liquors, provisions, or dry goods; a helmet, from cassis, Lat.

CA'SKET, s. a small box for jewels, or things of small dimensions but great value. Figuratively, any thing which contains something of great value.

CA'SPIAN-SEA, a great lake or sea of Asia, bounded by the country of the Calmuc Tartars on the N.; by Bucharia and part of Persia on the E.; by another part of Persia on the S.; and by another part of Persia and Circassia on the W. being about 680 miles in length from N. to S. and 260 in breadth from E. to W. Several great rivers fall into this sea, and yet it never seems to increase, though it has no communication with any other sea. It is sometimes very dangerous for sailors, though it has no observable tide. It abounds in fish, which are thought to be better than in other seas. Lon. from 49 to 55. E. lat. from 37. to 47. N.

CASSA'TION, s. [cassatio, Lat.] in civil law, the annulling or abrogating any proceeding.

CA'SSAVI or CA'SSADA, s. an American plant, long and thick, of which the Americans make a kind of bread, said to be a wholesome and nourishing food.

CA'SSEL, capital of the late landgraviate of Hesse Cassel, circle of Upper Rhine. It is divided into the Old and New Towns, the latter of which is well built and spacious. The castle or palace commands a delightful prospect, and has fine gardens and a curious cabinet. It is seated on the river Fulda, 40 miles S. of Paderborn. Lat 51. 19. N. lon. 9. 44. E.

CA'SSIA, s. in botany, a tree growing in Alexandria and in the West Indies, affording a clammy substance, used in the shops for a purge. Likewise, a fragrant spice, supposed to be the bark of a tree very like cinnamon.

CA'SSIMER, or CASSIME'RE, s. the name of a thin twilled woollen cloth.

CASSIO'PEA, in astronomy, a constellation in the northern hemisphere.

CA'SSOCK, s. [casque, Fr] a close, long garment, worn by clergymen, when in their robes, under their gown.

CA'SSONADE, s. in commerce, cask sugar, or sugar put into casks or chests, after the first purification, but which has not been refined.

CA'SSOWARY, s. in natural history, a very large bird, which much resembles the ostrich, and is a native of Africa.

CA'SSWEED, s. a plant, the same with the shepherd's pouch.

To CAST, v. a. preter. and part. passive cast, [kaster, Dan.] to throw with the hand; to throw a net; to throw dice, or lots; to throw in wrestling; to let fall; to expose, to shed, to moult; to condemn in a trial or law-suit; to lay aside, as unfit for wear; to have an abortion, as a cow, when she slinks her calf; to compute, reckon, calculate; to contrive or plan out; to form or model a thing in a mould with melted metals. To cast aside, to lay by as useless. Used with down, to fling or throw from a high place. To cast an eye, to glance, or look at. To cast a light, to reflect, or impart. Joined with away, to wreck or shipwreck, applied to sea affairs. To be cast down, to be disconsolate, low spirited, or dejected on account of some misfortune. Used with out, to speak, give vent to, or utter with rashness and vehemence. Used with upon, to be driven by violence of the wind, or stress of weather. Used with off, to discard; to disburden one's self of; to leave behind. Neuterly, it implies, to contrive; to turn the thoughts; to admit of a form, by casting or melting; to warp.

CAST, s. the act of throwing a thing at a distance by the hands. A specimen, or stroke; a particular motion of the eye; a throw, or chance of a throw, at dice; a mould, a form. In painting, a shade or tendency to any colour. Exterior appearance. Manner; air; mien. In East India affairs, a sect or tribe of the same rank or profession.

CA'STANET, s. [castaneta, Span.] a musical instrument, made of two little round pieces of wood or ivory, hollowed like a spoon, fastened to the thumb, and beat with the middle finger, serving to direct the time and measures of the dances.

CA'ST-AWAY, s. a person that is involved in a multiplicity of misfortunes, and seemingly abandoned by providence.

CA'STELLAIN, s. [castellano, Span.] the constable of a castle.

CA'STELLANY, s. the manor or lordship belonging to a castle, or the territory of a city, or town.

CA'STELLATED, a. inclosed within a building, or fortified place.

CA'STER, s. one who flings or throws. In arithmetic, one who calculates.

CASTIGA'TION, s. [castigatio, Lat.] punishment inflicted on a person in order to make him amend his faults; penance, or correction.

CAS'TIGATORY, a. punishing to make a person mend.

CASTI'LE, NEW, or TOLEDO, a province of Spain, 200 miles in length, and 184 in breadth; bounded on the W. by Estremadura and part of Leon; on the N. by Old Castile; on the E. and S. E. by Arragoo, Valencia, and Murcia; and on the S. by Murcia and Andalusia. It is divided into three parts: Agraria to the N.; Mancha to the E.; and Sierra to the S. The air is pure and healthy; the land is mountainous, but produces in the N. fruits and wine, and in the S. good pastures and fine wool. Madrid is the capital.

CASTI'LE, OLD, a province of Spain, about 192 miles in length, and 115 in breadth; bounded on the W. by Leon; on the N. by Biscay, Asturia, and Navarre; on the E. by Navarre and Arragon: and on the S. by New Castile. It produces excellent wine; its plains are covered with herds of large and small cattle, particularly sheep, which yield the finest wool in Spain. Burgos is the capital.

CA'STING, s. in foundering, the running of a metal into a mould prepared for that purpose.

CA'STING-NET, s. a net which is spread by throwing it in the water, used in fishing.

CA'STLE, s. [castellum, Lat.] a place or edifice fortified by art or nature to defend a town or city from an enemy. Castles in the air, imply some chimerical project.

CA'STLEBAR, a populous town of Mayo, in Connaught, with a manufacture of linen. It is the assize town for the county, 35 miles N. of Galway, and 114 from Dublin.

CA'STLE-CARY, a town of Somersetshire, with a market on Tuesday. It is 12 miles S. E. of Wells, and 117 W. by S. of London.

CA'STLE-COMB, a town in Wiltshire, so called from its old castle. It formerly had a market, now disused. It is 17 miles N. W. of Chippenham, and 12 N. N. E. of Bath.

CA'STLE-RISING, a town in the county of Norfolk, which had a market, now disused on account of its harbour being choked up with sand: it is, however, a mayor-town, and sends two members to parliament. The castle, whence it has its name, is still standing; and here is an alms-house for 24 poor widows. It is 103 miles N. N. E. of London.

CA'STLETOWN, or CASTLE-RUSHIN, the principal place of the Isle of Man, with a strong beautiful castle, of free-stone, still entire, erected by Guttred, king of Man, about the year 960, who lies interred in it. At the entrance is a great stone chair for the governor and two smaller ones for the deemsters; and beyond this court is a room where the keys sit. On the other side are seen the governor's house, the chancery offices, and good barracks. It is situated on the S. E. point of the island, with a shallow rocky barbour, in lat. 54. 2. N. lon. 4. 35. W.

CA'STLE-TOWN, a parish, formerly called LIDDISDALE, a new town, (begun to be erected in 1793, and rapidly advancing,) of Roxburghshire, in Scotland.

CA'STLE-SOAP, s. a corruption of Castile Soap.

CA'STLING, s. the young of a brute animal, which is cast before its time.

CA'STON, or CA'WSTON, a town in Norfolk, seated on the Bure, over which it has a bridge, 10 miles N. by W. of Norwich. Market on Tuesday.

CA'STOR, called by the Saxons Thuang Caston, i. e. Thong Castle, a town of Lincolnshire, (said to be built by Hengist, on a tract of ground which he encompassed with an ox's hide, cut into thongs, pursuant to a grant of Vortigern,) 20 miles N. E. of Lincoln, between Binbrook and Glandford Bridge. Market on Monday.

CA'STOR, s. a beaver, an amphibious animal, the feet of which have five toes, and the hinder ones formed for swimming, with a black, flat, and oval tail. In astronomy, a moiety of the constellation of Gemini, called also Apollo.

CA'STOR and POLLUX, s. in meteorology, a fiery meteor, which appears in the form of one, two, or three balls, adhering to some part of a ship. When seen single, it is named Helena, and shews that the severest part of a storm is yet to come; when double, called Castor and Pollux, and portends a cessation of a storm. In astronomy, the two principal stars in the constellation of Gemini CASTO'REUM, s. [Lat.] in pharmacy, a liquid matter contained, not in the testicles, but in little bags, near the anus of the Castor. It is a medicine not much esteemed at present.

CASTRAMENTA'TION, s. [castramentatio, Lat.] the art of encamping.

To CA'STRATE, v. a. [castro, Lat.] to geld. Figuratively, to cut sentences out of any book.

CASTRA'TION, s. the act of gelding.

CA'STRES, a considerable city, capital of the department of Tarne, seated on the river Agout, 34 miles E. of Thoulouse.

CA'SUAL, (kázual) a. [casual, F.] accidental; arising from chance; done without design; happening contrary to the common laws of nature.

CA'SUALLY, (kázually,) ad. in an accidental manner; without design; by chance

CASUA'LTY, (kázualty) s. an event that is not foreseen, or intended. Figuratively, any accident which puts an end to a person's life.

CA'SUIST, (kázuist) s. [casuiste, Fr.] one who studies and resolves nice points in cases of conscience.

CASUI'STICAL, (kazuístical) a. belonging to cases of conscience, or practical parts of ethics.

CA'SUISTRY, (kásuistry) s. the science employed about cases of conscience, or nice points in practical divinity or ethics.

CAT, s. [chat, Fr.] a domestic animal, which catches mice, reckoned the lowest order of the leonine genus, and supposed to see in the dark, or with the least glimmering of light, which may be owing to the faculty it has of contracting and dilating the pupil of the eye in an extraordinary manner.

CA'TACHRESIS, (katakresis) s. [from katachraomai, to abuse, Gr.] in rhetoric, is when a word whose natural meaning is good and innocent, is used abusively, as, you are a very pretty fellow indeed, meaning, you are a sad wretch.

CA'TACHRESTICAL, a. applied to language, improper; far-fetched; forced.

CA'TACOMBS, s. [from kata, under, and kumbos, a cave, Gr.] grottoes or subterraneous cavities for the burial of the dead.

CATACA'USTICS, s. [from kata and akouo, to hear, Gr.] the science of reflecting sounds or echoes.

CATALE'PSIS, s. [from katalambano, to occupy, Gr.] a disease by which a person is rendered in an instant motionless and senseless, and continues in the same posture that he was in when the fit seized him, with his eyes open, but without sight or understanding.

CA'TALOGUE, (cátalog) s. [katalogos, Gr.] a list or particular enumeration of things in some order wherein they are mentioned in separate lines or articles.

CATALO'NIA, a province of Spain, bounded on the W. by Arragon, and a part of Valencia; on the N. by the Pyrenees; and on the E. and S. by the Mediterranean and Valencia. Its greatest extent from E. to W. is 112 miles, and from N. to S. 148. The air is wholesome. Its mountains, which are numerous, are covered with forest and fruit trees. It abounds in wine, corn, and pulse, and has quarries of marble, and several sorts of mines. Barcelona is the capital.

CA'TAMITE s. a person kept by the ancient Romans, and the modern Italians, for the vilest of purposes.

CA-TA-MOU'NTAIN, s. a fierce and wild animal resembling a cat.

CATA'NIA, an ancient rich and celebrated city of Val di Noto, in Sicily, with a university. Its streets are wide, straight, and well paved with lava. The inhabitants are about 30,000. The city stands on the East coast on a gulf of the same name, near Mount Etna, and has often suffered by earthquakes, particularly in 1669 and 1693. In the last, the town was entirely destroyed, and 18,000 people burned in the ruins. It has since been rebuilt and repeopled, the land about it being fertile in corn, wine, fruits, &c. It is 47 miles S. S. W. of Messina. Lat. 37. 36. N. lon. 16. 29. E.

CA'TAPLASM, s. [from kataplasso, to smear, to apply outwardly. Gr.] a poultice.

CA'TAPULT, or CA'TAPULTA, [catapulta, Lat.] a military engine, invented by the Syrians, for throwing stones, and sometimes huge darts or javelins, of 10 or 12 feet in length. The catapulta consisted of two large timbers, like masts of ships, placed against each other, and bent by an engine for the purpose, these being suddenly unbent again by a stroke of a hammer, threw the javelins with incredible force.

CA'TARACT, s. [from katarrasso, to fall down with violence, Gr.] in natural history, and cosmography, a precipice in the middle of a river, caused by a rock stopping its stream, whence the water falls with great violence and noise. Among the most remarkable are those of the Nile in Africa, and Danube in Europe, and that of Niagara in America. In medicine, a total or partial loss of sight.

CATA'RRH, (kattár) s. [from katerreo, to flow down, Gr.] in medicine, a defluxion of serious matter from the head on the mouth, aspera arteria, and the lungs, arising from a cold or diminution of insensible perspiration, which occasions irritation.

CATA'RRHAL, or CATA'RRHOUS, a. proceeding from a catarrh.

CATA'STROPHE, (katástrofy) s. [from katastrepho, to finish, Gr.] in poetry, the change or revolution in the last act of a play, or the turn which unravels the intrigue, and concludes the piece. Figuratively, a dreadful event or accident, which terminates in a person's ruin, misery or death.

CA'TCAL, (kátcaul) s. a kind of short whistle, with a pea included in its inside, made use of at playhouses, to hinder an act or from proceeding in his part, and to shew disapprobation of any dramatic performance.

To CATCH, v. a preter. I catched, or caught, I have catched, or have caught; [ketsen, Belg.] to seize or lay hold on suddenly with the hand. Figuratively, to intercept any thing in motion. To pursue or take any thing that is running from one; to receive any falling body, or prevent it from reaching the ground; to receive a disease by infection; to contract; to seize suddenly; to captivate, charm, or seize the affections, alluding to the taking prey in toils. Used neuterly, to be infectious; to spread by contagion. Figuratively, to spread or increase from one to another, applied to bodies or things which lie near one another.

CATCH, s. the act of seizing any thing which flies, or hides: the proper posture for seizing; an advantage taken; hold laid on the thing caught; profit; a short interval of action. A taint; any thing which fastens by a sudden spring, or entering into a loop or cavity. In music, a short song, containing some merry tune.

CA'TCHER, s. one who catches, or that in which any thing is caught.

CA'TCHFLY, s. in botany, a genus of plants nearly allied to the campion. There are many species.

CA'TCH-POLL, s. at present a word of reproach and contempt for a bailiff and his followers; formerly used without reproach for sergeant at mace, or any other, who used to arrest men upon any just cause.

CATECHE'TICAL, (katekétical) a. [from katecheo, to teach first principles, Gr.] consisting of questions and answers.

CATECHE'TICALLY, ad. by way of question and answer.

To CA'TECHISE, (kátekize) v. a. [from katecheo, to teach first principles, Gr.] to ask a person questions in order to discover secrets; to examine, to interrogate.

CA'TECHISER, (kátekizer) s. one who teaches a person, or tries whether he can say his catechism; one who questions, examines, or endeavours to make discoveries by questions.

CA'TECHISM, (katekism) s. [from katechizo, to catechise, Gr.] a system of instruction by question and answer. According to the liturgy of the church of England, an institution to be learned by every person before he is brought to be confirmed by the bishop. Our church catechism originally contained no more than a repetition of the baptismal vow, the creed, and the Lord's prayer; but king James I. ordered the bishops to add to it a short and plain explication of the sacraments.

CA'TECHIST, (katekist) s. [from katichizo, to catechise, Gr.] one who teaches or instructs persons in the first principles by way of question and answer.

CRTECHU'MEN, (katecumen) s. [from katechizo, to catechise, Gr.] in the primitive church, a candidate for baptism.

CATECHUME'NICAL, (katekuménshal) a. belonging to a catechumen.

CATEGO'RICAL, a. positive; absolute; affirmative; adequate.

CATEGORICALLY, ad. in a positive, express, absolute manner.

CA'TEGORY, s. [from kategorea, to aver, or declare a charge of accusation, Gr.] in logic, a system or assemblage of all the beings ranged under one kind or genus, called in latin a predicament.

CATENA'RIAN, a. [from catena, Lat.] relating to a chain; resembling a chain. In mathematics, the Catenarian curve is formed by a rope or chain hanging freely between two points whereon its extremities are fastened.

CA'TENATION, [from catena, Lat.] the act of linking together, or connecting like a chain.

To CA'TER, v. a. to provide food; to buy in victuals.

CATERE'R, s. man employed to provide and buy in victuals for a family.

CA'TERESS, s. a woman who buys in provision for a family.

CA'TERPILLAR, s. in natural history, a reptile, from whence butterflies or moths are produced, covered with hair, formed of annular scales, having small holes on its sides for respiration, with several feet, and furnished with a glutinous substance, which it emits from its mouth, and makes use of as ropes to descend from any height.

To CA'TERWAUL, v. n. to make a noise like cats in their rutting time. Figuratively, to make a disagreeable noise; to abandon one's self to lust.

CATES, s. [katter, Belg.] nice and elegant food; cakes; or rich dishes.

CA'TFISH, s. the name of a sea-fish in the West Indies, so called from its round head and large glaring eyes, by which it is discovered in hollow rocks.

CAT-HARPINGS, s. small ropes in a ship, running on little blocks, from one side of the shrouds to the other, near the deck.

CATHARINE'NSLAF, the capital of a province of the same name in Russia, is 178 miles N. E. of Cherson. Lat. 47. 23. N. lon. 35. 15. E.

CATHA'RTIC, or CATHA'RTICAL, a. [from kathario, to purge, Gr.] cleansing. Applied in medicine to purges, or those medicines which cleanse the body by stool; but in a more extensive sense, to all kinds of medicine which cleanse the body.

CATHA'RTICALNESS, s. the quality of cleansing or purging.

CA'THEAD, s. in natural history, a fossil, consisting of nodules with leaves in it of an iron stone, and found in the rocks near Whitehaven, in Cumberland. On board a ship, a piece of timber, with two shivers at one end, having a rope and block.

CATHE'DRAL, a. episcopal, or containing the see or seat of a bishop; belonging to a cathedral.

CATHEDRAL, s. [from kathedra, a chair, Gr.] the chief church of a diocese, where the service is sung.

CA'THETER, s. [from kathemi, to thrust in, Gr.] in surgery, a hollow tube or instrument, usually of silver, and sometimes crooked, generally thrust up the bladder, to assist the discharge or urine, when the passage is stopped by the stone, or any other disorder.

CATHO'LICISM, s. universality; something common to all of the same kind.

CA'THOLIC, a. [from kata, and olos, the whole, Gr.] universal. Used sometimes for true in opposition to heretical, or schismatical. Roman Catholic, is a title which the papists arrogate to themselves. Catholic king, or majesty, is the title of the king of Spain.

CATHO'LICON, s. [from katholikos, universal, Gr.] in medicine, a remedy which cures all disorders. Figuratively, that which is a universal preservative.

CA'TKINS, s. imperfect flowers hanging from trees, like a rope or cat's tail, as in the willow, hazel, pine, &c.

CA'TLING, s. [kats leins, Teut.] in surgery, a dismembering knife, used for cutting off any corrupted part of the body. In botany, the down or moss growing about walnut-trees, resembling the hair of a cat.

CATO'PTRICAL, a. relating to catoptrics, or vision by reflection.

CATO'PTRICS, s. [from katoptran, a mirror, Gr.] the doctrine of reflex vision; or that part of optics which treats of light reflected from polished surfaces.

CA'T'S-EYE, s. among jewellers, a stone of the opal kind, but far inferior to it in beauty.

CA'TSILVER, s. in natural history, a fossil composed of plain, parallel, flexible, elastic plates, and of a yellow or golden, white, silvery, or black colour.

CA'TSUP, s. a kind of Indian pickle, imitated by pickled mushrooms.

CAT'S-TAIL, s. a kind of grass. Also that long round substance which grows upon nut-trees, pines, &c. See CATKINS.

CA'TTEGAT, a gulf or passage, lying between Denmark, Sweden, and Norway, by which the Baltic communicates with the Northern Ocean. It comprehends several islands.

CA'TTERICK, Yorkshire, near Richmond, has a bridge over the river Swale, and a sort of cataract near it. It is called Caturaction in Ptolemy, and appears to have been a great city in the time of the Romans.

CA'TTLE, s. a collective name for such animals as are useful either for tilling the ground, or for food for mankind, as horses, oxen, sheep, goats, &c. They are distinguished into great cattle, comprehending horses, and oxen, and small cattle, such as sheep and goats. Black, or neat cattle, are collective names for all animals of the ox kind. Figuratively, persons; a word of reproach and contempt as it places the human species on a level with brutes.

CAVALCA'DE, s. [Fr.] a pompous procession on horseback, or in coaches.

CAVALI'ER, (cavaleér) s. [cavalier, Fr.] a knight, gentleman, or soldier, who rides on horseback; a horseman. Figuratively, a term of reproach given to those who adhered to king Charles in the great rebellion.

CAVALIER, a. gay, sprightly, warlike, brave, generous, polite. Sometimes in a quite contrary sense, i. e. proud, haughty, disdainful.

CAVALI'ERLY, ad. in a brave or polite manner. But, by the writers of king Charles's time, used for a disdainful, haughty, and arrogant manner.

CA'VALRY, s. [cavalerie, Fr.] soldiers who fight and march on horseback, divided into horse and dragoons. The horse never serve but on horseback, being named likewise troopers or heavy cavalry. The dragoons fight either on horseback or on foot, as occasion requires, and are named light-horse. When an army is drawn up in battle-array, the cavalry are posted in the wings; and bodies of cavalry ranged in order of battle are termed squadrons.

CA'VAN, a county of Ireland, in Ulster, bounded on the W. and S. W. by Leitrim and Longford; on the N. W. and N. by Fermanagh and Monaghan; on the N. E. by Monaghan; and on the E. and S. by E. and W. Meath. It is about 47 miles long and 21 broad, and contains 30 parishes, 16,314 houses, and 81,570 inhabitants. In many parts it is open, bleak, and dreary, but from Cavan to Lough Earne it is fertile, well wooded, and extremely picturesque. At the foot of the hills are many beautiful lakes, mostly small, but some of a larger size. The linen manufacture is carried on in it pretty extensively, its yearly trade in it having been averaged at £68,200. Its capital, Cavan, has barracks for a troop of horse, and is 54 miles N. W. of Dublin.

To CA'VATE, v. a. [cavo, Lat.] to scoop, bore, or dig any solid matter into a hollow; to make hollow.

CAU'CASUS, a chain of mountains in Asia, which extend from the Black to the Caspian Sea, inhabited by seven distinct nations, each speaking a different language, mostly however, Christians; namely, the Tartars, the Abkas, the Circassians, the Ossi, the Kisti, the Lesguis, and the Georgians. These mountains are said to be the highest in Asia, and their summits, which are full of rocks and frightful precipices, passable in many places only by narrow paths, are perpetually covered with snow. The lower parts abound in honey, corn, wine, fruits, gom, a species of grain resembling millet, but cultivated like rice; hogs, and horned cattle. The vines hereabouts grow winding round the high trees. The northern parts are mostly subject to Russia, and the southern to Turkey.

CAU'DLE, s. [caudeau, Fr.] a liquor sometimes made with water, oatmeal, &c. sometimes with water, oatmeal, spices, and a small dash of wine, used by women in their lying-in.

To CAU'DLE, v. a. to make caudle; to mix as caudle.

CAVE, s. [cave, Fr.] a hollow place made in a rock or under ground, which runs in a horizontal direction. Figuratively, a hollow thing. SYNON. Cave is a habitation under ground, made either by art or nature. Cell is some little dwelling raised above the ground. We dig a cave; we build a cell.

To CAVE, v. n. to dwell in a cave, or subterraneous place.

CA'VEAT, s. [Lat.] in law, a kind of process in the spiritual court to stop the probate of a will, the granting letters of administration, or the institution of a clerk to a benefice, &c. Rull. Rep. 191.

CA'VERN, s. [caverna, Lat.] a hollow place under ground.

CA'VERNED, a. full of caverns; hollow; undermined. Figuratively, dwelling in a cavern.

CA'VERNOUS, a. full of caverns or hollow places under ground.

CAVETTO, s. [Ital.] a hollow member or round concave moulding, containing a quadrant or quarter of a circle.

CA'VEZON, or CAVE'SSON, s. [cavesson, Fr.] a sort of nose-band, of iron, leather, or wood, clapt on the nose of a horse to wring it, in order to supple and break him in.

CAUGHT, (kaut) participle preter. of CATCH.

CAVIA'RE, CAVEA'RE, or CAVI'ER, s. [Ital.] the hard roes of sturgeon salted, made into small cakes, and dried in the sun.

To CA'VIL, v. a. [caviller, Fr.] to raise frivolous objections. Neuterly, to receive or treat with objections.

CA'VIL, s. a groundless or frivolous objection.

CAVILLA'TION, or CA'VILLING, s. a disposition, inclination, or quality of raising groundless objections, or finding fault with things without reason.

CA'VILLER, s. [cavillator, Lat.] one who makes groundless, frivolous, or impertinent objections.

CA'VILLINGLY, ad. objecting in a groundless or frivolous manner.

CA'VILLOUS, a. fond of objecting, or making groundless objections.

CA'VIN, s. [Fr.] a natural hollow, fit to cover a body of troops, and favour their approaches.

CA'VITY, s. [cavitas, Lat.] hollowness; a hollow; a hollow place.

CAUK, s. in natural history, a coarse talky spar.

CAU'KY, a. resembling cauk; of the qualities of cauk.

CAUL, s. [caul, Brit.] a kind of netting or hair cap, used by women to inclose their hair in; the hinder part of a woman's cap; the silk netting in the inside of a wig, on which the rows of curls are sewed. Figuratively, a kind of net. In anatomy, the omentum, or reticulum, a membrane in the abdomen. Likewise a membrane found on the head of some children at their birth.

CAULIFEROUS, a. [from caulis and fero, Lat.] in botany, applied to such plants as have a true stalk.

CAULIFLOWER, (generally pronounced cŏlliflower) s. [from caulis, Lat.] in botany, a species of cabbage; this plant was brought from Cyprus, and not raised to such perfection as to be sold in a market till 1680.

CAUSABLE, a. [from causa, Lat.] that may be produced or effected.

CAUSAL, a. relating to causes.

CAUSATION, s. the act expressive of causing.

CAUSATIVE, a. that expresses a cause or reason.

CAUSATOR, s. a causer; an author.

CAUSE, (the s in this word and its derivatives is usually pronounced like z) s. [causa, Lat.] that which makes a thing begin to be; that which produces any thing. A first cause, is that which operates of itself, and from its own proper power or virtue. A secondary cause, is that which derives its power from some other. Figuratively, the reason or motive for any undertaking. In a law sense, the matter in dispute, or subject of a law suit.

To CAUSE, v. a. to produce any effect; to effect.

CAUSELESS, a. derived from no cause. Without just grounds, reasons, or motives.

CAUSELESSLY, ad. in a groundless manner; without foundation; without reason; unjustly.

CAUSER, s. he that produces, or the agent by which any thing is effected or produced.

CAUSEY, or CAUSEWAY, s. a massive collection of stones, stakes, and fascines, bricks, broken tiles, and lumber; or an elevation of viscous earth well beaten together, serving as a narrow road or path in wet or marshy places.

CAUSTIC, or CAUSTICAL, a. [from kaio, to burn, Gr.] in medicine, that operates like fire, both with respect to the heat it occasions, and the consumption it causes in the parts to which it is applied.

CAUSTIC, s. in medicine, a remedy which operates like fire, by destroying the vessels of the part to which it is applied. It is used to eat off proud flesh, fungous, &c.

CAUSTICITY, s. [from kaio, to burn, Gr.] the quality of burning.

CAUTELOUS, a. [cauteleux, Fr.] wary, cautious, circumspect. Sometimes used in a bad sense for wily, cunning, treacherous.

CAUTERIZATION, s. the act of consuming flesh by burning-hot irons, or caustic medicines.

To CAUTERIZE, v. a. [cauteriser, Fr.] in surgery, to eat or consume a part by the application of a cautery.

CAUTERY, s. [from kaio, to burn, Gr.] See CAUSTIC.

CAUTION, (kâushon) s [cautio, Lat.] a prudent manner of acting; wariness; foresight; warning.

To CAUTION, v. a. to warn; to give notice of a danger.

CAUTIONARY, (kâushonary) a. given as a pledge or a security.

CAUTIOUS, (kâushous) a. [cautus, Lat.] guarded against any suspected trick; wary; watchful.

CAUTIOUSLY, (kâushiously) ad. in a wary manner, opposed to rashness.

CAUTIOUSNESS, (kâushiousness) s. the quality of taking such measures as may prevent any misfortune; a prudent wary conduct.

CAVY, s. a genus of small American animals, of which the best known is the restless cavy, or guinea pig.

To CAW, v. n. [formed from the sound] to make a noise like a crow, raven, or rook.

CAWOOD, a town in the E. riding of Yorkshire, with a market on Wednesday, 12 miles S. of York, and 186 N. W. of London.

CAXTON, a town in Cambridgeshire, with a market on Tuesday. It is but small, though a post-town, and a good thoroughfare; 10 miles W. by S. of Cambridge, and 49 N. of London.

CAYENNE, a town and island of South America, on the coast of Guiana, about 15 leagues in circumference. It is a part of the French settlement there. The soil is a black sand, covering a loamy clay. The pastures feed a great number of horses, sheep, goats, and cattle, which roam at will; and there are plantations of sugar, cocoa, coffee, indigo, maize, cassia, and vanilla. The beef, mutton, and poultry here are excellent——N. B. A description of this colony, lately published at Paris, asserts that it is an error to distinguish this island from the continent, as if it were perfectly detached from it.

To CEASE, v. n. [cesso, Lat.] to forbear or discontinue an action or custom a person is engaged in. To rest, used with from. Actively, to put a stop or end to. SYNON. We finish by putting the last hand to a work. We cease in quitting it entirely. We leave off in discontinuing.

CEASE, s. death or extinction, perhaps for decease.

CEASELESS, a. without stop, intermission, pause, respite, or discontinuation; without end.

CECUTIENCY, s. [from cæcus, Lat.] a tendency to blindness; a dimness of sight.

CEDAR, s. [cedrus, Lat.] in botany, a famous tree, a native of mount Libanus, mentioned in scripture as remarkable for its height and the extent of its branches. It is an evergreen, prodigiously thick, and resembles a pyramid.

CEDRINE, a. [cedrinus, Lat.] of or belonging to a cedar-tree.

To CEIL, (seel) v. a. [cælo, Lat.] to overlay, or cover the inner roof of a building.

CEILING, (seeling) s. the upper part or roof of a room.

CELANDINE, s. [chelidonium, Lat.] a genus of plants nearly allied to the poppy, differing therefrom in its seed-vessel being a pod. There are three British species.

CELEBES, an island of Asia, in the Indian Ocean, called also Macassar, S. of the Philippines, E. of Borneo, and W. of the Moluccas. The heat would be insupportable but for the N. winds, and the rain which constantly fall five days before and after the full moon, and during two months that the sun is nearly vertical. The fruits are ripe at all times of the year, and in the forests are large herds of deer, wild hogs, and large ferocious monkeys; the most dangerous are the white, especially to women, whom they seize and tear to pieces. The chief enemies of the monkeys are the serpents, which are continually in pursuit of them; the larger swallow them whole, and the smaller ensnaring them by art, seizing on them and drinking their blood. No country in the world is furnished with a greater variety of poisons. The Dutch have several forts and settlements here. The natives are Mahometans, of an olive colour, low of stature, but strong and hardy. The N. E. point of the island is in lat. 1. 42. N. lon. 122. 14. E.

To CELEBRATE, v. a. [celebro, Lat.] to make honourable mention of; to make a thing famous. Figuratively, to praise or commend; to enumerate the blessings received from the Divine Being, with a heart full of gratitude; to perform the solemn rites appropriated to any particular day or festival. SYNON. Famous, celebrated, and renowned, are equally applied to persons or things; but illustrious to persons only, at least when we would be nice in our choice of words.

CELEBRATION, s. [celebratio, Lat.] the performance of any rite appropriated to some festival or solemnity. Figuratively, praise, fame, renown, memorial, or honourable mention.

CELEBRIOUS, a. [celeber, Lat.] famous; renowned.

CELEBRIOUSLY, ad. in a famous manner; in such a manner as to communicate fame.

CELEBRIOUSNESS, s. renown, fame, or qualities which are the objects of esteem and approbation.

CELEBRITY, s. [celebritas, Lat.] the performing any rite; renown; fame.

CELERITY, s. [celeritas, Lat.] swiftness of motion; velocity; rapidity.

CE'LERY, s. in botany, a species of parsley.

CELESTIAL, a. [cælestis, Lat.] in the heavenly regions; belonging to heaven, or angelical. Used substantively for an inhabitant of heaven.

CELESTIALLY, ad. in a heavenly manner, opposed to earthly.

To CELE'STIFY, v. a. [from cælestis, Lat.] to communicate or endue with the properties of heaven.

CELESTINS, in church history, a religious order of Christians, reformed from the Bernardins by pope Celestin. Their rules are divided into three parts; the first, of the provincial chapters, and the elections of superiors; the second contains the regular observances; and the third, the visitation and correction of the monks. The Celestins rise two hours after midnight to say matins. They eat no flesh at any time, except when they are sick; they fast every Wednesday and Friday, to the feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross; and from that feast to Easter, every day.

CE'LIAC, s. [from koilia, the belly, Gr.] relating to the lower belly. Celiac passion, is a sort of diarrhœa, or flux of the belly, in which the aliment is extruded either crude or chylified, instead of excrements.

CELIBACY, s. [from cælebs, Lat.] the unmarried or single state, opposed to marriage.

CE'LIBATE, s. [cælibatus, Lat.] a single life; the same as Celibacy.

CELL, s. [cella, Lat.] a hollow place; a little house, apartment, or chamber, wherein the ancient monks used to dwell in their retirement; a small or close apartment in a prison. In anatomy, little bags, bladders, or cavities, wherein fluids or other humours are lodged. In botany, a vacuity in a capsule for lodging the seed. They have either one cell, as in primrose; two, as in thornapple; three, as in lily; four, as in spindletree; five, as in rue; six, as in asarabacca, &c. It also signifies the vacuity in the tips that contain the dust. In natural history, the little divisions or partitions of bee-hives, in which the honey is stored.

CE'LLAR, s. [cella, Lat.] in building, a place under ground for keeping stores, or the lowest room of a house.

CE'LLARAGE, s. the part of a building appropriated to cellars; cellar-room.

CE'LLARIST, s. [cellarius, Lat.] the butler in a religious house.

CE'LLULAR, a. [from cellula, Lat.] consisting of, or abounding in, little cells or cavities.

CE'LSITUDE, s. [celsitudo, Lat.] height, tallness, stature. Also, a note of dignity, by which some persons in high offices are distinguished.

CEMENT, s. [cæmentum, Lat.] any glutinous substance, used to stick two bodies together. Figuratively, that which unites, or forms an union between things.

To CEMENT, v. a. to unite by some glutinous substance, such as mortar, &c. Figuratively, to unite different people in the bonds of friendship, or by some common tie of interest, &c.

To CEMENT, v. n. to join together, so as not to be easily divided. In surgery, applied to broken bones.

CEMENTATION, s. the act of joining bodies together by cement.

CE'METERY, s. [from koimao, to sleep, Gr.] a place wherein the bodies of the dead are buried, a church-yard, or burying ground.

CE'NATORY, a. [from cœna, Lat.] relating to supper.

CENOBITICAL, a. [from koinos, common, and bios, life, Gr.] living in community.

CE'NOTAPH, s. [from kenos, empty, and taphos, a tomb, Gr.] an honorary monument erected for a person whose remains are buried in another place; such are most of the monuments in Westminster abbey.

To CENSE, v. a. [encenser, Fr.] to perfume with incense. Used only in poetry.

CE'NSER, s. [encensoir, Fr.] the pan or vessel in which incense is burnt.

CE'NSOR, s. [censor, Lat.] a Roman magistrate employed to survey and rate the people, and to inspect and correct their manners. Used by moderns to signify a person given to find fault with, and censure the conduct, actions, or productions of others.

CENSO'RIAN, a. relating to a censor.

CENSO'RIOUS, a. morosely animadverting on the faults of others. Used with at or upon, before the object of censure.

CENSO'RIOUSLY, ad. in a severe manner; in such a manner as to condemn the foibles of others with the greatest rigour.

CENSO'RIOUSNESS, s. a disposition of finding fault with the actions of others.

CE'NSORSHIP, s. the office of a censor; or the time during which he continued in his office.

CE'NSURABLE, a. liable to be found fault with; worthy of censure; blameable.

CE'NSURABLENESS, s. the quality which makes a thing the object of blame or censure.

CE'NSURE, s. [censura, Lat.] the act of blaming, or noting the defects which make any thing blameable; a reproof or reprimand given by a person in authority. In ecclesiastic government, a punishment inflicted on a person for some remarkable misdemeanor.

To CE'NSURE, v. a. [censurer, Fr.] to reprove a person publicly for some misdemeanor, applied to the reproofs of a superior to reprimand; blame; or find fault with.

CE'NSURER, s. a person who is fond of taking notice of the faults of others; one who is addicted to reproving others for their defects.

CENT, s. [an abbreviation of centum, Lat.] in commerce, used to express the profit or loss arising from the sale of any commodity, the rate of commission, exchange, or the interest of money, &c. and signifies the proportion or sum lost, &c. in every 100; thus 10 per cent. loss implies that the seller has lost 10 pounds on every 100 pounds of the price for which he bought the commodity.

CE'NTAUR, s. [centaurus, Lat.] an imaginary or chimerical being, represented by ancient poets as composed partly of the human and partly of the brute species, i. e. half a man and half a horse. In astronomy, a constellation in the southern hemisphere, joined with the Wolf, containing 13 stars. The Centaurs were probably an ancient nation of Greeks, who early acquired the art of riding horses.

CE'NTAURY, s. a plant, the root of which is esteemed in fluxes, dysenteries, spitting of blood, and recommended by some in all diseases arising from the obstructions of the meseraic veins.

CE'NTENARY, a. [centenarius, Lat.] the number of a hundred.

CENTE'SIMAL, s. [centesimus, Lat.] hundredth.

CENTIFO'LIOUS, a. [from centum and folium, Lat.] having a hundred leaves.

CE'NTIPEDE, s. [centum and pes, Lat.] a poisonous insect in the West Indies, commonly called by the English forty-legs.

CE'NTO, s. [Lat.] in poetry, a piece wholly composed of verses from other authors, wherein sometimes whole lines, and at others half verses, are borrowed, but set down in a new order, and applied to a subject different from that in which they were originally introduced.

CE'NTRAL, a. relating to the centre, or placed in the centre. Darkest, or as dark as the centre of the earth. Central forces, are those by which a body tends, to, or removes from, the centre.

CE'NTRALLY, ad. entirely; perpendicularly; in a manner relating to the centre of gravity.

CE'NTRE, or CE'NTER, s. [centrum, Lat.] in its primary sense, a point equally remote from either of the extremities of a line, figure, or body; or the point or middle of a line or plane, which divides it into two equal parts. The centre of a circle, is a point within it, from whence all lines drawn to the circumference are equal. Centre of gravitation, or attraction, is that point to which a planet is impelled in its motion by the force of gravity. Centre of gravity, is that point about which all the parts of a body, in any situation, balance each other. Centre of motion, is that point which remains at rest, while all the other parts of the body move about it. Centre of oscillation, is that point in which, if the whole gravity of the pendulum were collected, the time of its vibration would receive no alteration. Centre of percussion, is that point in which the force of a stroke is the greatest possible. Centre is used figuratively for the earth, in the Ptolemaic system placed in the centre.

To CENTRE, v. a to fix on, or as a centre; to tend to, or be collected together, as in a centre. Used neuterly, to meet, like rays in a centre; to be placed in the centre of the mundane system.

CENTRIFUGAL, a. [from centrum, the centre, and fugio, to flee, Lat.] that endeavours to fly or recede from its centre or fixed place; so that the force of any body moving in a circular or curvilineal orbit that strives to fall off from the axis of its motion in a tangent to the said orbit, is called the centrifugal force.

CENTRIPETAL, a. [from centrum, the centre, and peto, to seek, Lat.] tending towards the centre. Centripetal force, is that by which a body tends, acts, or is impelled towards the centre.

CENTRY, s. See SENTRY, or SENTINEL.

CENTUPLE, a. [centuplex, Lat.] a hundred fold.

To CENTU'RIATE, v. a. [centurio, Lat.] to divide into hundreds.

CENTURIA'TOR, s. a historian who divides time into centuries, or spaces consisting of a hundred years.

CENTU'RION, s. [centurio, Lat.] a military officer among the Romans who commanded a hundred men.

CE'NTURY, s. [centuria, Lat.] in chronology, is a period of one hundred years. In church history, the method of computing by centuries is generally observed, commencing from the time of our Saviour's incarnation; in which sense we say, the first, second, third century, &c.

CEPHALALGY, (sephalalgy) s. [from kephale, the head, and algos, sorrow, pain, Gr.] the head-ache.

CEPHA'LIC, (sephálik) a. [from kephale, the head, Gr.] in medicine, applied to remedies for disorders in the head.

CEPHALO'NIA, a considerable island of Greece, S. W. of Livadia, and N. W. of the Morea. It is fertile in oil, and excellent muscadine wine; the climate is warm, and the trees blossom throughout the year. It has been subject to the Venetians, since 1449, but is now claimed by the French. Lat. 38. 22. N. lon. 20. 36. E.

CE'PHEUS, in astronomy, a constellation in the northern hemisphere.

CE'RASTES, s. [from keras, a horn, Gr.] a serpent having two protuberances resembling horns. It is in the highest degree venomous.

CE'RATE, s. [from cera, wax, Lat.] in medicine, a kind of stiff ointment, made of oil, wax, and other ingredients.

CE'RATED, a. [from cera, wax, Lat.] covered with wax or cerate.

CE'RBERUS, a name the old poets gave a dog with three heads, which they feigned to be the porter of hell-gates, that caressed the fortunate souls that went thither, but devoured those that would get out again.

To CERE, v. a. [from cera, wax, Lat.] to rub upon or cover with wax.

CE'REBEL, s. [cerebellum, Lat.] the hinder part of the brain.

CE'REBRUM, s. [Lat.] the brain properly so called. See BRAIN.

CE'RECLOTH, s. a cloth covered or spread with cerate or other ointment.

CE'REMENTS, s. [from cera, wax, Lat.] cloths dipped in melted wax or gum, in which dead bodies were formerly wrapped when embalmed.

CEREMO'NIAL, a. that relates to a ceremony, or external rite. Figuratively, consisting in mere external show; formal. Substantively, an external rite, or book containing the ceremonies to be observed in religious worship.

CEREMO'NIALNESS, s. the quality of abounding in external rites, and modes of worship; the mere external show of devotion, piety, or virtue.

CEREMO'NIOUS, a. consisting in external or outward rites; superstitious, or fond of ceremonies; formal; too much given to the practice of external acts of civility and polite address. Figuratively, awful.

CEREMO'NIOUSLY, ad in a polite and civil manner.

CE'REMONY, s. [from Ceres, a heathen goddess, who was worshipped with much ceremony] an assemblage of several actions and forms, in order to render a thing more solemn; an outward rite, and external form in religion; polite address. Master of the ceremonies, is an officer instituted by king James I. for the more honourable reception of ambassadors and strangers of quality. He wears about his neck a chain of gold, with a medal under the crown of Great Britain, having on one side an emblem of peace, with this motto, beati pacifici (blessed are the peacemakers) and on the other an emblem of war with Dieu et mon droit (God and my right.) His salary is 300£ per annum; he has his assistant and marshal of the ceremonies under him.

CE'RES, in the heathen mythology, the inventress or goddess of corn.

CERI'NTHIANS, in church history, heretics, the followers of Cerinthus, who lived and published his heresies in the time of the apostles themselves. They did not allow that God was the author of the creatures, but said, that the world was created by an inferior power. They attributed to this Creator an only Son, but born in time, and different from the word. They admitted several angels and inferior powers; they maintained that the law and the prophets came not from God, but from angels; and that the God of the Hebrews was only an angel. They distinguished between Jesus and Christ, and said, that Jesus was a mere man, like other men, of Joseph and Mary; but that he excelled all other men in prudence and wisdom: that Jesus being baptized, the Christ of the supreme God, that is, the Holy Ghost, descended upon him; and that by the assistance of this Christ, Jesus performed his miracles. It was partly to refute this sect that St. John wrote his Gospel.

CE'RNE ABBEY, Dorsetshire, stands on the river Cerne, in a pleasant vale, surrounded with steep hills, on one of which, Trendle hill, a little to the N. is a gigantic figure, with the left hand extended, and in the right, which is erected, a club, cut in the chalk: it covers nearly an acre, and is repaired about once in 7 years, by cleansing the furrows, and filling them with fresh chalk. It is 6 miles from Dorchester, and 2 from Great Mintern. Market on Wednesday.

CE'RTAIN, a. [certus, Lat.] that cannot be denied without obstinacy; resolved, or determined; sure, so as to admit of no doubt.

CE'RTAINLY, ad. without doubt, question, scruple, or fail.

CE'RTAINTY, s. divided by metaphysicians into Certainty of truth, which is when words are so put together in propositions as exactly to express the agreement or disagreement of ideas, as expressed in any proposition; and 2dly, Certainty of knowledge, which is the perceiving the agreement or disagreement of ideas, as expressed in any proposition; this is called the knowing or being certain of the truth of any proposition. A physical certainty, is that which depends on the evidence of sense. A mathematical certainty, is that which no man any ways doubts of, as that 100 is more than 1. A moral certainty, is that whose proof depends on a due connection of circumstances, and clearness of testimony, and when these concur, cannot be doubted of without obstinacy. Figuratively, an event which must necessarily and unavoidably happen.

CERTIFICATE, s. [from certifico, law Lat.] a testimony given in writing, to certify or make known any truth. Figuratively, any testimony.

To CE'RTIFIE, or CE'RTIFY, v. a. [certifier, Fr.] to give certain notice of a thing.

BARCLAY'S DICTIONARY, WORD CERBERUS.

CERTIORA'RI, s. [Lat.] a writ issued out of the Chancery, or court of King's Bench, directed to an inferior court, to call up the records of a cause there depending.

CE'RTITUDE, s. [certitudo, Lat.] an act of the judgment, importing the adhesion of the mind to the proposition it affirms, or the strength of evidence which occasions that adhesion; free from doubt. See CERTAINTY.

CE'RVICAL, a. [from cervex, the neck, Lat.] belonging to or situated on the neck. The cervical nerves and vessels in anatomy, are so called from their being situated in the neck.

CE'RVIX, s. [Lat.] in anatomy, the hind part of the neck, opposed to the jugulum, throat, or fore part.

CERU'LEAN, or CERU'LEOUS, a. [cæruleus, Lat.] blue, or sky-blue.

CERU'MEN, s. [Lat.] ear-wax.

CE'RUSE, s. [cerussa, Lat.] white lead reduced to a powder, diluted with water on porphyry, and formed into a paste.

CESARE'AN, a. [from Cæsar] in anatomy, the Cæsarean section, is the cutting a child from its mother's womb, either dead or alive, when it cannot be otherwise extracted; which circumstance, it is said, first gave the name of Cæsar to the Roman family so called.

CESS, s. a tax; the act of levying rates, or taxing.

CESSA'TION, s. [cessatio, Lat.] a pause, rest, stop, or vacation, including the idea of a change from a state of activity or motion to its contrary, that of rest. Figuratively, a truce, or forbearance of hostile acts between two armies, without a peace.

CESSA'VIT, s. [Lat.] in law, a writ, which lies against a person who has not paid his rent, or performed his due service for the space of two years, and has not sufficient goods and chattels to make an equivalent distress.

CESSIBI'LITY, s. [from cessum, Lat.] the quality of receding or giving way.

CE'SSIBLE, a. [cessum, Lat.] easy to give way.

CE'SSION, (sésh'on) s. [cession, Fr.] the act of yielding or giving way to a stroke or force without resistance. In common law, an act whereby a person transfers his right to another.

CE'SSIONARY, (séshionary) a. implying a resignation.

CE'SSOR, s. [from cesso, Lat.] in law, a person who ceaseth or neglecteth to pay rent, or perform duty, so long, that a writ of cessavit may be taken out against him.

CE'STUS, s. [Lat.] a circle, which the poets ascribe to Venus, and pretend that it adorns the person who wears it with irresistible charms.

CETA'CEOUS, a. [from cete, Lat.] resembling a whale; of the whale kind.

CE'TUS, in astronomy, the Whale, a constellation in the southern hemisphere.

CEVE'NNES, mountains of France, in the ci-devant Languedoc.

CE'YLON, or, in Arabic, SERENDIB, a large and mountainous island of Asia, in the Indian Ocean, E. of Cape Comorin, on the coast of Coromandel, about 200 miles in length, and 160 in breadth. It produces large quantities of cinnamon, and its pepper is of superior quality. Here is a great variety of wood for all uses; but the most remarkable tree in the island is the tallipot, one of whose leaves will cover 10 men, and protect them from rain. It abounds in corn, rice, elephants, buffaloes, goats, hogs, deer, hares, dogs, jackals, monkeys, tigers, and bears. In some places there are mines, whence are got rubies, sapphires, topazes, and other stones of less value. The Dutch are, or lately were, in possession of all the coast of this fertile island, and to the distance of 10 or 12 leagues up the country. The natives are the Bedas, a hardy race, on the north; and on the south the Cinglasses, a people equally inoffensive, but more superstitious; they implore the interposition of their saints and heroes, and have various idols of monstrous forms. They are divided into tribes like the Hindoos, and their language, which is peculiar to themselves, is said to be copious, smooth, elegant, and polite. Lat. from 6. to upwards of 9. deg. N. long. from 80. to nearly 83. deg. E.

C FAUT, in music, one of the notes in the gamut, or scale.

CHACE, s. See CHASE.

CHAD, (shad) s. in natural history, a round kind of fish.

CHAETO'DON, s. in natural history, a genus of fishes whose teeth may be divided into fine thin filaments resembling bristles.

To CHAFE, v. a. [echauffer, Fr.] to warm by rubbing. Figuratively, to make sore by friction and heat. To warm, or scent with aromatic perfumes. To make a person grow warm with anger. Neuterly, to grow angry, or fret at any opposition or disappointment; beautifully applied to inanimate things.

CHAFE, s. anger, or peevish warmth, owing to opposition, slight, contempt, or disappointment.

CHA'FER, s. in natural history, a kind of yellow beetle, with two antennæ, or horns, terminated with a kind of brush or comb, making a very loud buzzing noise when flying, and appearing generally in the month of May, whence they are called May-bugs by the vulgar.

CHA'FERY, s. in the iron works, the name of one of the two principal forges. The other is called the finery. When the iron has been wrought at the finery into what is called an ancony or square mass hammered into a bar in its middle, but with its ends rough, the business to be done at the chafery is the reducing the whole to the same shape by hammering down these rough ends to the shape of the middle part.

CHA'FFEWAX, s. an officer belonging to the lord chancellor, who fits the wax for the sealing of writs.

CHAFF, s. [ceaf, Sax.] the husks or outward skins of corn, which are separated from the flour by threshing and winnowing. Figuratively, any thing of small value; any thing worthless.

To CHA'FFER, v. n. [kauffen, Teut.] to treat about or make a bargain; to haggle, to beat down a person in his demands or price. Used actively, to buy; to truck or exchange one commodity for another.

CHA'FFERER, s. one who buys bargains, or endeavours to purchase a thing at less than the market-price; a haggler.

CHA'FFERY, s. the art of buying or selling; traffic. In the iron works, the name of one of the two principal forges. The other is called the finery.

CHA'FFINCH, s. a song bird, so called from its delighting in chaff.

CHA'FFLESS, a. without defect or levity.

CHA'FFWEED, s. a plant with small white blossoms at the base of the leaves; found in moist sandy ground, and flowering in June. It is also called bastard pimpernel.

CHA'FFY, a. full of chaff; like chaff. Figuratively, light.

CHA'FING-DISH, s. an utensil made use of to contain coals for keeping any thing warm, or warming it when cold.

CHAGRI'N, (shagréen) s. [Fr.] unevenness of temper; ill humour, displeasure, or peevishness, arising from any thing done to vex, or in opposition to a person's inclinations.

To CHAGRI'N, (shagréen) v. a. [chagriner, Fr.] to teaze; to make uneasy

CHAIN, s. [chaine, Fr.] a collection of rings, or round pieces of metal linked to each other, of divers lengths and thickness; an ornament used by several magistrates, and borrowed from the Goths. In surveying, a series of iron links, distinguished into 100 equal parts, used for measuring land. Figuratively, a state of slavery, or confinement; a series of things linked to, and dependant on one another.

To CHAIN, v. a. to fasten, secure, or confine with a chain. Figuratively, to enslave, or bring into a state of slavery

To be defended by a chain. To unite in firm and indissoluble friendship.

CHA'INPUMP, s. a double pump used in large ships.

CHA'INSHOT, s. two half bullets fastened together by a chain, used in an engagement at sea.

CHA'INWORK, s. work with open spaces, or interstices, representing the links of a chain.

CHAIR, s. [chair, Fr.] a moveable seat for a single person, with a back to it. Figuratively, the place or post of a great officer. Above the chair, in London, is applied to those aldermen who have borne the office of lord-mayor; below the chair, to those that have not yet enjoyed that dignity. The seat of justice or authority; a covered carriage in which persons are conveyed from one place to another, borne by two men; a sedan. To take the chair, or be in the chair, implies that a person is president, and presides at an assembly.

CHA'IRMAN, s. one who sits in a higher chair than the rest of the members, and presides at an assembly or club; one who carries a chair or sedan.

CHAISE, (shaize) s. [chaise, Fr.] a high open carriage, running on two or more wheels, and drawn by one two, or more horses.

CHALCE'DONY, s. a genus of semipellucid gems, of an even, regular, and not tabulated texture, variegated with different colours, dispersed in form of mists and clouds.

CHA'LCITIS, (kálcitis) s. a caustic vitriolic mineral, imported from Germany, which is used in the composition of Venice treacle.

CHALCO'GRAPHY, (kalkógraphy) s. [from chalkos, brass, and grapho, to write, Gr.] the art of engraving upon brass.

CHALDE'A, (Kaldéa) otherwise called Babylonia, has now the name of Irac Arabi, and lies between the river Euphrates and Tigris, a little to the north of Bussarah and the Persian gulph, and to the south of Bagdad. See BABYLONIA.

CHA'LDER, CHA'LDRON, or CHAU'DRON, s. a dry measure used for coals, containing 12 sacks, or 36 bushels heaped up, according to a standard sealed and kept at Guildhall, London.

CHA'LICE, s. [calic, Sax.] formerly used for a cup or drinking vessel, with a foot to it. At present appropriated to the vases or vessels used at the celebration of the Eucharist, or Lord's Supper.

CHALK, (chauk) s. [ceale, Sax.] a white dry marl, with a dusty surface, and found in hard masses. In medicine, it is of the first note among the alkaline absorbents; nor is it less useful in the ordinary affairs of life; is in no small repute as a manure, especially for cold and sour lands, for which the soft unctuous chalk is most proper, as the dry, hard, and strong chalk is for lime. Black chalk, among painters, is a kind of ochreous earth, of a close texture, which gives a fine black, and is used on blue paper. Red chalk is an indurated clayey ochre much used by painters and artificers.

To CHALK, (chauk) v. a. to rub with chalk; to manure with chalk; used with out, to mark, or describe with chalk. Figuratively, to direct, point out, or discover.

CHA'LKY, (chauky) a. consisting of chalk; white with chalk. Applied to fluids, such as have chalk steeped in them, and are impregnated with it.

To CHA'LLENGE, v. a. [chalenger, Fr.] to call, dare, or provoke a person to fight, either by speaking or writing. Figuratively, to dare or defy a person to enter into a literary contest on any subject; to lay claim to as a right.

CHA'LLENGE, s. a provocation or summons to engage in duel, or combat, either uttered or written; a claim of a thing as a due or right, used with of. In law, an exception against either persons or things.

CHA'LLENGER, s. one who defies, provokes, or summons another to fight him; one who claims a superiority; one who claims a thing as his due; claimant.

CHALY'BEATE, (kalybeate) a. [from chalybs, Lat.] partaking of the qualities, or impregnated with steel.

CHAM, (kam) s. the title given to the sovereign princes in Tartary.

CHAMA'DE, (shamáde) s. [Fr.] a certain beat of a drum or sound of a trumpet, whereby notice is given to the enemy of some propositions to be made to them, to surrender, have leave to bury the dead, make a truce, &c.

CHA'MBER, s. [chambre, Fr.] in building, any room situated between the ground floor and the garrets of a house. Figuratively, a retired room in a house; an apartment occupied as a public office, or court of justice; also the members of such office or court; any cavity or hollow; that part of a gun or mortar, wherein the charge is lodged.

To CHA'MBER, v. n. to be too free with women; to be wanton.

CHA'MBERLAIN, s. an officer who has the care of a chamber. The lord great chamberlain is the sixth great officer of the crown. Lord chamberlain of the household has the oversight of all the officers belonging to the king's chambers, except the precinct of the bed chamber. In great towns, a receiver of their rents and revenues; and in London, the chamberlain has likewise the cognizance of all disputes between masters and apprentices, the power of imprisoning the latter for misdemeanors, and makes freemen, &c.

CHA'MBERLAINSHIP, s. the office of a chamberlain.

CHA'MBERMAID, s. a maid-servant who takes care of the chambers, the lady's dressing-room, and assists the lady's woman in dressing her.

CHA'MBERRY, the chief town in the dept. of Mont Blanc, and late capital of Savoy, with a castle, but not being fortified, it has never withstood a regular siege. It is populous well built, and watered by many streams, which run through several of the streets. There are piazzas under most of the houses, where people may walk dry in wet weather It has large and handsome suburbs, and is situated on an eminence, surrounded by mountains, 27 miles N. E. of Grenoble, and 85 N. W. of Turin. It was taken by the French in 1792. Lat. 45. 35. N. lon. 6. 4. E.

To CHA'MBLET, v. n. to be variegated; to appear like cloth or silk watered by the calenderer.

CHA'MBREL, s. in farriery, the joint or bending of the upper part of the hinder leg of a horse.

CHAME'LEON, (kaméleon) s. [Gr.] See CAMELEON. This is the proper spelling.

To CHA'MFER, v. a. [chambrer, Fr.] to furrow; to make channels or hollow places in a column.

CHA'MLET, s. See CAMELOT.

CHA'MOIS, s. [chamois, Fr.] an animal of the goat kind, whose skin is made into soft leather, called among us shammy.

CHA'MOMILE, (kamomile) s. [from chama, on the ground, and melon, fruit. Gr.] in botany, a plant so called from its trailing along the ground. It has a compound flower with an hemispherical empalement, composed of many rays.

To CHAMP, v. a. [champayer, Fr.] to bite with a frequent and forcible action of the teeth; to grind any hard and solid body with the teeth, so as to render it fit to swallow. Used with up. Neuterly, to close and open the jaws together, or perform the action of biting often.

CHAMPA'DA, s. in natural history, the name of a tree which is common in the woods of Malacca, and bears a fruit much valued by the natives on account of its intoxicating qualities.

CHAMPAGNE, a ci-devant province in the N. E. of France; fertile in grain, pasturage, &c. and producing the celebrated wine called after its name. Troyes was the capital. It now forms the departments of Ardennes, Aude, Marne, Upper Marne, and Seine and Marne.

CHAMPAIGN, (shámpain) s. [champagne, Fr.] a flat, open, or level country.

CHA'MPERTORS, s. in law, such as move suits, or cause them to be moved, either by their own or others procurement, and pursue, at their proper costs, to have part of the land in contest, or part of the game.

CHAMPI'GNON, (shampinion) s. [champignon, Fr.] in botany, a plant of the mushroom kind.

CHA'MPION, s. [champion, Fr.] one who undertakes a combat in behalf of another. The king's champion is an officer, who, while he is at dinner on his coronation-day, challenges any to contest the king's right with him in combat; after which the king drinks to him, and sends him a gilt cup and cover full of wine, which he keeps as a fee. Figuratively, any one who undertakes the defence of any sentiment or topic in literature and religion.

CHANCE, s. [Fr.] a term we apply to events, to denote that they happen without any necessary or foreknown cause. It is also used to denote the bare possibility of an event when nothing is known either to produce or hinder it. SYNON. Chance forms neither order nor design; we neither attribute to it knowledge nor will, and its events are always very uncertain. Fortune lays plans and designs, but without choice; we attribute to it a will without discernment, and say that it acts blindly.

To CHANCE, v. n. to fall out unexpectedly, or contrary to the necessary laws of motion or nature; to proceed from some unknown cause; or without any design of the agent.

CHANCE-MEDLEY, s. the killing of a person without design, but not without some fault; as when a person, in lopping a tree, should kill a passenger by means of a bough he flings down; for though it may happen without design, yet, as he ought to have given notice, it is not without fault.

CHA'NCEL, s. [from cancelli, Lat.] the eastern part of a church, between the altar and the rail that incloses it.

CHA'NCELLOR, s. [cancellarius, Lat.] a very ancient and honourable officer, supposed to be formerly the king's or emperor's notary or scribe, and to have presided over a college of secretaries, for the writing of treaties, and other public business; and, according to a late treatise, the court of equity, under the old constitution, was held before the king and his council, in the palace, where one supreme court of business of every kind was kept. At first the chancellor became a judge, to hear and determine petitions to the king, which were preferred to him; and in the end, as business increased, the people addressed their suit to the chancellor, and not to the king; and thus the chancellor's equitable power, by degrees commenced by prescription. The lord high chancellor, is the chief administrator of justice next the king; possesses the highest honour of the long robe, is invested with absolute power to mitigate the severity of the law in his decisions; enters into his office by taking an oath, and having the great seal committed to him by the king, has the disposition of all ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the crown under 20*l.* per annum; peruses all patents before they are signed, and takes place of all the nobility, excepting those of the royal family, and the archbishop of Canterbury. He is the guardian of all infants, idiots, and lunatics, and superintendant of all charitable institutions, and has the appointment of all justices of the peace. He has twelve assistants, called masters in chancery, the first of whom is the master of the rolls. Chancellor in an ecclesiastical court, is one bred to the law, and used by the bishops to direct or advise them in such cases as come before them. Chancellor of the Exchequer, is an officer who presides in that court, and takes care of the interest of the crown. Chancellor of an University, is the chief magistrate, who seals diplomas, letters of degrees, and defends the rights and privileges of the place; in Oxford this place is enjoyed for life; but at Cambridge only for the space of three years. Chancellor of the order of the Garter, is the person who seals the commissions and mandates of the chapter; keeps the register, and delivers transcripts of it under the seal of their order. Chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, is an officer appointed to determine controversies between the king and his tenants of duchy land, being assisted in difficult points by two judges of the common law.

CHA'NCELLORSHIP, s. the office of a chancellor.

CHA'NCERY, s. the grand court of equity and conscience, instituted to temper and moderate the rigour of other courts, which are obliged to act according to the strict letter of the law. From this court all original writs, commissions of bankrupts, of charitable uses, of idiots, lunacy, &c. are issued. It gives relief for or against infants, notwithstanding their minority; for or against married women, notwithstanding their coverture. All frauds and deceits, for which there is no redress at common law; all breaches of trust, confidences, and accidents, as to relieve obligers, mortgagers, &c. against penalties and forfeitures, where the intention was honest, are here relieved; but in no case where the plaintiff can have his remedy at common law. Here all patents, most sorts of commissions, deeds between parties touching lands and estates, treaties of foreign princes, &c. are sealed and enrolled. From hence are issued writs to convene the parliament and convocation, proclamations, charters, &c.

CHA'NCRE, (shánker) s. [chancre, Fr.] in surgery, a tubercle, which has its seat in the unctuous humour that fills the vesicular texture.

CHA'NCROUS, (shánkrous) a. having the quality of a chancre.

CHA'NDA, a considerable city of Berar, in Hindoostan, seated on a branch of the Godavery, 67 miles S. of Nagpour. It is subject to the Eastern Mahrattas. Lat. 20. 10. N. lon. 79. 40. E.

CHANDELI'ER, (shandelíer) s. [Fr.] a branch for holding candles. In fortification, a wooden frame on which fascines or faggots are laid for covering the workmen, instead of a parapet.

CHANDERNAGO'RE, a city of Bengal, subject to the French, but lately conquered by the English. It contains about 40,000 inhabitants, and is seated on the W. side of the river Hoogly, 13 miles N. N. W. of Calcutta.

CHA'NDLER, s. [chandelier, Fr.] a seller of divers sorts of wares.

To CHANGE, v. a. [changer, Fr.] to give or take one thing for another. To resign or quit one thing for the sake of another, used with for. "Cannot change that for another.' South. To give a person the value of money in coin of a different metal; to alter. Neuterly, to undergo change, to suffer alteration. To change, as the moon; to begin a new monthly revolution. SYNON. We vary in our sentiments, when we give them up, and embrace them again. We change our opinions, when we reject one in order to embrace another. He who has no certain principles is liable to vary. He who is more attached to fortune than truth, will find no difficulty in changing his doctrine.

CHANGE, s. the alteration of a person's circumstances: the act of taking or giving any thing for another; a succession of things in the place of one another. In astronomy, the time in which the moon begins a new revolution. Figuratively, novelty. In ringing, the alteration of the order in which any set of bells are rung. Money of a different metal.

CHA'NGEABLE, a. that may be altered; that does not always remain in the same situation or circumstances; inconstant; fickle.

CHA'NGEABLENESS, s. applied to the mind, want of constancy; fickleness. Applied to laws or qualities, liable to alteration.

CHA'NGEABLY, ad. in a manner subject to alteration; inconstancy.

CHA'NGEFUL, a. altering very often, and upon slight grounds; used as a word of reproach. Fickle, inconstant; full of change.

CHA'NGELING, s. a child left or taken in room of another; a person who does not enjoy a proper use of his understanding; a fool, natural, or idiot; one apt to alter his sentiments often; a fickle person.

CHA'NGER, s. one that is employed in changing or discounting money; money-changer.

CHANMANNING, a city of Thibet, where the Grand Lama sometimes resides, 116 miles W. of Lassa.

CHANNEL, s. [canal, Fr.] in cosmography, the hollow or cavity in which running waters flow; the arm of a sea or a narrow river, between two adjacent islands or continents.

To CHANNEL, v. a. to cut any thing in narrow cavities, for containing water; or for the sake of ornament; applied to buildings.

To CHANT, v. a. [chanter, Fr.] to sing; to celebrate in songs; to perform divine service by singing, as in cathedrals. Used neuterly, to harmonize and sound a chord with the voice to any musical instrument, used with the particle to.

CHANT, s. a song; a particular tune; the particular tune used in a cathedral.

CHANTER, or CHANTOR, s. one who sings in a cathedral; a singer; a songster.

CHANTICLEER, s. the cock, so called from his clear shrill voice.

CHANTRESS, s. a female who sings.

CHANTRY, s. a church or chapel endowed for one or more priests to say mass daily.

CHA'OS, (kâos) s. [Gr.] the original confused mass of matter out of which all visible things were made. Figuratively, any confused irregular mixture; any thing whose parts are not easily distinguished.

CHAOTIC, (kaôtik) a. resembling or like a chaos.

To CHAP, v. a. [keppen, Belg.] to break into chinks by excessive heat, applied to the effects of cold on the hands.

CHAP, s. an opening, cleft, or chink in the ground, owing to excessive drought or heat.

CHAP, s. the upper or under part of a beast's mouth.

CHAPE, s. [chappe, Fr.] the catch of any thing by which it is held in its place; the hook by which a sword is fastened in its scabbard; the steel ring with two points by which a buckle is held to the back strap; a piece of brass or silver which covers the end of the scabbard of a sword.

CHAPEL, s. [capella, Lat.] a building which is sometimes part of a church, or adjoining to it; or separate, and called a Chapel of ease, where a parish is large, as a relief to the distant parishioners. There are also free Chapels, endowed with revenues for maintaining a curate without any expense to the rector or inhabitants.

CHAPEL LE FRITH, a town in Derbyshire, with a market on Saturday. It is seated on the utmost confines of the Peak, near Cheshire; but the market is now come to nothing. It is 17 miles S. E. of Manchester, and 165 N. N. W. of London.

CHAPELRY, s. the jurisdiction or bounds of a chapel.

CHAPERON, (shâperon) s. [Fr.] a kind of hood or cap worn by knights of the garter when dressed in their robes.

CHAPFALN, (châpfaulu) a. having the mouth shrunk, or the projecting part fallen down, applied to a helmet.

CHAPITER, s. [chapiteau, Fr.] in architecture, the upper part or capital of a pillar.

CHAPLAIN, s. [capellanus, Lat.] a person who performs divine service in a chapel; or is retained in the service of some family to perform divine service.

CHAPLAINSHIP, s. the office, possession, or revenue of a chaplain.

CHAPLET, s. [chaplet, Fr.] a garland or wreath of flowers to be worn round the head. In the Romish church, a string of beads. In architecture, a little moulding carved into round beads, pearls, or olives. In farriery, a couple of stirrup-leathers, mounted each of them with a stirrup, and joining at top in a sort of leather buckle, which is called the head of the chaplet, by which they are fastened to the pummel of a saddle, after they have been fastened to the length and bearing of the rider. A tuft of feathers on a peacock's head.

CHAPMAN, s. [ceapman, Sax.] one that cheapens or buys goods; a buyer and seller.

CHAPS, s. the mouth of a beast. Used by the vulgar, and in contempt, for the mouth of a man or woman.

CHAPTER, s. [chapitre, Fr.] the division of a book. In canon law, a congregation of clergymen under the dean, in a cathedral church; an assembly held both by religious and military orders for deliberating their affairs, and regulating their discipline; the places in which assemblies of the clergy are held.

CHAR, s. [wrote likewise chare] in natural history, a fish; a kind of golden alpine trout.

To CHAR, v. a. to burn wood to a black cinder.

CHAR, s. work done by the day by a woman; a single job or task.

To CHAR, (chair) v. n. to do the house work of a family occasionally, opposed to regular service.

CHARACTER, (karakter) s. [character, Lat.] a figure or mark drawn upon paper, or other substance, to convey some idea to the mind; a letter of the alphabet; an assemblage of virtues or vices, whereby one person is distinguished from another; or that which a person has peculiar in his manners, which makes him differ from others; office, dignity, or authority.

To CHARACTER, (kárakter) v. a. used with in or upon, to engrave.

To CHARACTERIZE, (kárakterize) v. a. to describe a person or thing by the properties which distinguish it from others; to impress a thing in lasting characters on the mind; to mark with a peculiar stamp or form.

CHARACTERISTIC, or CHARACTERISTICAL, (karacteristik) a. that distinguishes a person or thing from others of the same species.

CHARACTERISTIC, (karakteristic) s. a peculiar mark, or assemblage of qualities, which distinguish a person or thing from others of the same kind. Characteristic of a Logarithm, is the same with the index or exponent.

CHARACTERLESS, (kárakterless) a. without any mark to distinguish a thing.

CHARACTERY, (kâraktery) s. a mark which distinguishes a thing from others of the same kind. Accented anciently on the second syllable.

CHARADE, s. the name of a trifling species of composition. Its subject must be a word of two syllables, each forming a distinct word, and these two syllables are to be concealed in an enigmatical description, first separately and then together:—As, My first, when a Frenchmen is learning English, serves him to swear by. My second is either hay or corn. My whole, is the delight of the age, and the admiration of posterity: Gar-rick.

CHARASM, or KHARASM, a large country of Asia, bordered on the N. by Turkestan, on the W. by the Caspian Sea, and on the S. by Chorasan. Urgens is the capital. The khan, or chief of the Tartar princes, among whom the country is divided, is said to be able to raise an army of 40 or 50,000 horsemen.

CHARCOAL, (chârkôl) s. a kind of fuel, or coal made of oak half burnt, under a covering of turf; that for powder-mills is made of elder-wood.

CHARD, a town in Somersetshire, consisting chiefly of 4 streets, which terminate near the market. It has several streams running through it, and one in particular, which, by being turned to the N. or S. will, it is affirmed, run into the Bristol, or the English Channel. Here is a small woollen manufacture. It is 6 miles W. of Crewkherne, and 141 W. by S. of London. Market on Monday.

To CHARGE, v. a. [charger, Fr.] to entrust, or commit to a person's care; to make a person debtor. Figuratively, to impute or ascribe; to impose as a task; to accuse, applied to crimes, sometimes having the particle with. To oblige a person to give evidence; to adjure: to command; to attack, applied to an engagement in war. To load a person, applied to burdens. Applied to fire-arms, to load with powder or shot. Neuterly, to make an onset.

CHARGE, s. in gunnery, is the quantity of powder and shot with which a gun is loaded for execution. In electricity, the accumulation of electric matter on one surface of an electric, as a pane of glass, Leyden phial, &c. whilst an equal quantity passes off from the opposite surface, or more generally electrics are said to be charged when the equilibrium of the electric matter on the opposite surfaces is destroyed by communicating one kind of electricity to one side, and the contrary kind to the other side; nor can the equilibrium be restored till a communication be made by means of conducting surfaces between the two opposite surfaces. Also, care, trust, custody; precept, mandate, commission, accusation, imputation; the thing entrusted; expence; attack; the signal for battle. Also, a preparation, or ointment, applied to the shoulder-splaits, inflammations, and sprains of horses. In heraldry, it is applied to the figures represented on the escutcheon, by which the bearers are distinguished from one another; and it is to be observed, that too many charges are not so honourable as fewer.

CHA'RGEABLE, a. expensive; costly; liable to be blamed or accused.

CHA'RGEABLENESS, s. expensiveness, costliness.

CHA'RGEABLY, ad. in a costly expensive manner, at a great expense.

CHA'RGER, s. a very large dish.

CHA'RILY, ad. in a deliberate, circumspect, cautious manner.

CHA'RINESS, a. a nicety, or delicacy, whereby a person is offended at any thing which is inconsistent with the highest degree or idea of justice; scrupulousness.

CHA'RIOT, s. [car-rhod, Brit.] a covered four-wheeled carriage, suspended on leather or springs, drawn by two or more horses, and having only back seats. War chariots, used by our ancestors, were open vehicles drawn by two or more horses, with scythes at the wheels, and spears at the pole. Chariot race, a public game among the Romans, &c. wherein chariots were driven for a prize.

To CHA'RIOT, v. a. figuratively, to convey as in a chariot.

CHARIOTE'ER, s. one who drives a chariot.

CHA'RITABLE, a. [charitable, Fr.] having a benovolent and humane disposition, inclining a person to assist the afflicted.

CHA'RITABLY, ad. in a kind, benevolent, tender, affectionate manner.

CHA'RITY, s. [charitas, Lat.] a benevolent principle, exerting itself in acts of kindness and affection to all persons, without respect to party or nation; the theological virtue of universal love; alms given to the poor.

To CHARL, v. a. to burn to a black cinder, as wood is burned to make charcoal.

CHA'RLATAN, s. [Fr.] a person who pretends to a knowledge of physic; a quack; a mountebank.

CHARLATA'NICAL, a. vainly pretending to a knowledge of physic; quackish.

CHA'RLATANRY, s. the practice of a quack.

CHA'RLBURY, a town in Oxfordshire, with a market on Friday. Distant from London 68 miles.

CHARLES, (Stuart) I. born Nov. 19, 1600, was proclaimed king on the death of James the I. March 17, 1625; and on the May following, his marriage with Henrietta Maria of France, was solemnized by proxy at Paris. The new queen arrived in England, and the marriage was consummated at Canterbury, June 10. The king, May 10, granted a pardon to 20 Romish priests, who were condemned to die. On June 18, the parliament met at Westminster, when the king asked money for the recovery of the Palatine. After some complaints and debates, about grievances, the commons gave the king two subsides; but at the same time, both houses joined in a petition against recusants, setting fourth the great dangers from the increase of popery, the cause of this increase, and the remedies for preventing this evil for the future. To which the king gave an answer very much to the satisfaction of the parliament, if his actions had been agreeable to it. King James having promised to send some ships to the French king, which it was pretended, at least, were to serve against the Genoese, or some of the allies of Spain, admiral Pennington was sent to Dieppe with the Vantguard man of war, and 7 stout merchant ships. It soon appeared, that the French king designed to make use of them against his protestant subjects at Rochelle; upon which the crew deserted to a man, rather than fight against their fellow-protestants; and Pennington was ordered by the court to put these ships into the hands of the French, to be employed as they thought fit. This occasioned a distrust of the king, a jealousy of the queen, and a general odium of the duke of Buckingham. Before the parliament had sat a fortnight at Oxford, whither it was removed on account of the plague which raged in London, the king perceiving that the commons would grant no further supplies, till grievances were redressed, and that they were beginning to fall upon the conduct of the duke of Buckingham, he dissolved them, in a hasty manner, by commission, on August 12. But wanting money for the expedition against Spain, he raised it by a forced loan from his subjects, by letters under his privy-seal, which increased the popular discontents. On Feb. 2, 1626, the king was crowned. The new parliament met on the 6th, and was opened by a speech from the lord-keeper Coventry. Care had been taken to have the leading members against the court made sheriffs, that they might not be chosen in this. However, this parliament proved no more favourable to the king's designs than the former; they made greater complaints against the public grievances. The king sent for both houses to Whitehall, and severely reprimanded the commons, both by himself and the lord-keeper, complaining of their animosity against the duke, of the scantiness of the supply, and the manner of granting it; and in the end said, 'Remember, that parliaments are altogether 'in my power, for their calling, sitting, and dissolution; 'therefore as I find the fruits of them good or evil, they are 'to continue, or not to be.' This did not intimidate the commons, who being returned to their houses, drew up a remonstrance, and presented it to the king, to justify their proceedings, and then went on with their articles against the duke, who, while under the impeachment, procured himself to be chosen chancellor of Cambridge, notwithstanding one of the articles against him was his engrossing a plurality of offices. The commons took great offence at this, but the king supported his election. The commons drew up a remonstrance against the duke as the principal cause of all the grievances in the kingdom, and against tonage and poundage, which had been levied by the king ever since his accession, though it was never understood to be payable without a special act of parliament in every new reign. But the parliament was dissolved by commission, June 15, before this remonstrance could be presented, and the king ordered all such as had copies of it to burn them. The duke remained in the king's favour till he was stabbed, when he was going to embark on board the fleet of which he was commander-in-chief, as well as of the land forces. There was nothing but continual struggles between the king, who wanted to assume to himself the absolute power of disposing of his subjects property, and leaving their grievances unredressed, and the parliament, who were willing to grant the king the necessary supplies, provided their grievances were redressed, and the rightful privileges of the subjects secured; which at last produced a civil war. On January 3, 1641-2, he sent his attorney-general to the house of peers, to accuse, in his name, of high treason, the lord Kimbolton, and five members of the house of commons, and persons were sent to seal up their papers, &c. and the king having sent a sergeant-at arms to the house of commons to demand them, came himself the next day, attended by a number of armed men, as if with a design to seize them. Leaving his guard at the door, he entered the house, and taking the speaker's chair, made a speech to them on what he was come about; but looking round, and finding the accused persons not there (for they had slipped away just before) he told the house, he expected they should send them to him as soon as they returned: and then departed, the members crying out, Privilege ! Privilege ! The king soon after this removed with his family to Hampton court, from thence to Windsor, and at last to York. Two days after his departure, he sent a message to both houses, telling them he would wave his proceedings against the six members, and be as careful of their prtvileges as of his own life and crown. Two days after that, he sent another to the same effect; and on February 2, offered a general pardon; but all was to no purpose, the wound was too deep to be healed, the commons made a large declaration against the late action, impeached the attorney-general for what he had done, and committed him to prison. Moreover, they set a guard about the Tower, sent Sir John Hotham to take possession of Hull, where was a great magazine of arms and ammunition, and ordered him to keep it for the parliament, understanding the king had a design to secure it for himself. On May 20, the commons voted, 1. That it appeared that the king, seduced by wicked counsels, intends to make war against the parliament. 2. That wheresoever the king makes war upon the parliament, it is a breach of the trust reposed in him by his people, contrary to his oath, and tending to the dissolution of the government. 3. That whosoever shall serve or assist him in such wars, are traitors by the fundamental laws of the kingdom. On June 10, the two houses published proposals for borrowing money and plate for the defence of the kingdom. On the 15th, the king granted several commissions of array for levying troops, and the parliament drew up a declaration against them. On July 12, the commons voted, and with them the lords agreed, that an army should be raised, and the command given to R. Devereux, earl of Essex. And on August 22, the king in a solemn manner set up his standard at Nottingham, having before, by proclamation, commanded all men, who could bear arms, to repair to it the said day. On October 23, a great battle was fought between the two armies at Edgehill, in Warwickshire. Both sides claimed the victory; the number of slain on the field of battle was about 5000. The year 1643 began with a treaty for peace, which was held at Oxford, between the king and commissioners from the parliament, but it broke off on April 15, without success. On June 18, there was a fight in Chaldgrave-fight, in which the famous Mr. Hampden, a great leader in the parliament, was slain. On July 5, was fought the famous battle of Lansdown, in which, though the marquis of Hertford, who commanded for the king, lost almost all his horse, yet Sir William Waller was at last compelled to quit the field. But Sir William met with a worse fate on the 13th, when at Roundway Down, in Wiltshire, he was entirely defeated, 5 or 6000 of his men slain, and 900 made prisoners. The king summoned such lords and commons as had deserted the parliament at Westminster, to meet as a parliament at Oxford. Accordingly they assembled January 22, 1643-4, and sat till April 16, following, when they were prorogued to October, but never met again. They did little of moment, except helping the king to money, which was the chief end for which they were called together. The king visibly gained ground of the parliament last year, and therefore the two houses thought it necessary to call in the Scots to their aid. A treaty was concluded, in pursuance of which the Scots army entered England, about the time the Oxford parliament met; it consisted of 18,000 foot, and 3000 horse, under the command of the earl of Leven, and passed the Tyne on Feb. 28, at some distance from Newcastle. On July 2, an obstinate and bloody battle was fought at Marston-Moor, in which prince Rupert was entirely routed, and the parliamentarians got a complete victory, which was owing in a great measure to Cromwell's valour and good conduct. York now surrendered to the parliament generals on honourable terms. On June, 1645, was fought the famous battle of Naseby in Northamptonshire, which decided the quarrel between the king and the parliament, wherein the parliament's forces gained a complete victory. The king lost a great number of officers and gentlemen of distinction, most of his foot were made prisoners, all his cannon and baggage taken, with 8000 arms, and other rich booty; among which was also the king's cabinet, with his most secret papers, and letters between him and his queen; which shewed how contrary his counsels with her were to those he declared to the kingdom. After this signal victory, nothing could stand before the parliament's forces. On Feb. 18, 1645-6, Fairfax defeated lord Hopton at Torrington, and on March 15, he capitulated, his whole army to be disbanded in six days, and all the horses and arms to be delivered up to Fairfax; who by the surrender of Exeter, April 6, 1646, completed the reduction of the west to the power of the parliament. Upon Fairfax's approach to lay siege to Oxford, his majesty made his escape from thence, and threw himself into the hands of the Scots army. Oxford surrendered June 22, and the few remaining garrisons soon after. And thus the whole kingdom was subjected to the obedience of the two houses. And now the parliament consulted how to get the king out of the hands of the Scots, and to send them back into their own country. At last it was agreed that they should have 400,000*l.* for the arrears due to them, one moiety to be paid before their going home, and the other at stated times. And so, after several debates about the disposal of the king's person, the Scots having received the 200,000, on January 30, 1646-7, delivered him up to the commons of the parliament of England, who were sent down to Newcastle to receive him. The same day their army began to march for Scotland, the king was conducted to Holmby-house, in Northamptonshire, where he arrived Feb. 16. The parliament and army quarrelled, and the counsel of agitators, consisting of deputies from each regiment, sent cornet Joice with a detachment of fifty horse, to take the king from the parliament's commissioners at Holmby, and bring him to the army; which he resolutely effected on June 4, 1647. And now the army overruled the parliament. August 24, the king was conducted to Hampton-court. A treaty was set on foot for the restoration of the king, but on January 3, 1647-8, the house (being still under the influence of the army) resolved, That no more addresses should be made to the king, no messages received from him; and to this the lords some days after agreed, the army promising to adhere to the parliament against the king. In the beginning of the year 1648, there were several risings in favour of the king; the Welsh, under major-general Langhorn, had siezed several places, and were 8000 strong, but were defeated by colonel Horton, sent before Oliver Cromwell; who arriving soon after, put an end to the commotions in Wales. In the mean time, general Fairfax defeated those who had risen in Kent. The Scots army under the duke of Hamilton, amounting to near 20,000, entered England in July, and were joined by about 5000 English, under sir Marmaduke Langdale. Cromwell, after having finished his work in Wales, marched with all expedition to join Lambert in the north, and August 17, near Preston, in Lancashire, totally routed and dispersed this great army, the duke, in his flight, being taken prisoner. Cromwell then marched directly into Scotland, and arriving at Edinburgh, he divested the Hamiltonian party of their authority. At the beginning of these troubles, the presbyterian party, in the house, in the city, and other places, began to resume their courage. Several petitions were presented for a personal treaty with the king; and when the army was removed from London into different parts of the kingdom, the secluded members and others who had absented themselves, having returned to their seats, the votes of no more addresses were repealed, and it was resolved to enter into a personal treaty with the king; that Newport in the Isle of Wight should be the place of treaty, and that his majesty should be there with honour, freedom, and safety; and five lords and ten commoners were nominated commissioners for this treaty; but the army was resolved to break off the treaty by force, and colonel Ewer, on November 18, presented to the commons a remonstrance, wherein they desired, That the treaty might be laid aside, and that the king might come no more into the government, but be brought to justice, as the capital cause of all the evils in the kingdom, and of so much blood being shed. On Nov. 21, Cromwell recalled colonel Hammond from the isle of Wight, and sent colonel Ewer to take charge of the king's person, who kept him in strict custody. On Nov. 30, his majesty was brought over to Hurst castle in Hampshire. On Dec. 4, the commons resumed the debates on the king's concessions, and voted, that the said concessions were sufficient grounds for settling the peace of the kingdom; and then adjourned to Wednesday. On which day some regiments of horse and foot having possessed themselves of all the avenues to the parliament house, seized on forty-one members as they offered to go in, and the next day denied entrance to near one hundred more. An ordinance being voted in the house of commons, was carried up to the house of lords for their concurrence, though the commons declared, at the same time, that they, being representatives of the people, had a right to enact a law, though the consent of the king, and the house of peers, be not had thereto. They made an ordinance for erecting a high court of justice, for trying the king, who was brought from Windsor to St. James's on the 19th. The next day the trial began, the court sitting in Westminster-hall, and having chosen serjeant Bradshaw for their president. The substance of the charge was, That the king had endeavoured to set up a tyrannical power, and to that end had raised and maintained a cruel war against the parliament. The king behaved with dignity, making no other answer but denying the authority of the court. The same he did on the 22d and 23d. At last, being brought before them a fourth time, on January 27, he earnestly desired, before sentence, to be heard before the lords and commons; but his request was not granted. And so still persisting in disowning the jurisdiction of the court, and consequently in his refusal to answer to the charge, his silence was taken for a confession, and sentence of death was passed upon him; pursuant to which he was, on January 30, beheaded on a scaffold erected in the street near the windows of the Banqueting house at Whitehall, shewing as great a firmness, resolution, and resignation, to the last, as he had done in all his sufferings. The day before his execution he was permitted to see his children, the princess Elizabeth, and the duke of Gloucester, the only ones then in England. His corpse was carried to Windsor, and privately interred in St. George's-chapel.

CHARLES II. was the son of king Charles the 1st, and born May 29, 1630. On July 3, 1646, he went from Jersey into France, and resided abroad till May 1660, when he arrived at Whitehall. The king, upon forming his council, took in some that had been deeply enough engaged against his father, but afterwards promoted his restoration, as Denzel Hollis, afterwards lord Hollis; the earl of Manchester, Sir Anthony Ashley Cooper, and others. Mr. Baxter and Mr. Calamy were appointed his chaplains in ordinary. Sir Ed. Hyde, afterwards earl of Clarendon, was his lord chancellor and prime minister. The assembly which restored the king had been summoned by a commonwealth writ, in the name of the keepers of the liberties of England. It was however called a parliament till his arrival, and then had only the name of a convention; however, two days after the king went to the house, and gave his assent to an act for changing the convention into a parliament. August 29, his majesty gave his assent to the act of indemnity, with some exceptions. The commons, soon after, voted 1,200,000*l.* for the ordinary expenses of the government. On September 13, died of the small pox, Henry duke of Gloucester, his majesty's youngest brother. The duke of York married Anne, eldest daughter of Chancellor Hyde, earl of Clarendon, to whom he had been contracted at Breda. This parliament, which the king would have called the healing parliament, was dissolved December 29, after passing several acts, and among the rest, one for erecting a post-office. The Royal Society was founded this year, 1660, by the king and letters patent. The king was crowned on April 23. A new parliament was summoned to meet on May the 8, which continued almost 18 years, and was afterwards called the pensionary parliament. In May 1662 the marriage between the king and Catharine, princess of Portugal, was solemnized. The sale of Dunkirk, this year, to the French king, for five millions of livres, made a great noise in England, and was much reflected on. On March the 2, 1664-5, war was proclaimed against the States General. In this session of parliament, the clergy gave up their right of taxing themselves in convocation, and have ever since been taxed by the parliament in common with other subjects: and from this time the clergy have voted at elections for members of parliament. On June 3, 1665, the duke of York beat Opdam the Dutch admiral. The plague broke out in London in May, and before the end of the year, when it ceased, swept off 68,596 of the inhabitants. In January 1665-6, the French king declared war against England. The English fleet put to sea under the command of prince Rupert and the duke of Albemarle, towards the middle of May, and there was soon a most bloody fight with admiral Ruyter, in which the English were worsted. There was another furious engagement in July, when the Dutch were beaten. In September, about one in the morning, a terrible fire broke out in the city of London, which continuing for three days, laid the greatest part of the city in ashes, consuming 89 churches, the city gates, Guildhall, with many other public structures, and 13,200 dwelling houses, and the ruins of the city were 436 acres. In October 1667, the king laid the first stone of the Royal Exchange, which was built in the room of the old one, erected by Sir Thomas Gresham. In January 1667, was concluded the famous triple alliance between England, Holland, and Sweden, which was designed to check the projects of Lewis the XIV. of France, who had already invaded the Spanish Netherlands. This was almost the only step taken by king Charles for the interest of England and of Europe during his whole reign; and indeed, it seems, that his design in it was only to amuse the public, and that there was a secret understanding between him and Lewis at the same time. In April, 1670, a severe act was passed against the non-conformists. The king established a secret council, consisting of the five following persons; Clifford, Arlington, Buckingham, Ashley Cooper, and Lauderdale. This council was nick-named the Cabal, from the initial letters of their names: and they truly deserved that name, as they artfully promoted all the king's measures, how contrary soever to the interest of England and the good of all Europe. In January, 1670-1, was passed the famous Coventry act against maiming or disfiguring, making it death. On February the 2d the king sent a message to hasten the money-bills. Lord Lucas made a bold speech in the house of lords against the money-bills. A difference happened about the same time between the two houses, upon the lords' right of altering money-bills. In the midst of this dispute the king came to the house of peers, and prorogued the parliament. A powerful league was now formed against Holland by France, England, the elector of Cologne, and the bishop of Munster. The king, though he had lately two millions and a half from the parliament, and 700,000*l.* from the French king, was so profuse, that he still wanted money, which he would fain raise without applying to the parliament. Upon this the cabal advised him to shut up the Exchequer, which he actually did, and it continued shut up for a year and some months, to the great distress and ruin of many families. On March 15, the king published his declaration for liberty of conscience, suspending the execution of all penal laws against the non-conformists. On the 17th, the king declared war against the States-general; and the French king, and the other allies, soon after. The parliament met on February 4, 1672-3, and it soon appeared that the country party, or that of the people, was become more powerful in the house of commons than the court party. They vigorously addressed the king against his declaration for liberty of conscience, as it was claiming a dispensing power, and both houses joined in addresses against the dangers that threatened the nation from popery. The king finding the commons so fully bent not to finish the money bills till their grievances were redressed, recalled his declaration. On April 16, 1677, the king, among other acts, gave his assent to one for taking away the writ de hæretico cumburendo. On August 11, 1678, the separate peace with Holland was signed, and some months after with the rest of the allies. March 21, 1680-1, the parliament met, and the first thing they did was to order their votes to be printed, which practice they have continued ever since. But the king finding this parliament not inclined to countenance his favourite schemes, came suddenly to the house of lords and dissolved it, after one short session of but seven days. The year 1684 was almost wholly taken up with prosecutions of persons for speaking ill of the king, the duke of York, and the government; some were fined, and in large sums, and others pilloried. Sir George Jefferies, a man without honour of conscience, had been made lord justice of the King's Bench, and other alterations had been made among the judges; and the sheriffs of London being now named by the king, impannelled such juries as were sure to find for the court. The project of the surrender of Chartres was completed this year. On February 6, 1684-5, the king died in his 55th year, and near 25 years after his restoration. He had no children by his queen, but several by his mistresses.

CHARLESTON, the capital of S. Carolina, is seated on a peninsula, formed by the rivers Ashley and Cooper, the former of which is navigable for ships of burden 20 miles above the town. The banks of these rivers are adorned with beautiful plantations, and fine walks, interspersed with rows of trees, which render the situation of the town very pleasant. By the Santee Canal, lately completed, boats pass safely from Santee to Cooper River, and the productions of Campden, Grandby, and the back country, are poured into Charleston with much facility and regularity. It has a commodious and secure harbour, and is a place of considerable trade. In 1787, there were 1600 houses, 9600 whites, and 5400 negroes. Lat. 32. 50. N. lon. 79. 33. W.

CHARLESTON, a town of New Hampshire, 83 miles N. W. of Boston; also a town of Washington county, Rhode Island; and a town of Massachusets, 3 miles N. of Boston.

CHARLES's-WAIN, in astronomy, 7 remarkable stars in the constellation of Ursa Major.

CHARLOCK, s. a weed growing among the corn, with a yellow flower. It is a species of mithridate mustard.

CHARLOTTE'S (Queen) ISLAND, an inland in the south sea, first discovered by Captain Wallis, 1767, who took possession of it in the name of George III.

CHARM, s. [charme, Fr.] a kind of spell, supposed to have an irresistible influence, by means of the concurrence of some infernal power, both on the mind, lives, and properties of those whom it has for its subject. Figuratively, any excellence which engages and conquers the affections. SYNON. The word charm carries an idea of force, which puts a stop to ordinary effects and natural causes. The word enchantment is used properly for that which regards the illusion of the senses. The word spell bears particularly an idea of something which disturbs the reason.

To CHARM, v. a. to fortify or secure against evil by some spell; to influence, or subdue the mind by some excellence or pleasure.

CHARMER, s. one who deals in spells or magic; one whose personal perfection irresistibly attract admiration and love. SYNON. The body seems to be more susceptible of graces; the mind of charms. We say of a lady that she walks, dances, and sings with grace; and that her conversation is full of charms.

CHARMING, part. possessed of such perfections as work irresistibly on the mind, and fill it with pleasure.

CHARMINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to convey inexpressible pleasure.

CHARMINGNESS, s. that quality which renders a thing capable of working on the affections, and filling the mind with pleasure.

CHARNEL-HOUSE, s. [charnier, Fr.] to place in or near a church, where the bones of the dead are deposited.

CHART, (kart) s. [charta, Lat.] an hydrographical map, or projection of some part of the earth's superficies, for the use of navigation.

CHARTER, s. [chartre, Fr.] in law, a written evidence or instrument of things done between two parties. The king's charter, is where he makes a grant to any person or body politic; such as charter of exemption, &c. Charters of private persons, are deeds and instruments. Figuratively, the act of bestowing any privilege or right, exemption or claim.

CHARTERED, a. invested with privileges by charter, beautifully applied in the following sentence: "The air, a charter'd libertine, is still." Shak.

CHARTER-LAND, s. land which is held by charter, or evidence in writing.

CHARTER-PARTY, a. [chartre partie, Fr.] a deed or writing indented, made between merchants and sea-faring men concerning their merchandise.

CHARTRES, an ancient and considerable town in the department of Eure and Loir, containing about 10,000 inhabitants. Its cathedral is esteemed one of the most beautiful in the kingdom. The principal trade consists in corn. It is seated on the river Eure, over which is a bridge, the work of Vauban, 45 miles S. W. of Paris.

CHARY, a. cautious, scrupulous, careful of giving any cause for suspicion or censure.

CHARYBDIS, a celebrated whirpool, 30 paces in diameter, in the Strait of Messina, between Calabria and Sicily. Its horrors were described by the ancients with all the extravagance of poetic fiction; it is said, however, to have been entirely removed by an earthquake in 1783.

To CHASE, v. a. [chasser, Fr.] to follow after a beast, &c. for pleasure; to hunt; to pursue as an enemy.

CHASE, s. the pursuit or following of game; hunting; that which is the proper object of hunting. The pursuit of an enemy, or of some desirable object. Figuratively, pursuit. In law, a large extent of woody ground, privileged for the reception of deer and game.

CHASER, s. one who pursues.

CHASM, (kazm) s. [chasme, Gr.] a breach or hollow space separating the parts of any body; a vacant space.

CHASTE, a. [chaste, Fr.] true to the marriage-bed. Applied to expressions, free from any obscenity or immodest words. In grammar, free from any foreign mixture.

To CHASTEN, v. a. [chastier, Fr.] to correct or punish a child, in order to deter him from faults.

CHASTELY, ad. without the least incontinence, or any inclination to lust.

CHASTENESS, s. freedom from incontinence, or any breach of modesty.

To CHASTISE, (chastize) v. a. formerly accented on the first syllable; [chestier, Fr.] to punish or afflict for faults. SYNON. We chastise him who has committed a fault, to prevent his doing the same again: We punish the person guilty of a crime by way of expiation, and as an example to others. To correct, signifies to amend by means of chastisement. To discipline, means to regulate and instruct.

CHASTISEMENT s. [formerly accented on the first syllable] correction or punishment, generally applied to the discipline of parents and tutors.

CHASTISER, s. the person that chastises.

CHASTITY, s. [castitas, Lat.] an entire freedom from any imputation of lust, either in thought or deed. In expressions, free from immodest words.

To CHAT, v. n. [a contraction of the verb chatter] to talk on different subjects, or without any deep thought, or profound attention. Actively, to talk of. Not in use, unless ludicrously.

CHAT, s. trifling, idle, and unimproving discourse, made use of to pass time away.

CHATTELANY, (shattellany) s. [châtelanie, Fr.] the district belonging to any castle.

CHATHAM, a town of Kent, adjoining Rochester, and seated on the Medway. It consists of about 500 houses, mostly low, and built with brick, and is chiefly celebrated for being the principal station of the royal navy: as, likewise for its dock yard, improved and enlarged by Queen Elizabeth, and considerably extended by Charles I. so that now there is not a more complete arsenal in the world. The warehouses here, for naval stores, ordnance, &c. of which there are whole streets, are the largest in dimensions and most in number to be seen any where; the rope houses and smiths' forges are proportionably extensive; as also the wet dock, the canals and ditches, for keeping masts and yards under water, for preserving them. The largest vessels are built here, and whole fleets fitted out with astonishing expedition. A ship here is used as a church for the sailors. It is 31 miles E. S. E. of London. Market on Saturday.

CHATHAM, an island on the S.E. coast of Massachusets; a town of Connecticut; and a county of Georgia, of which Savannah is the principal town; also a county of N. Carolina; and a town of Chesterfield county, S. Carolina.

CHATOYANT, in chymistry, a term introduced by the French chymists, to describe a property in some metallic and other substances, of varying their colours according to the way in which they are held; as is the case with the feathers of some birds, which appear very different when seen in different positions.

CHATTELS, s. any moveable possession. At present used only in law, for all things moveable and immoveable.

To CHATTER, v. a. [caqueter, Fr.] to make a noise like a pie. Figuratively, to talk very much.

CHATTER, s. a noise like that of a pie, or monkey when angry; "The mimic ape began his chatter." Swift. Impertinent talk.

CHATTERER, s. one who spends his time in idle or unimproving talk.

CHATWOOD, s. little sticks; fuel.

To CHAW, v. a. [kawen, Teut.] to cut meat or food into small pieces by a frequent action of the teeth.

CHAWDRON, s. the entrails or maw of a beast.

CHAWLEY, a town in Devonshire, 10 miles N. N. W. of Crediton, and 18 N. N. W. of Exeter.

CHEADLE, a town in Staffordshire, in the neighbourhood of which are very extensive copper and brass works. It is seated in a country abounding with coals, near the source of the Dove, 12 miles N. E. of Stafford. Lat. 53. 0. N. lon. 1. 56. W. Market on Saturday.

CHEAP, (cheep) a. [from ceapan, Sax.] to be purchased with little money; of small value.

To CHEAPEN, v. a. to bargain for or ask the price of a commodity; to endeavour to purchase a thing at a less price than the seller first asks for it.

CHEAPLY, ad. at a very low price or rate; with very little money.

CHEAPNESS, s. lowness of price.

To CHEAT, (cheet) v. a. to deceive or impose upon; to defraud a person by some artifice or low cunning.

CHEAT, s. a fraud, or imposture, whereby a person is deceived and imposed upon; a person who imposes on others.

CHEATER, s. one who practises fraud, in order to deprive people of their property.

To CHECK, v. n. to restrain the cravings of any appetite; to stop a thing in motion; to chide or reprove a person.

CHECK, s. a restraint, disappointment, repulse, curb, reproof. Figuratively, a slight; a counter cypher of a bank bill; an account kept privately to examine that which is kept with a banker, or public office; a person who examines any account; a kind of linen with blue stripes crossing each other, used by sailors for shirts, &c. Clerk of the check, in the king's household, has the controlment of the yeomen of the guard, and all the ushers belonging to the royal family, allowing their absence or defaults in attendance, or muleting their wages for the same, &c. He, or his deputy, takes cognizance of those who are to watch in the court, and sets the watch, &c.

To CHECKER, or CHEQUER, v. a. [from echecs, Fr.] to vary with different colours like a chess-board; to variegate. Figuratively, to diversify with different state of prosperous and unsuccessful circumstances.

CHECKER, or CHECKER-WORK, s. any thing painted in squares, with different colours, like a chess-board.

CHECKMATE, s. [echec et mat, Fr.] the movement on the chess board that kills the opposite men, or hinders them from moving.

CHECK-ROLL, s. a book or roll containing the names of the king's household servants.

CHEDDER, a large village of Somersetshire, famous for its cheeses, which are the next best to Stilton cheese, in England, and as large as those of Cheshire. It is seated 2 or 3 miles E. of Axbridge, in Somersetshire.

CHEEK, s. the fleshy part of the side of the face below the eye. Among mechanics, cheeks are a general name for almost all those pieces of machines and instruments that are double and perfectly alike. The cheeks of a grate, are flat plates of iron, standing perpendicular, and serving to confine the dimensions of a fire. The cheeks of a mortar, are two strong planks of wood, bound with thick iron plates, which are fixed on each side of the mortar to keep it in the elevation that is given it.

CHEEKBONE, s. the jaw.

CHEER, s. [chere, Fr.] provisions for an entertainment, gaiety, or fulness of spirits.

To CHEER, v. a. to inspire with courage; to animate, or incite; to make joyful.

CHEERER, s. the person or thing which communicates joy, or comforts in distress.

CHEERFUL, a. that abounds in gaiety, life, and spirits opposed to dejection.

CHEERFULLY, ad. without dejection, willingly.

CHEERFULNESS, s. a disposition of mind unclouded by despair; alacrity; vigour.

CHEERLESS, a. sad, dejected, comfortless.

CHEERLY, ad. in a gay, cheerful, joyous manner.

CHEERY, a. gay, joyful, or communicating pleasure and gaiety.

CHEESE, (cheeze) s. [eyse, Sax.] a food made of milk, curdled by means of rennet, squeezed dry in a press, and hardened by time.

CHEESECAKE, s. in pastry, is made of soft curds, butter and sugar, baked.

CHEESEMONGER, s. one who deals in cheese.

CHEESEPRESS, s. a press, wherein the curds of which the cheese is made are pressed dry from the whey.

CHEESEVAT, s. the wooden case in which the curds are confined, when pressed for cheese.

CHEESY, (cheézy) a. having the qualities of cheese.

CHEKAO, s. in natural history, the name of an earth which is used by the Chinese in making that beautiful white porcelain, which has flowers that appear to be formed by a mere vapour within its surface.

CHELMSFORD, a pretty large, populous town, nearly in the centre of Essex. It is pleasantly situated in a valley, at the confluence of the Chelmer and the Can, the gardens of the inhabitants on each side of the town, extending to those rivers. Here are some good inns, with a fountain, or conduit, of excellent water; and the assizes and quarter sessions for the county are held here. It is a great thoroughfare, the great eastern road from London passing through it. It is 43 miles S. by W. of Bury, 21 S. W. by W. of Colchester, and 29 N. E. by E. of London. A considerable market for corn, cattle, and provisions, on Friday.

CHELSEA, a large and populous village of Middlesex, on the banks of the Thames, 1 mile W. of St. James's Park. Here is an extensive and well stocked botanical garden, belonging to the company of apothecaries in London, and a bridge over the river to Battersea; here also is a magnificent hospital erected for the disabled and superannuated soldiers of the English army.

CHELTENHAM, a town of Gloucestershire, noted for its mineral waters, and extensive prospects from its adjoining hills. It is much improved of late years, with a new market house, a foot-way of flag-stones, made on each side of the streets. The poor inhabitants spin wool for the clothiers of Stroud. It derives its name from the rivulet Chilt, which passes through it into the Severn from Dowdeswell, and is 9 miles N. E. of Gloucester, and 95 W. by N. of London. Market on Thursday.

CHE'LY, s. [chela, Lat.] the claw of the shell-fish.

CHEMI'SE, (shameés) s. [Fr.] in fortification, a wall lining a bastion or ditch, in order to strengthen and support it. Also the French name for a shift, or a kind of dress resembling a shift.

CHE'MISTRY. See CHYMISTRY.

CHE'PSTOW, a populous, flourishing town of Monmouthshire, seated on the river Wye, near its confluence with the Severn. It is the port for all the towns that stand on the Wye and Lug. Ships of 6 or 700 tons burden are built here, or come up to the town. Five vessels trade constantly between this port and London, generally going and returning in two months. A market-boat of 70 tons burden, goes likewise regularly to Bristol every Tuesday, and returns every Thursday. The merchants import their own wine from Oporto, and flax, deal, pitch, &c. from Norway and Russia. The tide is said to rise higher here than in any other part of Europe, swelling to 50 or 60 feet perpendicular. It is 18 miles N. of Bristol, and 127 of London. Market on Saturday.

CHERA'SCO, a city, capital of a principality of Piedmont, situated at the conflux of the rivers Stura and Tanaro.

CHERBURG, a maritime town, in the department of the Channel, containing about 600 inhabitants. The harbour will admit vessels of 900 tons at high water, and of 250 at low. Woollen stuffs are manufactured here, and the inhabitants build small vessels. Cherburg is 50 miles N. W. of Caen. Lat. 49. 38. N. lon. 1. 33. W.

To CHE'RISH, v. a. [cherir, Fr.] to nourish or promote the growth of a thing; to help; to encourage; to protect, shelter, and nourish.

CHE'RISHER, s. one who protects, and contributes to the growth of a thing.

CHE'RRY, s. in gardening, a fruit-tree, with shining leaves; its fruit grows on long pedicles, is roundish or heart-shaped; though included by Linnæus under the genus of prunus, or plum, yet they cannot be engrafted on each other.

CHE'RRY, a. resembling a cherry in colour; red.

CHE'RSON, the capital of New Russia, in the government of Ekaterinoslav, lately erected on the banks of the river Dnieper, 10 miles above the mouth of the Ingulec. It was intended by the empress Catharine to be the principal mart for foreign trade in this part of her dominions. It is not yet very large, but the houses are of stone, and neatly executed. It has a dock for the construction of large vessels, from which several have been already launched. The public works are executed and the plantations formed by criminals, who amount to some hundreds. It is supplied with fuel by reeds only, of which there is an immense forest in the shallows of the Dnieper, near the town. Rails, and even temporary houses are made of them. They are tall and strong, and afford shelter to various kinds of aquatic birds, some of which are very beautiful. In this city the humane Howard ended his days; he was to the last engaged in the merciful employment of visiting those who were sick and in prison. Cherson is 50 miles N. E. of Ockzakow. Lat. 46. N. lon. 33. 10. E.

CHERSONE'SE, or CHERSONE'SUS, (kersoneéz) s. [from chersos, land, and nesos, island, Gr.] in geography, a peninsula.

CHERT, s. [quartz, Germ.] a term made use of in describing a species of siliceous stones which are coarser and softer than the common silex. It is often found in large masses or quarries of limestone.

CHE'RTSEY, a town of Surry, in a low situation near the Thames, over which there is a handsome bridge of seven arches. It was formerly the residence of some of the Saxon kings, has a trade in malt, which it conveys in barges to London, and is 7 miles W. of Kingston, and 20 W. by S. of London. Market on Wednesday.

CHE'RUB, s. [from cherub, pl. cherubim, Heb.] a celestial spirit, in the order of angels, placed next to the seraphim; in scripture variously described under the shapes of men, eagles, oxen, lions, &c.

CHERU'BIC, a. angelic, or partaking of the nature of a cherub.

CHERUBIM, s. the plural of cherub.

To CHE'RUP, v. n. to make a noise by drawing in the air through the lips, after they are drawn into a kind of circle, in order to encourage any beast, or to set a song bird a singing.

CHE'RVIL, s. a very common weed in many places of Britain. There are several species of it. Garden chervil, is otherwise called sweet fern.

CHE'SAPEAK, one of the largest bays in the world. Its entrance is between Cape Charles and Cape Henry, in Virginia, 12 miles wide, and it extends 270 miles to the northward, on both sides of the state of Maryland. It is from 7 to 18 miles broad, and generally 9 fathoms deep, affording a safe and easy navigation, and many commodious harbours. It receives the waters of the Susquehannah, Patomac, Rappahanoc, York, and James which are all large and navigable rivers.

CHE'SHAM, a town of Buckinghamshire, trading in laces, shoes, and wooden ware. It is seated on the borders of Hertfordshire, 12 miles S. E. of Aylesbury, and 29 W. by N. of London. Market on Wednesday.

CHE'SHIRE, a county Palatine of England, separated on the N. from Lancashire by the river Mersey, but just at the N. E. point it borders on Yorkshire, on the E. it is bounded by Derbyshire and part of Staffordshire, on the S. by Shropshire, and a detached part of Flintshire, and on the W. and S. W. by Denbyshire and Flintshire, from which latter it is separated by the river Dee; on the N. W. it is washed by the Irish Sea, that part of it being a peninsula, about 13 miles in length, and 6 in breadth, formed by the mouths of the Mersey and the Dee. Without including the peninsula, the county extends 33 miles from N. to S. and 42 from E. to W. It is divided into 7 hundreds, containing 1 city, 11 market-towns, and 101 parishes. The air is temperate and very healthy. The soil is rich in pasture and corn land. Immense quantities of cheese are made in this county; but a considerable quantity, of what goes by the name of Cheshire cheese, is made in Shropshire, Staffordshire, and Lancashire. London alone is said to consume 14,000 tons of it; vast quantities are also sent to foreign parts, to Ireland, Scotland, and different parts of England. The manufactures of Cheshire are extensive; and it is noted for its salt springs. The principal rivers are the Mersey, Dee, Weaver, and Dane; and here are several small lakes.

CHE'SHUNT, with its Park and Wash, Herts. near Hoddesdon. Here Richard Cromwell, the protector, under the assumed name of Clark, spent many years of a venerable old age, in obscurity and peace, much to be preferred, no doubt, to all the splendid infelicities of guilty ambition. He first resided here in 1680, in a house near the church, and here he died in 1712, in his 86th year. He enjoyed a good state of health to the last; and was so healthy, that at fourscore he would gallop his horse for many miles together.

CHE'SNUT, or CHE'SNUT-TREE, s. the timber of it, next to the oak, is the fittest for building, durable, and most coveted by carpenters and joiners. As to the nut or fruit of this tree, the biggest are accounted the best.

CHESS, s. [echecs, Fr.] a game played with little round pieces of wood on a board divided into 24 squares, each side having eight noblemen and as many pawns, which are to be moved or shifted into the different squares, according to the laws of the game.

CHESS-APPLE, s. a species of wild service.

CHESS-MAN, s. a puppet for chess.

CHE'SS-PLAYER, s. a gamester at chess.

CHE'SSOM, s. in gardening, a mellow earth, between the two extremities of clay and sand.

CHEST, s. [cyst, Sax.] a large strong wooden box, greater than a trunk, used for keeping clothes, linen, &c. The cavity of the human body from the neck to the belly, called the breast or stomach. A chest of drawers, is a wooden frame which contains several drawers placed above each other.

CHE'STER, the capital of Cheshire, is a large, ancient, and populous city, containing 9 well-built churches, besides the cathedral, called St. Werburgh's, which looks as antique as the castle. They were both built by Hugh Lupus, nephew to William the Conqueror; unless, as some say, the church was founded by Edgar. It is seated on the Dee, over which there is a noble bridge, by which vessels come from the sea to the quay; and by a canal, lately cut, it has communication with most of the new inland navigations. It has also a constant communication with Ireland. Its three annual fairs, on Feb. 24. July 5, and Oct. 10, each lasting a week, are the most noted in England, especially for Irish linens. The main streets have a peculiarity of construction; they are hollowed out in the rock to a considerable depth, and the houses have, elevated in front, a sort of covered porticos, which are called rows, and afford a sheltered way for foot passengers. The city has 4 gates and 3 posterns, and is 2 miles in compass. It consists chiefly of 4 large streets, which are pretty even and spacious, and as they cross one another in straight lines, meeting in the centre, they make an exact cross, with the town-house or exchange, a neat structure, near the middle. In the old castle, where the earls of Chester formerly held their parliaments, was a stately hall, somewhat like that at Westminster, where the palatine courts and assizes were held, before the erection of the new prison. Chester has a manufactory of gloves and tobacco-pipes, and a considerable traffic of shop goods into North Wales. It is 182 miles N. W. of London. Markets on Wednesday and Saturday.

CHE'STERFIELD, a town of Derbyshire, seated on a gentle rise, between two small rivers, is, next to Derby, the most considerable town in the county. It has one of the largest free-schools in the north of England. Here is a manufactory of worsted and cotton stockings, and of carpets; also silk mills, and potteries for brown ware; and near the town are large iron founderies, which are supplied with ore and coal dug in the vicinity. Large quantities of lead are sent hence by the new canal to the Trent, which it joins below Gainsborough. The country round Chesterfield produces great quantities of camomile. The spire of the church, which is of timber, covered with lead, is warped awry. It is 22 miles N. of Derby, and 149 N. N. W. of London. Market on Saturday.

CHEST-FOUNDERING, v. in farriery, a disease in horses which resembles a pleurisy or peripneumony in men.

CHEVALIE'R, (shevallíér) s. [from cheval, a horse, Fr.] a knight. In heraldry, a horseman armed at all points, or in complete armour.

CHEVAUX DE FRISE, (shevó de freeze) s. [Fr.] in fortification, a piece of timber traversed with wooden spikes, five or six feet long, pointed with iron, used for stopping up breaches, or securing any avenue from the enemy's cavalry.

CHE'VERIL, (shéveril) s. [chevereau, Fr.] a kid. Figuratively, kid leather.

CHE'VIOT, a mountainous district, separating the N. W. part of Northumberland from Scotland. The hilly country is called the Cheviot Hills, as the adjoining fenny grounds are called the Cheviot Moors. The cattle and wool are excellent.

CHE'VRON, (shévrŏng) s. [Fr.] in heraldry, one of the honorary ordinaries, representing two rafters of a house joined together, so as to form an angle, and is the symbol of protection. Per chevron, is when the field is divided only by two single lines, rising from the two base points, and meeting in a point above, like the chevron; this is termed party per chevron.

To CHEW, v. a. [ceowyan, Sax.] to bite or grind meat into small pieces between the teeth, proper for swallowing. Neuterly, to revolve often in the thoughts; to ruminate or meditate upon. Used with on, or upon.

CHIA'MPA, a country of Asia, bounded on the W. by Cambodia, on the N. by Cochin China, and on the E. and S. by the Indian Ocean, and the river Cambodia. It is little known.

CHI'AN EARTH, (kian erth) s. in pharmacy, is a dense and compact earth, sent hither in small flat pieces from the island whose name it bears; it is recommended as an astringent; and we are told, it is the greatest of all cosmetics, that it gives a whiteness and smoothness to the skin, and prevents wrinkles, beyond any of the other substances that have been celebrated for the same purposes.

CHICA'NE, (cheekáne) by some the ch in this word and its derivatives is pronounced like sh, as in the French.) s. [chicane, Fr.] in law, an abuse of judiciary proceeding tending to delay the cause, and deceive or impose on the judge or the parties. In the schools, vain sophistry, tending to perpetuate disputes, and obscure the truth.

To CHICA'NE, v. n. [chicaner, Fr.] to prolong a contest by artifice and subtleties.

CHICA'NER, s. [chicaneur, Fr.] one who makes use of quirks, subtleties, or other artifice, to obscure the truth.

CHICA'NERY, s. [chicanerie, Fr.] an artful prolonging any dispute by frivolous objections or subtleties.

CHI'CHESTER, the capital of Sussex, is a neat and handsome city, seated in a plain, by the river Lavant, by which it is encompassed on every side, except the N. The market-place is in the centre of the town, from which the four principal streets are directed to the cardinal points of the compass, and bear the names of E. W. N. and S. street. Its market is well supplied with provisions, it exports corn, malt, &c. has some foreign commerce, a declining manufactory of needles, and a manufactory of baize, blankets, and coarse cloths, lately established. The haven, formed by a canal, cut from the city down into the bay, affords excellent lobsters. It is 61 miles S. W. of London. Markets on Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday.

CHICK, or CHI'CKEN, s. [cicen, Sax.] the young of a fowl, or hen. Chick is used figuratively for a word of tenderness. Sometimes it is used for a person not arrived to the years of maturity, and void of experience.

CHI'CKEN HEARTED, a. timorous; cowardly.

CHI'CKENPOX, s. in medicine, a species of the small pox, but the pustules are not so large.

CHI'CKLING, s. a small or young chicken.

CHI'CKPEA, s. a kind of degenerate pea.

CHI'CKWEED, s. in botany, a species of alsine, with divided petals, leaves between egg and heart-shaped, and upright white blossoms, which open from nine in the morning till noon, except in rainy weather, when they do not open at all. It is very common in rich cultivated ground, and flowers from April to October.

To CHIDE, v. a. [preter. chide, partieip. pass. chid, or chidden; chidan, Sax.] to reprove with some degree of warmth and anger for faults. To blame or find fault with, beautifully applied to inanimate things. "Fountains, o'er the pebbles, chid your stay." Dryd. Neuterly, to scold or reprove severely. To make a noise as in a passion, elegantly applied to inanimate things. "As doth a rock against the chiding flood." Shak.

CHI'DER, s. one that is addicted to reproof, or fond of blaming.

CHI'DLEIGH, or CHUDLEIGH, a town of Devonshire, with a market on Saturday. It is seated near the river Thames, and the market is good for corn and provisions. It is 183 miles W. by S. of London. On the 22d of April, 1807, this town, consisting of about 200 houses, was burnt to the ground, with the exception of the church and seven houses only, but happily without the loss of one human life.

Chudleigh Rock, in the neighbourhood of Chudleigh; viewed from the W. it is a bold and perpendicular rock, apparently one solid mass of marble. From the S. E. a hollow opens to the view, with a stream rushing impetuously at the bottom, here and there checked in its progress by a great quantity of rude stones scattered around. Altogether, it is one of the most striking inland rocks in the island.

CHIEF, (cheef) a. [chef, Fr.] the major part, or greatest number; principal, including the idea of superior rank and activity.

CHIEF, s. a commander, applied to one who commands an army. In heraldry, the upper part of an escutcheon, running across from side to side.

CHIEFLESS, a. without chief or commander.

CHIEFLY, ad. generally; for the most or greatest part; principally.

CHIEFRIE, (cheefry) s. an acknowledgment paid to the lord paramount.

CHIEFTAIN, s. (cheeftain) one who commands an army; the head of a clan.

CHIETI, a city of Naples, capital of Abruzzo Citra.

CHILBLAIN, s. small red shining tumors, appearing on the fingers, toes, and heels, and when breaking out on the heels called kibes.

CHILD, s. plural children; [cild, Sax.] an infant or person in its tenderest years; the offspring of a person

To CHILD, v. n. to bring forth or bear children. Figuratively, to be prolific or fruitful, opposed to barren.

CHILDBEARING, s. the act of bearing children: pregnancy.

CHILDBED, s. a lying-in; or the state of a woman just after her delivery.

CHILDBIRTH, s. labour; travail; delivery.

CHILDERMAS-DAY, s. the day on which Herod's massacre of the children at Jerusalem, on account of Christ's birth, is commemorated, which weak and superstitious persons think an unlucky day.

CHILDHOOD, s. the state of a child; the interval between infancy and youth.

CHILDISH, a. resembling a child in ignorance, simplicity, and trifling.

CHILDISHLY, ad. in such a manner as only becomes a child; in a trifling manner.

CHILDISHNESS, s. want of discretion, knowledge, experience, and gravity.

CHILDLESS, a. without children.

CHILDLIKE, a. that resembles the actions and sentiments of a child.

CHILI, a large country of S. America, bounded on the W. by the S. Pacific Ocean; on the N. by Peru; on the E. by immense deserts, which divide it from Paraguay and other parts of S. America; and on the S. by Patagonia. It is upwards of 800 miles in length, but its breadth is uncertain. The Spanish colonies are thinly dispersed along the borders of the S. Sea, on a narrow tract extending from 30 to 50 miles in length. A profusion of natural productions is seen throughout this country, wherever attempts have been made to cultivate it. The wine made here is palatable, and of a good body; and brandy is distilled from it. The northern parts produce olives. The useful animals introduced here from Europe have multiplied surprisingly. Mines of gold and copper are numerous. It is claimed by the Spaniards, but the greater part of it is possessed by the still unconquered and independent natives.

CHILIAD, (kiliad) s. [chilias, Gr.] a thousand, or a collection of things or years amounting to a thousand.

CHILIAEDRON, s. [from chilias, a thousand, Gr.] a figure of a thousand sides.

CHILIFACTIVE, or CHILIFACTORY, s. See CHYLIFACTIVE.

CHILIHUEQUE, s. a kind of American camel-sheep, serving the ancient inhabitants of Chili as a beast of burden and of draught, and producing them a kind of woo.

CHILL, s. [cele, Sax.] cold, or that which stops the circulation of any fluid by its coldness. Figuratively, shivering with, or having the sensation of cold; depressed, dejected; discouraged, or rendered inactive by some disappointment or terrible object.

To CHILL, v. a. to reduce from a state of warmth to that of coldness. Figuratively, to stop or repress any motion; to discourage and detect; to blast or destroy by cold.

CHILLINESS, s. cold; a sensation which produces shivering.

CHILLY, a. that proceed from chilliness or cold.

CHILMINAR, s. the noblest and most beautiful piece of architecture amongst all the ruins of antiquity, being the ruins of the famous palace of Persepolis, fired by Alexander the Great, when intoxicated, at the persuasion of Thais his courtezan.

CHILNESS, s. the sensation of cold productive of shivering; the quality of producing the sensation of cold.

CHILTERN, a chain of chalky hills, separating the counties of Bedford and Herts, and running through the middle of Bucks, from Tring, Herts, to Henley upon Thames, Oxfordshire. They are covered, in various parts, with woods, and some of the eminences are of considerable height, and afford rich prospects. To these hills is annexed the nominal office of steward under the crown, the acceptance of which, of consequence, enables a member of the British parliament to vacate his seat

CHIMB, s. [kime, Belg.] the end of a barrel or tub.

CHIME, s. in music, formerly used for a concord, or the sounding of the same note on several instruments at once. In ringing, the sounding all the bells of a steeple after one another, with all the variations in their order that can produce music, or an agreeable harmony. Applied to clocks, a kind of periodical music, produced by a particular apparatus, wherein hammers of different sizes are put in motion, and play some tune on bells. Figuratively, harmony of tempers, proportion, or other relations. In poetry, the syllable at the end of a verse, which has the same sound as that of the preceding one.

To CHIME, v. n. to sound a concord, to agree in sound. Figuratively, to be musical. To answer each other, applied to relative terms; to acquiesce in; to agree with. Applied to poetry, to make the concluding syllables of two verses end with the same letters or sound. Actively, to cause to sound harmonically; to strike a bell with a hammer.

CHIMERA, (kimeera) s. [Gr.] a poetical fiction of a monster, composed of an union of the parts of different animals. Figuratively, a groundless or vain imagination, which has no foundation in reason or nature.

CHIMERICAL, (kimerical) a. that is the mere product of fancy or imagination; imaginary; fantastic.

CHIMERICALLY, (kimerically) ad. in a wild, fantastic, vain manner; without any reality.

CHIMNIAGE, s. [from chimin, an old law word for a road] a toll for passage through a forest.

CHIMLEIGH, a town in Devonshire with a market on Wednesday. It is seated on the river Dart, which fetching a compass like a bow, surrounds three parts of it. It is but a small place, and the market is inconsiderable. It is 22 miles N. N. W. of Exeter, and 193 W. by S. of London.

CHIMNEY, s. [cheminé, Fr.] in architecture, the passage or funnel through which the smoke ascends in a building. Chimney-piece is a composition of certain mouldings standing on the foreside of the jaumbs, and coming over the mantletree; the ornamental piece of wood or stone, that is set round the fire-place.

CHIMNEY-SWEEPER, one whose trade it is to clean foul chimnies of soot.

CHIMPANZEE, s. an African animal of the monkey tribe, which very nearly resembles the human species.

CHIN, s. [cinne, Sax.] the lower part of the face from the under lip.

CHINA, an extensive empire of Asia, bounded on the W. by mountains and deserts, which divide it from part of Tartary, Thibet, and the kingdom of Ava; on the N. by E.

Tartary, from which it is separated by a wall above 200 miles in length, on which there are about 45,000 towers: on the E. by the Yellow Sea, and the Chinese Ocean; and on the S. by the same ocean, Tonquin, Laos, Pegu, and Ava. It lies between 20. and 41. deg. N. lat. and between 96. and 125. deg. E. lon. It is divided into 16 provinces, which contain 155 towns of the first rank, 1312 of the second, besides 2357 fortified towns. Its population is said to amount to 333,000,000 a full third part of the whole human species. As this extensive country lies under a variety of climates, its air is very different. In the S. they are exposed to the tropical heats, and periodical rains, while the rivers in the N. are general frozen up for some months during the winter. It is chiefly a flat, open country, but there are some mountains, which are generally well cultivated and covered with trees, and there are mines of iron, tin, copper, quicksilver, gold and silver. There is abundance of corn, and pulse of all sorts, especially rice; and here are several trees, fruits, and animals, and a great number of simples, peculiar to the country, particularly a plant called ginseng, a tree that produces peas, differing little from those of Europe; another bearing a kind of gum, which makes excellent varnish; a third bearing white berries, of the size of a hazel nut, whose pulp is tallow, of which candles are made; and a fourth called the white wax tree, producing that article superior to the common bee's wax. The bamboo-cane grows to the height of an ordinary tree; and though it is hollow within, the wood is hard, and proper for many uses, such as pipes to convey water, boxes, baskets, and the making of paper, after it is reduced into a sort of paste. China is the only country which produces the tea plant, and supplies other nations with that article when prepared. There is scarcely a village of China, especially in the S. but what enjoys the benefit of some navigable river, lake, canal, or arm of the sea; and wherever there is a town on shore, there is another of boats upon the water, and many families are born, live, and die there; hogs, poultry, dogs, and other domestic animals being kept on board the same as on shore. Besides these vessels, there is a prodigious number of floats of timber perpetually passing up and down the rivers and canals, which carry vast numbers of people on them. Some of these floats are a mile in length, and the proprietors build little huts upon them, where they live till they have disposed of their timber, which they sometimes carry 1000 miles. The inhabitants are of a tawny complexion, and those are esteemed the most handsome who are the most corpulent. The men are much addicted to literature, and very ingenious in the practice of mechanical arts. The women affect much modesty, and lead a very retired life, to which they are partly induced by the disproportionate smallness of their feet, which renders walking painful and laborious. This smallness of their feet is not natural, but is the result of the violent compression which they endure from infancy. The Chinese are extremely ceremonious, but generally regarded as deceitful and knavish. Their language has no alphabet, but they write in characters which stand for words, or rather for ideas. The religion of the learned is a kind of deism, but that of the vulgar is gross idolatry. The revenues of the crown are computed at 21,000,000 sterling yearly, and the forces are said to consist of 5,000,000 of men in time of peace. They have generally maintained peace with their neighbours; but the late emperor extended his dominions over a great part of what used to be called Independent Tartary. Pekin is the capital of the whole empire.

CHI'NA-ORANGE, s. the sweet orange brought originally from China.

CHINA ROOT, s. a medicinal root brought originally from China.

CHINCHI'MEN, s. in natural history, a kind of otter, which inhabits Chili, and bears a considerable resemblance to a cat.

CHIN COUGH, (chin-coff) s. in medicine, a violent, dry cough, affecting children, even to a danger of suffocation.

CHINE, s. [eschine, Fr.] the part of the back containing the spine or back-bone.

To CHINE, v. a. to cut into chines; to split along the back-bone.

CHINK, s. [cinan, Sax.] a narrow gap, or opening, whereby the contact of the parts of a body is dissolved; a small or narrow opening lengthwise.

To CHINK, v. a. to make money or pieces of any metal sound by shaking them together. Neuterly, to sound by striking each other; to break in clefts or gaps, applied to ground.

CHINKY, a. full of narrow holes, gaps, or clefts.

CHINTS, s. a fine cloth manufactured of cotton in the East Indies, and generally printed with lively and durable colours.

CHI'OPPINE, s. [from chapin, Span.] a high shoe formerly worn by ladies.

To CHIP, v. a. to cut wood into small pieces. To cut off the crust of a loaf, applied to bread.

CHIP, s. [cyp, Sax.] a small piece of wood separated from a larger by a bill or cutting tool; any small piece cut off from a larger.

CHI'PPENHAM, a large, populous, well-built town of Wilts, with a considerable manufacture of superfine woollen cloth. It was the seat of Alfred, and other West-Saxon kings, and is seated on the Avon, over which is a stone bridge of 16 arches, 21 miles E. of Bristol, and 94 W. of London. Market on Thursday.

CHI'PPING, s. the action of cutting off small pieces from timber or other matters.

CHIPPING-NO'RTON, a town of Oxfordshire, with a market on Wednesday. It has a dry situation on the side of a hill, and near a small rivulet, and is a straggling town, except about the market-place. It is a corporation; and the market is good for corn, cattle, and provisions. It stands on the great post road between Worcester and Oxford, 12 miles S. W. of Banbury, and 74 N. W. of London.

CHIPPING WY'COMB, or HIGH WYCOMB, a town of Buckinghamshire, seated on the river Wyck, on which, as well as on the Loddon, are many corn and paper-mills, 12 miles S. S. E. of Aylesbury, and 31 N. N. W. of London. A large corn-market on Friday.

CHIPPING-O'NGAR, a town in Essex, 20 miles from London. Market on Saturday.

CHIPPING-SO'DBURY, a town of Gloucestershire, with a market on Thursday. It is seated in a bottom, near the Downs, on the road from Bristol to Cirencester, and has a great market for corn and cheese. It is situated 12 miles from Bristol, 23 from Cirencester, and 111 miles W. of London.

CHI'RAGRA, (kíragra) s. [Lat.] in medicine, the gout in the hand.

CHIRA'GRICAL, (kirágrical) a. being subject to the gout in the hands.

CHIRO'GRAPHY, (kirógraphy) s. [from cheir, hand, and grapho, to write, Gr.] a person's own hand-writing.

CHI'ROMANCER, (kíromanser) s. one who pretends to foretell future events by inspecting the hand.

CHI'ROMANCY, (kíromansy) s. [from cheir, hand, and manteia, divination, Gr.] the pretended art of foretelling what shall happen to a person, by inspecting the lines of his hand.

To CHIRP, v. n. [formed from the sound] to make a noise like a sparrow, or birds which call to one another.

CHI'RPER, s. a bird that makes a noise like a sparrow, or calls to another; a person that is gay, cheerful, or merry.

CHIRU'RGEON, (kiúrjun: commonly, though corruptly pronounced surgeon] s. [from cheir, hand, and ergon, work, Gr.] one who cures such disorders, hurts, or ailments, as require external applications, or the operations of the hand.

CHIRU'RGERY, s. [See Chirurgeon] the art of curing wounds and diseases, by external applications, or operations of the hand.

CHIRURGIC, or CHIRURGICAL, (kirûrjik, or kirurjikal) a having qualities fit for external or outward application. Belonging to external or manual operation.

CHI'SEL, (chizel) s. [ciseau, Fr.] a tool made of iron, pretty long, thin, and sometimes ground to an edge, used in carpentry, joining, masonry, sculpture, &c.

To CHI'SEL, v. a. to cut with a chisel.

CHIT, s. [cito, Ital.] a young little child; a mere baby; a word used in anger, and expressive of contempt.

CHIT-CHAT, s. [a cant word formed from the reduplication or repetition and corruption of the word chat] idle and unimproving discourse.

CHITTERLINGS, s. [not used in the singular; from schyterlingh, Belg.] the guts or bowels, generally applied to those of beasts fit for food. Likewise the frill or border sewed on the bosom of a man's shirt.

CHI'VALROUS, a. of or belonging to chivalry.

CHI'VALRY, s. [chevalerie, Fr.] knighthood, or military dignity. The objects of this institution were, to check the insolence of overgrown oppressors, to vindicate the helpless, especially females, and to redress grievances. Knighthood was esteemed more honourable than royalty itself, and monarchs were found to receive it from the hands of private gentlemen. As valour, galantry, and religion equally entered into the character of a true knight, it is believed that the spirit of chivalry had a great share in refining the manners of the European nations, during the twelfth and three following centuries.

CHIVES, s. [cive, Fr.] in botany, those threads or filaments in flowers, bearing the antheræ or tips on their extremities. They are the male organization of plants; and called by Linnæus stamina.

CHLORO'SIS, (klorosis) s. [from chloros, green, Gr.] in medicine, the green sickness.

CHO'COLATE, s. [chocolate, Span.] when applied to signify the cake from whence the liquor is made, is a composition of the cacao nut, sugar, and vanilla. Chocolate-house, is a place where only chocolate is sold ready made, and resembling a coffee-house.

CHOICE, s. [choix, Fr.] a faculty or act of the will, by which it prefers one thing to another, including that it is in our power to have determined otherwise. Figuratively, the deferring or determining in behalf of a thing on reasonable motives; the thing chosen; that which merits a preference, or ought to be preferred; a variety of things offered to the mind or judgment, that it may select from thence those which are best. To make choice of, is to prefer or select one or more things from several which are proposed to the judgment or will.

CHOICE, a. [comparative choicer, superlative choicest, choisi, Fr.] of superior excellence. Most valuable, or best. Careful, frugal, opposed to prodigal or profuse.

CHO'ICELESS, a. without the power of choosing.

CHO'ICELY, ad. with all the qualifications which should determine the will to give a preference.

CHOI'CENESS, s. that quality which determines the will to give it a preference; value, or superior excellence which claims a preference.

CHOIR, (koir) s. [chorus, Lat.] a band or company of singers. That part of a church where the choristers and clergy are placed.

To CHOKE, v. a. [accocan, Sax. or according to Minshew from kock, strength, Heb.] to stop up the passage of the throat so that a person cannot breathe; to kill by stopping a person's breath. To stop up any passage; to intercept or obstruct the motion of any thing. SYNON. Death brought on by a stopping of breath is the general idea of the words suffocated, smothered, choked; but that of suffocated implies an extinction of life, occasioned by being in a place where we cannot breathe; that of smothered, by being in a place where we are not suffered to breathe; that of choked, by having the wind-pipe closed.

CHOKE, s. in botany, the filamentous, or capillary part of an artichoke, immediately covering the fleshy part of the bottom.

CHOKE-PEAR, s. in gardening, a rough, harsh, unpalatable pear. Figuratively, any sarcasm that stops the mouth.

CHO'KY, a. that cannot easily be swallowed, but is apt to stick in the passage, and stop the breath.

CHO'LAGOGUES, (kólagógs) s. [from chole, bile, and ago, to lead or draw, Gr.] medicines which have the power of purging the bile.

CHO'LER, (kóler) s. [cholera, Lat.] in anatomy, the bile; which abounding very much in angry persons, is used figuratively for anger.

CHO'LERIC, (kólerik) a. abounding with choler. Figuratively, angry; easily provoked; passionate.

To CHOOSE, (chooze) v. a. preter. I chose, I have chosen, or chose; [ceosan, Sax.] to prefer or take from several things offered; to give the preference to; to will; to elect; or pick out of a number. SYNON. When we would take a thing, we determine upon one, because we cannot have all. We choose by comparing things, because we would have the best. We do not always choose what we prefer; but we ever prefer that which we choose.

CHOO'SER, (choózer) s. one who has the power of choosing; one who has a right to vote for a person who is candidate for any post; an elector.

To CHOP, v. a. preter. chopt, or I have chopt; [kappen, Belg.] to cut with a cleaver, axe, or chopping knife, by a quick or sudden stroke; to devour or eat quickly, used with up. Neuterly, to change with a quick and unexpected motion. To appear as if cut, applied to the effects of cold or hard weather on the hands.

To CHOP, v. a. [ceapan, Sax.] to purchase by exchanging one thing for another; to take a thing back again which had been given in exchange; to be fickle in one's choice.

CHOP, s. a piece cut off by a sudden blow; a piece of meat cut off from a joint, generally applied to mutton. A chink, cleft, hole, or vacuity made by the warping of wood. Chop-house, a kind of cook's shop, where meat is ready dressed, so called from their dealing mostly in mutton chops.

CHOPPING, a. large or lusty, applied to infants. Chopping-block, a long thick block of wood, used by butchers to cleave or chop their meat upon. Chopping-knife, a large sort of knife, used for chopping or mincing meat.

CHO'PPY, a. full of holes or clefts; appearing as if cut or chopt, owing to the effects of cold, applied to the hands, &c.

CHOPS, s. [it has no singular, and is supposed by Johnson to be a corruption of chaps] the mouth of a beast. Figuratively, used in contempt for the mouth of a man.

CHO'RAL, (kóral) a. [from chorus, Lat.] belonging to, or composing a choir or chorus.

CHORD, (pronounced hard, kord, as if the h was dropped. When it implies a string made of hemp or silk, it is spelt cord; but when it retains its primitive sense, the h is retained) s. [from chorde, a gut, Gr. because of such materials chords for musical instruments and other purposes were made] the string of a musical instrument, by the vibration of which all sounds are excited, as by its divisions the several degrees of times are determined. In geometry, a right line, terminated at each end of its extremities in the circumference of a circle, but not passing through its centre. Line of chords is one of the lines of the sector or plain scale; used in the measuring of an arch of any circle of which it is the radius. In anatomy, a little nerve extending over the drum of the ear, supposed by some to vary and modify sounds that beat on the tympanum, in the same manner as the braces or strings stretched over the war-drum.

CHORDE'E, (kordée) s. is a violent pain or contraction of the frenum.

CHO'RION, (kórion) s. [from chorco, to contain, Gr.] in anatomy, a thick, strong, whitish membrane, covered with a great number of branches of veins and arteries, and the outward membrane which wraps the fœtus.

CHO'RISTER, (kórister) s. one who sings in a choir, generally applied to signify a singing boy. Figuratively, one who sings or makes part of a chorus. Beautifully applied to birds.

CHO'RLEY, a town of Lancashire, with large manufactures of cottons, fustians, calicoes, and muslins. The environs abound in mines of coal, lead, and alum, and with quarries of flag, slate, ashler, and mill-stone. It is seated on the rivulet Chor, near the river Yarrow, 9 miles S. E. of Preston, and 203 N. W. of London. Markets on Tuesday and Saturday.

CHORO'GRAPHER, (korógrafer) s. [from choros, a region, and grapho, to write, Gr.] he that describes particular regions or countries.

CHOROGRAPHICAL, a. descriptive of particular regions or countries; laying down the boundaries of countries.

CHORO'GRAPHY, (korógrafy) s. the art of describing particular regions and countries, either in words or in maps.

CHO'RUS, (kórus) s. [Lat.] a number of singers joining in the same piece or tune. Figuratively, that part of a song in which a whole company join. In ancient drama, one or more persons present on the stage during a dramatic performance, supposed sometimes as by-standers, at others serving to introduce or prepare the audience for the introduction of any particular incident; and originally the only performers on the stage.

CHOUGH, (chuff) s. [ceo, Sax. choucas, Fr.] in natural history, a bird like a jackdaw, but somewhat bigger, which frequent rocks by the sea-side.

CHOULE, (commonly pronounced and written jowl) s. [gula, Lat.] the crop of a bird adhering to the lower side of the bill, and descending by its throat, somewhat resembling a bag or satchel, and serving as a kind of first stomach, to prepare its food for digestion.

To CHOUSE, v. a. to deprive a person of any thing by plausible stories or false pretences.

CHOUSE, s. one who is a proper object for fraud; a bubble or tool; a trick or sham.

CHRISM, (krism) s. [from chrio, to anoint, Gr.] the act of anointing; applied generally to anointing, as the initiation into some office, or rendering a person qualified for some profession in a scriptural sense.

CHRIST, (krist) s. [from chrio, to anoint, Gr.] one of the appellations given to our Lord and Saviour Jesus, signifying the same as Messiah, used by the Jews, and both importing the validity of his claim to the high character he assumed, and the reality of his being qualified to undertake the great work of redemption.

CHRI'STCHURCH, a town of Hants, trading in knit silk stockings, gloves, and watch chains. Here is a good salmon-fishery. It is seated at the confluence of the rivers Avon and Stour, with small, barred, tide haven, 98 miles S. W. of London. Market on Monday.

To CHRI'STEN, (kristen) v. a. [christnian, Sax.] to initiate or enter into the church of Christ by the sacrament of baptism. Figuratively, to give a thing a name, alluding to the practice of naming persons at this ceremony.

CHRI'STENDOM, (Kristendom) s. [christendome, Sax.] the collective body of Christians; those parts wherein Christianity is professed.

CHRI'STENING, (krístening) s. the ceremony of baptism.

CHRI'STIAN, (kristian) s. [from Christos, Christ, Gr.] a person who believes in Christ, and the principles of his religion. They who professed the religion of Jesus were at first termed Disciples; but the title of Christians was first given to those of Antioch, as appears from the Acts of the Apostles.

CHRI'STIAN, (kristian) a. [christianus, Lat.] professing the Christian religion. The most Christian King was a title assumed by the kings of France; supposed by French antiquaries to have been given originally by Gregory the Great to Charles Martel. Christian-name is that name which is given a person at his baptism.

CHRISTIANIA, Anslo, or Obsla, a city of Southern Norway, in the government of Aggerhuys, containing about 9000 inhabitants. The streets are projected in straight lines, and at right angles to each other, and are uniformly 40 feet broad. It has an excellent harbour, and carries on a considerable trade. Its principal exports are tar, iron, copper, planks, deals, and alum. The saw mills here are numerous. It is pleasantly seated along the shore of the Bay of Biorning which forms the N. extremity of the Gulf of Christiania, 25 miles from the open sea, and 200 N. by W. of Copenhagen. Lat. 59. 55. N. lon. 10. 50. E.

CHRISTIA'NITY, (kristiánity) s. [chrétienté, Fr.] the doctrines delivered by Christ and his Apostles, and professed by Christians.

To CHRI'STIANIZE, (kristianize) v. a. to convert a person, to convince him of the truth of the doctrines of Christianity. To make christian.

CHRI'STIANLY, ad. like a Christian.

CHRI'STMAS, (Krístmas) s. the day on which the nativity of our blessed Saviour is celebrated. Christmas-box, a box in which money collected as gifts by servants at Christmas is kept. Figuratively, the collections made at Christmas.

CHRI'STMAS-FLOWER, s. the same with hellebore.

CHRI'STMAS-ISLAND, nearly in the centre of the Pacific Ocean, is 45 miles in circumference, bounded by a reef of coral rocks, on the W. side of which is a bank of fine sand, extending a mile into the sea, and affording good anchorage. The soil is light and black, composed of decayed vegetables, the dung of birds, and sand. Here are a few cocoa-nut and other trees, shrubs, and plants, some birds, and plenty of fish and turtles. Lat. 1. 59. N. lon. 157. 22. W.

CHRI'STOPHER, s. an herb with flowers in egg-shaped bunches, a slender, jointed, scored stem, white blossoms, and black berries, called also baneberries. It is found in woods and hedges in Yorkshire, and flowers in May and June.

CHRI'STOPHER'S, St. or ST. KITS, one of the Caribbee and Leeward Islands in the West Indies, about 18 leagues N. W. of Antigua. It is 20 miles in length, and seven in breadth, and has high mountains in the middle, whence rivulets flow, which are of great use to the inhabitants. Between the mountains are rocks, precipices, and thick woods; and in the S. W. parts, hot, sulphureous, springs at the bottom of them. The air is good, and the soil is light, sandy, and fruitful: they are, however, subject to hurricanes. It is divided into 9 parishes, and contains 4 towns or hamlets; Basseterre the capital, Sandy Point, Old Road, and Deep Bay. The white inhabitants are computed at 4000, and the negroes at 23,000. The produce is chiefly sugar, (the general average of this article, for a series of years, is 16,000 hogsheads of 16 cwt.) cotton, ginger, indigo, and the tropical fruits. It is possessed by the English. Lat. 17. 15. N. lon. 63. 14. W.

CHROMATES, s. in chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base, with the chromic, acid.

CHROMA'TIC, (kroma'tic) a. [from chroma, colour, Gr.] in painting relating to colour. Relating to a certain kind of ancient music, which proceeded by several semitones in succession.

CHROMATICS, s. [from chroma, colour, Gr.] that part of the science of optics by which the several properties of the colours of light and of natural bodies are illustrated and explained.

CHROME, s. a newly-discovered metal, which communicates a variety of colours to other metals.

CHROMIC, a. in chemistry, belonging to chromium.

CHROMIUM, s. a newly-discovered metal, whence a beautiful green colour may be obtained, useful in painting, and in the colouring of porcelain.

CHRO'NIC, or CHRONICAL, (krónick or krónikal, a.) [from chronos, time, Gr.] that endures or lasts a long time.

in medicine, applied to those diseases which are opposed to the acute, or such as soon come to a crisis.

CHRO'NICLE, (krónikle) s. [cronique, Fr.] a regular account of transactions in the order they happen; a history.

To CHRO'NICLE, (krónikle) v. a. to insert in a history; to be recorded; to be made famous, or handed down to the memory of posterity.

CHRO'NICLER, (krónikler) s. one who writes a regular account of transactions, according to the order in which they were performed; an historian.

CHRONICLES, s. two books of holy scripture, which contain an abridgment of sacred history, to the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity. The first book traces the genealogies of the Israelites from Adam, relates the death of Saul, and gives a brief account of the reign of David. The second traces the progress of the kingdom of Judah, its various revolutions, its period under Zedekiah, and the restoration of the Jews by Cyrus.

CHRONOGRAM, (kronogram) s. [from chronus, time and grapho, to write, Gr.] an inscription, whose numeral letters compose some particular date.

CHRONOGRA'MMATIST, s. a writer of chronograms.

CHRONOLOGER, (kronolojer) s. [from chronos, time and logos, a discourse, Gr.] one who makes the settling the dates of former transactions his particular study.

CHRONOLO'GICAL, (kronolójical) a. relating to chronology, or the period in which any transactions happened.

CHRONOLO'GICALLY, (kronolójically) ad. in such a manner as is consistent with the rules of chronology.

CHRONO'LOGIST, (kronólojist) s. See CHRONOLOGER.

CHRONO'LOGY, (kronology) s. [from chronos, time and logos, a discourse, Gr.] the act of tracing the times wherein any remarkable transaction is performed.

CHRONO'METER, (kronómeter) s. [from chronos, time and metreo, to measure, Gr.] an instrument used for the measuring of time.

CHRY'SALIS, (krysalis) s. [from chrysos, gold, Gr.] in natural history, a worm or caterpillar in its second state, wherein it continues without eating, or any motion, unless in its tail, till it bursts its pellicle, and changes into a moth or butterfly.

CHRYSANTHEMUM, s. in botany, the name of two tribes of flowers introduced from America, and the Cape of Good Hope.

CHRY'SOLITE, (kry'solite) s. [from chrysos, gold and lithos, a stone, Gr.] a general term given by the ancients to all precious stones that had a cast of gold or yellow in their composition. Among moderns, a precious stone of a dusky green colour, with a cast of yellow.

CHRYSO'PRASUS, s. [from chrysos, gold, Gr. and prăsinus, green, lat.] a precious stone mentioned in scripture, of a yellow colour, approaching to green.

CHUB, s. in natural history, a non-spinous fish, or that which has no prickly fins, and only one on its back.

CHUBBED, a. Figuratively, having a large head, alluding to that of a chub.

To CHUCK, v. a. to make a noise like a partridge, or a hen calling her chickens.

To CHUCK, v. a. [from choc, Fr.] to give a person a gentle chuck under the chin; to endeavour to throw money into a hole made in the ground, at some distance.

CHUCK, s. the noise of a hen; an expression of endearment; a cast, by which a person endeavours to throw money into a hole made in the ground for that purpose.

CHU'CKFARTHING, s. a play, at which the money falls with a chuck into the hole beneath.

To CHU'CKLE, v. n. [schaecken, Belg.] to laugh vehemently, so as to be out of breath. Actively, to call like a hen. Figuratively, to fondle or chuck under the chin.

CHU'DLEIGH. See CHIDLEIGH.

CHUFF, s. a coarse, heavy, surly, and passionate clown.

CHU'FFY, a. surly, morose.

CHU'FFILY, ad. surlily; stomachfully

CHUM, s. [chom, Armorick] a chamber-fellow; a term used in the universities.

CHUMP, s. a thick, heavy piece of wood, less than a block.

CHURCH, s. [circe, Sax.] is a word of different significations, according to the different subjects to which it is applied. 1. It is understood of the collective body of Christians through the whole world who profess to believe in Christ, and acknowledge him to be the Saviour of mankind. This is what ancient writers called the Catholic or Universal Church; and agrees with the apostle's account of one, in Col. i. 18. 2. It is applied to any particular congregation of Christians, who, at one time, and one and the same place, associate together, and concur in the participation of all the institutions of Jesus Christ, with their proper pastors and ministers. 3. It is also applied to any particular sect or party of Christians, distinguished by particular doctrines and ceremonies; as, the Romish Church, the Greek Church, the Church of England, the Reformed Churches, and the like. 4. It is sometimes used to denote the body of ecclesiastics, or clergy; in which sense Church is opposed to the State. 5. It is likewise taken for the place where a particular congregation or society of Christians assemble for the celebration of divine service. In this sense Churches are variously denominated, according to the rank, degree, discipline, &c. as the metropolitan, patriarchal, cathedral, parochial, collegiate, &c. Sometimes the word Church is considered in a more extensive sense, and divided into several branches; as the Church militant is the assembly of the faithful on earth; the Church triumphant, that of the faithful already in glory; to which the Papists add the Church patient, which, according to their doctrine, is that of the faithful in purgatory. SYNON. Church and temple signify an edifice set apart for the public service of religion; but that of temple is a more pompous expression, and less in use than Church. With respect to the Pagan religion, we frequently use the word temple; as the temple of Apollo: but with relation to our own, seldom; St. Paul's Church.

To CHURCH, v. a. to read the peculiar service of returning thanks to God for a happy delivery, with the person who is recovered from child-bed.

CHURCHMAN, s. one who professes the religion or mode of worship by law established; a minister, or person who officiates in a church.

CHURCH-STRETTON, a town of Shropshire, with a market on Thursday. It is seated between two hills, and is but a small place, though the market is good for corn. It is 14 miles S. of Shrewsbury, and 153 N. W. of London.

CHURCH-WARDEN, s. an officer elected yearly, in Easter week, by the minister and parishioners of every parish, to look after the church, church-yard, and the things belonging to them.

CHURCH-YARD, s. the ground adjoining to a church, wherein the dead are buried.

CHURL, s. [ceorl, Sax.] a clown, or unpolished countryman. Figuratively, a morose, surly, or ill-bred person; a niggard, or a miser.

CHU'RLISH, a. brutal, rude, ignorant, ill-bred, uncivil, sour, selfish, avaricious.

CHU'RLISHLY, ad. in a rude, uncivil, unkind, or brutal manner.

CHU'RLISHNESS, s. rude, obstinate, and surly behaviour.

CHURN, s. [kern, Belg.] a vessel in which cream, by violent or long agitation, is turned into butter.

To CHURN, v. a. [kernen, Belg.] to make butter by frequent and continual motion.

CHU'RNSTAFF, s. in botany, a species of spurge, called also wartwort, with wedge-shaped leaves, and yellowish green blossoms, found in cultivated places and gardens, and flowers in July.

CHU'RRWORM, s. an insect that turns about nimbly called also a fan-cricket.

To CHUSE See CHOOSE.

CHYLA'CEOUS, (kyláccous) a. consisting of chyle ; partaking of the qualities of chyle ; resembling chyle.

CHYLE, (kyle) s. [chylos, Gr.] in the animal œconomy, a milky, insipid liquor, consisting of oily and mucilaginous particles, extracted from dissolved aliaments of every kind, and by a peculiar mechanism conveyed to the blood.

CHYLIFA'CTION, (kylifákshon) s. the act of converting the juice of aliaments into a white liquor called the chyle.

CHYLIFA'CTIVE, (kylifáctive) a. having the power of making chyle ; endued with the quality of converting aliment into chyle.

CHYLOPOE'TIC, (kylopoétik) [from chylos, chyle, and poico, to make, Gr.] having the power or office of converting aliment into chyle.

CHY'LOUS, (ky'lous) a. consisting of chyle, resembling or partaking of the qualities of chyle.

CHY'MIC, or CHY'MICAL, (ky'mik, or ky'mikal) a. [chymicus, Lat.] made by, or relating to, chymistry.

CHY'MICALLY, (ky'mikally) ad. in a chymical manner.

CHY'MIST, or CHE'MIST, (ky'mist, or kémist) s. a professor of chymistry.

CHY'MISTRY, (ky'mistry) s. [from chymos, juice, Gr.] an art by which sensible bodies, contained in vessels, are so changed by means of fire, that their several powers and virtues are thereby discovered, their several substances are separated, and new bodies are composed by the mixture of different substances or ingredients. It is now commonly written chemistry.

CIBA'RIOUS, a. [from cibus, meat, Lat.] proper for food ; partaking of the qualities of food.

CI'BOL, s. [ciboule, Fr.] a small sort of onion used in salads.

CI'CATRICE, or CI'CATRIX, s. [Lat.] a little seam or elevation of callous flesh, rising and remaining on the skin after the healing of a wound ; a scar.

CICATRI'SANT, or CICATRI'SIVE, a. in medicine, applied to such applications as are desiccative, aid nature to repair the skin of a wound, and form a scar.

CICATRIZA'TION, s. in surgery, the act of healing a wound ; the state of being healed or skinned over.

To CI'CATRIZE, v. a. to apply such medicines to wounds as heal and skin them over ; to heal and skin a wound over.

CI'CELY, s. sort of herb, called also fool's parsley, or lesser hemlock.

CICHORA'CEOUS, (sikoráceous) a [from cichŏrēum, succory, Lat.] having the qualities of succory.

CICU'TA, s. [Lat.] hemlock, a vegetable poison divided into major and minor ; likewise a poisonous juice or liquor expressed from the cicuta aquatica, with which the Athenians used to put their state criminals to death.

CI'DER, s. [cidre, Fr.] a brisk cool liquor, prepared from the juice of apples, made vinous by fermentation.

CI'DERKIN, s. the liquor made of the murk, or gross matter of the apples, after the cider is pressed out, by the addition of boiling water, which is suffered to infuse for 48 hours.

CI'DEVANT, ad. [Fr.] heretofore, before, formerly. A word lately introduced into the English.

CI'ELING, (seéling) See CEILING.

CI'LIA, s. [Lat.] in anatomy, the pallisadoes of stiff hairs wherewith the eyes are guarded.

CI'LIARY, a. [from cilium, the hair of the eyelids, Lat.] in anatomy, belonging to the eyelids.

CILI'CIOUS, a. [from cilicium, hair cloth, Lat.] made of hair.

CI'METER, s. [cimitarra, Span.] a sort of sword, used by the Turks, short, heavy, flat, with but one edge, and curved towards the point. Sometimes spelt scymeter, or scimetar.

CIMME'RIAN, a. [from cimmerii, Lat.] dark, dismal, gloomy, a term derived from the Scythians, whose country was so full of woods, and covered with continual clouds, that but very little sun was seen among them.

CI'NCTURE, s. [from cingo, to gird, Lat.] a girdle or clothing worn round the body. Figuratively, an inclosure.

CI'NDER, s. [cendre, Fr.] coals burnt till most of their sulphur is consumed, reduced to a porous cake, and quenched before they turn to ashes ; a red-hot coal that has ceased to flame.

CINERA'TION, s. [from cineres, ashes, Lat.] in chemistry, the act of reducing a body to ashes.

CINERI'TIOUS, (sineríshious) a. [cinericius, Lat.] having the form of, or resembling ashes.

CI'NGLE s. [from cingo, to gird, Lat.] a girth for a horse.

CI'NNABAR, s. [cinnabaris, Lat.] is either native or factitious. The native cinnabar is an ore of quicksilver, moderately compact, heavy, and of an elegant, striated, red colour. In this ore the quicksilver is blended with sulphur, which is commonly no more than one part in six, in proportion to the mercury. It is found lodged in a bluish indurated clay, though sometimes in a greenish talcy stone. Factitious cinnabar is a mixture of mercury and sulphur sublimated, and thus reduced to a fine red glebe. The best is of a high colour, and full of fibres like needles.

CI'NNAMON, s. [cinnamomum, Lat.] the bark of an aromatic tree resembling the camphire, or olive-tree, and growing in the island of Ceylon. Cinnamon water, is made by distilling the bark, first infused in barley-water, in spirit of wine, or white wine.

CINQUE, (sink) s. [Fr.] in gaming, a five on dice, &c.

CI'NQUEFOIL, (sinkfoil) s. [cinque feuille, Fr.] a kind of five-leaved clover.

CI'NQUE-PORTS, [Fr.] five havens that lie on the east part of England towards France, thus called by way of eminence, on account of their superior importance, as having been thought, by our kings, to merit a particular regard for their preservation against invasions. They have a particular policy, and are governed by a keeper, with the title of lord-warden of the Cinque-ports, and send representatives to parliament, who are called barons of the Cinque-ports. They are Hastings, Dover, Hithe, Romney, and Sandwich, to which Winchelsea and Rye have since been added.

CI'ON, s. [sion, or scion, Fr.] in botany, a young twig, shoot, or sprout of a tree ; a shoot engrafted or inserted on a stock.

CI'PHER, (sifer) s. [zifra, Ital.] an arithmetical character or number marked thus (0) ; though of no value itself, in integers it increases the value of figures, when set on the right hand, and decreases them in the same proportion, when set before them, in decimal fractions ; a collection or assemblage of letters consisting of the initials of a person's name, interwoven together, and engraved on plate, or painted, instead of escutcheons, on coaches ; certain characters made use of by persons to conceal the subject they write about from others ; the key to explain any private characters. A mere cipher, a person of no importance or interest.

To CI'PHER, (sifer) v. n. to perform the operations o arithmetic.

CIRCA'SSIA, one of the seven countries which lie between the Black Sea and the Caspian, bounded on the N. by the river Don, and on the W. by part of the Black Sea and the sea of Asoph. They are a nation of mountaineers, who subsist by raising cattle, and fix themselves on the banks of rivers for the sake of pasturage and water. The Circassians are divided into three classes; the princes, the nobles, called usdens, and the vassals, or people. They have never had any written laws, but are governed by a collection of ancient usnages. They have few manefactures ; their agriculture hardly produces sufficient for their own subsistence. Sheep and horses form a principal part of their commerce, and slaves, which they take in their predatory excursions. Their food consists of a little meat paste, made of millet, and beer made of the same grain fermented. They have both the Bible and the Koran ; but, not having letters of their own, those who write their language make use of Arabic characters. This nation has been, of late years, gradually reduced under the dominion of Russia, to which it is now almost wholly subject, and is included in the government of Caucasus.

CIRCLE, s. [circulus, Lat.] in geometry, a plane figure, comprehended under one line only, to which all lines drawn from a point in the middle are equal. Figuratively, a curve line, which, being continued, ends in the point from whence it begun, having all its parts equidistant from a point in the middle called the centre; but this is properly the periphery or circumference of a circle. A Great Circle of the sphere is that whose plane passeth through the centre thereof, and whose centre is the same with that of the sphere, dividing the globe into two equal parts. A Lesser Circle is that which divides the globe into two unequal parts, as the tropics, parallels of latitude, &c. A Primitive Circle is that described on the plane of the projection. A Right Circle is that whose plane stands at right angles with the plane of the projection, and is a diameter of the primitive. An Oblique Circle is that whose plane inclines to the plane of the projection, or makes oblique angles therewith. Parallel Circles are those lesser circles of the sphere, whose planes are parallel to the planes of any great circles thereof; thus the circles of latitude on the globe are called the parallels of latitude, because parallel to the plane of the equator. The circumference or extremities of any round body; an assembly of people forming a ring; a company; a series of things following one another alternately. Circles of the Empire, were such as had a right to be present at the diets; they were ten in number, viz. Austria, Burgundy, the Lower Rhine, Bavaria, Upper Saxony, Franconia, Suabia, Upper Rhine, Westphalia, and the Lower Saxony. N. B. The late conquests of the French have completely overturned the ancient establishment of the Germanic Circles. See GERMANY.

To CIRCLE v. a. to move round any thing; to surround, encompass, or inclose; to confine or keep together.

CIRCLED, part. having the form of a circle.

CIRCLET, s. [diminutive of circle] a circle; an orb.

CIRCLING, a. surrounding or encompassing like a circle.

CIRCUIT, (sirkit) s. [circuitus, from circumeo, to go round, Lat.] the moving round any thing; the motion or revolution of a planet round its orbit; a space inclosed within a circle; the circumference of any thing; the space which any thing measures in going round it; a ring, a crown, or that which encircles any thing. Also the progress which the judges take twice every year through the several counties of England and Wales, to hold courts, and administer justice. Hence England is divided into six circuits, viz. the Home circuit, Norfolk, Midland, Oxford, Western, and Northern, circuit.

To CIRCUIT, v. n. to move round, or in a circle.

CIRCUITEER, or CIRCUITER, s. one that travels in a circuit; that which moves in an orbit.

CIRCUITION, s. [from circumeo, to go round, Lat.] the act of going round about. Figuratively, circumlocution; comprehension of argument.

CIRCULAR, a. [circularis, Lat.] round, in the form of a circle. Figuratively, succession, in which that which proceeds first returns again. Circular letter, a letter addressed to several persons, who have the same interest in some common affair. Circular lines, such straight lines as are divided by the divisions made in the arch of a circle. Circular sailing, that which is performed in the arch of a great circle.

CIRCULARLY, ad. in the form of a circle; with a circular motion.

To CIRCULATE, v. n. [from circulus, a circle, Lat.] to move in a circle; to be in use, so as to be constantly changing its owner; to be dispersed. Actively, to put about.

CIRCULATION, s. the act of moving in a circle; a motion whereby a body returns in a curved line to the point from which it set out; a series or succession, in which things preserve the same order, and return to the same state. The circulation of the blood was discovered in England, in 1728, by Harvey. It is, in a living animal, the natural and continual motion of the blood, from the heart through the arteries, from whence it is brought back again to the heart by the veins, and is the principle on which life depends; for when this circular motion of the blood ceases, death immediately follows. Circulation of the sap in vegetables, a natural motion of the nutricious juice of plants, from the roots to the extreme parts, and back again to the root. In chemistry, it is an operation whereby the same vapour, raised by fire, falls back, by which means it is distilled several times, and reduced to its most subtile parts.

CIRCULATORY, s. in chemistry, a glass vessel, consisting of two parts, luted on each other, wherein the finest parts mount to the top, and finding no passage fall down again.

CIRCUMA'MBIENCY, s. [from circum, about, and ambio, to go round, Lat.] the act of encompassing or surrounding CIRCUMA'MBIENT, part. [circumambiens, Lat.] compassing a thing round; encircling; inclosing; surrounding; encompassing.

To CIRCUMA'MBULE, v. n. [from circum, around, and ambulo, to walk, Lat.] to walk round about.

To CIRCUMCISE, (sirkumsize) v. a. [from circum, around, and caedo, to cut Lat.] to cut off the prepuse or foreskin.

CIRCUMCISION, s. a rite or ceremony, as well of the Pagan as Jewish religion. The term is taken from the Latin circumsedere, to cut round, because the act of circumcision consists in cutting off, from male infants, the prepuse, or skin, which covers the glans of the penis. The time for performing this rite, among the Jews, was the eighth day; that is full six days after the child was born, and the instrument was generally a knife of stone.

CIRCUMFERENCE, s. [from circum, around, and fero, to carry, Lat.] the periphery of a circle; the line including and surrounding any thing; the space inclosed in a circle; the extremities of a round body. Figuratively, any thing of a round form.

To CIRCUMFERENCE, v. a. to include in a circle; to circumscribe, or confine.

CIRCUMFERENTOR, s. [from circumfero, to carry round, Lat.] an instrument used by surveyors in taking angles, consisting of a brass index with sights, and a compass, and mounted on a stand with a ball and socket.

CIRCUMFLEX, s. [from circumflecto, to bend about, Lat. alluding to the shape of the accent] an accent marked (^) used to regulate the pronunciation, and requires an undulation between the grave and the acute.

CIRCUMFLUENCE, s. [from circumfluo, to flow round, Lat.] an inclosure made by water flowing round any thing.

CIRCUMFLUENT, part. [from circumfluo, to flow round, Lat.] flowing round any thing, or inclosing any thing with water.

CIRCUMFLUOUS, a. [from circumfluo, to flow round, Lat.] environing with water.

To CIRCUMFUSE, (circumfuze) v. a. [from circumfundo, to pour round, Lat.] to pour round; to diffuse, or spread every way.

CIRCUMFUSILE, a. [from circumfundo, to pour round, Lat.] that may be poured, diffused, or spread round any thing.

CIRCUMFUSION, s. [from circumfundo, to pour round, Lat.] the act of spreading round.

To CIRCUMGYRATE, v. a. [from circum, around, and gyro, to turn, Lat.] to roll round.

CIRCUMJA'CENT, part. [from circum, around, and jaceo, to lie, Lat.] lying round any thing; bordering on any side; contiguous.

CIRCUMLOCUTION, s. [from circum, around, and loquor, to speak, Lat.] the expressing a sentiment in a number of words; a paraphrasis; an indirect way of expressing a person's sentiments.

CIRCUMMU'RED, a. [from circum, around, and murus, a wall, Lat.] encompassed or surrounding with a wall.

CIRCUMNA'VIGABLE, a. [circumnavigabilis, Lat.] that may be sailed round.

To CIRCUMNA'VIGATE, v. n. [from circum, around, and navigo, to sail, Lat.] to sail round.

CIRCUMNAVIGA'TION, s. [from circum, around, and navigo, to sail, Lat.] the sailing round any tract of land.

CIRCUMNA'VIGATOR, s. one that sails round.

CIRCUMPO'LAR, a. [from circum, around, and polus, the pole, Lat.] in astronomy, applied to such stars near the north pole, which move round it without setting, as viewed from any particular place north of the equator; and vice versâ.

CIRCUMPOSITION, s. [circum, around, and positio, place, Lat.] the act of setting or placing any thing in a ring or circle.

CIRCUMROTA'TION, s. [from circum, around, and roto, to whirl, Lat.] the act of whirling a thing round with a motion like that of a wheel; the state of a thing whirled round.

To CIRCUMSCRI'BE, v. a. [from circum, around, and scribo, to write, Lat.] to inclose in certain lines or limits.

CIRCUMSCRIPTION, s. [from circumscribo, to circumscribe, Lat.] the determination to a particular figure; limitation, restraint, confinement, boundary.

CIRCUMSCRIPTIVE, a. that determines the shape or figure of a body.

CIRCUMSPE'CT, a. [from circum, around, and spicio, to look, Lat.] cautious; a person attentive to the effects of his actions, and who weighs the dangers and difficulties with which they are attended.

CIRCUMSPE'CTION, or CIRCUMSPE'CTNESS, s. looking round about one. A cautious or wary conduct, wherein a person weighs the dangers and difficulties with which his actions are attended, and endeavours to guard against them. SYNON. To be well with the world requires circumspection, when we are speaking before those with whom we are not acquainted; consideration for people of rank and quality; and regard toward those with whom we are interested.

CIRCUMSPE'CTIVE, a. looking round about; taking all the measures which may prevent a disappointment, or secure a person from any maliciousness of an enemy.

CIRCUMSPE'CTLY, ad. in a cautious, discreet, and prudent manner; guarding against accidents, and precluding any disappointments.

CIRCUMSTANCE, s. [circonstance, Fr.] the particular incident belonging to any action, which determines it to be either good or bad, or a fact probable or improbable; an event. Used in the plural for the state or condition of a person; bad circumstances, signifying distress or poverty, and good circumstances, riches or affluence.

To CIRCUMSTANCE, v. n. to be placed in a particular light; to be attended with peculiar incidents.

CIRCUMSTANT, part. [from circum, around, and sto, to stand, Lat.] standing round, surrounding.

CIRCUMSTA'NTIAL, (sirkumstánshial) a. [from circum, around, and sto, to stand, Lat.] accidental, opposite to essential. Minute; particular, wherein all the different relations and attendant reasons of an action are enumerated.

CIRCUMSTANTIA'LITY, (sirkumstanshiâlity) s. the state of a thing, with all the peculiarities attending it.

CIRCUMSTA'NTIALLY, ad. according to circumstance; minutely, exactly.

To CIRCUMSTA'NTIATE, (sirkumstántiate) v. a. to place a thing or action in a particular situation or relation, with respect to the accidents which attend or determine its quality.

To CIRCUMVA'LLATE, v. a. [from circum, around, and vallo, to intrench, Lat.] to inclose, or surround with trenches and fortifications.

CIRCUMVALLA'TION, s. the art of entrenching or fortifying a camp or place with works. In fortification, a line or trench with a parapet thrown up by the besiegers, encompassing all their camp, to defend it against any force that may attempt to relieve the place.

To CIRCUMVE'NT, v. a. [from circum, around, and venio, to come, Lat.] to over-reach a person by superior craft; to deceive or impose upon by specious pretences, and secret artifices.

CIRCUMVE'NTION, s. [circumventio, Lat.] the imposing upon or over-reaching a person by secret artifices and subtlety.

To CIRCUMVE'ST, v. a. [from circum, around, and vestio, to clothe, Lat.] to clothe all over with a garment; to clothe, or surround with a garment.

To CIRCUMVO'LVE, v. a. [from circum, around, and volvo, to roll, Lat.] to roll round; to roll any body in any orbit or circle.

CIRCUMVOLU'TION, s. [from circumvolutus, Lat.] the act of rolling round; the state of being round; the thing rolled round.

CIRCUS, s. [Lat.] in antiquity, a spacious building of a round or oval figure, erected to exhibit shows and games to the people. The Roman Circus was a large, oblong edifice, arched at one end, encompassed with porticoes, and furnished with two rows of seats, places ascending over each other. In the middle was a kind of foot-bank, or eminence, with obelisks, statues, and posts, at each end. Those who have measured the circus say, it was 2187 feet long, and 960 broad, and would contain 150,000 people; others 260,000, or 300,000, and was the greatest building in Rome.

CIRENCESTER, or CICESTER, a large and populous town in Gloucestershire, (supposed to have been built by Cissa, a Saxon prince,) and formerly surrounded by walls, of which some vestiges are yet visible. King Canute, the Dane, held a general council here, in 1029. It has manufactures of cutlery ware, carpeting, wool-combing, woolstapling, and yarn making, and a communication with Stroudwater, from which it derives great advantage. It is seated on the river Churn, in the road from Oxford to Bath, 18 miles S. E. of Gloucester, and 89 W. of London. Markets on Monday and Friday.

CIRRUS, s. in natural history, a sort of beard which grows on the under jaw of certain fishes.

CIST, s. [cista, Lat.] a case; a covering. In medicine, the coat or inclosure of a tumor.

CISTED, a. inclosed in a bag or membrane.

CISTERCIANS, in church history, a religious order founded in the eleventh century, by St. Robert, a Benedictine. They became so powerful, that they governed almost all Europe, both in spirituals and temporals. Cardinal de Vitri, describing their observances, says, they neither wore skins nor shirts, nor ever ate flesh, except in sickness; and abstained from fish, eggs, milk, and cheese; they lay upon straw beds, in their tunics and cowls; they rose at midnight to prayer; they spent the day in labour, reading, and prayer; and in all their exercises observed a continual silence. The habit of their order is a white robe in the nature of a cassock, with a black scapulary and hood, and girt with a woollen girdle. The nuns wear a white tunic, and a black scapulary and girdle.

CISTERN, s. [cisterna, Lat.] a receptacle for water or rain, placed in yards or kitchens for family use; a large reservoir of water, or inclosed fountain.

CISTUS, s. in botany, a genus of plants, of which species five are natives of England, viz. the hoary, annual, narrow leaved, sunflower, and dwarf cistus. All these species flower in June or July.

CIT, s. [a contraction of citizen] one who lives in the city, opposed to one at the court; a word of contempt.

CITADEL, s. [citadelle, Fr.] a fort, or place fortified with four, five, or six bastions, built sometimes in the most eminent part of a city, and sometimes only near a city, in order to defend the city against enemies, and to keep the inhabitants in their obedience.

CITAL, s. a reproof, or impeachment; a summons, or a call to appear in a court.

CITATION, s. [citatio, Lat.] in law, a summons to appear before any ecclesiastical judge, on some cause relating to the church; quoting or mentioning an author's name; the passage quoted from an author; a mention, detail, enumeration.

CITATORY, a. having the power of a summons, or used as a summons.

To CITE, v. a. [cito, Lat.] to summons or call a person to appear in a court of justice; to enjoin, or call on a person with authority; to quote.

CITER, s. one who summons a person to appear in a court; one who quotes a passage from an author.

CITESS, s. a city woman.

CITHARA, or CITHERN, s. [cithara, Lat.] a kind of harp, a musical instrument used by the ancients, the precise form or structure of which is not known: at first it had only three strings, but the number was increased afterwards to 8, 9, and lastly to 24; it was played upon with a plectrum or quill, like the lyre.

CITIZEN, s. [citayen, Fr.] a person who is free of a city, one who carries on a trade in a city, opposed to a gentleman or soldier. The term citizen became general among the French people after the establishment of the Republic. It was first used instead of Monsieur, and every other honorary title.

CITRATES, s. in chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with the citric acid.

CITRIC, a. in chemistry, belonging to lemons and other similar fruits.

CITRINE, a. [from citrus, a citron, Lat.] lemon-coloured; of a dark yellow.

CITRINE, s. [citrinus, Lat.] a species of crystal of an extremely beautiful yellow. It is generally clear, fine, and free from flaws; it is very plentiful in the West Indies, oftentimes set in rings by our jewellers, and may be mistaken for a topaz.

CITRON, s. [citrus, Lat.] a fruit which comes from a hot country, and is in smell, taste, and shape, somewhat like a lemon. Citron-water, or Aqua-vitæ, is distilled with the rind of citrons.

CITY, s. [cité, Fr.] a large town inclosed with a wall. In law, a town corporate, that hath a bishop and a cathedral church; the inhabitants of a city.

CITY, a. living in a city; like a citizen; with vain parade or ostentatious affluence.

CIVET, s. [civette, Fr.] in natural history, an animal of the weazel kind, which inhabits several parts of Africa and India, and produces the drug called civet.

CIVIC, a. [from civis, a citizen, Lat.] that relates to civil matters, opposed to military. A civic crown, among the Romans, was made of oaken leaves, and given to those that had saved the life of a citizen.

CIVIL, a. [civilis, from civis, a citizen, Lat.] that belongs to a city, or the government thereof; polished; well regulated. Civil war is that which citizens or people of the same nation wage with one another. Civil death is that which is inflicted by the laws, in opposition to natural. Joined with power or magistrate, that which is exercised on the principles of government, opposite to military. Figuratively, civilized; humane; well-bred; complaisant; gentle; beautifully applied to inanimate things. Civil law is that which is opposed to the common, and implies the Roman law, contained in the institutes, digests, and code. Civil year, that which is established by law in any country, and is so called to distinguish it from the natural year, which is determined by the revolution of the heavenly bodies.

CIVILIAN, s. [from civilis, Lat.] one who professes and makes the civil law his peculiar study.

CIVILIZATION, s. a law which renders a criminal process civil, by turning an information into an inquest, &c.

CIVILITY, s. politeness; a polite address attended with humane and benevolent actions; a kindness bestowed in a polite manner.

To CIVILIZE, v. a. to instruct in such sciences as tend to render men humane.

CIVILIZER, s. one that reforms the savage manners of barbarians, and renders them both humane and polite.

CIVILLY, ad. in a manner agreeable to the principles of government, and the rules of society; in a kind, condescending, good-natured, and genteel manner.

CIVITA VECCHIA, a sea port in the Campagna di Roma. It is 35 miles N. W. of Rome.

CIVITA VECCHIA, or MELITA, a town in Malta, situated on a hill, in the centre of the island, and strongly fortified. It is the see of a bishop. From this town may be seen the whole island, and sometimes the coasts of Africa and Sicily.

CIZE, s. [generally written size; from incisa, Lat.] the dimensions of any thing with respect to magnitude or bulk.

CLACK, s. [klack, Belg.] any thing which makes a continued and lasting noise, applied to that of a mill. Figuratively, incessant and importunate tattle; the tongue.

To CLACK, v. n. [klatschen, Teut.] to make a noise like that which is heard in a mill when going; to let the tongue run, or to talk much.

CLACKMANNAN, a town of Scotland, in Clackmannanshire, seated on the N. shore of the river Forth, 25 miles N. W. of Edinburgh. Here Robert de Bruce, king of Scotland, had a palace, and his great sword and helmet are still preserved.

CLACKMANNAN, a small county of Scotland, bounded on the E. by Fifeshire, on the N. and W. by Perthshire, and on the S. by Stirlingshire. It is but 8 miles in length, and 5 in breadth. It produces good corn and pastures, and plenty of coals and salt. This shire, together with Kinross, sends one member to parliament.

CLAD, part. preter. from CLOTHE.

To CLAIM, v. a. [clamer, Fr.] to demand as a right or due; to require authoritatively.

CLAIM, s. a demand, or right of demanding a thing as due.

CLAIMABLE, a. that may be demanded as due, or as belonging to a person.

CLAIMANT, s. he that pretends a right to any thing in the possession of another, and demands it as his property.

CLAIMER, s. one who demands a thing as his property.

CLAIR-OBSCURE, s. See CLARE-OBSCURE.

To CLAMBER, v. n. [perhaps corrupted from climb] to ascend or go up a steep place with difficulty, so as to be forced to use both knees and hands.

To CLAMM, v. a. [clæmian, Sax.] to clog with any glewish or viscous matter.

CLAMMINESS, s. the quality by which any substance sticks to any thing that touches it; viscidity; ropiness.

CLAMMY, a. viscous, ropy, glutinous, or adhering to any thing which touches it.

CLAMOROUS, a. making a noise with the voice; speaking loud and turbulent.

CLAMOUR, s. [clamor, Lat.] a noise, or outery; an exaltation of the voice in anger. Applied with elegance to inanimate things.

To CLAMOUR, v. n. to make a noise; or speak in a loud, passionate, and turbulent manner.

CLAMP, s. [klampe, Belg.] a piece of wood added to another to strengthen it, and prevent its bursting; a little piece of wood in the form of a wheel, used in a mortise, instead of a pulley; a quantity or collection of bricks. Clamp-nails are such as are used to fasten on clamps in the building or repairing of ships.

To CLAMP, v. a. in joining, to fit a board with the grain to another piece across the grain; this is of use to prevent warping.

CLAN, s. a family, race, or tribe; a body of persons.

CLANCULAR, a. [clancularius, from clam, secretly, Lat.] secret, clandestine.

CLANDESTINE, a. [clandestinus, Lat.] underhand; secret; in order to evade any law; private; always used in a bad sense.

CLANDESTINELY, ad. in a secret or private manner, including some illegal or bad practice.

To CLANG, v. n. [clango, Lat.] to make a loud shrill noise with a brazen sound like that of a trumpet; or to make a noise like that of armour when struck with a solid body, or like swords when beat together. Actively, to strike together, so as to make a noise.

CLA'NGOUR, s. [clangor, Lat.] a loud, shrill sound.

CLA'NGOUS, a. making a loud and shrill noise.

CLANK, s. a loud, shrill, or harsh noise, made by hard bodies when clashed together.

To CLAP, v. a. [clappan, Sax.] to strike together with a quick motion, so as to make a noise; to put one thing upon another with a hasty, sudden, and unexpected motion; to perform any action in a quick and unexpected manner; to applaud or praise a person by striking the hands together to shut up with a quick or sudden motion. To infect with a venereal poison. To clap up implies to complete suddenly, without much precaution. Neuterly, to move nimbly with a noise; to enter with alacrity upon any thing.

CLAP, s. a loud noise made by the striking of two solid bodies together, or by explosion, when applied to thunder: applause or approbation, testified by striking the hands together. In medicine, a venereal infection.

CLA'PPER, s. one who strikes his hands together by way of applause; the tongue, or piece of iron, which hangs in the inside of a bell, and makes it sound; a piece of wood in a mill for shaking the hopper. Figuratively, the tongue of a person that is very talkative; a word of reproach.

To CLA'PPERCLA'W, v. a. to scold.

CLARE, a county of Munster, in Ireland, 47 miles long, and 32 broad, bounded on the W. by the Atlantic; on the N. by Galway; and on the E. and S. by the Shannon, which separates it from Tipperary, Limerick, and Kerry. It contains 2 market towns, 79 parishes, and about 96,000 inhabitants; and breeds more horses than any other county in Ireland, as also a great number of cattle and sheep. The town of Clare, called also Ennis, though distinct from Ennis, which is 2 miles distant, is 17 miles N. W. of Limerick, and 112 S. W. of Dublin.

CLARE, a town of Suffolk, with a market on Monday. It is seated on a creek of the river Stour; the ruins of a castle, and a collegiate church, are still visible. They have a manufacture of baize. In this town is a very large church, and several dissenting meeting-houses. It consists of about 500 houses, which are mostly of clay, white-washed, and the streets pretty wide, but not paved. It is 15 miles S. of Bury, and 56 N. E. of London.

CLARENCE'UX, or CLARENCI'EUX, (clarونsu) [Fr.] the second king of arms, so called from the duke of Clarence, son of Edward III. who first bore this office. He marshals and disposes of the funerals of all the lower nobility on the south side of the Trent, and is therefore called Surroy, i. e. South-roy, or South-king.

CLARE-OBSCURE, s. [from clarus, bright and obscurus, dark, Lat.] in painting, the lights and shades in a picture; the art of distributing the lights and shades in a piece to the greatest advantage.

CLA'RET, s. [clairet, Fr.] French wine, of a clear, pale, red colour.

CLA'RICORD, or CLA'RICHORD, s. [from clarus, clear, and chorda, a chord, Lat.] a musical instrument in form of a spinnet. It has 49 or 50 stops, and 70 strings, which bear on five bridges, the first whereof is the highest, the rest diminishing in proportion. Some of the strings are in unison, their number being greater than that of the stops. There are several little mortises for passing the jacks, armed with brass hooks, which stop and raise the chords, instead of the chords used in virginals and spinnets. The chords are covered with pieces of cloth, which render the sound sweeter, and deaden it so, that it cannot be heard at any considerable distance; and therefore is in particular use among the nuns, who are unwilling to disturb the silence of the dormitory.

CLARIFICA'TION, s. [from clarus, clear, and fio, to be made, Lat.] the clearing any thing from impurities; the fining liquors.

To CLA'RIFY, v. a. [clarifier, Fr.] to fine or make any liquor clear. Neuterly, to clear up; to brighten.

CLA'RION, s. [clarin, Span.] a trumpet with a narrower tube and shriller sound than the common sort.

CLA'RITY, s. [clarté, Fr.] brightness, splendor.

CLARK, s. See CLERK.

CLA'RY, s. in botany, a genus of plants, called by Linnæus salvia. There are two British species, viz. the meadow and wild; the former with oblong, heart-shaped, scolloped leaves, and bluish purple blossoms, is found in Essex, and flowers in July; the latter with indented, serrated, smoothish leaves, and blue blossoms, is common in meadows and pastures, flowering from May to September.

To CLASH, v. n. [klatsen, Belg.] to make a noise, applied to two bodies struck together; to act with opposite views; to contradict, oppose, or disagree. Actively, to strike one thing against another, so as to produce a noise.

CLASH, s. a noise made by the striking two bodies together; opposition of sentiments, opinions, or interests.

CLASHING, s. See CLASH.

CLASP, s. [clespe, Belg.] a thin piece of metal curved at the extremities, which enters into a hole made in another place, and is used to fasten two things together, such as the two covers of a book, or the two foreparts of a garment, &c. Figuratively, an embrace, wherein the arms are thrown round the body of a person.

To CLASP, v. a. to shut or fasten by a clasp; to hold within the hands; to make the fingers meet round the circumference of any thing held in the hand; to enclose.

CLA'SP-KNIFE, s. a knife which is furnished with a spring, and folds into the handle.

CLASS, s. [classis, Lat.] a collection of things ranged according to their different natures and value; a rank or order. In schools, a number of boys placed according to their attainments, and the authors they read.

To CLASS, v. a. to range according to some stated method of distribution; to range according to different ranks.

CLA'SSIC, or CLA'SSICAL, a. [from classis, a class, Lat.] a term chiefly applied to authors who are read in the classes at schools. Virgil, Cicero, Homer, and all the other Greek and Latin writers who flourished at a time when their language subsisted in tolerable purity, are included under the term classical.

CLA'SSIC, s. an author of the first rank for abilities, and esteemed a standard for style, &c.

To CLA'TTER, v. a. [clatrunge, Sax.] to make a noise by being often struck together, applied to sonorous or metalline bodies, to make a noise by talking aloud, fast, and little to the purpose, a low word.

CLA'TTER, s. a rattling noise made by the frequent striking of hard bodies together: a confused and tumultuous noise.

CLA'VATED, a. [clavatus, Lat.] knobbed; or abounding with knobs.

CLAVE, the preter. of CLEAVE.

CLA'VELLATED, part. [clavellatus, low Lat.] in chemistry, made with burnt tartar.

CLA'VER, s. See CLOVER.

CLA'VICLE, s. [from clavicula, a little key, Lat. as being the keys of the throat] in anatomy, the collar-bone, of which there are two, situated between the scapula and sternum, each of them resembling an Italic S, but in women more straight than in men.

CLAUSE, (klauze) s. [clausulá, from claudo, to shut, Lat.] a sentence; a single article; so much of a sentence as will make sense.

CLA'USENBURG, a city of Transylvania, situated on the river Lamos; where the states assemble. On one of the gates is an inscription in honour of the emperor Trajan.

CLAU'STRAL, a. [from claustrum, an inclosure, Lat.] belonging to a cloister, or religious house.

CLAU'SURE, s. [clausura, from claudo, to shut, Lat.] confinement; the state of a person shut up or confined in a monastery.

CLAW, s. [clawan, Sax.] the foot of a bird or beast, armed with a sharp-pointed horny substance.

To CLAW, v. a. [clawan, Sax.] to scratch or tear with the nails.

CLAWED, part. furnished or armed with claws.

CLAY, s. [clai, Brit.] a compact, weighty, stiff, viscid, and ductile earth, when moist; smooth to the touch, easily dissolved in water, and when mixed with it, not quickly subsiding. Figuratively, the earth, or substance out of which our bodies are by scripture said to be produced.

CLAY, a town of Norfolk, with a small harbour, and large salt-works in the neighbourhood, from whence salt is sent all over the country, and sometimes exported to Holland, the Baltic, &c. It is seated on an arm of the sea, between two rivers, 8 miles from Walsingham, and 20 N. W. of Norwich. Market on Saturday.

To CLAY, v. a. to cover with clay. In agriculture, to manure with clay.

CLAY-COLD, a. as cold as clay. Figuratively, lifeless.

CLAYES, s. [claye, Fr.] in fortifications, wattles made with stakes interwoven with osiers, to cover lodgments.

CLAYEY, a. consisting of, or abounding in clay.

CLAYISH, a. of the nature of clay; like clay.

CLAY-MARL, s. a whitish, smooth, chalky earth, resembling clay, but somewhat more fat, and sometimes mixed with chalk-stones.

CLAY-PIT, s. a pit where clay is dug.

CLEAN, (kleen) a. [clæne, Sax.] free from dirt, or soil. Figuratively, free from any moral stain, wickedness, or impurity. Adverbially used, it implies entirely, perfectly, fully, or completely.

To CLEAN, v. a. to free from dirt or filth.

CLE'ANLY, a. free from dirt or filth, free from moral impurity; innocent; chaste.

CLE'ANLY, ad. in a clean, neat manner, free from dirt or filth.

CLE'ANNESS, or CLE'ANLINESS, s. neatness; free from dirt or filth; elegance; exactness; freedom from any moral impurity.

To CLEANSE, (klenze) v. a. [clænsian, Sax.] to free from dirt or filth by washing or rubbing; to free from bad humours by purges, in medicine. To free from matter of funguses, applied to wounds.

CLE'ANSER, (klénzer) s. [clænsere, Sax.] in medicine, that which removes any humours, or expels any noxious fluid from the body; a detergent.

CLEAR, (kleer) a. [clarus, Lat.] bright, transparent, pellucid, transpicuous; free from blame, innocent, without blemish; evident, indisputable, undeniable; free from distress, prosecution, or imputed guilt; vacant, out of debt, unentangled; out of danger.

To CLEAR, v. a. to brighten; to vindicate one's character; to prove a man's innocence; to free from obscurity; to discharge a debt; to clarify, or clear liquors; to gain without any deduction for loss or charges. To clear a ship, is to obtain leave for sailing, or selling the cargo, by paying the customs.

CLE'ARANCE, s. a certificate that the ship has been cleared by the custom-house, by paying the duties.

CLEAR, CAPE, a promontory on a little island, on the S. coast of Ireland. Lat. 51. 18. N. lon. 9. 23. W. There is also another island, called Cape Clear island, at a small distance from Baltimore Haven; they are both inhabited.

CLE'ARER, s. the person or thing that removes any filth or obstruction; that which communicates light to the mind, or removes any difficulty or prejudices which may obscure the judgment.

CLE'ARLY, ad. free from darkness, obscurity, ambiguity; plainly; without any undue influence or prejudice. Without deduction, or diminition, applied to gains; without evasion, or reserve.

CLE'ARNESS, s. transparency, which renders a thing easy to be seen through, applied to glass. Freedom from dregs, or filth, applied to liquors. Distinctness, plainness, freedom from obscurity and ambiguity, applied to ideas.

CLEAR-SI'GHTED, a. able to discern and distinguish things; judicious; seeing into the consequences of things.

To CLE'ARSTARCH, v. a. to starch in such a manner, that linen may appear transparent, and clearer than in common washing.

To CLEAVE, (kleeve) v. n preter. I clove, part cloven; [cleofan, Sax.] to stick; to adhere to; to unite one's self to a person.

To CLEAVE, (kleeve) v. a. preter. I clave, clove, or cleft, particip. cloven, or cleft; [cleofan, Sax.] to divide a thing with a chopper and with violence; to divide by a swift or rapid motion. To divide or separate: to part asunder.

CLE'AVER, (kleéver) s. a large flat instrument made of metal, with a handle, of a long square form, used by butchers to separate the joints of meat from their carcases, one who chops any thing. In botany, a weed, named likewise cliver.

CLE'BURY, called also NORTH CLEBURY, and CLEBURY MORTIMER, a town in Shropshire, situated on the N. side of the river Tend, 28 miles S. E. of Shrewsbury. Market on Thursday.

CLEES, s. the two parts of the foot of a cloven-footed beast. Probably corrupted from claws.

CLEF, s. [clef, Fr.] in music, a mark placed at the beginning of the lines of a piece of music, which determin s the name of each line, according to the scale; the tone or key in which it is to begin, and all the unisons in a piece.

CLEFT, participle passive, from CLEAVE.

CLEFT, s. a space made by the separation of the parts of any body; a crack. In farriery, a disease in horses, which appears on the hough of the pasterns.

To CLE'FTGRAFT, v. a. in gardening, to engraft by cleaving the stock of a tree, and inserting a branch into it.

CLE'MENCY, s. [clementia, Lat.] unwillingness to punish, and tenderness in inflicting punishment.

CLE'MENT, s. [clemens, Lat.] unwilling to punish, and tender in executing or limiting punishment.

To CLEPE, v. a. [cleapan, Sax.] to call. Obsolete.

CLEPSYDRA, s. [from klepto, to hide, and udor, water, Gr.] a water-clock, or an instrument to measure time by the falling of a certain quantity of water, used by the ancients before the invention of clocks and hour-glasses, both by sea and land. There were many kinds of clepsydræ among the ancients, but had all of them this in common, that the water ran generally through a narrow passage, from one vessel into another, and in the lower was a piece of cork, which, as the vessel filled, rose up by degrees, and shewed the hour.

CLE'RGY, s. [clergè, Fr.] a body of men set apart by due ordination for the service of God, and the Christian church, and originally consisting of bishops, priests, and deacons; but in the third century many inferior orders were appointed, such as subdeacons, acolythists, readers, &c. The clergy of the church of Rome are divided into regular and secular. The regular clergy consists of those monks or religions who have taken upon them holy orders of the priesthood in their respective monasteries. The secular clergy are those who are not of any religious order, and have the care and direction of parishes. The protestant clergy are all secular. The privileges of the English clergy, by the ancient statutes, are very considerable; their goods are to pay no toll in fairs or markets; they are exempt from all offices but their own; from the king's carriages, posts, &c.; from appearing at sheriffs' tourns, frank pledges, &c.; and are not to be fined or amerced according to their spiritual, but their temporal means. A clergyman, acknowledging a statute, is not to be imprisoned. If he be convicted of a crime for which the benefit of clergy is allowed, he shall not be burnt in the hand; and he shall have the benefit of clergy in infinitum, which no layman can have more than once. The revenues of the clergy were anciently very considerable; but since the reformation are very small, especially those of the inferior clergy. Indeed, an addition was made 2 Anne, by which the whole revenues or first-fruits and tenths were granted, to raise a fund for the augmentation of the maintenance of the poor clergy; pursuant to which a corporation was formed, to which the same revenues were conveyed in trust. Benefit of Clergy is a privilege which anciently was allowed only to those who were in orders: but by the statute of 18 Eliz. every man to whom the benefit of clergy is granted, though not in orders, is put to read at the bar, after he is found guilty, and convicted of felony, and so burnt in the hand, and set free for the first time, if the ordinary or deputy standing by do say, legit ut clericus; otherwise he shall suffer death. See BENEFIT OF CLERGY.

CLE'RGYMAN, s. a person dedicated by ordination to the service of the church; a person in holy orders.

CLE'RICAL, a. [from clericus, a clergyman, Eccles. Lat.] belonging to the clergy.

CLERK, s. [from kleros, heritage, Gr. because the clergy were supposed to be the peculiar heritage or property of God] a word originally used to denote a learned man, or man of letters; but now is the common appellation by which clergymen distinguish themselves in signing any deed, instrument, &c. Also the person who reads the responses of the congregation in the church to direct the rest. It is likewise a common name for writers or book-keepers, in public offices, or private compting-houses. In our courts of record, there is a great number of officers who go under this name.

CLE'RKSHIP, s. the office or employ of a clerk.

CLEVE, CLIF, CLIVE, in the name of a place, denotes it to be situate on the side of a rock or hill: as, Cleveland, Clifton, Stancliff.

CLE'VER, a. dexterous, quick, or skilful in the performance of any thing; well pleasing, convenient. Well made; handsome.

CLE'VERLY, ad. in a dexterous, ingenious, skilful, and proper manner.

CLE'VERNESS, s. a proper, skilful, and dexterous performance; a quality which conveys the idea of fitness, ingenuity, and perfection, and thereby excites satisfaction in the mind.

CLEVES, the late duchy of, one of the finest countries of the late German empire, in the circle of Westphalia, bounded on the N. by Munster and Overyssel, and on the W. by Guelderland and Brabant. It is divided into two by the Rhine, and was subject to the king of Prussia. It is about 40 miles in length, and from 10 to 12 in breadth. The revenues of Cleves and Mark amounted to a million of crowns. Cleves, its capital, is a handsome town, consisting of about 800 houses. It is seated on a hill, 3 miles from the Rhine, and 10 miles E. S. E. of Nimeguen.

CLEW, s. [klouwen, Belg.] any thing in a globular form; a ball of thread. Figuratively, any guide or direction, by means of which a person may surmount any difficulty, alluding to a ball of thread made use of by persons to find their way back again from a labyrinth. The clew of a sail is the lower corner, reaching down to that earing where the tackle and sheets are fastened.

To CLEW, v. a. among sailors, joined with the word sail, signifies to raise them in order to be furled by means of a rope fastened to the clew, called the clew-garnet.

To CLICK, v. n. [cliken, Belg.] to make a small, sharp, and successive noise, like that of the beats of a watch.

CLI'CKER, s. a tradesman's servant, who stands at the shop-door to invite customers to buy his wares; commonly called a barker.

CLI'ENT, s. [cliens, Lat.] in law, one who employs a lawyer for advice or defence. Among the Romans, one who was dependant on some great personage, who undertook to defend him from oppression.

CLI'ENTELE, or CLI'ENTSHIP, s. [clientela, Lat.] the office or condition of a client.

CLIFF, s. [clif, Sax.] a steep or craggy rock, generally applied to one on the sea-coast. In music, used improperly for Clef.

CLIFFE, KING'S, a town of Northamptonshire, 27 miles N. E. of Northampton, and 88 N. N. W. of London. Market on Tuesday.

CLIMACTERIC, or CLIMACTERICAL, a. [from klimax, a ladder or scale, Gr.] among the physicians and astrologers, is a name given to certain periods in a man's life, which they supposed to be very critical, and to denote some extraordinary change. According to some, every seventh year is climacteric: but others allow only those years produced by 7 multiplied by the odd numbers 3, 5, 7, and 9, to be climacteral. These years, they say, bring with them some remarkable change with respect to life, health, or fortune; the Grand Climacteric is the 63d year; but some making two, add to this the 81st. The other Climacterics are the 7th, 21st, 35th, 49th, and 56th.

CLIMATE, s. [klima, inclination, Gr.] because the difference of climates arises from the different inclination of the sphere, in geography, a space on the surface of the earth, contained between two parallel circles, and measured from the equator to the polar circles, in each of which spaces the longest days are half an hour longer in those near the poles, than in those nearest the equator. From the polar circles to the poles, the climates increase the space of a whole month. In the common and popular sense, any country differing from another, either in respect of its seasons, the quality of the soil, or the manner of its inhabitants, without any regard to the length of the day.

CLIMAX, s. [klimax, a ladder or scale, Gr.] in rhetoric, a figure, wherein the sense of a period ascends or increases every sentence till it concludes; as in the following: "Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come, all are yours; and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's." 1 Cor. xxii, 23.

To CLIMB, v. n. [preter. and participle passive, climbed, sometimes pronounced clime; climan, Sax.] to ascend; to ascend by their specific levity, &c. applied to vapours; to mount or go upwards.

CLI'MBER, s. one who mounts, ascends, or scales any high or steep place. A plant so called from its creeping up on other supports, as the ivy, honeysuckle, &c.

CLIME, s. the same as climate; generally used in poetry.

To CLINCH, v. a. to hold a thing in the hand with the fingers and thumb meeting over it; to shut the hand so as the fingers and thumb may reach over each other; to bend the point of a nail, when driven through any thing; to confirm, establish, or push home, applied to an argument.

CLINCH, s. a word which has a double meaning; a pun; a word made use of to conclude several lines in the different parts of a poem, and to rhyme to as many different words. In navigation, that part of a cable which is fastened to the ring of an anchor.

CLINCHER, s. a cramp or holdfast, made of a piece of iron bent, or making an angle at the top, and used to fasten planks.

To CLING, v. n. [preter. I clung, or have clung: part clang; klunger, Dan.] to stick close to, or hang upon, by twisting round a thing.

CLI'NIC, s. [from klines, a bed, Gr.] a term applied by the ancient church-bishops, to those who received baptism on their death-bed.

CLINICAL, a. [from kline, a bed, Gr.] in medicine, a term particularly used to signify the treating sick persons in bed, for the more exact discovery of all the symptoms of their diseases. A clinical lecture is a lecture delivered by the bed-side of the patient, and in which the lecturer refers his pupil to the actual situation of the patient.

To CLINK, v. a. to strike metals together so as to make them sound. Neuterly, to make a noise, applied to the sound made by two pieces of metal struck together.

CLINK, s. a noise made by the striking of two pieces of metal, whether iron or steel, on each other.

CLINQUANT, a. [Fr.] dressed in embroidery, in spangles; false glitter; tinsel finery.

CLIO, [Lat.] one of the Nine Muses, the patroness of history; she is called the daughter of Jupiter and Memory, to shew the qualifications of an historian; her name properly signifies glory, fame, or renown, in a good sense, and is generally represented by a young maiden, crowned with laurel, holding a trumpet in her right hand, and a book in her left, with Thucydides' name in it.

To CLIP, v. a. [clippan, Sax.] to embrace by folding the arms closely round; to enfold in the arms; to hug. To cut with shears, from klipper, Dan. or klippen, Belg. Figuratively, to diminish, applied to coin. To cut short, not to pronounce fully, applied to language.

CLIPPER, s. one that debases the coin, by cutting, filing, or otherwise diminishing its size and weight.

CLIPPING, s. the part cut or clipped off.

CLITHERO, a town in Lancashire, having manufactures of cotton, a medicinal spring, and a communication with all the late inland navigations. It stands, with its ruinous castle, built by the Lacys, on the river Ribble, at the bottom of Pendle Hill, 33 miles S. E. of Lancaster, and 213 N. N. W. of London. It sends two members to parliament. Market on Saturday.

CLIVER, s. [more properly written cleaver] in botany, an herb, which sticks to the clothes of such as touch it, and used in medicine.

CLOAK, (klōk) s. a loose garment without sleeves, worn over the rest of a person's clothes, either to defend them from cold or rain. Figuratively, a pretext, or pretence, in order to conceal any design.

To CLOAK, (klōk) v. a. to cover with a cloak. Figuratively, to conceal any design by some specious pretext or artifice.

CLOAKBAG, s. a bag in which clothes are carried.

CLOCK, s. [cloce, Brit.] a kind of movement or machine, going by a pendulum, serving to measure time, and shew the hour by striking on a bell. Huygens was the first person who brought the art of clock-making to any perfection; and the first pendulum clock made in England was in the year 1622, by Fromantel, a Dutchman. What's o'clock, is a phrase importing, what hour is it? 'Tis nine o'clock, implies, it is the ninth hour. Applied to stockings, clock signifies the work with which the ankles are adorned. An insect; a sort of beetle.

CLOCKMAKER, s. an artificer whose profession is to make clocks.

CLOCKWORK, s. any movements which go by means of springs, wheels, and a pendulum, and in that respect resemble the movements of a clock.

CLOD, s. [clud, Sax.] a small mass of moist earth; a lump of earth or clay. Figuratively, a turf; the ground; any thing vile, base, and earthly; a dull, gross, stupid person.

To CLOD, v. n. to unite into a mass, on account of its moisture or viscidity. To curdle, used instead of clot. Actively, to pelt with clods.

CLODDY, a. consisting of little heaps, small masses, or clods of earth.

CLODPATE, s. a stupid fellow; one who cannot easily apprehend the meaning of another. Hence clod pated, an adjective, implying dull of apprehension, or stupid.

To CLOG, v. a. to load with something that may hinder motion; to burthen; to embarras. Neuterly, to be obstructed by the sticking of something to a thing.

CLOG, s. any weight or thing which impedes or hinders the motion of a thing; a restraint; an encumbrance, hinderance, obstruction, or impediment; a composition of leather, consisting of a sole and two straps, worn by women over the shoes, to keep their feet clean or warm.

CLOGGINESS, s. the state of being hindered from motion; obstruction.

CLOGGY, a. that, by adhering to any instrument, stops up the passages, or otherwise hinders its motion.

CLOGHER, a city, or rather a village of Tyrone, in Ulster, (the see of a bishop) 70 miles N. N. W. of Dublin.

CLOISTER, s. [claustor, Sax.] a habitation surrounded with walls, and dwelt in by monks or religious; a monastery for the religious of either sex. In a more restrained sense, the principal part of a regular monastery, consisting of a square built on each of its sides. In architecture, a court which has buildings on each of its four sides; a peristyle or piazza.

To CLOISTER, v. a. to shut up in a monastery; to confine in a religious house.

CLOISTERAL, a. shut up in a monastery or nunnery; solitary; retired; recluse.

CLOISTERED, part. solitary; inhabiting a cloister; confined in a monastery, or religious house. In architecture, built round, or surrounded with a piazza or peristyle.

CLOKE, s. See CLOAK.

CLONMEL, a neat and improving town of Tipperary, Munster, pleasantly situated on the Suir, on the road between Dublin and Cork, 19 miles S. E. of Tipperary, 39 N. E. of Cork, and 85 S. W. of Dublin.

To CLOOM, v. n. [clæmian, Sax.] to cover or stop up with clay, mortar, or any glutinous matter.

To CLOSE, (kloze) v. a. [from clausus, Lat.] to shut any thing that is open; to conclude, finish, or perfect; to confine; to join any thing broken. To heal, applied to wounds; to join two parts together, after being separated. To join with a party. To close with, or in with, to come to an agreement with.

CLOSE, s. any thing shut, without passage or outlet; a small field surrounded with a hedge or rails. Applied to time, the end of any particular period or portion. The end of a sentence; a conclusion.

CLOSE, a. used with the verbs tie, shut, or fasten, shut so as nothing can come out, or any air make its entrance. "A close box." "A close room." Without vent or inlet; without motion; stagnating; sultry, or not easily breathed in, applied to the air. Having very few pores, applied to metals. "That very close metal." Locke. Dense; concise; short; without any redundance; or thick, applied to the manner of expression. "Your thoughts lie so close together." Applied to situation, touching, or without any distance between the things mentioned. Applied to designs, secret or without discovery; having the appearance of reserve and secrecy: without wandering. "To keep our thoughts close to their business." Locke. Home; to the point; retired; without going abroad. "He keeps very close." Under great restraint. "A close prisoner." Narrow, dark, cloudy, misty, and sultry, applied to the sky or weather. Used adverbially, either by itself or in composition.

CLOSE-BODIED, a. that comes tight round the body opposed to that which hangs loose.

CLOSE-HANDED, a. covetous; illiberal; void of generosity.

CLOSE-LEAGUED, a. ranged near one another; in a thick and impenetrable body; secretly leagued, or privately conspiring against.

CLOSELY, ad. applied to shutting any vessel, &c. without vent or passage for the internal or external air; very near; not deviating from, applied to the translation of authors. "I have translated closely."

CLOSENESS, s. the state of having no passage for the air; narrowness; want of air; denseness; compactness; recluseness; solitude; reserve; secrecy; avariee; connection.

CLOSE-PENT, a. shut close; without vent.

CLOSER, (klōzer) s. a finisher or concluder.

CLOSESTOOL, s. a chamber implement.

CLOSET, (klōzet) s. a small room for privacy and retirement; a shallow place furnished with shelves, and with a door, serving as a repository for curiosities, or family utensils.

To CLO'SET, (klózet) v. a. to shut up or conceal in a closet; to make into a closet for the sake of privacy.

CLOSH, s. a distemper in the feet of cattle, called likewise the founder.

CLO'SURE, (klózure) s. the act of shutting or stopping up any aperture or cleft; confinement; conclusion; end.

CLOT, s. [klot, Belg.] a mass formed by thickening of any fluid body.

To CLOT, v. n. [klotteren, Belg.] to grow into small masses, applied to any fluid substance. To gather into clods, applied to moist or clayey earth.

CLO'TBUR, s. a provincial term for the common burdock.

CLOTH, s. plural cloths, or clothes; [clath, Sax.] in a general sense, any thing woven, either from animal or vegetable substances, for garments; the linen wherewith a table is covered at any meal; the canvass on which pictures are painted; the several coverings which are laid on a bed.

To CLOTHE, v. a. [preter. I clothed; part. I have clothed, or clad; to invest with garments; to cover or adorn with dress. SYNON. Clothes express simply that which covers the body. Dress has a more confined meaning; besides that of a bare covering, it includes in its idea a relation to form and fashion, as well to the ornaments as the necessaries; thus we say a Spanish dress; a rich dress.

CLO'THIER, s. one who carries on the manufactory of woollen cloth.

CLO'THING, s. dress; vesture; garments.

CLO'THSHEARER, s. one who shears the nap of woollen cloth, after it has been raised by carders or teazers.

CLO'TPOLL, s. a word of contempt and reproach, implying a stupid person; a block-head, or thick-skull.

To CLO'TTER, v. n. See To CLOT.

CLO'TTY, a. full of clots or lumps.

CLOUD, s. a collection of condensed vapours suspended in the atmosphere. Clouds are the most considerable of all the meteors, as furnishing water and plenty to the earth; mitigating the excessive heats of the Torrid Zone, and screening it from the beams of the sun; collecting the rays of light by the numerous refractions they suffer in their passage through them, thereby prolonging the stay of light after the sun is deseended below the horizon, and anticipating its coming some time before it has ascended above it: without their medium, the heavens would be one uniform sable substance, the rays of light would be scattered abroad in the immense regions of space, without reaching our eyes, and the ravishing prospect of nature would become a large blot. They consist of very small drops of water, detached by external or internal heat, and elevated by electricity, and the laws of hydrostatics, above the surface of the earth, till they arrive at a collection of vapours of the same specific gravity of themselves; when meeting with cold, and by running into each other, they form masses, or collections heavier than that part of the atmosphere which they swam in before, and so fall down in rain. Figuratively, the veins, or dusky marks in agates, or stones; any thing which obscures; a state of darkness; a crowd or great number.

To CLOUD, v. a. to darken; to make the countenance appear lowering; to render a truth obscure, or difficult to be understood; variegated or diversified with dark veins, applied to wood and stones. Neuterly, to grow cloudy, dark, or overcast, applied to the sky or weather.

CLO'UD-BERRY, s. a plant, also called knot berry.

CLOUD, ST. a town 15 miles W. of Paris, in which was formerly a royal-palace, gardens, a cascade, &c.

CLO'UDCAPT, a. covered, topped by, or touching the clouds. "The cloud-capt towers." Shak.

CLO'UDILY, ad. in a cloudy or dark manner.

CLO'UDINESS, s. a state wherein clouds procure darkness and obscurity; want of brightness or lustre; foulness, applied to precious stones.

CLO'UDLESS, a. without clouds; clear, applied to the weather. Without spot or foulness, applied to jewels.

CLO'UDY, a. formed of clouds; dark, obscure, or overcast with clouds. Figuratively, obscure; dark; imperfect; sullen; dejected.

CLOVE, the preter. of CLEAVE.

CLOVE, s. [clou, Fr.] an aromatic fruit, brought from the East Indies, growing on a tree twenty feet high, whose leaves resemble those of the bay-tree.

CLOVE GILLIFLOWER, s. a flower so called from its smelling like cloves.

CLO'VEN, participle of CLEAVE.

CLO'VEN-FOOTED, or CLO'VEN-HOOFED, a. having the foot or hoof divided into two parts.

CLO'VER, or CLO'VER-GRASS, s. in botany, a species of trefoil. To live in clover, is a phrase for living luxuriously, because clover is reckoned delicious food for cattle.

CLOUGH, s. [clough, Sax.] the cleft of a hill; a cliff. An allowance in weight.

CLOUT, s. [clut, Sax.] a square piece of cloth made double, serving, among other uses, to keep infants clean from their evacuations; a patch on a shoe or garment.

To CLOUT, v. a. to patch or mend in a course or clumsy manner; to cover with a thick cloth; to join awkwardly or clumsily together.

CLO'UTED, part. patched or mended; joined in a clumsy manner.

CLO'UTERLY, a. clumsy; awkward.

CLOWN, s. a rustic, or country fellow; one whose behaviour is rude, and manners are unpolished.

CLO'WNISH, a. in a manner agreeable to clowns; rude, awkward, ill-bred, and coarse, like a clown.

CLO'WNISHLY, ad. in a clumsy, coarse, rude, and ill-bred manner.

CLO'WNISHNESS, s. unpolished rudeness; rustic simplicity, or awkward address; broadness and coarseness of expression. SYNON. Unpoliteness is a want of good manners; it does not please. Clownishness is a mixture of ill manners; it displeases. Clownishness proceeds from an entire want of education; unpoliteness from a bad one.

To CLOY, v. a. [enclouer, Fr.] to fill so with food as to leave no appetite for any more; to surfeit almost to loathing.

CLUB, s. [cluppa, Brit.] a heavy and strong stick, used as an offensive weapon. In gaming, the name of one of the suits of cards, called in French trefle, from its resembling the trefoil leaf, or that of clover-grass. The money proportion, or sum every member is obliged to pay at a drinking society; an assembly meeting at a public house to spend the evening, generally incorporated and regulated by orders established among themselves; concurrence; joint expense or contribution.

To CLUB, v. n. to contribute one's proportion to a public expense; to join and unite in one common design; to carry on some common design which requires the assistance of many.

CLU'BHEADED, a. having a round or thick head.

CLU'BLAW, s. the compelling the assent of a person by external force or violence.

CLU'BMOSS, s. a genus of mosses, called by botanists lycopodium.

CLU'BROOM, s. the room in which a club or company assembles.

CLU'BRUSH, s. a species of bulrush.

CLU'BTOP, s. a genus of the funguses, called by botanists clavaria.

To CLUCK, v. n. [cloccan, Sax.] to make a noise like a hen when calling her chickens.

CLUMP, s. [klumpe, Teut.] a shapeless thick piece of wood, nearly as broad as long.

CLU'MSILY, (klúmsily) ad. in an uncouth, awkward, graceless, and unpleasing manner.

CLU'MSINESS, (klúmziness) s. want of ingenuity, skill, dexterity, or readiness in performing any thing; awkwardness.

CLU'MSY, (klúmzy) a. [lompsch, Belg.] awkward, artless, unhandy, and without grace in the performance of any thing; heavy, thick, and coarse, with respect to weight and shape.

CLUNG, the preter. and part. of CLING.

To CLUNG, v. n. [clingan, Sax.] to dry or waste like wood after it is cut.

CLUNG, part. wasted away, by a consumption, or other disorders; shrunk up with cold.

CLUSTER, s. [clyster, Sax.] a bunch, or several things of the same sort growing close together, and on one common stalk. Figuratively, a number of insects crowding together; a body of, or several people collected together.

To CLUSTER, v. n. to grow in bunches close together, and on one stalk, applied to vegetables. To gather close together in bodies, applied to bees. To gather into bunches.

CLUSTER-GRAPE, s. in botany, the small black grape, generally the forwardest of any.

CLUSTERY, a. growing close together on one common stalk.

To CLUTCH, v. a. to hold in the hand with the fingers and thumb closed together; to gripe, or grasp; to shut the hand close, so as to seize and hold a thing fast.

CLUTCH, s. a gripe, grasp, or seizure with the hand shut very fast and close. Figuratively, in the plural clutches, the the claws or talons of a bird or wild beast.

CLUTTER, s. [See CLATTER] a noise made by a person's being in a hurry about some trifling affair; a hurry or clamour: a low word.

CLWYD, a beautiful vale of Denbyshire, inclosed by high mountains, extending from the sea island above 20 miles; a river of the same name runs through it. Its breadth is from 3 to 8 miles, and is covered with towns, villages, and gentlemen's seats.

CLYDE, a river of Scotland, which rises in Annandale, and running N. W. through Clydesdale, passes by Lanerk, Hamilton, and Glasgow, and falls soon after into the Frith of Clyde. It affords many romantic views, running for several miles between lofty eminences covered with wood, and exhibiting in its course many stupendous cataracts.

CLYDESDALE, a wild district in the S. part of Lanerkshire, in Scotland, where are extensive lead mines.

CLYSTER, s. [from klyzo, to wash, Gr.] in medicine, a decoction of various ingredients injected into the anus by means of a syringe, or pipe and bladder.

To COACERVATE, v. n. [coacervo, Lat.] to heap together.

COACERVATION, s. the act of heaping, or the state of things heaped together.

COACH, (kōtch) s. [coche, Fr.] a carriage of pleasure and state, having both back and front seats, hung upon straps or springs, running on four wheels; and distinguished from a chariot because it has two seats fronting each other; and from a vis-a-vis, because more than one person can set opposite to one another. This carriage was originally intended for the country, and when first introduced into cities, there were but two even in Paris, one of which belonged to the queen, and the other to Diana, natural daughter to Henry II. The first courtier who set up this equipage was John de Laval de Bois Dauphin, who could not travel on horseback on account of his enormous bulk. We find, even in England, that as low as queen Elizabeth's time, the nobility of both sexes attended her in processions on horseback.

To COACH, (kōtch) v. a. to carry or convey in a coach.

COACH-BOX, s. the seat on which the driver of the coach sits.

COACH-HIRE, s. money paid for the use of a hired coach.

COACH-HOUSE, s. the house in which the coach is kept.

COACH-MAKER, s. the artificer whose trade it is to make coaches.

COACHMAN, s. the driver of a coach.

COACTION, (koākshon) s. [from cogo, to compel, Lat.] the obliging to do, or to repair from doing any action; force; compulsion.

COACTIVE, a. having the force of restraining from, or compelling to, any action; acting in concert with.

COADJUTANT, part. [from cum, with, and adjuvo, to assist; Lat.] helping, assisting or taking part with any person in any action; co-operating.

COADJUTOR, s. [from cum, with, and adjutor, a helper, Lat.] one engaged in assisting another; an assistant, associate, or partner in any undertaking. In the canon law, one appointed and empowered to perform the duties of another.

COADJUVANCY, s. [from cum, with, and adjuvans, assisting, Lat.] help; concurrence in any process or operation; a contributing to effect any particular design.

COADUNITION, s. [from cum, with, ad, to, and unitio, union, Lat.] the uniting of several things or particles, so as to form one common mass.

To COAGMENT, v. a. [coagmento, Lat.] to join, glue or heap together, so as to form one mass.

COAGMENTATION, s. [coagmentatio, Lat.] a joining, uniting, glewing, or otherwise heaping several particles or substances together, so as to form one common mass. The joining several syllables or words together, so as to form one word or sentence, applied to style or grammar.

COAGULABLE, a. [from coagulo, Lat.] that may thicken, grow dense, or concrete.

To COAGULATE, v. a. [coagulo, Lat.] to make a thing curdle, to turn into clots, applied to the turning of milk into curds by means of rennet. Neuterly, to curdle; to form concretions; to congeal.

COAGULATION, s. [coagulatio, Lat.] the act of turning into curds. Concretion; congelation; or growing thick and tangible, applied to fluids; the state of a thing congealed, curdled, or condensed; the substance or body formed by congelation or concretion.

COAGULATIVE, a. [from coagulo, Lat.] that has the power of causing coagulations, concretions, curdling, or depriving a body of its fluidity.

COAGULATOR, s. that which causes condensations or concretions.

COAKS, s. for the exciting of intense heats, as for the smelting of iron ore, and for operations where the acid and oily particles would be detrimental, fossil coals are previously charred, or reduced to coaks; that is, they are made to undergo an operation similar to that by which charcoal is made, and are deprived of their phlegm, their acid liquor, and part of their fluid oil.

COAL, (kōl) s. [col, Sax.] a solid, dry, opaque, inflammable substance, found in large strata, splitting generally in an horizontal direction, of a black, glossy hue, soft and friable, not fusible, but easily inflammable, and leaving, when burnt, a great quantity of ashes.

COAL-BLACK, a. of the colour of coal; the deepest black.

COAL-BOX, s. a box to carry coal to the fire.

COAL-FISH, s. a species of beardless gadus.

To COALESCE, (koalcss) v. n. [from cum, with, and alesco, to grow, Lat.] to unite together.

COALESCENCE, (koalcscence) s. [from coalesco, to unite with, Lat.] the act of coalescing or uniting several particles, whereby they adhere together and form one body or common mass.

COALITION, s. [from coalitum, Lat.] the uniting or joining of different particles, so as to compose one common mass.

COAL-MINE, s. a mine in which coal is dug; a coal-pit.

COAL-WORK, (kōl-work) s. a coal-mine, or place where coals are dug.

COALY, (kōly) a. abounding in coal.

COAPTATION, s. [from cum, with, and apta, to fit, Lat.] the fitting or artful disposition or arrangement of the parts of a thing, or of the words of a sentence.

COARSE (kōrse) a. mixed with dross, not refined, applied to metals. Rough, and consisting of large threads, applied to cloth or silk manufactures. Rude, uncivil, indelicate, ill-bred, applied to behaviour or manners. Unpolished, and not elegant, applied to language. Mean, vile, rough, and of no value.

CO'ARSELY, ad. in a rude, rough, inelegant manner; free from any graces, or appearance of politeness.

CO'ARSENESS, s. want of purity; abounding in dross; want of elegance or delicacy; clownishness, rudeness, or rusticity; a composition of mean and cheap materials.

COASSE, s. in natural history, a kind of American weasel, which emits an exceedingly offensive vapour.

COAST, (kōst) s. [coste, Fr.] a shore or land, which lies near, and is washed by the sea. Used by Sir Isaac Newton, in the sense of the original French and Latin, for a side or part. The coast is clear, a phrase implying that any danger is over, and that there are no obstacles in a person's way.

To COAST, v. n. to sail near a coast, or keep within sight of land. Actively, to sail by; to sail near to.

CO'ASTER, s. one who makes a voyage from port to port on the same coast, keeping at the same time within sight of the shore; one who sails near the shore.

COAT, (kōt) s. [cotte, Fr.] the outward garment of a man, made with plaits at the side; the lower part of a woman's dress tied round the waist, and covering the legs. Figuratively, any covering or tegument. The hairs or fur of a beast. In heraldry, the escutcheon, field, or habit, on which a person's arms are pourtrayed.

To COAT, v. a. to cover or spread over.

COATING, s. in electricity, denotes a covering of sheet lead, tin-foil, or any other conducting substance, applied to the Leyden-phial, or to any electric body, and serving to accumulate the electricity to increase the force of the charge, and to facilitate the operation of discharging.

To COAX, v. a. to endeavour to persuade a person by flattery, or insinuating address; a low word.

COA'XER, s. one who endeavours to persuade a person by flattery, or artful and insinuating behaviour.

COB, s. a sort of sea-fowl, called also sea-cob.

CO'BALT, s. a whitish-gray brittle metal, nearly resembling fine hardened steel. It was formerly imported from Saxony, but it is now found abundantly in the Mendip-hills, in Somersetshire, and in a mine near Penzance, in Cornwall. It has hitherto been chiefly used for making the different kinds of smalts for painting and enamelling. It is extremely valuable to the manufacturers of porcelain, for it not only produces a beautiful colour, but endures the intense heat of their furnaces without any deterioration.

To CO'BBLE, v. a. [kobler, Dan] to mend any thing in a clumsy manner, generally applied to shoes To do or make any thing in a coarse, unhandy, or awkward manner.

CO'BBLER, s. a mender of old shoes. Figuratively, a very bad workman; one who cannot perform any thing with elegance.

CO'BHAM, a village in Surrey, with several fine seats, washed by the river Mole, made here 4 or 5 times broader than it is naturally. It is 19 miles S. by W. of London.

CO'BIRONS, s. irons with a knob at the upper end, used in fire places where wood is burned

COBI'SHOP, s. a coadjutant bish

COBLENTZ, an ancient town of Treves, in the circle of the Lower Rhine, situated at the confluence of the Rhine and Moselle, with a bridge of boats over the former, and a stone bridge over the latter. Lat. 50, 21. N.

CO'BNUT, s. a boy's game; the conquering nut.

CO'BSWAN, s. the head or leading swan in a swannery.

COBURG, a territory and its capital of Upper Saxony, insulated in Franconia, 23 miles N. of Bamberg.

CO'BWEB, s. [kopweb, Belg.] the web or net of a spider. Figuratively, any snare or trap. Sometimes used for a restraint which may easily be broken through.

COCCI'FEROUS, (koksiferus) a. [from kokkos, a berry, Gr. and fero, to bear, Lat.] in botany, a term applied to all plants having berries.

CO'CCULUS INDICUS, s. a kind of a poisonous berry, often mixed with malt liquors to make them intoxicating, though expressly forbidden by act of parliament.

CO'CHIN, a sea-port and country of Hindoostan, on the coast of Malabar, situated N. W. of the Travancore country, and by some included in it. The chief trade (for pepper) was in the hands of the Dutch, but the English have made a conquest of the settlement. It is 86 miles S. S. E. of Calicut. Lat. 10. 0. N. lon. 75. 30. E.

CO'CHIN CHINA, a kingdom of Asia, bounded on the W. by Siam and Cambodia; on the N. by Tonquin and Laos; on the E. by the Eastern Ocean; and on the S. and S. W. by Ciampa and Cambodia. It abounds in gold, raw silk, drugs, saffron, pepper, indigo, tea, ivory, and various kinds of trees and animals. It is upwards of 300 miles in length, and about 90 in breadth, and contains 50 sea-port towns. The inhabitants are of a light brown complexion, and in manners resemble the Chinese.

CO'CHINEAL, s. [cochinilla, Span.] an insect found upon the opuntia, originally of a white or pellucid colour, but turning red by means of the food it eats, and when dried, affording a beautiful purple colour, made use of by dyers.

CO'CHLEARY, (kokleary) a. [from cocalea, a periwincle, Lat.] made in the form of a screw.

CO'CHLEATED, (kokleated) a. [from cochlea, a periwinkle, Lat.] twisted in the form of a screw. Turbinated applied to shells.

COCK, s. [cocc, Sax.] the male of the species of domestic fowls, famous for its courage, pride, and gallantry; the male of any birds or fowls. Weather-cock, an instrument turning round a pivot, used to shew the point from which the wind blows; an instrument turning with a screw, made of bell metal, and used in drawing liquors from casks; the notch of an arrow; that part of the lock of a gun which holds the flint; the particular form in which the brims of a hat are placed; the stile or gnomon of a dial; the needle of a balance. Cock-a-hoop, or Cock on the hoop, a phrase implying triumphant exultation, or elation on some success.

COCK OF THE MOUNTAIN, a bird of the grouse kind.

To COCK, v. a. to erect, or set upright. To mould the shape of a hat; to wear the hat with an air of petulance and smartness; to fix the cock of a gun ready for discharging; to lay hay in small heaps. Neuterly, to strut, hold up the head, or look big on account of any little success.

COCK'ADE, s. a ribband tied in a bow, or formed in the shape of a rose, worn in a man's hat.

CO'CKATRICE, s. [cook and atter, Sax.] a serpent, supposed to be formed from a cock's egg. Figuratively, a person of an insidious, venomous, and treacherous disposition.

CO'CKBOAT, s. a small boat belonging to a ship.

CO'CK-CROWING, s. the time at which cocks crow. Figuratively, the morning.

To CO'CKER, v. a. [coqueliner, Fr.] to indulge too much; to fondle, or treat with too much fondness.

CO'CKER, s. one who keeps cocks for fighting.

CO'CKEREL, s. a young cock.

CO'CKERMOUTH, a populous town in Cumberland, situated at the confluence of the rivers Cocker and Derwent. The market-place and upper part of the town are between two hills, on one of which stands the castle, an extensive ruin, with five lofty towers, the walls between which are kept up; on the other stands the church, and the Kirkgate, an irregular but spacious part of the town. From the eminence on which the castle stands, called the Hay, an extensive country, the sea, and Scotland, may be seen in clear weather. Through the valley between the hills, the top of the towering Skiddaw may be descried over the intervening country. The lower part of the town is on a plain, consisting of a spacious street, with cross lanes. The upper and lower parts of the town are separated by the Cocker, but united by a bridge of one arch. It has manufactures of shalloons, serges, stockings, coarse linens, hats, and leather, with considerable tanneries. Here are pleasant walks on the banks of the rivers, and on the uplands. It is 10 miles

N. E. of Whitehaven, 23 S. W. of Carlisle, and 300 N. N. W. of London. Markets on Monday and Saturday.

CO'CKET, s. a seal belonging to the custom-house; an instrument drawn on parchment, signed, sealed, and delivered to merchants, as a certificate that they have paid the customs for their goods.

CO'CKFIGHT, s. a battle or match of cocks.

CO'CKHORSE, a. triumphant; exulting; a kind of low word.

CO'CKLE, s. [coquille, Fr.] a small shell-fish. In botany, the agrostemma. It grows in corn fields, is an annual plant, and flowers in June.

To CO'CKLE, v. a. to contract any stuff into wrinkles by wet or rain.

CO'CKLED, part. shelled; wrinkled by wet.

CO'CKLEWORT, s. in botany, the astragalus. There are two British species, the wild liquorice vetch, and purple mountain milkwort.

CO'CKLOFT, s. the room over the garret, in which fowls are supposed to roost.

CO'CKNEY, s. a person born in London; a word of contempt. Figuratively, any effeminate, luxurious, ignorant, or inexperienced person, dwelling in a city.

CO'CKPIT, s. a place wherein cocks generally fight. In a ship, a place on the lower deck of a man of war, in which are divisions for the purser, the surgeon, and his mates.

CO'CKSCOMB, s. a plant, the same with the yellow rattle, or pennygrass.

CO'CKSFOOT, s. a kind of grass.

CO'CKSHEAD, s. in botany, a plant called likewise sainfoin, and esteemed one of the best sorts of fodder for cattle.

CO'CKSPUR, s. Virginian hawthorn; a species of medlar.

CO'CKSURE, a. confident; certain.

CO'CKSWAIN, s. [coggswaine, Sax.] an officer on board a man of war who has the command of a boat.

CO'CKWEED, s. a plant, called also dittander and pepperwort.

CO'CO'A, (kōko) s. See CHOCOLATE-NUT.

CO'CTILE, a. [coctilis, Lat.] made by baking.

CO'CTION, (kōkshon) s. [from coquo, to boil, Lat.] the act of boiling. In surgery, a digestion of matter.

COD, or CO'DFISH, s. a sea-fish, caught on the banks of Newfoundland, and many other parts.

COD, s. [codde, Sax.] in botany, any case, or husk, in which seeds are lodged.

To COD, v. n. to inclose in a husk, case, or cod.

CODE, s. [codex, Lat.] a book; a book of civil laws, appropriated by way of eminence to the collection made by Justinian.

CO'DICIL, s. [from codicillus, a little writing, Lat.] a writing made by way of supplement to a will, in order to supply something omitted, or alter and explain something contained in the testament.

CODILLE, s. [codille, Fr.] in gaming, a term at ombre, implying that the game is won against the player; this is termed basted, in quadrille.

To CO'DLE, v. a. [coctulo, Lat.] to parboil; to soften by the heat of water.

CO'DLING, s. an early kind of apple, so called from its being generally boiled for eating.

COEFFICACY, s. [from cum, with, and efficio, to effect, Lat.] the united power of several things acting together to produce an effect.

COEFFICIENCY, s. [from cum, with, and efficio, to effect, Lat.] the acting together, or joint power of several things to produce an effect.

COEFFICIENT, s. [from cum, with, and efficiens, effecting, Lat.] that which acts jointly with another. Coefficients, in algebra, numbers of uneven quantities prefixed to letters, in which they are supposed to be multiplied. In fluxions, applied to any generating term, it is the quantity arising from the division of that term by the generated quantity.

COE'NOBITES, (Cenobites) [from koinos, common, and bioo, to live, Gr.] in church history, a sort of monks in the primitive church, so called from living in common, in which they differed from the Anchorites, who retired from society. The coenobinic life took its rise from the time of the apostles, and was the state and condition of the first Christians, according to St. Luke's account of them.

COEQUAL, a. being in the same state, condition, and circumstances as another.

COEQUA'LITY, s. the state of two persons or things which are equal to each other.

To COE'RCE, v. a. [coerceo, Lat.] to restrain by force, or punishments, from the committing any crime, or performing any action.

COE'RCIBLE, a. that may or ought to be restrained.

COE'RCION, (koérshon) s. [from coerceo, Lat.] a check, or restraint. A restraining from the violation of any law, by means of punishment.

COE'RCIVE, a. that has the power of restraining; that has the authority of restraining by means of punishment.

COESSE'NTIAL, (koessénshial) a. [from con and essentio, Lat.] partaking of the same essence.

COESSENTIA'LITY, (koessenshiálity) s. the quality of partaking of the same essence.

COETE'RNAL, a. [cum, with, and æternus, eternal, Lat.] existing eternally with another; equally eternal with another.

COETE'RNALLY, ad. in a manner equally eternal with another.

COETE'RNITY, s. [from cum, with, and æternitas, eternity, Lat.] having an eternity of existence together with, or equal to, the eternity of another.

COE'VAL, a. [from cum, with, and ævum, age, Lat.] born or produced at the same time; of the same age with another.

COE'VOUS, a. [from cum, with, and ævum, age, Lat.] of the same age; living at the same time.

To COEXI'ST, v. n. [cum, with, and exisio, to exist, Lat.] to exist, or be at the same time, or in the same place.

COEXI'STENCE, s. the having existence at the same time or place with another.

COEXI'STENT, a. having existence at the same time with another.

To COEXTE'ND, v. a. [from cum, with, and extendo, to extend, Lat.] to extend to the same space, period, or duration with another; followed by with, before the object with which the co-extension is formed.

COEXTE'NSION, s. the act or state of extending to the same space or duration with another.

CO'FFEE, s. [Arab.] the berry of a tree, formerly peculiar to the kingdom of Yaman in Arabia, but now propagated in most of our colonies, in Jamaica especially, where it is little inferior to the best Turkey. It grows on a tree forty feet high, which in Arabia is always covered with flowers and fruit. Its leaves resemble the common laurel. The liquor or decotion, made from the berry roasted, was introduced first into England by Mr. Daniel Edwards, a Turkey merchant, in the year 1652, bringing with him one Pasquet, a Greek servant, to make coffee for him; who was the first person that ever set up a coffee-house.

CO'FFEE-HOUSE, s. a place where coffee is sold, persons generally meet, (if near 'Change,) transact business, and the newspapers are taken in for the accommodation of customers.

CO'FFEE-POT, s. the covered pot in which coffee is boiled.

CO'FFEE-MAN, s. one that keeps a coffee-house.

CO'FFER, s. [cofre, Sax.] a chest for keeping money. Figuratively, treasure. In fortification, a hollow lodgment across a dry moat, the upper part of which is raised with pieces of timber above the moat's level, is covered with hurdles laden with earth, and serves as a parapet with embrasures. It is generally used by the besieged to distress the enemy when they endeavour to pass the ditch.

To CO'FFER, v. a. to put into chests or coffers, followed by up.

CO'FFERER of the king's household, s. a principal officer at court, in the counting-house, or elsewhere, next to the comptroller, who inspects over the behaviour and conduct of the other officers of the household, and pays them their respective salaries.

CO'FFIN, s. [cofin, Fr.] the receptacle wherein a dead body is placed for its interment. In pastry, a mould of paste for a pie. A paper case in form of a cone or pyramid; a round piece of paper with the edges bent up perpendicularly, used by the apothecaries to drop their boluses in, to keep the outward part clean.

To CO'FFIN, v. a. to place, to inclose in a coffin.

To COG, v. a. to persuade, wheedle, or gain a person over by flattery, or an insinuating address. To falsify, or corrupt a manuscript, by inserting some word or sentence; to obtrude falsehoods, or endeavour to make them pass current. To cog a die, is to secure it so as to direct it in its fall. Neuterly, to lie; to wheedle.

COG, s. the tooth of a wheel, by which it acts upon another wheel.

To COG, v. a. to fix cogs in a wheel.

CO'GENCY, s. [from cogo, to compel, Lat.] the power of compelling; the power of extorting assent or obedience.

CO'GENT, part. [cogens, Lat.] able to compel to action; powerful; resistless.

CO'GENTLY, ad. in a forcible manner. Extorting conviction and assent, applied to arguments.

CO'GGER, s. a flatterer; a wheedler.

CO'GGESHALL, a town in Essex, with a market on Saturday. It is seated on the river Blackwater, or Pant, over which there is a bridge. It has one large church, and three meeting-houses. The town consists of several narrow streets badly paved, and there is here a manufactory of baize. It is 44 miles E. N. E. of London.

CO'GGLESTONE, s. [cuogolo, Ital.] a small pebble; a little stone.

CO'GITABLE, (cójitable) a. [from cogito, to think, Lat.] that may be thought on, or may be the subject of thought.

COGITA'TION, s. [from cogito, to think, Lat.] the beholding any idea in the mind, the act of thinking. Figuratively, thought, purpose, intention, or design; meditation.

CO'GITATIVE, a. [from cogito, to think, Lat.] having the power of thought; given to thought, study, or reflection.

CO'GNAC, a town of France, in the department of Charente, noted for its wines and brandy.

COGNA'TION, s. [from cum, with, and nascor, to be born Lat.] in civil law, the relation between both males and females, descending from the same stock; relation, partaking, of the same nature.

COGNISE'E, (konisée) s. in law, the person to whom a fine in lands or tenements is acknowledged.

CO'GNISOR, (kónisor) s. in law, one that passes or acknowledges a fine in lands or tenements to another.

COGNITION, s. [cognitio, Lat.] knowledge; complete conviction.

CO'GNITIVE, a. [cognitus, Lat.] that has the power of knowing or apprehending.

CO'GNIZABLE, (by some pron. kónizable) a. [cognoisable, Fr.] proper for the consideration or inspection of a person; subject to judicial examination and notice.

CO'GNIZANCE, (by some pron. kónizance) s. [connoisance, Fr.] in law, an acknowledgment of a fine, or confession of something done; the hearing of a matter judicially; the particular jurisdiction of a magistrate, or an object which more particularly falls under his inspection or notice; a badge by which any person may be known or distinguished.

COGNO'MINAL, a. [from cognomen, Lat.] having the same name.

COGNOMINA'TION, s. a surname; the name of a family, or name added from any accident or quality.

COGNO'SCENCE, s. knowledge.

COGNO'SCIBLE, a. [from cognosco, to know, Lat.] that may be known; possible to be known; being the object of knowledge.

To COHA'BIT, v. n. [from cum, with, and habito, to dwell, Lat.] to dwell in the same place with another; to live together as man and wife.

COHA'BITANT, s. one who dwells in the same place with another.

COHABITA'TION, s. the act of dwelling with another in the same place; the living together as man and wife.

COHE'IR, s. [cohæres, Lat.] a man who enjoys an inheritance together with another.

COHE'IRESS, s. a female who enjoys an inheritance with another.

To COHE'RE, v. n. [cohæreo, Lat.] to stick together; to hold fast to one another as a part of the same body. To be well connected; to depend on what has preceded, and connect with what follows, applied to literary compositions. To suit, fit, or be fitted to; to agree.

COHE'RENCE, or COHE'RENCY, s. [cohærentia, Lat.] in physics, that state of bodies in which their parts are joined together so as to resist divulsion, or separation; relation; dependency; consistency, so as one part of a discourse does not contradict another.

COHE'RENT, part. [cohærens, Lat.] sticking together so as to resist a separation; suitable, adapted to one another; consistent, or not contradictory.

COHE'SION, s. [from cum, with, and hæreo, to adhere, Lat.] the act whereby the atoms or primary corpuscles of bodies are connected together so as to form particles, and the particles are kept together so as to form sensible masses. Figuratively, cohesion signifies the state of union or inseparability both of the particles of matter, and other things; connection.

COHE'SIVE, a. that has the power of sticking fast, so as to resist separation.

COHE'SIVENESS, s. the quality of uniting so as to resist any attempt to separate them, applied to the particles of matter.

To COHO'BATE, v. a. to pour any distilled liquor upon its residuum, or remaining matter, and distil it again.

COHOBA'TION, s. the returning any liquor distilled upon that which remains after the distillation, and then distilling it again.

CO'HORT, s. [cohors, Lat.] a troop of soldiers, in the Roman armies, containing about 500 foot. In poetry, used for any company of soldiers or warriors.

COIF, s. [coeffe, Fr.] a head-dress; a lady's cap; a sergeant at law's cap.

CO'IFED, a. wearing a coif.

CO'IFFURE, s. [coeffure, Fr.] a head-dress.

To COIL, v. a. [cueillir, Fr.] to reduce into a narrow compass. To coil a rope, is to wind it in a ring.

COIL, s. [kolleren, Teut.] a tumult, noise, confusion, or bustle, occasioned by some quarrel; a rope wound into a ring.

COI'MBRA, a town and university of Beira, in Portugal, containing 18 colleges, 4000 students, and about 12,000 inhabitants. It is situated on a mountain, near the river Mondego, 96 miles N. N. E. of Lisbon.

COIN, s. [coigne, Fr.] a corner; any thing standing with a corner outward; a brick cut diagonally, pronounced quoin or quine.

COIN, s. money, or metal stamped with a lawful impression; payment of any kind; compensation. As money is the general medium of commerce, and as every nation has coins peculiar to itself, we apprehend it will be of no small use to the reader to inform him of the value of those coins that have been, and now are, current in several countries where trade is carried on. And as the Roman and Jewish coins are very proper to be known, for the right understanding of the Scriptures, we shall begin with them.

ROMAN COINS mentioned in the NEW TESTAMENT.

Denarius, silver,	7 pence 3 farthings.
Assis, copper,	0 — 3 —
Assarium	0 — 1½ —
Quadrans	0 — 0¾ —
A Mite	0 — 0½ —

JEWISH COINS reduced to English Money.

					£.	s.	d.
Gerah					0	0	1,3125
10	Bekah				0	1	1,6875
20	2	Shekel			0	2	3,277
1000	100	50	Maneh, minah hebraica		5	14	0¾
60000	6000	3000	60	Talent	342	3	9
Solidus aureus, or Sextula, worth					0	12	0½
Siculus aureus, worth					1	16	6
A Talent of gold, worth					5475	0	0

In England, the current species of gold coin are the guinea, half-guinea, seven-shilling piece, quarter-guinea, jacobus, laureat, angel, and rose-noble; the five last of which are now seldom met with, having been mostly converted into guineas, chiefly during the reigns of Charles II. and James II. The silver coins are the crown, half-crown, shilling, and sixpence. The penny, two-penny, three-penny, and groat pieces, in silver, are now rarely seen. The copper coins are the two penny piece, penny, half-penny, and farthing. In Scotland, by the articles of Union, it is appointed, that all the coins be reduced to the English, and the same accounts to be observed throughout the whole island. In Ireland, the coins are the same as in England, except that the English shilling passes for 26 half-pence.

In France, the gold coin is the louis d'or, with its divisions, which are the half and quarter; and its multiplies, which are the double and quadruple louis d'ors. There are also pieces in circulation issued from the mint of the emperor.

Value and proportion of the FRENCH COINS during the Monarchy.

					£.	s	d.
Denier, equal to ⅛ of a farthing sterling.
2	Double
3	1½	Liard
12	6	4	Sol Paris, equal nearly to		0	0	0½
240	120	80	20	Livre d'accompt	0	0	10½
720	360	240	60	Ecu	0	2	7½
The old louis d'or is valued at					0	16	9¾
The new louis d'or at					1	0	6

In Spain the gold coin is the pistole; above which the double pistole, and piece of four pistoles, and under it the half pistole; to which must be added, the castilians of gold. The silver money are the piastre, or piece of eight rials, and its diminutions; as also, the simple rial, with its diminutions. The copper coins are the ochavos, or octavos, which are of two kinds, the one equal to four marvedis, and ordinarily called quarta; the other double this, and called double quarta; and lastly, the marvedis. In Spain they have new money and old; the old, current at Seville, Cadiz, Andalusia, &c. is worth 25 per cent. more than the new, current at Madrid, Bilboa, St. Sebastian, &c. This difference is owing to their king Charles II. who, to prevent the exportation of money, raised it 25 per cent. however, several provinces retain the ancient state.

Value and proportion of SPANISH COINS.

	£.	s.	d.
Quarta, four marvedis
Octavo, or double quarta, 8 marvedis
Real of Old Plata, equal to	0	0	6¾
Piece of eight, or piastre	0	4	6
Pistole	0	16	9¾

In Portugal the gold coins are the milleray, or St. Stephen, and the moeda d'oro, or moidore, which is properly their pistole; above this are doppio moedas, or double pistoles and quadruple pieces, equal to five pistoles. The silver coins are the cruzada, pataca or piece of eight, and the vintem, of which they have two sorts, the one silver, and the other billion. The ree is of copper, which serves them in accompts, as the marvedis does the Spaniards.

Res, ree, or rez, equal to three-fifths of a farthing sterling.

Vintem, 20 res

Cruzada, 26 vintems

	£.	s.	d.
Mi-moeda, or half-pistole	0	13	6
Moeda d'oro, or pistole	1	7	0
Doppio moeda, or double pistole	2	14	0
Ducat of fine gold	6	15	0

Besides the above, they have pieces of gold of the value of £3. 12*s.* £L. 16. and other subdivisions.

DUTCH COINS.

Those of silver are crowns and dollars, ducatoons, florins, and schellings, each of which has its diminutions. The silver is billon; the duyt and penny, of copper.

	£.	s.	d.
Ducat of Holland	0	9	3,2
Ducatoon	0	5	5,59
Patagon, or rixdollar	0	4	4,28
The three-gilder piece, or sixty stivers	0	5	2,46
The gilder, florin, or 20 stivers	0	1	8,08
The lion dollar	0	3	7,07

The schelling goes for six stivers, and the ortke is the fourth part of a stiver

COINS of Ci-devant FLANDERS.

Those of gold are imperials, rides or philips, alberts, and crowns; those of silver, are philips, rixdollars, patagons, schellings, and guidens; and those of copper, patards.

Groat, eight patards	£.	s.	d.
Single stiver	0	0	1½
Schelling	0	0	7½
Gulden	0	2	0
Rixdollar, dollar, patagon	0	4	6
Imperial	0	11	9

The German, Dutch, and French coins are current here. The German and Italian coins are so numerous and various, every prince and state having had a coinage of their own, that it would be a difficult, as well as useless task, to reduce them to any standard, many of them being current only in the place where they were coined; and as the knowledge of them can be of no service to the reader, unless he happens to travel into those countries, we shall pass on to

The DANISH COINS.

	s.	d.
The gold ducat	9	3½
The horse	1	1½
The four-mark piece	2	8,23
Mare lubs	1	6
Schesdal, or two marks	3	0
Rix-mark	0	11
Slet-mark	0	9

SWEDISH COINS.

Those of copper are the routisque, alleuvre, mark, and money.

	s.	d.
A gold ducat is equal to	9	3½
An eight-mark piece of silver	5	2
A four-mark piece	2	7
A christine	1	1½
A caroline	1	5½

The Swedish money, properly so called, is a kind of copper cut in little square pieces, or plates, about the thickness of three English crowns, and weighing five pounds and a half, stamped at the four corners with the Swedish arms, and current in Sweden for a rixdollar, or piece of eight.

MUSCOVITE COINS.

	s.	d.
The copec of gold, worth	1	6,0833
Copec of silver, or denaing	0	1
Polusk	0	0½
Motoske	0	0¼
The ruble of silver, valued at	4	6
The cheroonitz of gold, called ducat by foreigners	9	6

It were easy to give an account of many other coins, such as the Polish, Turkish, Persian, Indian, &c. but as a particular description of these would take up more room than we have to spare, we must refer the reader to such books as treat particularly on this subject.

To COIN, v. a. to mint, or stamp metals for money; to make or forge any thing, used in an ill sense.

COINAGE, s. the stamping metals; or making money. This was formerly performed by a hammer, but at present by a mill; the former was the only method known till the year 1553. The English coinage, by adding the letters on the edges, contributed not a little to its perfection. Figuratively, this word is used for coin or money; the charges or expense of coining Forgery, or invention, used in a bad sense.

To COINCIDE, v. n. [coincido, Lat.] to fall upon, or meet in the same point; to be consistent with, to concur.

COINCIDENCE, s. the state of several bodies or lines falling upon the same point; concurrence; consistency, or uniting to effect the same end, or establish the same point.

COINCIDENT, a. [coincidens, Lat.] falling upon the same point, applied to bodies or lines. Concurring; consisting; agreeing; mutually tending to the support of any particular point.

COINDICATION, s. [cum, with, or together, and indico, to indicate, Lat.] the concurrence of many symptoms, bespeaking or betokening the same cause.

COINER, s. one that makes money. Figuratively, a maker of counterfeit money; an inventor.

To COJOIN, v. n. [conjungo, Lat.] to join with another in the same office.

COISTRIL, s. a coward, or run-away cock.

COIT, s. [from kote, Belg.] a thing thrown at a mark. See QUOIT.

COITION, s. [coitio, Lat.] the act of propagating the species; the act by which two bodies come together.

COKE, s. [perhaps from coquo, to boil or bake, Lat.] fuel made by burning pit-coal under the ground, and quenching the cinders; as in making charcoal. It is frequently used in drying malt. See COAK.

COL, one of the western islands of Scotland, 11 miles N. W. of the Isle of Mull. It is 13 miles long and 3 broad; contains a few horses, sheep, and goats, and has many lochs, which abound in fish. The inhabitants are about 800.

COLANDER, (cullender) s. [from colo, to strain, Lat.] a sieve, either of hair, twigs, or metal, through which any mixture is strained, and leaves the grosser parts behind it.

COLATION, s. [from colo, to strain, Lat.] the act of filtering, straining or separating any fluid from its dregs or impurities.

COLATURE, s. [from colo, to strain, Lat.] the art of separating the dregs of any fluid by straining it through a sieve; or filtrating it through paper; the matter strained or filtrated.

COLBERG, a sea-port of Prussian Pomerania, remarkable for its salt-works. It is situated at the mouth of the Persante, in lat. 54. 22. N. lon. 15. 39. E.

COLBERTINE, s. a kind of fine lace worn by women.

COLCHESTER, a town of Essex, containing 12 churches, most of which are in good repair, and about 12,000 inhabitants, including the liberties. It is situated on a fine eminence near the Coln, which is navigable within three miles of the town for ships of large burden, and for boys and small barks, to a place called the Hythe, where is a quay close to the houses. Here is a manufactory of baize and seys; all the towns, and the whole country around, being partly employed in the spinning of wool for its trade by Colchester; and it is noted for oysters and candied eringo-roots. It is 22 miles E. N. E. of Chelmsford, and 51 of London. Markets on Wednesday and Saturday.

COLCOTHAR, s. in chemistry, the dry substance remaining after distillation, but generally applied to the caput mortuum of vitriol.

COLD, a. [cold, Sax.] without warmth, or warming; having a sensation of cold, or shivering, because the particles of air are less in motion than those of our own body, or being mixed with nitrous particles, diminish the motion of those of the body; that which is not volatile, or easily put in motion by heat. Figuratively, unaffected; not easily excited to action; indifferent; not able to move the passions; reserved, or void of the warmth of friendship and affection; chaste, temperate, not easily provoked to anger; not meeting with a warm or affectionate reception; deliberate; calm.

COLD, s. something void of heat or motion, and which contains in it no particles of fire; that which produces the sensation of cold; a disease caused by stopping perspiration, and other effects of cold weather.

CO'LDLY, ad. without warmth or heat; with great indifference or unconcern.

CO'LDNESS, s. opposite to heat; that quality which causes a sensation of cold, and deprives a person of his natural warmth and heat, want of kindness, love, esteem, or affection; coyness, chastity, or freedom from any immodest desires.

CO'LDSTREAM, a town of Berwickshire, situated on the N. side of the Tweed, with a fine bridge over that river, 11 miles S. W. of Berwick.

COLE, s. [cawl, Sax.] a general name for all sorts of cabbage

CO'LEBROOK-DALE, on the banks of the Severn, in Shropshire, is a winding glen between two hills, which break into various forms, and are covered with woods. Here are very considerable iron works, and a large and elegant bridge, of cast iron, of one arch. There is also in the Dale a spring of fossil tar, or petroleum, together with a spring of brine; and a work has been erected here for obtaining a kind of tar from the condensed smoke o. pit-coal.

COLERAIN, a town of Derry, in Ulster, which, before the building of Londonderry, gave name to the county. It has a valuable salmon fishery, and is situated 4 miles from the sea, &c. on the Bann, (which, being rapid, it is difficult for vessels to come up to the town) 23 miles N. E. of Londonderry, and 114 from Dublin.

CO'LESEED, s. in botany, the rape, from whence rapeseed oil is drawn, cultivated for feeding cattle.

CO'LESHILL, a town in Warwickshire, seated on the ascent of a hill, near the Coln, 11 miles N. W. of Coventry, and 102 from London. Market on Wednesday.

CO'LEWORT, s. in botany, a species of the cabbage.

COLFORD, COLEFORD, or COVERD, a town of Gloucestershire, near which are considerable iron works. It is 5 miles E. of Monmouth, and 124 N. E. of London. Market on Tuesday.

CO'LIC, s. [colicus, Lat.] in medicine, a severe pain in the lower venter, and so called because it was formerly thought to be seated in the colon. A bilious colic proceeds from bilious, sharp, and stimulating humours. A flatulent colic is a pain in the bowels, owing to dry fœces contained in the intestines. A nervous colic is from convulsive spasms, or contortions of the guts, whereby their capacities are straitened. An hysteric colic arises from disorders peculiar to women, and from a consent of parts. The stone colic proceeds, by consent of parts, from the irritation of the stone or gravel in the bladder or kidneys. The Devonshire or plumbers' colic, is a species of colic believed to result from the pernicious influence of lead.

CO'LIC, a. affecting the bowels. "Intestine stone and ulcer, colic pangs." Milt.

To COLLA'PSE, v. n. [from collapsus, Lat.] to fall together; to close together so as one side shall touch another.

COLLA'PSION, s. the state of vessels closing of themselves; the act of closing together.

CO'LLAR, s. [from collum, the neck, Lat.] an ornament of metal, worn by knights of several military orders, hanging over the shoulders on the mantle, and generally consisting of a gold chain, enamelled with cyphers and other devices, and having the badge of the order suspended at the bottom. That of the order of the garter consists o SS, with roses enamelled red, within a garter enamelled blue, and a George at the bottom. Collar is likewise that part of the harness which is round a horse's neck. The part of the dress which surrounds the neck. To slip the collar, is a phrase for getting free, escaping or extricating one's self from any difficult engagement. A collar of brawn is a quantity of brawn rolled and bound up in a roundish parcel.

To CO'LLAR, v. a. to seize by the collar. Joined with brawn, to roll it up and bind it tight with a string, in order to make it retain a round form.

CO'LLAR-BONE, s. the clavicle, one of the bones of which are on each side of the neck.

To COLLA'TE, v. a. [collatum, Lat.] to compare one thing with another of the same kind. Applied to books, to compare and examine them, in order to find whether any thing be deficient, corrupted, or interpolated. Used with to, to place in an ecclesiastical benefice.

COLLA'TERAL, v. [from cum, with and, latus, a side, Lat.] side to side; running parallel; mutual, or such as becomes near relations, applied to affection. In geography, situated by the side of another. Not direct, oblique. Concurrent, applied to proofs. In cosmography, intermediate, or lying between the cardinal points. In genealogy, applied to relations of the same stock, but not in the same line of ascendants and descendants; such are uncles, aunts, nephews, cousins. Collateral descent, in law, is that which passes to brothers' children. Collateral assurance, is a bond made over and above the deed itself for the performance of a covenant. Collateral security, is a deed made of other lands, besides those granted by the deed of mort gage, on their not being a sufficient security.

COLLA'TERALLY, ad. side by side, applied to position or situation. Not in the same line of descendants, though from the same stock, applied to genealogy.

COLLA'TION, s. [collatio, Lat.] the act of bestowing or conferring applied to gifts or favours; the comparing one copy or thing of the same kind with another. In canon law, the bestowing of a benefice by a bishop, who has right of patronage. An elegant public entertainment or feast.

COLLATI'TIOUS, a. [collatitius, Lat.] done by the con tribution of money.

COLLA'TOR, s. one who examines copies or manuscripts, by comparing them with some other writing. In law, one who presents to an ecclesiastical living or benefice, generally applied to the presentation of a bishop.

To COLLA'UD, v. a. [collaudo, Lat.] to join in praising.

CO'LLEAGUE, (kŏlleeg) s. [collega, Lat.] a partner or associate in the same office.

To COLLE'AGUE, (kŏlleeg) v. a. to unite or join with.

To COLLE'CT, v. a. [collectum, Lat.] to gather together; to bring several things together, or into the same place; to add into a sum; to infer, draw, or deduce from arguments. Followed by the reciprocal pronouns himself &c. to recover from a service; to reassemble one's scattered ideas.

CO'LLECT, s. [collecta, Lat.] a short comprehensive prayer, used in the church service.

COLLECTA'NEOUS, a. [collectaneus, Lat.] gathered together, collected.

COLLE'CTEDLY, ad. gathered in one view at once.

COLLE'CTIBLE, a. that may be gathered, or deduced from any premises.

COLLE'CTION, s. [collectio, Lat.] the act of gathering several pieces together; an assemblage of things in the same place.

COLLECTI'TIOUS, (kollektishious) a. [collectitius, Lat.] gathered up. Wants authority.

COLLE'CTIVE, a. [collectivus, Lat.] gathered together, consisting of several members or parts, forming a whole, or one common mass. In logic, a collective idea, is that which unites several things of the same kind. In grammar, a collective noun is a noun which expresses a multitude, or several of the same sort, though used in the singular number; as a company; an army; a fleet.

COLLE'CTIVELY, ad. in a body, taken together, opposed to singly or separately. In general; generally; in one mass or heap.

COLLE'CTOR, s. [collector, Lat.] one who gathers scattered things together; a compiler; a tax-gatherer.

COLLE'GATARY, s. [from con, with and legatum, a legacy, Lat.] in the civil law, a person to whom is left a legacy, in common with one or more other persons.

CO'LLEGE, s. [collegium, Lat.] a community, or society of men set apart for learning or religion. The word college bears a different sense in different countries. In Germany, there is the college of electors, who assemble in the diet of Ratisbon. At Rome there is the college of cardinals, a body composed of three distinct orders of them. The universities of Oxford and Cambridge have their several colleges, in which learning is taught. Among the Jews were several colleges, consisting generally of the tribe of Levi. Samuel is said to have founded the college of the prophets. Among the Greeks, the lyceum and academy were celebrated colleges. Colleges have been generally in the hands of those devoted to religion. Thus the Magi in Persia, the Gymnosophists in the Indies, the Druids in Gaul and Britain, had the care of instructing youth in the sciences. After the establishment of Christianity there were almost as many colleges as monasteries, particularly in the reign of Charlemagne, who enjoined the monks to instruct youth in music, grammar, and arithmetic. In London, there is the College of Civilians, commonly called Doctors Commons, founded by Dr. Harvey, dean of the arches, for the professors of the civil law residing in London. Also, the College of Physicians, a corporation of physicians in London, whose number, by the charter, is not to exceed eighty. Sion College, or College of the London clergy, who were incorporated in 1631, at the request of Dr. White, under the name of the president and fellows of Sion College; it is likewise an hospital for ten poor men, the first within the gates of the house, the other without. Gresham College, or College of Philosophy, founded by Sir William Gresham, who built the Royal Exchange, is now pulled down, and the Excise Office built on its site. The subjects of the lectures (now read in a room over the Royal Exchange) are divinity, astronomy, music, geometry, rhetoric, civil law, and physic; each lecturer had 50l. a year, and had a lodging in the college. College of Heralds, commonly called the Herald's Office, a corporation founded by King Richard III. who granted them several privileges, as to be free from subsidies, tolls, offices, &c. Colleges of Common Law, see Inns of court.

COLLE'GIAL, a. relating to a college, or possessed by a college.

COLLE'GIAN, s. an inhabitant or member of a college.

COLLE'GIATE, a. consisting of colleges; instituted or regulated after the manner of a college. Collegiate church is that which is endowed for a society or body corporate, consisting of a dean and secular priests, without a bishop; of this kind are Westminster-Abbey, Windsor, &c.

COLLE'GIATE, s. a member of college, or one bred at an university.

COLLET, s. [from collum, the neck, Lat.] formerly any thing that was worn about the neck. Figuratively, the neck. Among Jewellers, that part of a ring in which the stone is set.

To COLLI'DE v. a. [collido, Lat.] to strike, beat, or dash two things together, or against each other.

CO'LLIER, s. one who digs for coals in a mine; one who sells or deals in coals; a vessel made use of to convey coals by water.

COLLIERY, s. a coal work.

CO'LLIFLOWER, s. See CAULIFLOWER.

COLLIGA'TION, s. [from cum, with and ligo, to bind, Lat.] the binding things close, or together.

CO'LLIQUABLE, a. easily dissolved; liable to be melted.

COLLI'QUAMENT, s. the substance any thing is reduced to by dissolution, or fusion, i. e. by being dissolved or melted.

CO'LLIQUANT, part a. [colliquans, Lat.] that has the power of dissolving, melting, or wasting.

To CO'LLIQUATE, v. a. [colliqueo, Lat.] to melt, dissolve, or turn a solid into fluid heat, &c. Neuterly, to melt; to be dissolved.

COLLIQUA'TION, s. [colliquatio, Lat.] the melting of any thing by heat. In medicine, a disorder wherein the blood and other animal fluids flow through the secretory glands.

COLLI'QUATIVE, a. melting or dissolvent. A colliquative fever is that which is attended with a diarrhœa, or profuse sweats, from too lax a contexture of the fluids.

COLLIQUEFA'CTION, s. [from colliquefactio, Lat.] the reducing different metals to one mass, by melting them on a fire.

COLLI'SION, s. [collisio, Lat.] the act of striking two bodies together.

To CO'LLOCATE, v. a. [colloco, Lat.] to place; to station.

COLLOCA'TION, s. collocatio, Lat.] the act of placing; disposition.

To COLLO'GUE, (kollog) v. a. to weedle, flatter, impose upon, or seduce by fair words. A low word.

COLLOP, s. a thin slice of meat, or steak; a piece or slice of any animal.

CO'LLOQUY, s. [from cum, with and loquor, to speak, Lat.] a conference or conversation; a discourse in writing, wherein two or more persons are represented as speaking or talking together on any topic.

CO'LLOW, s. [supposed by Johnson rather to be colly, from coal] the black grime of burnt coals or wood.

COLLUCTATION, s. [from cum, with and luctor, to strive, Lat.] the mutual struggle or commotion of the particles of any fluid between themselves; opposition; fermentation. Figuratively, contest; spite, mutual opposition.

To COLLU'DE, v. n. [from cum, with and ludo, to play or deceive, Lat.] to join in a fraud; to conspire in imposing on a person.

COLLU'MPTION, a pretty handsome town of Devonshire, which carries on a manufacture of woollen. It is seated on the river Columb, 10 miles N. of Exeter, and 150 W. by S. of London. Market on Saturday.

COLLU'SION, s. [from cum, with and ludo, to play or deceive, Lat.] in law, a deceitful contract or agreement between two or more persons, for the one to bring an action against the other, in order to defraud a third person of his right.

COLLU'SIVE, a. fraudulently concerted or agreed upon between two persons, in order to cheat a third.

COLLU'SIVELY, ad. concerted or contrived in a fraudulent manner, with a fraudulent design.

COLLU'SORY, s. [from cum, with and ludo, to play or deceive, Lat.] carrying on a fraud by secret concert.

COLLYRIUM, s. [Lat.] in medicine, an external remedy for disorders in the eyes.

CO'LMAR, s. [Fr.] a sort of pear.

COLNBROOK, a town of Bucks, principally supported by the great inns on the Bath road. It is situated on four channels of the river Coln, over each of which it has a bridge, 18 miles W. of London. Part of the town, however, is in Middlesex. Market on Wednesday.

COLNE, a town of Lancashire, near Pendle-Hill, 36 miles S. E. of Lancaster, and 214 N. N. W. of London. Market on Wednesday.

COLO'GNE, (Kölon) lately an electoral bishopric, and one of the most fertile and considerable countries of Germany. It was situated in the circle of the Lower Rhine, and was divided into several districts by other states: the greater part of it, however, lay on the Rhine, between the late duchies of Juliers and Berg. It contained 72 cities and towns, and the country produces, besides corn and other necessaries, excellent wine. The revenues were computed to amount to 130,000l a year.

COLO'GNE, (Kölon) the capital of the above, was an ancient, large city, seated on the W. bank of the Rhine, by means of which river it trades upwards with the interior of Germany, and downwards by large vessels with the Netherlands and Holland. It was a free imperial city, and though the elector had a palace here, he had not the liberty of stay ing in it many days together, without the consent of the citizens; nor was he permitted to come at all with a numerous attendance. It contains 10 collegiate, and 49 parish churches, 4 abbeys, 56 convents, 16 hospitals, and 50 chapels. It is built in the form of a crescent, with 34 gates, and fortified in the ancient manner. The streets, however, except the principal ones, are dirty and ill-paved, and the houses appear dark, and are thinly inhabited. Opposite to the city, on the other side of the Rhine, is the village of Dentz, where there is a flying bridge of boats over the river, across which a large company of men, horses, &c. may pass at a time. It is 17 miles S. E. of Juliers, and 45 E. of Maestricht. Lat 50. 55. N. lon. 7. 10. E.

COLO'GN EARTH, s. a deep brown, very light bastard ochre, which is no pure native fossil, but contains more vegetable than mineral matter, and owes its origin to the remains of wood long buried in the earth.

CO'LON, s. [Gr.] in grammar, a point or stop marked thus (:) used to make a pause greater than that of the semicolon, and less than that of a period; and when stops were first invented, to separate any member of a sentence; but at present it is used in a period where the sense seems complete, but is lengthened by some supernumerary sentence, beginning with an adversative conjunction, as but, nevertheless, &c. In anatomy, the greatest and widest of all the intestines, about eight or nine hands-breadth long.

CO'LONEL, (kûlnel) s. [colonel, Fr.] an officer in the army who has the command in chief of a regiment. Colonel-Lieutenant is one who commands a regiment of the guards, whereof the king, or other great personage, is colonel Lieutenant-Colonel is the second officer of a regiment at the head of the captains, and commands in the colonel's absence.

CO'LONELSHIP, (kûlnelship) s. the office of a colonel.

To CO'LONIZE, (kôlonize) v. a. to plant with inhabitants; to settle with people brought from some other place; to plant with colonies.

COLONNA'DE, s. [from colonna, Ital.] a peristyle of a circular form; or a series of pillars placed in a circle, and insulated withinside. Figuratively, any series or range of pillars.

CO'LONY, s. [colonia, Lat.] a body of people sent from the mother country to cultivate and settle some other place. Figuratively, the country settled by a body of people both in and coming from some other place.

CO'LOPHONY, (kôlofony) s. [Colophon, a city, whence it is imported] a resinous substance prepared of turpentine boiled in water, and afterwards dried; or from a slow evaporation of a fourth or fifth part of its substance by fire.

COLOQUINTEDA, s. [from koilia, the belly, and kineo, to move, Gr.] the fruit of a plant of the same name brought from the Levant, often called bitter-apple.

CO'LORATE, a. [coloratus, Lat.] coloured; dyed; marked or stained with any colour.

COLORA'TION, s. [from coloro, to colour, Lat.] the art or practice of colouring or painting; the state of a thing coloured.

COLORI'FIC, a. [from color, a colour, and facio, to make Lat.] that has the power of producing colours, or of colouring any body.

COLO'SSE, or COLO'SSUS, s. [colossus, Lat.] a statute of enormous size; that of Apollo at Rhodes, made by Chares, was so high that ships could pass, with full sails, between its legs; its height was 126 feet; few people could fathom its thumb; it was overthrown by an earthquake after standing 1360 years; and being found prostrate on the ground by the Saracens, when they became masters of the island, was sold by them to a Jew, who loaded 900 camels with the brass of it.

CO'LOUR, (kûller) s. [color, Lat.] the different sensations excited by the refracted rays of light, reflected on our eyes in a different manner, according to the different size, shape, or situation of the particles of which bodies are composed. In a popular or vulgar sense, the different hue in which bodies appear to the eye. Figuratively, the rosy hue of the cheeks; the tints or lines produced by covering any surface with paint. Under colour, appearance, or pretence.

To CO'LOUR, (kûller) v. a. [coloro, Lat.] to mark, or dye with some hue or tint. Figuratively, to palliate, or excuse: to assign some plausible or specious reason for an undertaking; to blush.

CO'LOURABLE, (kûllerable) a. specious, plausible.

CO'LOURABLY, (kûllerably) ad. plausibly; speciously.

CO'LOURED, (kûllered) part. streaked; diversified with different hues.

CO'LOURING, (kûllering) s. that branch of painting which teaches the proper distribution of lights and shades, and laying the colours with propriety and beauty.

CO'LOURIST, (kûllerist) s. a painter excellent in the tints he gives his pieces, and the manner in which he disposes his lights and shades.

CO'LOURLESS, a. without colour; white; transparent.

COLT, s. [colt, Sax.] a young horse that has never been ridden or broke. Figuratively, a raw, ignorant person.

CO'LTER, s. [cultor, Sax.] the sharp iron of a plough, which breaks up the ground perpendicularly to the ploughshare.

CO'LTIE, s. a term used by timber-merchants for a defect or blemish in some of the annular circles of a tree, whereby its value is much diminished.

CO'LTISH, a. resembling a colt; wanton.

CO'LTSFOOT, s. in botany, a species of tussilago, or butterbur, with yellow compound blossoms, and angular toothed leaves, somewhat heart-shaped, appearing after the flower. The leaves are recommended in coughs and consumptive complaints, and have been found to be very serviceable in scrofulous cases. It is found on moist, stiff, marly lands, and amongst limestone rubbish, flowering in March.

COLT's-TOOTH, s. an imperfect or superfluous tooth in the mouth of a young horse. Figuratively, an inclination to youthful pleasures, wantonness, or gaiety.

CO'LUMBARY, s. [from columba, a pigeon, Lat.] a place where doves or pigeons are kept; a dove-cot; a pigeon house.

CO'LUMBATES, s. in chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with the columbic acid.

CO'LUMBIC, a. in chemistry, belonging to columbium.

CO'LUMBINE, s. [from columba, a pigeon, Lat.] in dying, a pale violet, or changeable dove-colour. Likewise the heroine or chief female character in pantomime entertainments. A plant, with leaves like the meadow-rue.

CO'LUMBIUM, s. in chemistry, a metal newly discovered in America.

CO'LUMB MAGNA, or St. COLUMB, a little town in Cornwall, but with a large parish, seated on a hill, at the bottom of which is a river which runs into the sea at a small distance. It is 10 miles W. of Bodmin, and 249 from London. Markets on Monday and Thursday.

COLUMBO, a town on the W. side of the island of Ceylon, formerly subject to the Dutch, but now in the hands of the English. Lat. 7. 10. N. lon. 79. 56. E.

COLUMN, (cŏlum) s. [columna, Lat.] in architecture, a round pillar made to support or adorn a building. In war, a deep file or row of troops or division of an army, marching at the same time towards the same place, with intervals between them to prevent confusion. SYNON. By the word pillar is understood a supporter of some roof: by the word column a particular kind of pillar, that which is round, thus every column is a pillar, though every pillar is not a column. With printer's, a column is half a page, when divided into two equal parts by a line passing through the middle, from the top to the bottom; and, by several parallel lines, pages are often divided into three or more columns.

COLU'MNAR, or COLUMNA'RIAN, a. formed in the shape of a column

COLURES, (kolεúrz) s. [colari, Lat.] in geography and astronomy, two great circles imagined to intersect each other at right angles, in the poles of the world; one of which passes through the equinoctial points, Aries and Libra; the other through the solstitial points, Cancer and Capricorn; the latter determining the solstices, and the former the equinoxes.

CO'MA, s. [Gr.] in physic, a kind of lethargy or sleepy disease, wherein a person has a violent propensity to sleep.

COMATO'SE, a. [from koma, a drowsy disease, Gr.] lethargic; sleepy; or affected with a coma.

COMB, (kōm) s. [camb, Sax.] an instrument made of horn, tortoise-shell, or box, sawed, through which the hair is passed in order to cleanse or adjust it; likewise an instrument made of iron or steel wires fixed upright on a piece of wood, through which flax, wool, or hemp, is passed to prepare it for spinning. The top or crest of a cock, so called from its resembling the teeth of a comb. The receptacles or hollow places in a bee-hive, wherein the honey is stored.

To COMB, (kōm) v. a. [camben, Sax.] to clean or smooth the hair by passing a comb through it; to make wool or flax fit for spinning, by passing it through a comb.

To CO'MBAT, v. n. [combattre, Fr.] to fight, generally applied to a duel or a fight, where the persons engage hand to hand. Actively, to fight. Figuratively, to engage.

CO'MBAT, s. [combat, Fr.] a contest; in ancient law, a formal trial between two champions, to decide some doubtful cause or quarrel, by the sword or batoon; a battle with another, sometimes restrained to a duel, generally applied to an engagement between two persons; a duel. Figuratively, opposition or struggle.

CO'MBATANT, s. [combattant, Fr.] he that fights. Figuratively, a champion or stickler for any opinion.

CO'MB-BRUSH, s. a brush to clean combs.

CO'MBER, (kōmer) s. one who passes wool through the comb, and prepares it for the spinner.

CO'MB-MAKER, s. one whose trade is to make combs.

COMBINATION, s. an union of private persons for some particular purpose. Figuratively, union of qualities or bodies; mixture. In chemistry, a term expressive of a true chemical union of two or more substances; in opposition to mere mechanical mixture. Union, or association, applied to ideas. In mathematics, the variation, or different order in which any number of things may be disposed.

To COMBI'NE, v. a. to join together. Figuratively, to link together in unity, affection, or concord. Neuterly, to join together, applied to things. Figuratively, to unite in one body. To unite in friendship, applied to persons.

CO'MBLESS, (kōmless) a. wanting a comb, without a comb, applied to a cock.

COMB-MARTIN, a town of Devonshire, seated on an inlet of the Bristol Channel, with a cove for the landing of boats. It is 14 miles N. E. of Barnstaple, and 181 from London. Market on Saturday.

COMBU'ST, a. [from comburo, to burn, Lat.] burnt. In astronomy, applied to a planet when not above 8½ degrees distant from the sun on either side.

COMBU'STIBLE, a. that may be burnt, or that easily catches fire.

COMBUSTIBLES, substances which readily take fire. In chemistry, certain substances which are capable of combining more or less rapidly with oxygen. They are divided by chemists into simple and compound combustibles.

COMBUSTIBLENESS, s. the quality of catching fire easily.

COMBUSTION, (kombúst-yun) s. [Fr.] the burning of several things together; conflagration; consumption by fire. Figuratively, confusion, noise, hurry, commotion, produced by restless minds, either in moral or political affairs.

To COME, v. n. preter. I came, or have come, participle come; [coman, Sax.] to move from a distant to a nearer situation, either to a thing or person; to approach, draw near to, or advance towards. To proceed; to issue. To become. To become present, and no longer absent. To happen; to fall out. To come about, to come to pass, to fall out. To change; to come round. To come after, to follow. To come in, to enter. To comply; to yield; to hold out no longer. To arrive at a port or place or rendezvous. To become modish or brought into use. To be an ingredient; to make part of a composition. To come into, to join with, to bring help. To comply with; to agree to. To come over, to repeat an act. To revolt. To rise in distillation. To come out, to be made public. To be discovered. To come out with, to give a vent to; to let fly. To come abroad, to be publicly known or published. To come to, to arrive at or attain. To follow as a consequence; to happen. To come again, to come a second time; to return. To come at, to reach. To come by, to obtain, gain, or acquire. To come in for, to be early enough to obtain a share of any thing, alluding to the custom of hunting, where those dogs that are slow come in for no share of the game. To come near, to approach; to assemble. To come off, to escape; to quit or fall from, or leave. To come on, to thrive, or grow; to advance to combat. To come to, to agree or consent; to amount to, applied to arithmetic. To come to himself, &c. to recover from a fright or a fit. To come up with, to overtake. To come upon, to invade, attack, or seize unexpectedly.

COME, interjection, implying an exhortation to attention, dispatch, and courage, when used singly; but when repeated, it implies a grant, permission, supposition, or a transition from the topic which preceded, to avoid giving offence.

COME, ad. means when it shall come. To come, in futurity; not present.

COME'DIAN, s. [comédien, Fr.] one who acts on the stage. In a restrained sense, applied only to one who appears in a comedy; but in a more loose sense, any actor.

CO'MEDY, s. [from kome, and ode, two Greek words, signifying a village and a poem, because it was at first only a poem exhibited in villages] a dramatic piece, representing some diverting transaction, being an exact picture of common life, exposing the faults of private persons, in order to render them ridiculous and universally avoided.

CO'MELINESS, s. grace; handsomeness united with an appearance of dignity.

CO'MELY, a. handsome, graceful, applied to that appearance which excites reverence rather than love. Applied to things, that which is suitable to a person's age and condition, consistent with virtue, or agreeable to the rules of right reason.

CO'MELY, ad. in a graceful, becoming, and pleasing manner.

CO'MER, s. that which soon grows, or rises above ground, applied to plants. A visitor, a person who enters or settles in a place. To give up one's self to the first comer, is to embrace any doctrine implicitly, and without examination.

CO'MET, s. [from coma, a lock of hair, Lat.] in astronomy, an opaque heavenly body, like the planets, moving in its proper orbit, which is very eccentric, having one of its foci in the centre of the sun. It is distinguished not only by its orbit, but likewise by its appearance, from the planets, as being bearded, tailed, and haired; bearded when eastward of the sun, and its light marches before; tailed when westward of the sun, and the train follows it; and haired when diametrically opposite to the sun, having the earth between it, and all its tail hid except a few scattered rays. The orbits of comets approaching near to a right line in some parts thereof, they go so near the sun, that, according to Sir Isaac Newton's computation, the sun's heat, in that remarkable one in 1680, was to his heat with us, as twenty eight thousand to one: and that the heat of the body of the comet, was near two thousand times as great as that of red hot iron. To this let it be added, from the same great author, that those bodies are so far from being such tremendous objects as they are esteemed to be by the vulgar, and falsely pretended to be by atheists; that their atmospheres being dilated, rarefied and diffused through the celestial regions, may be attracted down to the planets, become mingled with their atmospheres, and by that means supply the deficiences which would otherwise, by continual exhausting, affect this and other planets; so that their revolutions, instead of being looked on as the harbingers of terror and calamity, should rather be esteemed a friendly and benevolent visit, wherein they bestow such presents to every planet they pass by, as are requisite to prevent its decay, and supply its inhabitants with such things as are necessary to their existence. Of the vast number of comets which have been discovered, the courses of so few have been at present accurately calculated, as to leave considerable doubts on the subject of their revolutions.

COMETA'RIUM, s. [Lat.] a mathematical machine, representing the method of a comet's revolution.

CO'METARY, or COME'TIC, a. that belongs or relates to a comet.

CO'MFIT, s. [konfit, Belg.] a dry sweet-meat; any vegetable preserved by boiling it in sugar, and drying it afterwards.

To CO'MFORT, v. a. [comforto, low Lat.] to strengthen, excite, invigorate, enliven, or make a person undertake a thing boldly by persuasions; to make a person grow cheerful that is in sorrow, by advice and arguments.

CO'MFORT, s. support, assistance, or countenance; consolation, or support under calamity and danger.

CO'MFORTABLE, a. receiving relief or support in distress; affording consolation; having the power of lessening distress.

CO'MFORTABLY, ad. in a cheerful manner; in a manner free from dejection or despair.

CO'MFORTER, s. one that diminishes or lessens the degree of a person's sorrow under misfortunes; one who strengthens and supports the mind in misery or danger. The title of the Third Person of the Holy Trinity.

CO'MFORTLESS, a. without comfort, without any thing to lighten the burden, or allay the sensation of misfortunes; applied both to persons and things.

CO'MFREY, s. in botany, a piece of the symphytum of Linnæus, with leaves betwixt egg and spear shaped, running along the stem, and yellowish white or purple blossoms. It is found on the banks of rivers and wet ditches, flowering in May.

CO'MIC, or CO'MICAL, a. [comique, Fr.] relating to, or fit for comedy; ridiculous or causing mirth, either from an unusual assemblage of ideas, seemingly inconsistent, or antic gestures, and polite raillery.

CO'MICALLY, ad. in such a manner as to raise mirth, either by an association or assemblage of ideas seemingly inconsistent, by polite or good-natured raillery, or by some odd or antic gestures.

CO'MICALNESS, s. that quality by which a thing appears odd or ridiculous, and raises mirth in the mind.

CO'MING, s. the act of moving towards a person or place; approach; presence, or arrival; the presence of a thing which was absent some time before. Coming-in, the product of a person's estate, pension, salary, or business.

CO'MING, part. applied to the inclination, propensity, or affection; fond; forward; easily complying. Applied to time, something not present; something future.

COMI'TIAL, (komishal) a. [from comitia, Lat.] relating to an assembly, applied particularly to that of the Romans.

CO'MMA, s. [Gr.] in grammar, a pause, or stop marked thus, (,) used to distinguish such members of a discourse from each other, wherein there is a verb and nominative case, or several nouns, adjectives, or substantive, in the same sentence, not joined by a conjunction, and where the sense is not complete. In music, the smallest of all the sensible intervals of tone, seldom used but in theory, to shew the justness of the concords, and is about the ninth part of a tone, or interval, whereby a perfect semitone, or tone, surpasses an imperfect one. In natural history, a very beautiful moth, so called from its having a white mark on one of its wings, in the form of this point.

To COMMA'ND, v. a. [commander, Fr.] to order, including the idea of authority; to keep in subjection; to oblige a person to perform any thing. Figuratively, to arrogate or claim by mere force; to overlook; to be situated above any place, so as to be able to look into, or annoy it.

COMMA'ND, s. authority or power. Figuratively, the exercise of authority, or enforcing obedience. In a military sense, the power of overlooking and taking or annoying any place.

COMMA'NDER, s. he that has the direction of, or authority over others. In a military sense, a leader chief, or officer. A paving-beetle, or rammer. In surgery an instrument, called likewise a glossocomium, used in most tough, strong bodies, where the luxation has been of long continance.

COMMA'NDERY, s. the exercise of a command, or the office of a commander. In history, applied to a benefice or fixed revenue belonging to a military order, and conferred on ancient knights, who had done some considerable service to the order.

COMMA'NDMENT, s. [commandement, Fr.] an express order to do or abstain from any thing. When it orders any thing to be done, it is named a positive command; but when it forbids the doing a thing, it is then termed a negative command.

COMMA'NDRESS, s. a woman vested with supreme authority.

COMMATE'RIAL, a. [from con or cum, with, and materia, matter, Lat.] consisting of the same matter with another thing.

COMMATERIA'LITY, s. of the same matter or substance with another; resemblance to something in its matter or substance.

COMME'MORABLE, a. [from con, with, used frequently to strengthen the signification, and memorabilis, memorable, Lat.] deserving to be mentioned with honour and reverence, worthy to be celebrated and kept in remembrance.

To COMME'MORATE, v. a. [from con, with, used here to strengthen the signification, and memorabilis, memorable, Lat.] to preserve the memory by some public act; to celebrate solemnly.

COMMEMORA'TION, s. the doing something in order to preserve the remembrance of any person or thing.

COMME'MORATIVE, a. tending to preserve the remembrance of any person or thing.

To COMME'NCE, v. n. [commencer, Fr.] to begin; to take its beginning; to assume a new character which it never did before, applied to persons and things.

COMME'NCEMENT, s. beginning; date.

To COMME'ND, v. a. [from con, with, and mando, to entrust, to commend, Lat.] to represent a person as possessed of those virtues that demand notice, approbation, and esteem; to praise; to deliver, or entrust with confidence, and full assurance of protection. To desire to be mentioned in a kind and respectful manner.

COMME'NDABLE, a. worthy of praise.

COMME'NDABLY, ad. laudably; in a manner worthy of commendation.

COMME'NDAM, s. [commenda, low Lat.] in canons, a vacant benefice which is given to a person to supply till some other person is presented or named to it.

COMME'NDATARY, s. one who holds a living on commendam.

COMMENDA'TION, s. a favourable representation of a person's good qualities; praise; recommendation; a message of kindness.

COMME'NDATORY, a. that commands or engages notice, esteem, and approbation, from a favourable display of good qualities; containing praises.

COMME'NDER, s. one who praises or displays the virtues of another, in order to render him esteemed and beloved.

COMMENSA'LITY, s. [from con, with, and mensa, a table, Lat.] the act of eating, or sitting to eat, at the same table with another.

COMMENSURABILITY, or COMME'NSURABLENESS, s. the capacity of being measured by some common measure or standard.

COMME'NSURABLE, a. [from con, with, and mensura, a measure, Lat.] in geometry, having some common aliquot part, or which may be measured by some common measure, so as to leave no remainder. Thus an inch and a yard are commensurable, because an inch taken 36 times is a yard.

To COMME'NSURATE, v. a. from con, with, and mensura, a measure, Lat.] to reduce to one common measure; to extend as far as.

COMME'NSURATE, a. reducible to one common measure; equal; proportionate.

COMME'NSURATELY, ad. a capacity of measuring or being measured by another, equally extensive.

COMMENSURATION, s. the reduction of, or measuring a thing by some common measure; proportion.

To COMMENT, v. n. [commentor, Lat.] to write notes; to explain, interpret, or expound.

COMMENT, s. notes or annotations, in order to explain an author; exposition; explanation; remark.

COMMENTARY, s. [commentarius, Lat.] a continued and critical explanation of the sense of an author.

COMMENTATOR, s. one who writes remarks, notes, or explanations of an author.

COMMENTITIOUS, (kommentishious) a. [from commentator, to feign, Lat.] invented; forged; fictitious; without any existence but in the brain.

COMMERCE, s. [from cum, with and mer, merchandise, Lat.] the exchange of commodities, or the buying and selling merchandise both at home and abroad, in order to gain profit, and increase the conveniences of life. Nothing more clearly exhibits the uncertainty of human affairs than the history of commerce. Among the most ancient commercial nations, were the Egyptians, Phœnicians and Carthagenians, to which may be added some companies of Arabians. Solomon, king of Israel, cultivated commerce with great diligence, and hence derived a large portion of that prodigious wealth which enabled him to build the temple. The Romans protected commerce through their extensive empire, but did not seek to monopolise it within their own possession. During the middle ages, commerce was chiefly carried on by the Italians and Germans. The most commercial Italian states were the Pisans, Florentines, Genoese, and Venetians, who, abounding in shipping, took occasion to spread themselves through all the ports of the Levant and Egypt, and bringing thence silk, spices, and other merchandises, and furnishing with them the greatest part of Europe. Towards the end of the twelfth century, the German cities situate on the coast of the Baltic, and on the rivers that ran into it, obtained a considerable traffic with the neighbouring states, and formed a confederation of 72 towns, called the Hans Towns. At the beginning of the 16th century, after the discovery of America and the Cape of good Hope, the commerce of the East was chiefly engrossed by the Portuguese, and that of the West by the Spaniards. An hundred years after, their glory was eclipsed by the English and Dutch, and since the late revolution in France, the English may be regarded as standing without a rival in commercial importance. SYNON. Commerce is used figuratively, for intercourse of any kind. Traffic relates more to the exchanging of merchandise; trade and commerce, to that of buying and selling; with this difference, that trade seems to imply the manufacturing and vending of merchandise within ourselves; commerce, negociating with other countries.

COMMERCIAL, a. belonging or relating to trade or commerce.

To COMMIGRATE, v. n. [from con, with, and migro, to remove, Lat.] to move in a body, or with one common consent, from one country to another.

COMMIGRATION, s. the removal of a large number of persons or animals from one country to another.

COMMINATION, s. [from cum, with, here inserted to strengthen the signification, and minor, to threaten, Lat.] a threat, a declaration or denunciation of punishment or vengeance for any crime; an office of the church, containing the threatenings denounced against any breach of the divine laws, and recited on Ash-Wednesday.

COMMINATORY, a. applied to a clause in any law or edict, importing a punishment for the breach or violation of it.

COMMINUTIBLE, a. [from comminuo, to break in pieces, Lat.] that may be broken, powdered, or reduced into small parts.

To COMMINUTE, v. a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and minuo, to make less, Lat.] to pulverize; to grind; to break into small parts.

COMMINUTION, s. the act of reducing into small particles, by grinding, powdering, breaking, or chewing.

COMMI'SERABLE, a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and miseror, to pity, Lat.] that deserves, or is the object of pity and relief; shewing pity and compassion to persons in distress.

To COMMI'SERATE, v. a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and miseror, to pity, Lat.] to pity; to compassionate. SYNON. We naturally commiserate the sorrows of one we love. We may pity, and yet not have compassion. We may have both pity and compassion, yet not commiserate.

COMMISERATION, s. [commiseratio, Lat.] a tender, sympathizing, and affectionate regard for those in distress.

COMMISSARY, s. [commissarius, low Lat.] an officer commissioned occasionally for a certain purpose; a delegate or deputy. In church government, one who exercises ecclesiastical jurisdiction in such places as are at a considerable distance from the bishop's see. In the army, a commissary-general of the musters, is one who takes a view of the numbers or strength of every regiment, sees that the horse are well mounted, and that the men be well clothed and accoutred. Commissary general of provisions, furnishes the army with every necessary for its food.

COMMI'SSION, s. [from committo, to commit, Lat.] the act of entrusting any thing; a trust; a warrant by which any trust is held. In common law, the warrants or letters patent, which all persons, exercising jurisdiction, have to empower them to hear and determine any cause or suit, as commission of the judges, &c. There are a great variety of Commissions issued from the crown. In trade, it sometimes means the power of acting for another, and sometimes the premium or reward a person receives for so doing, which is ½, 1, 2, 3, or more per cent. according to the nature or circumstances of the affair.

To COMMI'SSION, v. a. to authorize, empower, appoint, or give a person authority to discharge an office.

COMMI'SSIONER, s. one whose name is inserted in any warrant for the discharge of a public office; one empowered to act in a particular quality by patent or warrant.

COMMI'SSURE, s. [commissura, Lat.] a joint; or a place where two bodies, or the parts of an animal body, are joined together.

To COMMIT, v. a. [committo, Lat.] to entrust; or trust a person; to send a person to prison; to perform, act, or perpetrate some crime or fault.

COMMITMENT, s. the act of sending a person to prison; imprisonment.

COMMITTEE, s. a number of persons to whom the consideration or examination of an affair is referred.

COMMITTER, s. a perpetrator; he that commits.

COMMITTIBLE, a. liable to be committed; an object worthy of imprisonment.

To COMMIX, v. a. [from, con, with, and misceo, to mingle, Lat.] to mix, blend, or join several things together, or into one mass.

COMMIXION, COMMIXTION, s. mixture; incorporation.

COMMIXTURE, s. the act of mingling; the state of being mingled; incorporation.

COMMODE, s. [Fr.] the head-dress of a woman.

COMMODIOUS, a. [commodus, Lat.] suitable to any particular purpose; free from any hinderance or obstruction; convenient; seasonable, or suitable; spacious, well contrived, applied to building.

COMMODIOUSLY, ad. in a convenient manner, applied to situation. Enjoying the necessaries and comforts of life, applied to condition. Fitted or suited to any particular end or view.

COMMODIOUSNESS, s. the fitness or suitableness of a thing to any end; advantage.

COMMODITY, s. [commoditas, Lat.] conveniency, profit, interest, or advantage. In commerce, wares, goods, merchandise, or that which is the object of trade.

COMMODORE, s. in the navy, an under admiral, or person commissioned to command a squadron of ships. When three or more sail of ships are in company, the eldest captain assumes this post, and has this title. The commodore's ship is distinguished by a broad, red pendant, tapering towards the outer end, and sometimes forked.

COMMON, a. [communis, Lat.] that is enjoyed by different species of animals; belonging equally to more than one; the property of no person; without a proprietor or possessor; vulgar; mean; trifling; frequently seen; usual; easy to be had; of little value; general; public; intended for the use of every body. In grammar, applied to such verbs as signify both action and passion. Applied to nouns, such as signify both sexes under one term, as parent signifies both father and mother.

COMMON, s. an open field, free for any inhabitant of the lordship wherein the common lies to graze his cattle in.

To COMMON, v. n. to enjoy a right of pasture in an open field in conjunction with others.

COMMONABLE, a. that may become open or free, applied to ground.

COMMONAGE, s. in law, the right of pasture in a common; or fishing in another person's water; or of digging turf in the ground of another; the joint right of using any thing equally and together with others.

COMMONALTY, s. [communauté, Fr.] the people of the lower rank; the common people. Figuratively, the major part or bulk of mankind.

COMMONER, s. one of the common people; one of low rank; a person who bears no title; one who has a seat in the house of commons. In law, one who has a joint right to pasture, &c. in an open field. In the University, one who wears a square cap with a tassel when under graduate, is of rank between a battler and gentleman commoner, and eats at the common table.

COMMONITION, s. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and moneo, to admonish, Lat.] advice, warning.

COMMON LAW, s. customs, which by long prescription have obtained the force of law, and were received as laws in England, before any statute was enacted in parliament to alter the same; and are now distinguished from the statute law.

COMMONLY, ad. generally; frequently; usually.

COMMONNESS, s. frequency, or repetition; participation among, or application to several.

To COMMONPLACE, v. a. to reduce to, and transcribe under general heads.

COMMONPLACE-BOOK, s. a book wherein things or extracts are recorded alphabetically, or reduced to general heads, in order to assist a person's memory, or enable him to supply himself with any curious observations on any topic he wants.

COMMON-PLEAS, s. the king's court, now held at Westminster, but formerly moveable; it was erected at the time that Henry III. granted the great charter. In personal and mixed actions, it has a concurrent jurisdiction with the King's Bench; but has no cognizance of the pleas of the crown; the actions come hither by originals; the chief judge is called Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, who is assisted by three other judges, all of them created by letters patent.

COMMON-PRAYER, s. the liturgy, or forms of service, used by the church of England.

COMMONS, s. the vulgar; the lower sort of people; the lower house of parliament, consisting of members chosen by the people. A portion of food or victuals usually eaten at one meal, so called at the universities.

COMMONWEAL, or COMMONWEALTH, (kommonwéel, or kommonwélth) s. in its primary sense, used in law, the common good; a regular form of government or polity, established by common consent; a form of government in which the supreme power is lodged in the people; a republic; a democracy.

COMMORANCE, or COMMORANCY, s. dwelling; habitation; abode; residence.

COMMORANT, a. [from commoror, to reside, Lat.] resident, dwelling, tarrying, sojourning.

COMMOTION, s. [from commoveo, to agitate, Lat.] tumult, disturbance, sedition, disorder, or confusion, arising from the turbulent dispositions of its members, applied to a state. Figuratively, inward confusion or violence; disorder of mind; perturbation; a violent motion or agitation.

To COMMUNE, v. n. [communico, Lat.] to converse; to talk together; to impart sentiments mutually.

COMMUNICABILITY, s. an open or generous disposition, whereby a person is willing to impart his sentiments to another; the possibility or power of being imparted or communicated to another.

COMMUNICABLE, a. [communicable, Fr.] that may become the property of, or be related or imparted to another; used with to.

COMMUNICANT, s. one who partakes of the blessed sacrament.

To COMMUNICATE, v. n. [communico, Lat.] to impart to another; to make another a joint partaker with ourselves; to confer or bestow a possession; to discover one's sentiments or knowledge to another. Neuterly, in theology, to receive the sacrament of the Lord's Supper; to be connected or joined; to have something common with another.

COMMUNICATION, s. [communication, Fr.] applied to science, the act of imparting, discovering, or revealing. A common inlet or passage, leading from one place to another; the mutual intelligence kept up between persons or places; a conversation, conference, or imparting a person's sentiments in mutual discourse.

COMMUNICATIVE, a. inclined to make advantages common; liberal of benefits or knowledge; not close; not selfish.

COMMUNICATIVENESS, s. readiness of imparting benefits or knowledge to others.

COMMUNION, s. [from communis, common, Lat.] intercourse; fellowship; common possession; a partaking of the same thing. In divinity, the common or public celebration of the Lord's Supper.

COMMUNITY, s. [communitas, from communis, common, Lat.] a government; a body of people united together in the same form of government; common participation, possession, or enjoyment, opposed to approbation.

COMMUTABILITY, s. the quality of being the proper object of interchange, or of being capable of exchange.

COMMUTABLE, a. an alteration or change of disposition or sentiment, applied to the mind. A change or form of quality, applied to bodies; the giving one thing in exchange for another; the substituting a pecuniary for a corporeal punishment; that may be ransomed or redeemed.

COMMUTATION, s. [from commuto, to change, Lat.] change, alteration, bartering; the exchanging a corporeal for a pecuniary punishment.

COMMUTATIVE, a. [from commuto, to change, Lat.] relating to exchange. Commutative justice, that which is exercised in trade, and is opposed to fraud or extortion in buying and selling.

To COMMU'TE, v. a. [from commuto, to change, Lat.] to exchange; to put one thing in the place of another; to buy off, or ransom. Neuterly, to atone; to bargain for exemption.

COMMU'TUAL, a. mutual; reciprocal. Used only in poetry. "Commutual zeal." Pope.

CO'MO, a town, lake, and district of Milan. The lake is about 5 miles in breadth, and 88 in circumference. The town is situated on the S. extremity of the lake. Here the younger Pliny was born, who, in his letters, speaks with rapture of the delightful scenery in the environs of his native town. His statute is placed in an niche on the outside of one of the churches, with a latin inscription, bearing the date of 1499. The inhabitants have established several manufactories of cotton and silk, and trade with the Grisons. Como is 20 miles N. W. of Milan. Lat. 45. 44. N. lon. 9. 7. E.

CO'MORA ISLANDS, a cluster of islands in the Indian Ocean, lying opposite to the coast of Zanguebar, in Africa; N. of the Channel of Mosambine, and N. W. of Madagascar. They are four in number, Johanna or Anjoin, Mayotta, Mohilla, and Comora or Angazija. Comora, which gives name to the rest, is about 6 leagues long and 3 wide. The mountains are lofty, and richly clothed with wood, chiefly fruit-trees; fine streams are numerous, and the grass and trees are green throughout the year. They produce rice, peas, yams, purslain, cocoa-nuts, plantains, oranges, lemons, citrons, limes, pine-apples, cucumbers, tamarinds, sugar-canes, and honey. Their animals are buffaloes, goats, tortoises, cameleons, large bats, hens, and a great variety of birds unknown in Europe. Though Johanna is not the largest island, the Arabs, who have settled here, exact tribute from all the others. They are about 3000 in number, profess the Mahometan religion, and are settled on the sea-coast. The original natives, in number about 7000, occupy the hills, and are frequently at war with them, as are also the natives of the other islands. In the interior part of the island is a lake accounted sacred by the natives; on this there is a number of ducks, which they hold in veneration. Being averse to conduct strangers there, they stipulate that all guns shall be left at a place 5 miles from the lake. The birds being thus kept in safety, become perfectly tame, and fearlessly approach those who go to see them. The Arabian part of the islanders detest this superstition, but dare not forbid the practice of it. The East India ships often touch here for refreshments. The people on the coast speak English intelligibly. They preserve the language and manners of Arabia, and are not of so dark a complexion as the original natives. The Comora islands lie between 11 and 13 deg. S. lat. and between 44. and 47. E. lon.

CO'MPACT, s. [pactum, Lat.] a bargain or agreement entered into by two or more parties; a contract.

To CO'MPACT, v. a. [compactum, from compingo, Lat.] to unite or join together closely; to consolidate, or render solid by pressing the particles of a body close together; to league or enter into a bargain.

COMPA'CT, a. [compactus, Lat.] close, dense, and heavy; having few pores, and those very small. Applied to style, concise, or containing much matter in few words.

COMPA'CTLY, ad. in a close, neat manner.

COMPA'CTNESS, s. firmness, hardness, density.

COMPA'CTURE, s. the manner in which any thing is joined; a joint or joining.

COMPA'GES, s. [Lat.] a composition or system wherein several things are joined or united.

COMPAGINA'TION, s. [compago, Lat.] union, or joining several parts together.

COMPA'NION, s. [compagnon, Fr.] one with whom a person frequently converses, or with whom he is generally seen.

COMPA'NIONABLE, a. fit for the company of others agreeable; sociable.

COMPA'NIONSHIP, s. a body of men forming one company; fellowship or association.

CO'MPANY, s. [compagnie, Fr.] several persons assembled in the same room, either for conversation or mutual entertainment; several persons united together to carry on one general and common design; a number of persons united or incorporated by some charter; a body corporate; a corporation. The several professions and bodies exercised in the city of London, are incorporated into distinct fraternities, governed by their particular laws. They are 91 in number, viz. 1. Mercers, 2. Grocers. 3. Drapers. 4. Fishmongers. 5. Goldsmiths. 6. Skinners. 7. Merchant Taylors. 8. Haberdashers. 9. Salters. 10. Ironmongers. 11. Vinters. 12 Clothworkers. 13. Dyers. 14. Brewers. 15. Leather-sellers. 16. Pewterers. 17. Barber-surgeons. 18. Cutlers. 19. Bakers. 20. Wax-chandlers. 21. Tallow-chandlers. 22. Armourers. 23. Girdlers. 24. Butchers. 25. Sadlers. 26. Carpenters. 27. Cordwainers. 28. Painter-stainers. 29. Curriers. 30. Masons. 31. Plumbers. 32. Innholders. 33. Founders. 34. Poulterers. 35. Cooks. 36. Coopers. 37. Tylers and Bricklayers. 38. Bowyers. 39. Fletchers. 40. Blacksmiths. 41. Joiners and Cielers. 42. Weavers. 43. Woolmen. 44. Scriveners. 45. Fruiterers. 46. Plaisterers. 47. Stationers. 48. Broderers. 49. Upholders. 50. Musicians. 51. Turners. 52. Basket-makers. 53. Glaziers. 54. Horners. 55. Farriers. 56. Paviors. 57. Loriners. 58. Apothecaries. 59. Shipwrights. 60. Spectacle-makers. 61. Clock-makers. 62. Glovers. 63. Comb-makers. 64. Felt-makers. 62. Frame-work-knitters. 66. Silk-throwers. 67. Silkmen. 68. Carmen. 69. Pin-makers. 70. Needle-makers. 71. Gardeners. 72. Soap-makers. 73. Tin-plate-workers. 74. Wheelwrights. 75. Distillers. 76. Hatband-makers. 77. Patten-makers. 78. Glass-sellers and looking-glass-makers. 79. Tobacco-pipe-makers. 80. Coach and harness-makers. 81. Gunsmiths. 82. Gold and silver wire-drawers. 83. Long bow-string makers. 84. Card-makers. 85. Fan-makers. 86. Woodmongers. 87. Starch-makers. 88. Fishermen. 89. Parish-clerks. 90. Porters. 91. Watermen, &c. There were formerly various trading companies, some of which have become extinct. By far the most important of any now existing, is the East India Company, which monopolizes all the trade to the East Indies and China. Much dispute has been of late agitated concerning the utility of this company. In war, company means a small body of infantry, under one captain. In the marine, a number of merchant ships going the same voyage, and mutually bound by charter party, to stand by and defend each other. To bear or keep company, is to go with a person, or to visit him often.

To CO'MPANY, v. a. to be often in a person's presence; to go or walk with a person; to attend; to associate with.

CO'MPARABLE, a. worthy to be compared; equal to, or resembling.

CO'MPARABLY, ad. in such a manner as is worthy of comparison; in a comparative manner.

CO'MPARATES, s. in logic, the two things compared to one another.

COMPA'RATIVE, a. [from comparo, to compare, Lat.] that results merely from a comparison with another; that has the power of forming a comparison, or comparing two things or ideas together, in order to find out their resemblance or difference. In grammar, the comparative degree, wherein two or more ideas are compared together, and the difference, either in excess or diminution, is expressed.

COMPA'RATIVELY, ad. in a comparative manner; according to the distance or likeness found from comparing.

To COMPA'RE, v. a. [comparo, Lat.] to bring two or more things together, in order, by an inspection of them, to find in what they agree or differ; to apply one thing as the measure of another; to liken. When the comparison intends only an illustration of a thing by its likeness, then to or unto is used before the thing brought by way of illustration. But when persons or things are compared together, to discover in what they agree or disagree, or their relative proportions, then with is used.

COMPA'RE, s. the state of being compared; likeness; estimate or judgment formed on comparison.

COMPARISON, s. [comparaison, Fr.] judging of the difference of two things, by examining, or comparing them together. The state of a thing compared. In grammar, the formation of an adjective through the various degrees in which the signification or the positive is heightened or diminished, as soft, softer, softest.

To COMPA'RT, v. a. [compartir, Fr.] to divide or lay down a general design or plan, in all its different parts, divisions, or subdivisions.

COMPA'RTIMENT, s. [compartiment, Fr.] a design composed of different figures, disposed with symmetry, as ornaments of a paterre, ceiling, or picture: a division of a picture, or design.

COMPARTITION, s. the act of comparting or laying down the several parts or divisions of any plan or design. Figuratively, the part of any plan. In architecture, the useful and graceful distribution of the whole ground plot of an edifice into rooms of office, of reception, and entertainment.

COMPA'RTMENT, s. a division, or separate part of a design.

To CO'MPASS, v. a. [compasser, Fr.] to surround; to inclose; to stand round in a ring; to besiege or block up; to grasp or inclose in the arms; to obtain, attain, secure, or have.

CO'MPASS, s. orbit; revolution; extent or limit; inclosure. In music, the power of the voice, or of an instrument, to sound any particular note. An instrument consisting of a box, including a magnetical needle, which points towards the north, and is used by mariners to steer their ships. Compasses, a mathematical instrument, consisting of two branches, fastened together at the top by a pivot, about which they move as on a centre, and are used in taking distances, drawing circles, and in working problems in the mathematics.

COMPA'SSION, s. [compassion, Fr.] a disposition of mind which inclines us to feel the miseries of others with the same pain and sorrow as if they were our own.

COMPA'SSIONATE, a. easily affected with sorrow or pain, on viewing the calamities and distresses of others.

To COMPA'SSIONATE, v. a. to pity, and be moved with sorrow at the sufferings of others.

COMPA'SSIONATELY, ad. in a pitying, tender, sympathizing manner.

COMPATE'RNITY, s. [con, with, and paternitas, from pater, a father, Lat.] the relation of a godfather to the person for whom he answers.

COMPATIBI'LITY s. consistency; the power or possibility of coexisting in the same subject, or at the same time; agreement.

COMPA'TIBLE, a. [from competo, to agree, Lat.] consistent with; fit for; suitable to; becoming or agreeable to.

COMPA'TIBLENESS, s. the quality of agreeing with.

COMPA'TIBLY, ad. fitly; suitably, so as to be applicable to the same subject, and coexist in it at the same time.

COMPA'TRIOT, s. [from con, with, and patria, one's own country, Lat.] one of the same country.

COMPE'ER, s. [compère, Fr.] an equal in rank; an associate or companion.

To COMPE'ER, v. a. to be equal with in quality; to match.

To COMPE'L, v. a. [from compello, to compel, Lat.] to make a person do or refrain from some act by force; to extort by force; used with from, before the person suffering the violence.

COMPE'LLABLE, a. that may be forced.

COMPE'LLER, s. he that makes a person do or refrain from an action by force.

CO'MPEND, s. [compendium, Lat.] in literature, signifies abridgment, epitome, extract, or summary.

COMPE'NDIOUS, a. [from compendium, an abstract, Lat.] concise; brief, or containing much in few words, applied to style. Near, or short, applied to travelling.

COMPE'NDIOUSLY, ad. in a short or concise manner.

COMPE'NDIOUSNESS, s. brevity, or shortness; the quality of containing much in a short space, or performing much in a short time.

COMPE'NDIUM, s. [Lat.] an abridgment of a discourse; a short or concise method of writing on any subject.

COMPE'NSABLE, a. [from compenso, to recompence, Lat.] that may be recompensed.

To COMPE'NSATE, v. a. [compenso, Lat.] to make amends for; to countervail; to counterbalance.

COMPE'NSATION, s. amends; recompence; a thing of equal value to another; an equivalent.

COMPE'NSATIVE, a. that compensates, or countervails.

CO'MPETENCE, or CO'MPETENCY, s. [from competo, to agree or suffice, Lat.] such a quantity as is just sufficient, without superfluities; such a fortune as is sufficient to supply the necessaries of life, and is between poverty on one side, and affluence on the other. In law, the right or authority of a judge, whereby he takes cognizance of any thing.

CO'MPETENT, a. [from competo, to agree or suffice, Lat.] suitable; proportionable; sufficient in numbers, quantity, or power, to any undertaking; moderate; qualified or fit for; consistent with; applicable to.

CO'MPETENTLY, ad. properly; sufficiently; without excess or defect.

COMPETITION, s. [from con, with, and peto, to seek, Lat.] the endeavouring to gain something in opposition to another; rivalry; contest; opposition.

COMPE'TITOR, s. [from con, with, and petitor, from peto, to seek, Lat.] one who claims or endeavours to gain some thing in opposition to another; a rival.

COMPILA'TION, s. [from compilo, to heap together, Lat.] a collection from various authors; an assemblage or mass of things heaped together.

To COMPI'LE, v. a. [from compilo, to heap together, Lat. to form or collect from various authors. Figuratively, to write; compose; to form from an assemblage of various circumstances or incidents.

COMPI'LEMENT, s. the act of piling together; the act of heaping up.

COMPI'LER, s. a collector: one who composes a work from various authors.

COMPLA'CENCE, or COMPLA'CENCY, s. [complacentia, Lat.] a satisfaction arising in the mind on viewing some action which is worthy of its approbation; or in contemplating something, which, on account of its amiableness, produces joy; the cause of joy, of rational pleasure and satisfaction; a genteel address, which bespeaks approbation, and causes pleasure; civility, complaisance, politeness, applied to behaviour.

COMPLA'CENT, a. [complacens, Lat.] affable; kind; civil; polite.

To COMPLAI'N, v. n. [complaindre, Fr.] to find fault with; to charge a person with having been guilty of some crime. Actively, to weep, lament, or bewail.

COMPLAI'NANT, s. one who urges a suit, or commences a prosecution against another.

COMPLAI'NER, s. one who complains; a murmurer; a lamenter.

COMPLAI'NT, s. [complainte, Fr.] a mournful representation of injuries or pain; grief; the act of finding fault with any thing. Figuratively, the cause of dissatisfaction, or complaining.

COMPLAISA'NCE, s. [complaisance, Fr.] a civil behaviour, whereby a person complies with the inclinations of another, in order to insinuate himself into his esteem and favour. SYNON. Complaisance is the characteristic of the lover; politeness of the courtier; but to be well-bred denotes the gentleman.

COMPLAISA'NT, s. [complaisant, Fr.] civil; polite; endeavouring to please.

COMPLAISA'NTLY, ad. in a civil, kind, condescending, and polite manner.

To COMPLA'NATE, or COMPLA'NE, v. a. [complano, Lat.] to level, to make smooth and flat.

CO'MPLEMENT, s. [from compleo, to complete or fill up, Lat.] that which perfects or completes any thing; a full, complete, or requisite quantity or number. In geometry, applied to the arch of a circle, what it wants of 90 degrees. In navigation, applied to a course, what it wants of 90 deg. 8 points, or a quarter of a circle. In astronomy, the distance of a star from the zenith. Complement of the curtain, in fortification, is that part in the interior side of it which makes the demi-gorge. Arithmetical complement of a logarithm is what the logarithm wants of 10,000,000.

COMPLE'TE, a. [completus, from compleo, to complete or fill up, Lat.] finished; perfect; wanting nothing; without defects; ended; concluded. SYNON. We may may easily make a thing complete, and with much pains, finish it; after all, it may not be perfect.

To COMPLE'TE, v. a. to perfect; to finish; to answer perfectly.

COMPLE'TELY, ad. perfectly; fully; in a perfect manner.

COMPLE'TENESS, s. perfection; a quality which implies a thing to be finished without defect.

COMPLE'TION, s. [from compleo, to complete or fill up, Lat.] the existence of some circumstance predicted, whereby every part of a prophecy is fulfilled; accomplishment; the greatest height, or perfect state.

CO'MPLEX, s. [from complector, to comprehend, Lat.] a collection, summary, or the whole of a thing; consisting of several parts.

CO'MPLEX, or COMPLE'XED, a. [from complector, to comprehend, Lat.] compounded; consisting of several parts; including several particulars.

COMPLE'XEDNESS, s. composition: containing a variety of circumstances or particulars.

COMPLE'XION, s. [from complector, to embrace or comprehend, Lat.] the inclosure or involution of one thing in another; the colour of the outward part of the body, particularly that of the countenance. In physic, the temperature, habit, or disposition of the body. A sanguine complexion, is that of hot or warm persons, and is so called from the blood's being thought to be more predominant in such.

COMPLE'XIONAL, a. depending merely on the habit or temperature of the body.

COMPLE'XIONALLY, ad. by complexion, or by the habit of the body, or predominancy of some of the fluids.

COMPLE'XLY, ad. in a compound manner; consisting of several particulars, opposed to simply.

COMPLE'XNESS, s. the state or quality of being composed of several particulars different from each other.

COMPLE'XURE, s. the compounding or uniting of one thing with others.

COMPLI'ANCE, s. the yielding consent to a thing proposed; the ready performance of a thing requested; condescending so far to the humours of a person, as to do every thing he can desire or expect; condescension.

COMPLI'ANT, part. yielding to the touch; bending with any force; yielding, condescending.

To CO'MPLICATE, v. a. [from complico, to fold together, Lat.] to join or add one thing or action to another; to compose or make a whole, by the uniting of several things different from each other.

CO'MPLICATE, a. compounded of a variety of parts.

COMPLICA'TION, s. [from complico, to fold together, Lat.] the joining mixing, blending, or insolving several things in one another; a whole consisting of several things. It is generally applied to diseases, as when the dropsy, asthma, and jaundice meet together.

COMPLI'ER, s. a man of an easy temper; a man of ready compliance.

CO'MPLIMENT, s. [compliment, Fr.] a profession of great esteem, or an expression of approbation or praise, merely from ceremony and politeness; a mere ceremonious expression.

To CO'MPLIMENT, v. a. to make use of expressions of respect, from a bare principle of good behaviour and ceremony; to speak in praise of a thing or person, contrary to one's real sentiments and opinion. Neuterly, to use ceremonious or adulatory language.

COMPLIME'NTAL, a. expressive of respect and civility.

COMPLIME'NTALLY, ad. in a mere ceremonious manner.

COMPLIME'NTER, s. a person abounding in compliments.

CO'MPLINE, s. [compline, Fr.] the last act of worship at night, by which the service of the day is completed.

CO'MPLOT, s. [Fr.] a plot, or ill design, concerted and carried on by two or more persons; a conspiracy or confederacy.

To COMPLO'T, v. a. [complotter, Fr.] to join in a design; to bring about an ill design.

COMPLO'TTER, s. one who joins in a plot: a conspirator.

To COMPLY', v. n. [complier, Fr.] to consent to any request; to suit one's self to a person's humours; to yield to.

COMPO'NENT, a. [componens, Lat.] that composes or contributes to the forming of a compound body.

To COMPO'RT, v. n. [comporter, Fr.] to suit; to agree with; to act agreeably or suitably to.

COMPO'RT, s. behaviour; manner of looking and acting; conduct.

COMPO'RTABLE, a. consistency, opposed to contradictory.

COMPO'RTMENT, s. behaviour, or conduct.

To COMPO'SE, (kompóze. The s in this word and its derivatives are sounded like z) v. a. [composer, Fr. compono, Lat.] to form a mass, consisting of several things joined together; to form or consist of; to place in a proper form; to join words together in a discourse with art and care; to reduce to a state of calmness, rest, and quiet; to reconcile. With printer's to put the letters in order in the composing stick. In music, to set any thing to tune; to form a proper collection, order, or disposition of the notes.

COMPO'SED, part. calm, serious, sedate, undisturbed.

COMPO'SEDLY, ad. in a calm, serious, serene, or sedate manner; free from any perturbation or confusion.

COMPO'SEDNESS, s. sedateness; calmness; tranquillity of mind; a freedom from any disturbance or disorder, applied to the mind.

COMPO'SER, s. an author or writer on any subject; one that adapts or sets words to music; or forms a tune from a peculiar assemblage of the notes of music.

COMPO'SITE, a. [from compono, to compose, Lat.] in architecture, the last of the five orders of columns, so called because its capital is framed from those of different orders, and termed likewise the Italian or Roman order. Composite numbers, are those that can be measured by some other number above unity, as 12 by 2, 3, 4, 6.

COMPOSI'TION, s. [compositio, Lat.] the act of forming a whole from parts different from each other; the act of combining simple ideas together, in order to form a complex one; the distribution or orderly placing of the several parts of a plan, design, or picture; the work or production of an author; suitableness, or adapted to any particular sentiment, applied to gesture. An agreement; contract; a reconciliation, or terms in which differences or quarrels are settled. In commerce, a contract, whereby a creditor accepts part of his debt in compensation for the whole. In grammar, forming a sentence by joining words together, or prefixing a particle to a word, to increase, diminish, or alter its signification. In music, the art of disposing notes, so as to form tunes or airs.

COMPO'SITOR, s. [compositeur, Fr.] in printing, the person who works at the case, sets up the forms, and prepares the types, by arranging them properly therein for printing.

COMPOST, s. [Fr. from compono, to compose, Lat.] a mixture of different soils together, in order to make a manure for assisting the natural soil, so as to amend, improve, and render it more fruitful.

To COMPOST, v. a. to manure; to enrich, or improve ground by a mixture of different soils.

COMPOSTELLA, St. Jago de, a city, the capital of Galicia, in Spain, seated in a peninsula, formed by the rivers Sar and Sarela. It contains about 2000 houses, besides 14 religious houses, 12 churches, and an university, which, with the public squares, are very magnificent. It is 265 miles N. W. of Madrid.

COMPO'SURE, (kompózure) s. the writing or inditing a work; composition or production, applied to books. Arrangement, mixture, or order; frame; make; temperament; sedateness. Adjustment, or reconciliation, applied to difference or quarrels.

COMPOTATION, s. [from con, with, and poto, to drink, Lat.] the act of drinking or tippling together.

To COMPO'UND, v. a. [from con, with, together, and pono, to put, Lat.] to mingle several ingredients together; to form by unity several things together; to place together in different lights, attitudes, or positions; to produce by being united; to reconcile, or put an end to a difference or quarrel, by concessions or compliance with the demands of an adversary; to pay a part of a debt, for want of a capacity to discharge the whole, and to be cleared for that reason from any farther demand; to agree on certain terms; to contract.

COMPOUND, a. formed or produced from several ingredients, opposed to simple. In grammar, formed by joining two or more words.

COMPOUND, s. the mass formed by the union of two or more ingredients.

COMPO'UNDABLE, a. that may be united together so as to form one mass; capable of being united.

COMPO'UNDER, s. one who endeavours to bring adverse parties to an agreement; a reconciler. In the university, a person of superior rank or fortune, who is allowed to commute for residence, by paying extraordinary fines.

To COMPREHE'ND, v. a. [from con, with, here inserted to strengthen the signification, and prehendo, to take hold of, Lat.] to comprise, include, contain, or imply, to have an adequate, clear, and determined idea, of any doctrine or proposition. SYNON. A lover understands the language of the passions. A learned man comprehends the metaphysical questions of the schools. An architect conceives the plan and economy of buildings.

COMPREHE'NSIBLE, a. [comprehensible, Fr.] capable of being perfectly and clearly known.

COMPREHE'NSIBLY, ad. in a large extent; applied to the acceptation of words.

COMPREHE'NSION, s. [con, with, inserted to strengthen the signification, and prehendo, to take hold of, Lat.] the act or quality of comprising or containing; a summary compendium or abstract; capacity, or the power of the mind to admit several ideas at once. Comprehension, in English church history, denotes a scheme for relaxing the terms of conformity in behalf of protestant dissenters, and admitting them into the communion of the church. It was attempted in 1667-8, and 1674, and again immediately after the revolution, but always failed.

COMPREHE'NSIVE, a. able to understand many things at once, comprising much in a narrow compass; extensive.

COMPREHE'NSIVELY, ad. in a compendious or concise manner.

COMPREHENSIVENESS, s. the quality of including much in a narrow compass.

To COMPRE'SS, v. a. [from comprimo, to press, Lat.] to reduce into a narrow compass by force; to squeeze closer together.

COMPRE'SS, s. [from comprimo, to press, Lat.] in chirurgery, a bolster formed of linen cloth, folded into several doubles, laid under a bandage to prevent a wound from bleeding or swelling; or to retain the remedies applied to it.

COMPRESSIBI'LITY, s. the quality of being reduced by force into a narrower compass.

COMPRE'SSIBLE, a. capable of being reduced by force into a narrower compass.

COMPRE'SSION, s. [compressio, from comprimo, to press, Lat.] the action of bringing the particles of a body nearer together by external force, and thereby decreasing its bulk or dimension; the act of pressing together.

COMPRE'SSURE, s. the act or force of a body pressing upon another.

To COMPRI'SE, (komprize) v. a. [from compris, Fr.] to contain; to include; to comprehend.

COMPROBA'TION, s. [from con, with, together, and probo, to prove, Lat.] confirming by a joint testimony of two or more persons.

CO'MPROMISE, (kómpromize) s. [con, and promitto, to promise, Lat.] a mutual promise of one or more parties to refer the determination of a dispute or controversy, to the arbitration or decision of one or more persons; a compact or bargain, in which some concessions or compliances are made on each side.

To COMPROMISE, (kómpromize) v. a. to settle or put an end to a dispute or claim by mutual concessions.

To COMPT, (kount) v. a. [compter, Fr.] to make an estimate; to add up, or find the amount of a row of figures in arithmetic.

COMPTRO'LLER, s. See CONTROLLER.

COMPU'LSATORY, a. [from compello, to compel, Lat.] having the power of forcing a person against his will.

COMPU'LSION, s. [compulsis, from compello, to compel, Lat.] the act of forcing a free agent to do or abstain from an action, contrary to the preference of his mind, a violence or force; the state of being compelled.

COMPU'LSIVE, a. [compulsus, from compello, to compel, Lat.] having the power to force a person to perform or abstain from an action; forcible.

COMPU'LSIVELY, ad. in a forcible manner; by compulsion; by force.

COMPU'LSIVENESS, s. the quality of obliging a person to perform or abstain from any act contrary to his inclination.

COMPU'LSORILY, ad. in a forcible manner; by force.

COMPU'LSORY, a. [compulsoire, Fr.] having the power of commanding or forcing obedience.

COMPU'NCTION, s. [from pungo, to prick, Lat.] the act of causing a pain resembling that of pricking; irritation. In divinity, an inward grief, caused by the consciousness of having offended God; sorrow; anxiety; contrition, or repentance; remorse.

COMPU'NCTIOUS, a. repentant; sorrowful; tender.

COMPU'NCTIVE, s. [compunctum, from pungo, to prick, Lat.] causing remorse; causing a sorrow from a consciousness of guilt.

COMPURGA'TION, s. [from con, with, and purgo, to cleanse, Lat.] the clearing and justifying one man's innocence or veracity by the oath of another.

COMPURGA'TOR, s. [Lat.] in law, a person who, by oath, clears and justifies another's innocence.

COMPU'TABLE, a. capable of being numbered or estimated.

COMPUTA'TION, s. the act of estimating or counting the value of things; a calculation; a sum or number found by calculation, or an arithmetical process.

To COMPU'TE, v. a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and puto, to think, Lat.] to find by an arithmetical operation; to estimate; to reckon; to count.

COMPU'TE, s. [from con, with, and puto, to think, Lat.] a reckoning; calculation; the amount or sum total.

COMPU'TER, s. one who makes calculations; an accountant.

COMPU'TIST, s. [computiste, Fr.] one skilled in numbers or calculations.

CO'MRADE, s. [camerade, Fr.] one who lives in the same house; a person who is jointly concerned with another in an undertaking.

CON, [from cum, with, Lat.] always joined or fixed to words, signifying together, as connect; sometimes against, as contend; and sometimes something great or immense, as in conflagration. Before a vowel or an h, it drops the n, as in coeternal, cohabit; and before the labials b and p, it is changed into an m, as in combustian, compare; and before l and m, it assumes the same letter, as in col-lect, com-mute.

CON, [an abbreviation of contra, Lat. against] is used to imply an opposition to any motion; or that a person is on the negative side of a question. Nem. con. for nemine contradicente, Lat. is used to signify that a motion is passed without any opposition.

To CON, v. n. [connan, Sax.] to know; to learn perfectly.

CONCA'MERATE, v. a. [concamero, from camera, an arch or vault, Lat.] to arch over; to vault; to lay concave over.

CONCAMERA'TION, s. [concameratio, from camera, an arch or vault, Lat.] an arch or vault, or any thing formed like an arch.

To CONCA'TENATE, v. a. [from catena, Lat.] to link together; to join or connect the parts of any thing, that they shall have mutual dependence on each other, like the links of a chain.

CONCATENA'TION, s. a series of links. In philosophy, a connexion of things, which mutually depend on each other, like the links of a chain.

CONCAVA'TION, s. the act of scooping a thing, or making it of a hollow or concave form.

CONCA'VE, (by some accented on the first syllable) a. [concavus, Lat.] hollow, applied to the inner surface of a circular body, such as that of an egg-shell, of an arch, or a ball, opposed to convex. Empty, without any thing to fill the cavity.

CONCA'VITY, s. the inner surface of a circular body.

CONCA'VO-CONCAVE, a. hollow, or concave on both sides.

CONCA'VO-CONVEX, a. hollow, or concave on one side, but convex or protuberant on the other.

CONCA'VOUS, a. [concavus, Lat.] hollow, without angles, applied to the inward surface of a round body.

CONCA'VOUSLY, ad. resembling the hollow of the inner surface of a round body.

To CONCE'AL, (konseél) v. a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and celo, to hide, Lat.] to hide or keep any thing from the sight or knowledge of others; to cover; to keep secret. SYNON. It requires care and attention to conceal; art and cleverness to dissemble; labour and cunning to disguise.

CONCE'ALABLE, a. capable of being kept from the sight or knowledge of others; possible to be kept secret.

CONCEA'LEDNESS, s. the state of being hid or kept from the sight or knowledge of others.

CONCE'ALER, s. he that conceals any thing.

CONCE'ALMENT, s. the act of hiding from the knowledge or sight of others; the state of being hid or kept secret; a place of retirement from the sight of others.

To CONCE'DE, s. a. [concedo, Lat.] to grant or admit a principle or opinion as true; to let a point pass without any dispute.

CONCEIT, (kansét) s. [from concipio, to conceive, Lat.] a conception, thought, or idea; apprehension; understanding; strength of imagination; mere fancy, a pleasant thought or shining sentiment; an opinionative persuasion, or a high opinion of a person's judgment, which exposes him to ridicule; a word of reproach; Out of conceit with, a phrase of a person's being tired, or no longer being fond of a thing.

To CONCEIT, v. a. to fancy; to imagine; to think, generally implying an opinion that has not the sanction of reason.

CONCEITED, part. of a strong imagination; proud, or entertaining too high an opinion of one's abilities.

CONCEITEDLY, ad. in a scornful or whimsical manner; in a manner which discovers too high an opinion, or too great a fondness in a person of his own parts.

CONCEITEDNESS, s. opinionativeness.

CONCEIVABLE, (konséivable) a. that may be imagined or thought; that may be understood or believed.

CONCEIVABLENESS, s. the quality of being apprehended by the mind.

CONCEIVABLY, ad. in an intelligible manner; in such a manner as to be apprehended by the mind.

To CONCEIVE, (konséive) v. a. [concevoir, Fr.] to form in the mind; to imagine; to form an idea of; to comprehend; to think. Neuterly, to become pregnant.

CONCEIVER, s. one that understands, or comprehends.

CONCENT, s. [from con, with, and cano, to sing, Lat.] concert of voices, harmony, concord, consistency.

To CONCENTRATE, v. a. [from con, with, and centrum, the centre, Lat.] to drive inwards, or towards the centre; to drive into a narrow compass; to condense.

CONCENTRA'TION, forcing into a narrow compass, or driving towards the centre; the highest degree of mixture, whereby two or more particles touch by a reception, or forcing one within the other.

To CONCE'NTRE, (konsénter) v. n. [concentrer, Fr.] to tend towards the same, or towards one common centre. Actively, to direct or contract toward one centre.

CONCE'NTRIC, or CONCE'NTRICAL, a. [from con, with, and centrum, a centre, Lat.] having one common centre.

CONCEPTACLE, s. [conceptaculum, from concipio, to comprehend, Lat.] that in which any thing is contained; a reservoir.

CONCE'PTIBLE, a. [from concipio, to comprehend, Lat.] that may be apprehended or understood; intelligible.

CONCE'PTION, s. [conceptio, from concipio, to conceive, Lat.] the act of conceiving or becoming pregnant; notion; apprehension; idea. Sentiments; purpose.

CONCE'PTIONS, (konsépshions) a. [from concipio, to conceive, Lat.] apt to conceive, or become pregnant; fruitful.

CONCE'PTIVE, a. [from concipio, to conceive, Lat.] capable to conceive.

To CONCE'RN, v. a. [concerner, Fr.] to relate, or belong to; to affect with some passion; to make uneasy or sorrowful; to be of importance to; to be entrusted or commissioned to act for a person, used with for. SYNON. Many people make themselves uneasy at that which does not in the least regard them; meddle with what no way concerns them; and at the same time are indifferent to those things which touch them nearly.

CONCE'RN, s. business; circumstances; engagement; interest; importance.

CONCE'RNEDLY, ad. with affection; with interest.

CONCE'RNING, prep. [though originally a participle, has the force of a preposition before a noun] about; of; relating to; without relation to.

CONCE'RNMENT, s. the thing in which a person is interested; an affair; business; influence; relation; importance; the engaging or taking part in an affair; emotion of mind.

To CONCE'RT, v. a. [concerter, Fr.] to take measures with another to bring a design to pass; to contrive.

CO'NCERT, s. a communication of designs, an establishment of measures to be pursued by persons engaged in one design. In music, a number of musicians and singers performing the same piece.

CONCERTA'TION, s. [from con, with, certo, to strive, Lat.] strife, contest, or contention.

CONCE'RTATIVE, a. [concertotivus, from con, with, and certo, to strive, Lat.] quarrelsome; contentious; recriminating.

CONCE'SSION, s. [concessio, from concedo, to grant, Lat.] an act of granting or yielding; the thing granted or yielded.

CONCE'SSIONARY, a. given by indulgence, or allowance, or purely to terminate a dispute.

CONCE'SSIVELY, ad. by way of concession.

CONCH, s. [concha, Lat.] a shell; a sea-shell.

CO'NCHA, (kónka) s. [Lat.] in anatomy, the second or inward cavity of the auricle or external ear.

CO'NCHOID, (kónkoid) s. in geometry, a curve line always approaching nearer a straight line, to which it is inclined, but never meets it.

CONCI'LIAR, a. [from concilium, a council, Lat.] relating to a council.

To CONCI'LIATE, v. a. [concilio, Lat.] to gain; to procure affection; to reconcile.

CONCILIA'TION, s. [from concilio, to reconcile, Lat.] the act of procuring esteem; or reconciling.

CONCILIA'TOR, s. [from concilio, to reconcile, Lat.] one who makes peace between parties at variance; a reconciler.

CONCI'LIATORY, a. relating to reconciliation.

CONCI'NNITY, s. [concinnitas, Lat.] decency; fitness.

CONCI'NNOUS, a. [concinnus, Lat.] comely; becoming pleasant; agreeable.

CONCI'SE, a. [concisus, from concido, to cut small, Lat.] short; brief.

CONCI'SELY, ad. in a brief, or short manner; in few words.

CONCI'SENESS, s. brevity; shortness.

CONCI'SION, s. [from concido, to cut off, Lat.] cutting off; total destruction.

CONCITA'TION, s. [from concito, to excite, Lat.] the act of exciting; agitation; or setting into a ferment or commotion

CONCLAMA'TION, s. [from conclamo, to cry aloud, Lat.] an outcry. Also a custom among the Romans, of calling the dead party by his name for eight days successively: on the ninth, concluding he was past recovery, they carried him forth and buried him.

CO'NCLAVE, s. [Lat.] a private or inner apartment; the place wherein the election is holden for a pope; a meeting or assembly of all the cardinals that are at Rome, for the election of a pope; a close or private assembly.

To CONCLU'DE, v. a. [concludo, from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and claudo, to shut, Lat.] to draw as a conclusion or inference from certain premises; to infer; to judge or determine; to end, to finish; to complete a period, applied to time; to acknowledge as truth.

CONCLU'DENT, part. [from concludo, to conclude, Lat.] decisive; following by direct consequence; consequential.

CONCLU'SIBLE, a. [conclusus, from concludo, to conclude, Lat.] following as a consequence from certain principles; to be inferred.

CONCLU'SION, s. [conclusio, from concludo, to conclude, Lat.] determination or putting an end to an affair or transaction; an opinion formed from experience, or from a collection of propositions; the event of experiments. SYNON. The sequel in part forms the story; the conclusion puts the finishing stroke to it.

CONCLU'SIVE, a. [conclusus, from concludo, to conclude, Lat.] decisive, or that puts an end to any contest.

CONCLU'SIVELY, ad. in a determinate, positive, peremptory manner.

CONCLU'SIVENESS, s. the power of gaining assent, or forcing conviction; regular consequence; or following from any premises, according to the rules of logic.

To CONCOA'GULATE, v. a. to curdle or congeal one thing with another.

CONCOAGULA'TION, s. [from con, with, and coagulatio, from coagulo, to curdle, Lat.] a coagulation or curdling, by which several bodies are joined in one mass.

To CONCO'CT, v. a. [from concoquo, to boil, Lat.] in medicine, to digest in the stomach, so as to form into chyle; to purify; to heighten the quality of a thing by heat.

CONCO'CTION, s. [concoctio, from concoquo, to digest, Lat.] in medicine, the change which the food undergoes in the stomach ere it be converted into chyle; maturation, or heightening the powers or qualities of a thing by heat.

CONCO'MITANCE, or CONCO'MITANCY, s. [from con, with, and comes, a companion, Lat.] united to; attending; inseparable from; accompanying.

CONCO'MITANT, s. a companion; an attendant.

CONCO'MITANTLY, ad. accompanying; in the manner of an attendant.

To CONCO'MITATE, v. a. [concomitor, Lat.] to attend; to be joined inseparably with another.

CO'NCORD, s. [concordia, from con, with, and cor, the heart, Lat.] agreement between persons and things; the suitableness of one thing to another; peace, union, mutual kindness. In grammar, that part wherein words are made to agree in number, person, and gender, &c. In music, the relation of two sounds, that are always agreeable to the ear, whether applied in succession or consonance.

CONCO'RDANCE, s. [from concordo, to agree, Lat.] an agreement. A dictionary to the Holy Scriptures, wherein all the words are ranged alphabetically, and the various places where they occur referred to. The best for the English language is that of Alexander Crudin.

CONCO'RDANT, part. [concordans, Lat.] agreeing with; consistent with; correspondent. In music, consisting of concords or harmonies.

CONCO'RDATE, s. [concordat, Fr.] a compact; convention; or a society held together by a common discipline, or statutes.

CONCO'RPORAL, a. [from con, with, and corpus, the body, Lat.] of the same body.

To CONCO'RPORATE, v. a. to unite, blend, or mix several things together, so as to form one mass, system, &c.

CO'NCOURSE, (kónkörse) s. [concursus, from concurro, to run together, Lat.] a crowd or several persons assembled together in one place; the point wherein two bodies meet together; the force or action with which two or more bodies meet together.

CO'NCREMENT, s. [from concresco, to grow together, Lat.] a mass formed by concretion.

CONCRE'SCENCE, s. [from concresco, to grow together, Lat.] the act or quality of growing by the union of separate particles.

To CONCRE'TE, v. a. [from con, with, and cresco, to grow, Lat.] to form from an union of several particles or bodies; to unite several masses or particles in one body. Neuterly, to coalesce, cohere, or join together, so as to form one mass.

CO'NCRETE, a. formed by the union or cohesion of several particles or substances. In logic, a concrete term is that which, while it expresses the quality, expresses, implies, or refers to some subject or substance in which it inheres, and is generally the same as a noun adjective in grammar.

CO'NCRETE, s. an assemblage or mixture; a body or mass composed of several particles or principles.

CONCRE'TELY, ad. in such a manner as to include the substance with the quality.

CONCRE'TENESS, s. curdling; coagulation; or the gathering several fluids into a solid mass.

CONCRE'TION, s. the act whereby a soft body becomes hard, or the particles of a fluid become fixed, so as not to yield to the touch; the coalition, or uniting of several particles so as to form one mass.

CONCRE'TIVE, a. that has the power of uniting several particles together, so as to form one mass; that has the power of turning a fluid into a solid; that has the power of producing coagulation, or the curdling of a fluid body.

CONCRE'TURE, s. a mass formed by the cohesion of several particles.

CONCU'BINAGE, s. [concubinage, Fr.] the act of living or cohabiting with a woman, as a wife, without being married.

CO'NCUBINE, s. [from con, with, and cubo, to lie, Lat.] a woman who is kept by a man, and lives with him, though not married to him; a kept mistress.

To CONCU'LCATE, v. a. [conculco, Lat.] to tread upon, or trample under foot.

CONCULCA'TION, s. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and calco, to trample, Lat.] trampling with the feet.

CONCU'PISCENCE, s. [concupiscentia, from concupisco, to desire exceedingly, Lat.] an inordinate desire of women; lust.

CONCU'PISCENT, part. [from concupisco, to desire exceedingly, Lat.] lustful; having an irregular appetite after carnal things.

CONCUPISCE'NTIAL, (konkupissénti'al) a. relating to concupiscence, or having an irregular desire after women.

CONCUPI'SCIBLE, a. [from concupisco, to desire exceedingly, Lat.] that may be desired, that raises, excites, or exerts desire.

To CONCU'R, v. n. [from con, together, and curro, to run, Lat.] to meet together; to join in one action or design, applied to several persons; to unite with; to be conjoined with; to contribute to the effecting one common event or design.

CONCU'RRENCE, or CONCURRENCY, s. assistance; union; conjunction, united efforts to promote any design; agreement in any opinion or sentiment.

CONCU'RRENT, part. [from concurro, to concur, Lat.] acting in conjunction, or together; promoting the same design.

CONCU'RRENT, s. that which contributes to the performance of a design.

CONCU'SSION, s. [from concutio, to shake violently, Lat.] the act of putting a thing into a violent motion; shaking; agitation.

CONCU'SSIVE, a. [from concutio, to shake violently, Lat.] that has the power or quality of shaking.

To COND, CON, or CONN, v. a. in sea language, signifies to guide or conduct a ship in her right course.

To CONDE'MN, (kondém) v. a. [condemno, Lat.] to pass sentence against a person, whereby he is subject to punishment; to censure, to blame, or find fault with.

CONDE'MNABLE, a. that may be blamed, found fault with, or is subject to the sentence of a judge.

CONDEMNA'TION, s. [condemnatio, Lat.] passing or pronouncing sentence against a person, whereby he is subject to punishment or penalty, either in respect to person, fortune, or life. Figuratively, the state of a person on whom sentence has been passed.

CONDE'MNATORY, a. having the force of condemning or subjecting a person to punishment.

CONDE'MNER, s. the person who condemns, censures, blames, or finds fault with.

CONDE'NSABLE, a. that is capable of being made more solid, or forced into a smaller compass.

To CONDE'NSATE, v. a. [condenso, Lat.] to make more solid or thick by compression or force, applied to fluids.

CONDE'NSATE, a. made thicker or more solid by compression or external force.

CONDENSA'TION, s. the act of bringing the parts of a body closer to each other, and increasing their contact, whereby the body is rendered more dense, compact, and heavy: opposite to rarefaction.

To CONDE'NSE, v. a. [condenso, Lat.] to make any body more thick, compact, or weighty, by increasing the contact of its particles; applied by some only to the effect of cold, but by others used for compression, or the effects of external force, which diminishes the size of the pores of a body, and renders it, consequently, more solid. Neuterly, to grow thick, applied to the effects of cold on fluids; to become solid and weighty, by shrinking to a narrower compass.

CONDE'NSE, a. thickened; close; compact; become more solid by the effect of cold, or compression.

CONDE'NSER, s. a pneumatic engine, by means of which an unusual quantity of air may be forced into a small space, or by which three, four, or five atmospheres may be injected more than a thing would contain naturally.

CONDE'NSITY, s. the state of a fluid, whose parts are fixed so as not to give way to the touch, by cold, coagulation, or compression. Thickness, applied to consistence.

CO'NDERS, s. persons who stand on some eminence to give notice to fishers which way a shoal of herrings take. See BALKERS.

To CONDESCE'ND, v. n. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and descendo, to descend, Lat.] to lay aside the dignity of rank, in order to make one's self agreeable to, or on a level with inferiors; to behave with familiarity to inferiors; to stoop; to submit.

CONDESCE'NDENCE, s. [condescendance, Fr.] an act whereby a person in authority lays aside the difference of rank, in order to converse freely with his inferiors; a granting some favour to a person; or consenting to yield him some advantage which he could not demand.

CONDESCE'NDINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to lay aside the claims of authority and dignity; or to yield up a right, or consent to a request, from a principle of good nature and generosity.

CONDESCE'NSION, s. the behaviour of a superior, whereby he treats one of lower rank as his equal, and grants him favours he cannot demand.

CONDESCE'NSIVE, a. courteous; treating inferiors without distance; affable, and ready to serve or grant any favour, or forego a right to serve or oblige another.

CONDI'GN, (kondin) a. [condignus, worthy, Lat.] worthy; suitable to; merited; deserved, or proportionable to; generally applied to the punishment due to a person for his crimes.

CONDI'GNLY, (kondinly) ad. in a manner suitable to a person's crimes: deservedly.

CONDI'GNNESS, (kondin-ness) s. proportion; suitable to a person's crimes.

CO'NDIMENT, s. [condimentum, from condio, to season, Lat.] seasoning, sauce, that which excites the appetite by a sharp taste.

To CO'NDITE, v. a. [condio, Lat.] to preserve or pickle.

CONDI'TION, s. [conditio, Lat.] a quality or property which determines the nature of a thing; an attribute or accident, in a logical sense. Habit or temperature. A moral quality or virtue. State, or the circumstance of a person or fortune. Rank. The terms of any contract, bargain, or agreement. Figuratively, a writing containing the terms of an agreement.

To CONDI'TION, v. n. to stipulate; to make terms.

CONDI'TIONAL, a. to be performed on certain terms; not absolute, but subject to certain limitations.

CONDI'TIONALLY, ad. on certain terms or limitations.

CONDI'TIONARY, a. stipulated; bargained; to be done as a means of acquiring any thing.

To CONDI'TIONATE, v. a. to make conditions for; to regulate by, or perform on, certain conditions.

CONDI'TIONATE, a. established and grounded on certain terms and conditions.

CONDI'TIONED, part. having qualities either good or bad:

To CONDO'LE, v. n. [from con, with, and doleo, to be sorry, Lat.] to lament with those who grieve for any misery, misfortune, or calamity. Actively, to bewail a misfortune with another.

CONDO'LEMENT, s. grief; sorrow; mourning for any loss or misfortune.

CONDO'LENCE, s. [condolance, Fr.] a sympathizing grief arising from the misfortunes of another, which expresses itself by lamenting with the person in distress.

CONDO'LER, s. one who expresses a complimental concern for the sorrow of another, and the cause which occasions it.

CONDO'R, an enormous species of eagle, which inhabits South America, which is capable of carrying away a lamb in its talons. See PLATE.

To CONDU'CE, v. n. [from con, with, and duco, to lead, Lat.] to promote an end by acting conjointly.

CONDU'CIBLE, a. [from conduco, to conduce, Lat.] having a power of conducing to, or promoting a design. Used for two or more causes operating to one end.

CONDU'CIVE, a. that has a tendency, power, or quality, to promote or produce any end.

CONDU'CIVENESS, s. the quality of promoting or contributing to the production of some end.

CO'NDUCT, s. [conduit, Fr.] management, or tenor of actions; the act of commanding an army; convoy, or escorting with a guard; the guard convoying, securing, or escorting; a warrant by which a convoy is appointed; behaviour; or a series of actions regulated by some standard.

To CONDU'CT, v. a. [conduire, Fr.] to accompany a person in order to shew him his way to any place; to direct, lead, or guide; to usher or introduce; to manage; to head an army, or command a body of troops. SYNON. We conduct and guide those who know not the way; we lead those who cannot or care not to go by themselves. We conduct an affair. We guide a traveller. We lead an infant.

CONDU'CTOR, s. [from conduco, to lead, Lat.] a guide, or one who shews another the way; a leader or commander; or one who transacts an affair. In surgery, an instrument which serves to conduct the knife in the operation of cutting for the stone, and in laying open sinuses and fistulas. It is also called a gorget. Conductors, in electrical experiments, are those bodies that receive and communicate electricity; and those that repel it are called non-conductors.

CONDU'CTRESS, s. a woman who directs or leads a person, or carries on any undertaking.

CO'NDUIT, (kúndit) s. [conduit, Fr.] a canal, or pipes made use of for the conveyance of water at a distance from the reservoir or spring head; an aqueduct; a place furnished with a cock, whence people are publicly supplied with water.

CONDUPLICA'TION, s. [conduplicatio, Lat.] a doubling; a duplicate.

CONE, s. [konos. Tou konou basis kyklos esti. A circle is the basis of a cone, Aristotle, Gr.] In geometry, a solid body whose base is a circle, its uppermost part ending in a point; it resembles a sugar loaf, and may be conceived as formed by the revolution of a triangle on one of its sides as on an axis.

CO'NEPATL, an American species of weasel.

To CONFA'BULATE, v. n. [confabulo, from fabula, a fable or idle tale, Lat.] to talk easily and with carelessness together; to chat with a person.

CONFABULA'TION, s. [from confabulo, to chat, Lat.] easy, familiar, careless, cheerful talk with a person.

CONFA'BULATORY, a. belonging to entertaining and careless conversation.

To CONFE'CT, v. a. [from conficio, to digest, Lat.] to preserve fruit, &c. with sugar.

CO'NFECT, s. a sweetmeat.

CONFE'CTION, s. [confectio, Lat.] the preserving fruit or vegetables, by means of clarified sugar. In pharmacy, any thing prepared with sugar; a liquid or soft electuary; the assembling or union of different ingredients.

CONFE'CTIONARY, s. a place where elegant food from different ingredients is made, or fruits are preserved.

CONFE'CTIONER, s. one who makes and sells sweetmeats.

CONFE'DERACY, s. [from con, with, and fœdus, a league, Lat.] a league, contract, or agreement, entered into by several states and bodies of men for their mutual advantage and defence.

To CONFE'DERATE, v. a. [from con, with, and fœdus, a league, Lat.] to unite in a league or agree with, in order to accomplish some design.

CONFE'DERATE, a. leagued, or united by some contract to accomplish some design.

CONFE'DERATE, s. one who enters into an engagement with another, whereby they are obliged mutually to assist and defend each other; an ally.

CONFEDERATION, s. [confédération, Fr.] a league; an act whereby two or more persons oblige themselves to assist each other; an alliance.

To CONFE'R, v. n. [confero, Lat.] to discourse with a person on some important, grave, and stated subject; to talk with a person on any subject, in order to come to a determination. Actively, to compare the sentiments of one person or author with those of another; to give a thing which could not be claimed; to bestow a favour; to contribute or conduce.

CO'NFERENCE, s. [conference, Fr.] the act of discoursing with another, in order to settle some point in dispute, or treat upon any subject in a public character; a meeting appointed for the discoursing of some point in debate; comparison, or examination of things by comparing them together.

CONFE'RRER, s. he that discourses with another on some stated point; he that bestows a favour on another.

To CONFE'SS, v. a. [confesser, Fr.] to acknowledge the having done something amiss. To disclose a person's sins to a priest, in order to obtain absolution. To own. To avow; to profess. To grant. Not to dispute. To shew; to approve; to attest.

CONFE'SSEDLY, ad. in such a manner as must extort universal consent; generally owned; avowedly; indisputably.

CONFE'SSION, s. the acknowledgment or owning a crime. Profession; avowal. In the Romish church, an acknowledgement of sins in private to a priest, in order to obtain absolution.

CONFE'SSIONAL, s. [Fr.] in the Romish church, a little box or desk, wherein the priest takes the confession of a penitent.

CONFE'SSIONARY, s. [confessionaire, Fr.] the confession chair or seat, wherein the priest sits to receive the confession of a penitent.

CONFE'SSOR, s. [confesseur, Fr.] one who professes a religious sentiment or opinion in the face of danger, and amidst the most cruel tortures. In the Romish church, a priest, who is authorized to receive the confessions of penitents, and grant them absolution.

CONFE'ST, a. [a poetical word for confessed] open; generally known; acknowledged, in a good sense. Notorious, in a bad sense.

CONFE'STLY, ad. indisputably; evidently; without doubt or concealment.

CONFI'CIENT, (konfishient) part. [from con, with, and facio, to make or do, Lat.] causing or producing in company with some other person or thing.

CONFIDA'NT, s. [confidant, Fr.] a person entrusted with the secrets of another, most commonly applied to those who are entrusted with affairs of lovers.

To CONFI'DE, v. n. [confido, Lat.] to trust in, implying a strong persuasion or assurance of a person's abilities to assist another, or his fidelity in keeping a secret.

CO'NFIDENCE, s. [confidentia, from confido, to trust, Lat.] a strong assurance of the fidelity and ability of another When joined to the reciprocal pronouns, himself, &c. a strong assurance of the efficacy of a person's own abilities: a vicious and assuming boldness.

CO'NFIDENT, part. [from confido, to confide, Lat.] assured of a truth beyond any possibility of doubt: positive; secure of success; without fear of a miscarriage; without suspicion; bold, to a vice.

CO'NFIDENTLY, ad. in such a manner as to discover no fear of a miscarriage; securely.

CO'NFIDENTNESS, s. a favourable opinion of one's own judgment; assurance.

CONFIGURA'TION, s. [configuration, Fr.] the order in which the particles of bodies are united together; the form of a body made by the order in which its particles are united together. In astronomy, a delineation of the relative situations of the satellites of any of the planets at any given time. The face of the horoscope, according to the aspects of the sun, moon, and planets, towards each other, at any given time, made use of by astrologers in the fore-telling of future events.

To CONFI'GURE, v. n. [from con, with, and figura, a figure, Lat.] to dispose or form by uniting in a particular manner.

CO'NFINE, s. [confinus, Lat.] a limit; border; edge; or utmost verge of a thing or place.

CO'NFINE, a. [confinis, Lat.] bordering, upon, applied to places; it implies that the one begins where the other ends. Touching; adjoining; or contiguous.

To CONFI'NE, v. n. [from confinis, Lat.] to border upon; to touch; to be contiguous to. Actively, to bound; to limit; to enclose; to shut up; to restrain; to imprison; to immure; to keep at home; not to quit, or neglect.

CO'NFINELESS, a. boundless; without limits, end, or pause.

CONFI'NEMENT, s. the act of restraining a person from going abroad; the act of enclosing a person in prison; the state of a person in prison, or kept at home without liberty of going abroad; restraint.

CONFI'NER, s. a person who lives at the extremity, or on the borders of a country; one who deprives another of the liberty of walking abroad; or shuts him up in a prison.

CONFI'NITY, s. [confinitas, Lat.] nearness; neighbourhood; likeness.

To CONFI'RM, v. a. [confirmo, Lat.] to put beyond doubt, by additional proofs; to settle a person in an office; to fix; to complete; to render perfect; to admit to the full privileges of a Christian by imposition of the hands of a bishop.

CONFI'RMABLE, a. that is capable of incontestible evidence.

CONFIRMA'TION, s. the act of establishing any person or thing in a place or office; an additional or new proof to evince the truth of a thing or opinion beyond doubt or contradiction: a proof which brings conviction; an ecclesiastic rite, whereby a person, arrived to years of discretion, undertakes the performance of every part of the baptismal vow, made for him by his godfathers and godmother.

CONFIRMA'TOR, s. [confirmator, Lat.] one who proves a thing beyond doubt.

CONFI'RMATORY, a. establishing, or giving such additional proof as may increase the certainty or probability of any fact or action.

CONFI'RMEDNESS, s. a quality implying certainty, when applied to evidence; and inveteracy or strength, not easily to be surmounted, when used of habits.

CONFI'RMER, s. one who establishes an opinion or fact by new evidence or proofs; one who establishes or secures a person in the possession of any dignity.

CONFI'SCABLE, a. [confisco, to confiscate, Lat.] liable to be seized on as a fine or punishment for some crime.

To CONFI'SCATE, v. a. [confisco, from fiscus, the public treasury, Lat.] to seize on private property, and convert it to the use either of the chief magistrate, or the public, by way of punishment.

CONFISCA'TION, s. [from confisco, to confiscate, Lat. the seizing of private property on account of some crime, and converting it to the use of the chief magistrate or of the public.

CO'NFITENT, s. [from confiteor, to confess, Lat.] one confessing; one who confesses his faults.

CO'NFITURE, s. [Fr. from confectura, the making of any thing, Lat.] a sweetmeat; a confection; a comfit.

To CONFI'X, v. a. [configo, Lat.] to fix down; to fasten. "Or else for ever be confixed here." Shak.

CONFLA'GRANT, part. [from con, together, and flagro, to burn, Lat.] burning together; involving in the same fire.

CONFLAGRA'TION, s. [from con, together, and flagro, to burn, Lat.] a general fire spreading over a large space, and involving several things in its flames. Generally used for that fire which shall consume all things, and change the face of nature.

CONFLA'TION, s. [from con, together, and flo, to blow, Lat.] the act of blowing several wind instruments at the same time; the casting and melting of metal.

To CONFLI'CT, v. a. [from con, with, and fligo, to beat, Lat.] to strive or struggle in order to get victory, applied to persons and things.

CO'NFLICT, s. [from confligo, to contend, Lat.] a combat, or flight between two, seldom used of a general battle; a contest or strife; a struggle between opposite qualities; an agony or pang, wherein nature seems to struggle hard against suffering and pain.

CO'NFLUENCE, s. [from confluo, to flow together, Lat.] an uniting of two or more streams or rivers; the act of crowding or coming in great numbers to one place; a concourse or a multitude gathered into one place.

CO'NFLUENT, part. [from confluo, to flow together, Lat.] running one into another, meeting or mixing together.

CO'NFLUX, s. [from confluo, to flow together, Lat.] the uniting or union of several streams or rivers. Figuratively, a crowd, a great number of persons collected together.

CONFO'RM, a. [from con, together, and forma, form, Lat.] assuming the same form or quality as another; like.

To CONFO'RM, v. a. [conformo, from con, together, and forma, form, Lat.]

CONFO'RMABLE, a. having the same form; agreeable, suitable consistent; compliant, or submissive to authority.

CONFO'RMABLY, ad. agreeably; suitably; with compliance.

CONFORMA'TION, s. [conformatio, Lat.] the particular union or order of the parts of a body, and their disposition to make a whole; the act of producing suitableness, or conformity to any thing.

CONFO'RMIST, s. one who complies with the mode of worship used by the church of England.

CONFO'RMITY, s. likeness; resemblance; the act of regulating one's actions to some law; consistency; compliance with the worship of the established church.

CONFORTA'TION, s. [from conforto, a low Latin word] collation of strength; corroboration.

To CONFO'UND, v. a. [confundo, Lat.] to mingle or mix things so that their forms or natures cannot be distinguished; to substitute or make use of one word for another, which conveys different ideas; to puzzle or perplex the mind by indistinct ideas, or words used in an indeterminate manner; to amaze, astonish, and render unable to reply; to destroy.

CONFO'UNDED, part. hateful; prodigious, a low word, to express any thing in the superlative degree.

CONFO'UNDEDLY, ad. shamefully; hatefully; a low word.

CONFO'UNDER, s. one who perplexes, astonishes, or destroys.

CONFRATE'RNITY, s. [from con, with, and fraternitas, brotherhood] a brotherhood; or body of men united for some religious purpose.

CONFRICA'TION, s. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and fricc, to rub, Lat.] the act of rubbing.

To CONFRO'NT, v. a. [confronter, Fr.] to stand directly opposite to; to stand face to face; to oppose; to set in opposition; to contrast; to compare one thing with another.

CONFRONTA'TION, s. [Fr.] the act of opposing one evidence to another.

To CONFU'SE, (konfúze; the s in this word and its derivatives sounding like z) v. a. [from confusus, Lat.] to put in disorder; to make irregular; to perplex by indistinct ideas or by using words without any determinate signification.

CONFU'SEDLY, ad. in an indistinct manner; mixed, opposed to separate; perplexed, or not clear; without any order; in obscure, indistinct, or unintelligible terms.

CONFU'SEDNESS, s. want of distinctness or clearness; want of order or regularity.

CONFU'SION, s. an irregular, careless or disorderly mixture; tumult; the using words without any precise meaning; overthrow; destruction; astonishment; distraction of mind.

CONFU'TABLE, a. that may be shewn to be false or groundless.

CONFUTA'TION, s. [from confuto, to confute, Lat.] the act of destroying the arguments of another, by shewing them to be false, inconclusive, or groundless.

To CONFU'TE, v. a. [confuto, Lat.] to destroy the force of an argument; to shew the proofs of an adversary to be groundless, inconclusive, sophistical, or false.

CO'NGE, (kónjee) s. [congé, Fr.] an action shewing respect, compliment, or submission, consisting in bowing the body, in men; and in women, in sinking with the knee bent, or making a curtesy; leave, or the action of taking leave. Congé d'elire, Fr. i. e. leave of election, in canon law, is the king's permission to a dean and chapter to choose a bishop when the see is vacant. In architecture, a moulding in form of a quarter round, or a cavetto, which serves to separate two members from one another; such is that which joins the shaft of the column to the cincture.

To CONGE'AL, (konjéel) v. a. [congelo, from gelu, ice, Lat.] to change or thicken any fluid by cold. Figuratively, to thicken any fluid, applied generally to the blood. Neuterly to grow thick.

CONGE'ALABLE, a. that may grow thick by cold.

CONGE'ALMENT, s. the clot or thick mass formed by cold; concretion.

CONGELA'TION, s. the act of freezing, or producing such a change in a fluid body, that it grows thick, or its particles become fixed like those of a solid body.

CO'NGENER, s. [from con, together, and genus, a kind, Lat.] a thing of the same kind of nature.

CONGE'NEROUS, a. of the same genus or species, arising from the same principle; proceeding from the same cause. Used only by scientific writers.

CONGE'NIAL, a. [from con, together, and genius, inclination, Lat.] partaking of the same genus, of the same nature, disposition, or kind.

CONGENIA'LITY, s. a partaking of the same genus, nature, or disposition.

CONGE'NIALNESS, s. a sameness of disposition.

CO'NGER, (in this word the g has a hard sound before e) s. [congrus, Lat.] a large eel, frequenting salt waters.

CO'NGERBERRY, a village in Somersetshire, six miles N. of Axbridge.

CONGERIES, s. [Lat.] a mass consisting of smaller bodies heaped together.

To CONGE'ST, v. a. [congero, Lat.] to heap up; to gather together.

CONGE'STION, (konjést-yun) s. [from con, together, and gero, to carry, Lat.]

CO'NGIARY, s. [congiarium, from congius, a gallon measure, Lat.] a gift distributed by the Roman emperors, consisting of corn and oil.

To CONGLA'CIATE, v. n. [from conglacio, to freeze, Lat.] to turn to ice.

CONGLACIA'TION, s. the changing into ice; the state of a thing changed into ice; vitrifying, or turning into glass.

CO'NGLETON, a town of Cheshire, seated on the river Dane. It has manufactories of leather gloves, cotton, and silk; the silk-mill here employing 700 persons. It is 7 miles S. of Macclesfield, and 164 N. W. of London. Market on Saturday.

To CO'NGLOBATE, v. a. [conglobo, from globus, a globe or ball, Lat.] to unite in the form of a globe or ball.

CO'NGLOBATE, part. [conglobo, from globus, a globe or ball, Lat.] moulded into a ball.

CO'NGLOBATELY, ad. in a globular, round, or spherical form.

To CONGLO'BE, v. n. [conglobo, from globus, a globe or ball, Lat.] to gather into a firm round ball; to gather into a round mass.

To CONGLO'MERATE, v. a. [conglomero, from glomus, a bottom of yarn, Lat.] to gather several things into a round mass.

CONGLO'MERATE, part. [conglomero, [from glomus, a bottom of yarn, Lat.] gathered into a round ball or mass, so that the compounding bodies appear distinct. Figuratively, twisted or collected together.

CONGLOMERA'TION, s. a collection of matter into a loose round ball; intertexture; mixture.

To CONGLU'TINATE, v. a. [conglutino, from gluten, glue, Lat.] to glue, cement, or join fast together by any viscous, sticking, or glutinous substance. Neuterly, to stick or cohere together.

CONGLUTINA'TION, s. the act of sticking together; the act of uniting and fastening the lips of a wound together.

CONGLU'TINATIVE, a. having the power of sticking together, or uniting the lips of a wound.

CONGLUTINA'TOR, s. that which has the power of making things cohere, or stick together.

CO'NGO, or LOWER GUINEA, a large tract of country, on the W. coast of Africa, extending from the equinoctial to 17 deg. S. lat. and containing the countries of Loango, Congo Proper, Angola, and Benguela. It is bounded on the W. by the Atlantic, on the N. by Benin and Malloko, on the E. by Makoko and the interior of Africa, and on the S. by Mataman and unknown lands. Their seasons are the reverse of ours; during our summer they have rain almost every day, and this is called the winter season; but, during their summer, the weather is constantly serene. In the deserts within land there are elephants, tigers, leopards, monkeys, serpents of a monstrous length, rattlesnakes, vipers, dangerous white ants or pismires, scorpions, and other venomous insects, both flying and reptile; and, in the river Zaire, crocodiles and river horses. Near the coast the soil is fertile, producing various kinds of fruits, besides palm-trees, from which they get wine and oil. Many of the inhabitants worship the sun, moon, and stars, and different kinds of animals; others have embraced the religious profession of the Portuguese. They are skilful in weaving cotton cloth, and carry on the traffic in slaves, as well as in ivory, cassia, fruits, and other produce of the country. Congo is divided into several provinces. The principal rivers are the Zaire, the Dando, the Coanza, the Vambra, and the Barbela.

CONGRATULATE, part. [from congratulor, to congratulate, Lat.] rejoicing with another; expressing one's rejoicing with another.

To CONGRA'TULATE, v. a. [congratulor, from con, with, and gratus, kind, welcome, Lat.] to express joy on the good success or advantage of another.

CONGRATULA'TION, s. the act of expressing joy on account of the success or happiness of another.

CONGRA'TULATORY, a. expressing joy for the good fortune of another.

To CONGREET, v. n. to salute together, implying the making and returning of a compliment. Not in use.

To CONGREGATE, v. a. [congrego, from grex, a flock, Lat.] to collect several things into the same mass, or several persons into the same place. Neuterly, to assemble, meet, or come together.

CONGREGATE, a. [from congrego, to collect, Lat.] collected close together; forming one mass or body.

CONGREGATION, s. in physic, that degree of mixture wherein the particles of a fluid meet or touch only in a point; a collection or mass of several particles. In divinity, an assembly of people met together for religious worship. In church history, an assembly of several ecclesiastics, constituting and forming a body.

CONGREGATIONAL, a. belonging to an assembly or congregation.

CONGRESS, s. [congressus, from congredior, to meet together, Lat.] a shock, or conflict; an appointed meeting for settling of affairs between different nations. Congress, in America, is the assembly of delegates from the United States.

CONGRE'SSIVE, a. meeting together; encountering.

To CONGRUE, v. n. [congruo, Lat.] to agree; to suit; to import; to become.

CONGRUENCE, s. [congruentia, Lat.] agreement; the suitableness or consistency of one thing to another; consistency.

CONGRUITY, s. fitness; suitableness of one thing to another; consistency. In geometry, applied to figures or lines, which meet or correspond exactly when applied to, or laid over each other.

CONGRUOUS, a. [congruus, Lat.] agreeable to; consistent with; suited or proportionate.

CONGRUOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to agree or be consistent with, applied to sentiments; suitably.

CONIC, or CONICAL, a. [conicus, Lat. from kone, a cone, Gr.] having the form of a cone, sugar-loaf, or round pyramid. Conic section, in geometry, is the curve line arising from the section of a cone by a plane. Conics, or conic sections, that part of geometry which treats of cones, and the curves arising from the section of a cone by a plane.

CONICALLY, ad. in form of a cone, or sugar-loaf.

CONICALNESS, s. the state or quality which partakes of the properties of a cone.

CONINGSTON MERE, a lake of Lancashire, 5 miles long and 1 broad, in the hundred of Furness.

To CONJE'CT, v. a. [conjicio, from con, together, and jacio, to cast, Lat.] to guess at a thing.

CONJE'CTOR, s. a guesser; a conjecturer.

CONJE'CTURABLE, a. being the object of conjecture; that may be guessed.

CONJE'CTURAL, a. depending on, or determined from uncertain principles by mere guess.

CONJECTURA'LITY, s. that which is inferrable only from guess.

CONJE'CTURALLY, ad. by guess; by conjecture.

CONJE'CTURE, s. [from conjicio, to cast together, Lat.]

To CONJE'CTURE, v. a. to guess.

CONJE'CTURER, s. a guesser; one who forms opinion without proof.

CONI'FEROUS, a. [from conus, a cone, and fero, to bear, Lat.] in botany, bearing a fruit resembling a cone.

To CONJOIN, v. a. [conjoindre, Fr.] to join together; to unite together in friendship; to knit or join together in marriage. Neuterly, to take part with another in any action.

CONJOINT, part. [conjoint, Fr.] united; connected; associate. In music, applied to two or more sounds heard at the same time.

CONJOINTLY, ad. together; in union, opposed to apart or separate.

CONJUGAL, a. [from con, together, and jugum, a yoke, Lat.] belonging to marriage.

CONJUGALLY, ad. consistently with married people.

To CONJUGATE, v. a. [from con, together, and jugum, a yoke, Lat.] to unite; to join.

CONJUGATE, s. [conjugatus, from conjugo, to couple together, Lat.] in grammar, agreeing in derivation with another word, and resembling it in its sense and meaning. Conjugate diameter, or axis, in conics, is the shortest of the two diameters bisecting the other, or a right line bisecting the transverse diameter of an ellipsis.

CONJUGATION, s. [conjugatio, from conjugo, to couple together, Lat.] a couple, pair, or two things of the same sort joined together. The act of uniting; or joining together; union. In grammar, an orderly distribution of the tenses, persons, and moods of verbs, according to their different terminations or inflections.

CONJUNCT, part. [from con, with, and jungo, to join, Lat.] joined with another; concurring; united.

CONJUNCTION, s. [from con, together, and jungo, to join, Lat.] the uniting two things together. Figuratively, a league or confederacy. In astronomy, the meeting of the stars or planets in the same degree, minute, and second of the zodiac. In grammar, a word used to connect the clauses of a period or sentence together.

CONJUNCTIVE, a. [from con, together, and jungo, to join, Lat.] closely united. In grammar, the mood of a verb, and subsequently to a conjunction.

CONJUNCTIVELY, ad. in union; operating together, opposed to apart or separate.

CONJUNCTIVENESS, s. the quality of uniting or joining two or more things together.

CONJUNCTLY, ad. jointly; together, opposed to apart.

CONJUNCTURE, s. [conjoncture, Fr.] an union or meeting of several circumstances, or causes; a critical or particular period of time; connection of several things forming a whole; consistency, or an union of qualities which can exist at the same time in the same or different subjects. SYNON. We know people on particular occasions. We should demean ourselves according to the occurrence of the times. It is commonly the conjuncture that determines us which side to take.

CONJURATION, s. the form of obliging a person to give his evidence. See ADJURATION. Magic words, characters, ceremonies, charms, which are said to have the power of raising the dead, and devils. A plot; a conspiracy.

To CONJURE, v. a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and juro, to swear, Lat.] to entreat a person with the greatest earnestness, and by the respect he has to some dear person, or sacred being.

To CONJURE, v. a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and juro, to swear, Lat.] to influence by magic or enchantments; to charm. Neuterly, to practice enchantments.

CONJUREMENT, s. serious injunction; solemn demand.

CONJURER, s. an enchanter, or a person who makes use of magical charms; an impostor, who pretends to have commerce with the world of spirits, and by that means to be able to foretel the future events of a person's life, to discover thieves, &c.

To CONN, v. a. [connan, Sax.] to learn or get without book. To give. See To CON.

CONNATE, a. [from con, with, and natus, born, Lat.] born with; innate; born at the same time as another.

CONNATURAL, a. [from con, with, and natura, nature, Lat.] consistent with, or flowing from nature; of the same original or nature.

CONNATURALITY, s. resemblance of nature; or an essential resemblance and connection.

CONNATURALLY, ad. in such a manner as to be born with, or innate.

CONNATURALNESS, s. the quality of being born with, of being innate or interwoven in our nature.

CONNAUGHT, the most westerly province in Ireland, containing the counties of Leitrim, Sligo, Mayo, Roscom-men, and Galway. It is bounded on the W. and N. W. by the ocean, on the N. by Ulster, and on the E. and S. by Loinster and Munster. It contains 296 parishes, and 95,821 houses, and is 130 miles in length, and 84 in breadth. It has no considerable rivers, besides the Shamon; but has several convenient bays and creeks. It is fertile in many places, but thinly inhabited; but, by the introduction of the linen manufacture, the number of inhabitants begins to increase.

To CONNE'CT, v. a. [from con, with, and necto, to knit, Lat.] to join together by some intermediate means, alluding to the union formed by cement; to join together the members of a period, or the arguments of a discourse, in such a manner as they shall have a mutual dependence on each like the links of a chain.

CONNE'CTICUT, one of the five states of New England. It is 73 miles long, and about 44 broad, and is bounded on the W. by New York, on the N. by Massachusets, on the E. by Rhode Island, and on the S. and S. E. by the Sound, which divides it from Long Island. Though subject to the extremes of heat and cold, and to frequent and sudden changes of weather, the country is healthful, and the most populous, in proportion to its extent, of any of the United States; in 1790, the number of the inhabitants was 237,946, of which 2764 were slaves. It resembles a well cultivated garden, producing, with moderate labour, the necessaries and conveniences of life in abundance. The inhabitants are of the religious denomination of Independents. Its principal rivers are the Connecticut, the Housatonik, and the Thames. It contains the counties of Hartford, Newhaven, New London, Fanfield, Windham, Litchfield, Middlesex, and Tolland. The river Connecticut rises in the N. part of New Hampshire, separating that state from Vermont, enters Massachusets at Northfield, crosses that state, enters Connecticut about 7 miles N. of Hartford, and after dividing the latter state nearly in the centre, runs into the sea at the N. E. end of Long Island Sound. Between Walpole on the E. and Westminster on the W. side of the river, are the great falls, over which a bridge, 160 feet in length, was built in 1784, the first ever erected over this noble river, which is navigable above 40 miles for large vessels, and much farther for small ones.

CONNE'CTION, s. See CONNEXION.

CONNE'CTIVE, a. having the power of joining different things together, so as they may have a mutual dependence on each other.

CONNE'CTIVELY, ad. jointly; in union; having mutual dependence on each other, arising from union.

To CONNE'X, v. a. [from con, with, and necto, to knit, Lat.] to join, link, or fasten several things to each other.

CONNE'XION, s. [from con, with, and necto, to knit, Lat.] a relation whereby one thing adheres to, and depends on another; the act of fastening things together in such a manner, that they may stick as if joined by cement, and depend on each other like the links of a chain; dependence; commerce; union formed by interest.

CONNE'XIVE, a. that has the force of joining or uniting together.

CONNIVANCE, s. the beholding or seeing any fault without taking notice of it, or punishing the committer.

To CONNI'VE, v. n. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and niveo, to wink, Lat.] to wink; to pass by a fault without taking notice of it, or punishing the committer.

CONNOISSE'UR, s. [Fr.] one who is perfectly acquainted with any object of knowledge or taste; a perfect judge or critic. Sometimes used of a pretended critic.

To CONNO'TE, v. a. [from con, with, and nota, a mark, Lat.] to imply, to signify by implication.

CONNU'BIAL, a. [connubialis, from con, with, and nubo, to marry, Lat.] relating to marriage; conjugal.

CO'NOID, s. [konoeides, from konos, a cone, and eidos, form, Gr.] in geometry, a solid body resembling a cone, excepting that it has an ellipsis instead of a perfect circle for its base.

CONOI'DICAL, a. [konoeides, from konos, a cone, and eidos, form, Gr.] approaching to a conic form.

To CONQUA'SSATE, v. a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and quasso, to shake much, Lat.] to shake or agitate with violence. Used only by technical writers.

CONQUASSA'TION, s. violent motion; agitation.

To CO'NQUER, v. a. [conquerir, Fr.] to subdue, overcome, or over-run by force of arms; to surmount; to get the better of any difficulty. Neuterly, to obtain the victory. SYNON. It requires courage and valour to conquer; endeavour and resolution to subdue; patience and perseverance to overcome.

CO'NQUERABLE, a. possible to be overcome. Figuratively, easily surmounted.

CO'NQUEROR, s. one who surmounts any difficulty, one who subdues by force of arms.

CO'NQUEST, s. [conqueste, Fr.] the act of subduing by force of arms; the thing gained by victory; victory or success in arms.

CONSANGUINEOUS, a. [from con, with, and sanguis, blood, Lat.] near akin; of the same blood; revealed by birth.

CONSANGUINITY, s. [from con, and sanguis, blood, Lat.] relation by blood; relation or descent from one father.

CO'NSCIENCE, (by some pron. kónschience) s. [from conscio, to know, Lat.] the faculty or act of judging of the nature of our actions, whether they be good or evil, implying a comparison of them with some standard of moral action; the determination of the mind with respect to the quality of any action after its commission; the knowledge of our own thoughts, or consciousness; real sentiments, private thoughts, used with in. Scruple or consciousness, used with make.

CONSCIE'NTIOUS, (consiénshious) a. [from conscientia, conscience, Lat.] scrupulous; examining every thing according to the dictates of conscience, and acting conformably; exactly just.

CONSCIE'NTIOUSLY, ad. according to the direction of conscience.

CONSCIE'NTIOUSNESS, (konsiénshiousness) s. exactness or tenderness of conscience; an excess of scrupulousness.

CO'NSCIONABLE, (kónshionable) a. agreeable to the dictates of conscience; just.

CO'NSCIONABLENESS, (kónshionableness) s. equity; reasonableness; agreeableness to, or consistency with, the dictates of conscience.

CO'NSCIONABLY, (kónshionably) ad. in a manner agreeable to the dictates of conscience; justly; reasonably.

CO'NSCIOUS, (kónshious) a. [from conscio, to know, Lat.] to be inwardly sensible of a thing, whereof it is possible to have a distinct idea. Knowing from recollection or memory; knowing or understanding; bearing witness of, or sensible of, from the instigations of conscience.

CO'NSCIOUSLY, (kónshiously) ad. sensibly; or having the sensation of the operation of some faculty of the mind.

CO'NSCIOUSNESS, (kónshiousness) s. the perception or sensation of what passes in a man's own mind; an internal acknowledgement or sense of guilt, or of having performed any particular action.

CO'NSCRIPT, part. [from conscribo, to enroll, Lat.] written or registered. Applied to the Roman fathers or senators, whose names were registered in the list of the senate. A conscript, among the French, is a modern term for a new raised soldier or recruit.

CONSCRI'PTION, s. [from conscribo, to enroll, Lat.] an enrolling or registering.

To CO'NSECRATE, v. a. [consecro, Lat.] to dedicate or set apart to divine uses; to sanctify or appropriate, as pleasing to the Deity.

CO'NSECRATE, part. [consecratus, Lat.] set apart for divine uses; dedicated to the service of God; sacred.

CONSECRA'TION, s. the act of appropriating, dedicating, or setting apart any common or profane thing to religious uses, by means of certain ceremonies or rites; the benediction of the bread and wine in the sacrament.

CONSECRATOR, s. the person who performs the rites by which a thing is appropriated to divine uses.

CONSE'CTARY, a. [consectarius, from con, with, and sector, to follow, Lat.] following as a consequence.

CONSE'CTARY, s. a proportion which follows from some preceding definition, lemma, axiom, or the like.

CONSECUTION, s. [consecutio, from consequor, to follow, Lat.] a chain of consequences; succession. In astronomy, the month of consecution, is the space between one conjunction of the moon with the sun to another.

CONSE'CUTIVE, a. [consécutif, Fr.] following in an uninterrupted succession; following; immediately succeeding.

CONSE'CUTIVELY, ad. after or following as an effect.

CONSENSION, s. [from con, with, and sentio, to think, Lat.] agreement; accord.

CONSE'NT, s. [from con, with, and sentio, to think, Lat.] the act of yielding, or compliance with a request; agreement; unity of sentiment; harmony, or agreement of parts. SYNON. We consent to the will of others by permitting; we acquiesce in what is proposed by conforming; we agree to what is said by approving. PROV. They agree like cats and dogs.—They agree like bells, they want nothing but hanging.

To CONSE'NT, v. n. [consentio, Lat.] to agree to; [to promote the same end; to yield or comply with a request; to admit.

CONSENTA'NEOUS, a. [consentaneus, Lat.] agreeable or suitable to; consistent with.

CONSENTA'NEOUSLY, ad. in a manner agreeable to; consistent with, or suitable to.

CONSENTA'NEOUSNESS, s. consistence; agreeableness.

CONSE'NTIENT, (konsénshient) part. [from con, with, and sentio, to think, Lat.] universal; unanimous; general; agreeing, or united in opinion.

CO'NSEQUENCE, s. [consecutio, from consequor, to follow, Lat.] the relation or connexion between two propositions, whereof one follows or is deduced from the other; that which follows from, or is produced by any cause, or principle; event, effect, importance, moment, or concern.

CO'NSEQUENT, part. [consequens, from consequor, to follow, Lat.] following from some premises, applied to argument. Following as an effect.

CO'NSEQUENT, s. the last proposition of an argument, deduced from or included in some preceding proposition; an effect, or that which proceeds from the operation of any cause. Consequent of a ratio, in arithmetic, is the latter of the two terms, or that to which the antecedent is referred; thus in a, b, or a to b; b is the consequent, and a the antecedent.

CONSEQUE'NTIAL, (konsequénshial) a. [consequens, from consequor, to follow, Lat.] produced by a necessary chain of causes and effects, deduced according to the rules of reason or logic.

CONSEQUE'NTIALLY, (konsequénshiallÿ) ad. deducing consequences, or making inferences; according to the rules of reason or logic; by consequence: eventually; in a regular series.

CO'NSEQUENTLY, ad. by consequence; necessarily; inevitably, from a necessary connexion of effects to their causes; in consequence

CONSE'RVABLE, a. [from conservo, to preserve, Lat.] capable of being preserved or kept.

CONSE'RVANCY, s. [conservans, from conservo, to preserve, Lat.] applied to the courts held by the lord-mayor for the preservation of the fishery on the river Thames, which are styled courts of conservancy.

CONSERVATION, s. [conservatio, from conservo, to preserve, Lat.] the act of preserving bodies or systems from corruption or decay

CONSE'RVATIVE, a. [from conservo, to preserve, Lat.] having the power of keeping from corruption or decay.

CONSE'RVATOR, s. [Lat.] one who preserves from corruption or decay; an officer established for the preservation of the privileges granted some cities; or a person who is authorized to determine differences arising between the citizens.

CONSE'RVATORY, s. [from conservo, to preserve, Lat.] a place wherein a thing is kept in a manner suitable to its nature, as fish in a pond.

CONSE'RVATORY, a. having the power of preserving a thing from corruption or decay.

CONSERVE, s. a sweet-meat made by boiling fruit in clarified sugar. In pharmacy, a medicine in the form of an electuary, made of the leaves of flowers, beat with sugar in a mortar; a place to keep and preserve vegetables in.

To CONSE'RVE, v. a. [conservo, Lat.] to preserve with out loss or detriment.

CONSE'RVER, s. a layer up; a repositor; one that preserves any thing from loss or diminution.

CONSE'SSION, s. [from con, together, and sedeo, to sit, Lat.] a sitting together.

CONSE'SSOR, s. [Lat.] one who sits with another.

To CONSI'DER, v. a. [considero, Lat.] to think much on a thing; to revolve often in the mind; to meditate on. To view with attention. To determine or resolve after weighing the consequences of an action. To remark; to call to mind; to observe. To respect; not to despise. To requite; to reward for his trouble. Neuterly, to think maturely; to deliberate. To doubt; to hesitate.

CONSI'DERABLE, a. that is worthy of notice, regard, or attention: important; valuable; respectable; large or conveying a sense between little and great.

CONSI'DERABLENESS, s. importance; value; dignity; a quality which claims our notice.

CONSI'DERABLY, ad. in a degree deserving some, though not the highest, notice; in a great degree.

CONSI'DERATE, a. [from considero, to consider, Lat.] serious: given to consideration or thought; prudent; pitying, or moderate.

CONSI'DERATELY, ad. calmly; coolly; prudently.

CONSIDERA'TION, s. [consideratio, from considero, to consider, Lat.] the act of thinking on; mature thought or deliberation; meditation; importance; worthiness of regard; motive of action; influence; reason; ground of concluding, an equivalent.

CONSI'DERER, s. one who employs his thoughts on any subject.

To CONSI'GN, (konsīn) v. a. [consigno, Lat.] to transfer one's property to another. In commerce, to send goods, or direct them to another. Figuratively, to commit or entrust, used with to. Neuterly, to yield, submit, or resign. To consent or submit.

CONSIGNA'TION, s. [consignation, Fr.] the act of transferring property to another. In commerce, the transmitting or sending goods to another.

CONSI'GNMENT, (konsīnment) s. the act of transferring the writing by which property is transferred, or goods sent to another to be sold.

To CONSI'ST, v. n. [from con, with, which changes from an active to a neuter signification, and sisto, to make stand, Lat.] to subsist, or be preserved in existence; to continue in the same state; to be comprised or contained; to be composed; to agree or exist in the subject; to subsist, or have being.

CONSI'STENCE, or CONSI'STENCY, s. the natural state of bodies; the degree of thickness or thinness, applied to fluids; substance, form, make; uniformity of appearance, action, or qualities; free from contradiction, or variety.

CONSI'STENT, part. [consistens, from consisto, to consist, Lat.] not contradictory; not opposite; reconcileable; agreeing; firm; or solid.

CONSI'STENTLY, ad. in such a manner as to imply no contradiction; agreeably; uniformly.

CONSISTORIAL, a. relating to some court where an ecclesiastic is judge.

CONSISTORY, s. [consistorium, low Lat.] a court consisting of ecclesiastics; the place where an ecclesiastical court is held; a court held at Rome, consisting of cardinals, at which the pope is president. Figuratively, any solemn assembly.

CONSO'CIATE, (konsōshiate) s. [consocio, from con, with, and socius, a companion, Lat.] one who joins with another in an undertaking; an accomplice.

To CONSO'CIATE, (konsoshiate) v. a. [consocio, from con, with, and socius, a companion, Lat.] to unite or join two things together; to cement, or hold together. Neuterly, to unite or join with.

CONSOCIA'TION, (konsosiáshion) s. an alliance, or connexion; intimacy, or union.

CONSO'LABLE, a. that admits comfort.

To CONSOLATE, v. a. [consolor, Lat.] to allay the sense of misery; to assuage sorrow; to impart comfort.

CONSOLA'TION, s. [consolatio, Lat.] that which diminishes grief, and alleviates misery; comfort.

CONSOLA'TOR, s. [Lat.] a comforter.

CONSO'LATORY, a. that affords comfort.

To CONSO'LE, v. a. [consolor, Lat.] to cheer; to comfort; to lessen the sense of misery: to diminish a person's grief.

CONSO'LE, s. [Fr.] in architecture, an ornament cut upon the key of an arch, which has the projecture, and occasionally serves to support little cornices, figures, beasts, or vases.

CONSO'LER, s. the person or thing which adminsters comfort.

CONSO'LIDANT, part. in surgery, having the property of closing or uniting wounds.

To CONSO'LIDATE, v. a. [from solidus, solid, Lat.] to form into a compact or hard body; to harden. Neuterly, to grow firm, hard, or solid.

CONSOLIDA'TION, s. the act of uniting into one mass; the act of uniting two parliamentary bills together.

CO'NSONANCE, or CO'NSONANCY, s. [consonans, from con, together, sono, to sound, Lat.] in music, the sounding of two notes together; and the union and agreement of two sounds. Figuratively, consistence or agreement of opinions or sentiments.

CO'NSONANT, a. [consonans, from con, together, and sono, to sound, Lat.] agreeable; consistent; according; reconcileable.

CO'NSONANT, s. [consonans, from con, together, and sono, to sound, Lat.] in grammar, a letter which cannot be perfectly sounded by itself.

CO'NSONANTLY, ad. in a consistent manner; suitably; agreeably.

CO'NSONANTNESS, s. the quality of agreeing with; consistency.

CO'NSONOUS, a. [from con, together, and sono, to sound, Lat.] agreeing in sound, harmonious.

CONSOPIA'TION, a. [from consopio, to lull asleep, Lat.] the act of laying to sleep. Little used.

CO'NSORT, s. [consors, from con, with, and sors, a lot, Lat.] a companion, generally applied to signify one who bears the lot assigned by Providence to another, and appropriated to a person joined in marriage to another; an assembly; consultation; concurrence; union.

To CONSO'RT, v. n. to unite, join, or associate, followed by with. Actively, to join, or to marry; to mix; to accompany.

CONSPICUITY, s. brightness; easiness to be seen even at a distance; the plainness of any truth or proposition.

CONSPI'CUOUS, a. [from conspicuo, to take a view, Lat.] easy to be seen; to be seen at a distance. Figuratively, eminent, famous, distinguished; easily discovered, manifest.

CONSPI'CUOUSLY, ad. easily to be seen, or discerned by the sight; remarkable for some excellence; eminently; famously; remarkably.

CONSPI'CUOUSNESS, s. exposure to the view; visible at a distance; eminence.

CONSPIRACY, s. [from conspiro, to conspire, Lat.] a private agreement between two or more persons to commit some crime; a plot. In law, it signifies an agreement between two or more, falsely to indict, or procure to be indicted, an innocent person of felony. A conspiracy to maintain suits and quarrels; of victuallers, to sell their victuals at a certain price; and of labourers and artificers, to raise their wages; is also punishable by law.

CONSPIRANT, part. [conspirans, from conspiro, to conspire, Lat.] joining with another in a plot, or other bad design.

CONSPIRA'TION, s. [from conspiro, to conspire, Lat.] See CONSPIRACY, which is most used.

CONSPIRATOR, s. [from conspiro, to conspire, Lat.] one who has secretly engaged to carry on a plot, or some bad design with another.

To CONSPI'RE, a. n. [from con, together, and spiro, to blow or breath, Lat.] to enter into an agreement with others to carry on a plot or other bad design. To agree together.

CONSPI'RER, s. a conspirator; a plotter.

CONSPI'RING, part. tending mutually to produce one design. In mechanics, conpiring powers are such as do not act in directions opposite to each other.

CO'NSTABLE, s. [it is supposed from comes stabuli, Lat. master of the horse] an officer in various manners. Lord High Constable was anciently an officer of the crown, both of England and France, whose authority was so very extensive, that the office has long since been laid aside in both kingdoms, except on particular occasions, as the king's coronation. The function of the Constable of England consisted in the care of the common peace of the land, in deeds of arms, and in matters of war. The first constable was created by the Conqueror; the office continued hereditary till the 13th of Henry VIII. when it was laid aside, as being so powerful as to become troublesome to the king. From the Lord High Constable are derived those inferior ones, since called the Constables of hundreds and franchises, ordained in the 13th of Edward I. by the statute of Winchester, for the preservation of the peace, and view of armour, which appointed that two constables should be chosen in every hundred. These are what we now call High Constables: and under these it was found necessary to appoint others in every town, called Petty Constables. We have also constables denominated from particular places; as Constable of the Tower, of Dover castle, of Windsor castle, of the castle of Caernarvon, and many other castles in Wales, whose office is the same with that of the Castellans, or governors of castles.

CO'NSTABLESHIP, s. the office of a constable.

CO'NSTANCE, the name of two lakes that separate Swisserland from Germany. The Upper lake, or the Boden See, is 15 leagues long, and 6 where broadest. Through this lake the Rhine flows, and then enters the Lower Lake, or Zeller Zee, which is 16 miles long, and 10 in its greatest breadth.

CO'NSTANCE, a city of Suabia, pleasantly seated on the Rhine, between two lakes of the same name. It has magnificent public buildings, and once flourished in commerce; but is now much reduced.

CO'NSTANCY, s. [constantia, Lat.] a state which admits of no change or alteration, opposed to mutability; consistency; resolution; steadiness to any principle in spite of threats, dangers, promises, or rewards; a firm and inviolable attachment to a person, including an unalterable affection: veracity, or the consistency of a narrative with the nature of things. SYNON. Rakes pride themselves more in being fickle than in the steadiness of their engagements. If the affections of the ladies do not last for ever, it is less owing to a want of constancy to the persons they love, than to a want of resolution in the object of their affections.

CO'NSTANT. a. [constans, Lat.] firm; strongly and immoveable attached to any principle or person; assiduous, or without intermission.

CONSTANTINOPLE, the ancient BYZANTIUM, one of the largest and most celebrated cities of Europe, standing at the S. E. extremity of Romania, and capital of the Ottoman Empire. It is pleasantly seated between the Black Sea and the Sea of Marmora, on a neck of land separated from Natolia by a strait a mile in breadth. The grand seigniors palace called the Seraglio, is on the sea side, surrounded by walls flanked with towers, and is 7 miles in circumference, including the gardens. It contains, besides the public offices, and the apartments of the sultan and the women, 162 odas, or apartments for the janizaries. It is covered with lead, as are all the palaces of the sultan. Its principal entrance is of marble, and called the Porte (in Turkish, Capi) whence the denomination of the Ottoman Porte is given to the Turkish empire. Fronting the great gate of the seraglio, is the celebrated royal mosque of St. Sophia, built for a Christian church by the emperor Justinian, to which the grand seignior goes in person every Friday. In the castle of the seven towers, to which an eighth has been added, situated near the sea of Marmora, state prisoners are confined. The bazars, or markets, are square buildings, covered with domes, and supported by arcades. The number of houses in Constantinople must be prodigious, since 30,000 of them have been destroyed by fire in a day, without greatly changing the aspect of the city. The houses in general are crowded with inhabitants, yet they have a mean appearance on the outside, where there are few or no windows, and the streets are narrow; even the palaces of the grandees have nothing remarkable on the outside, but within they are decorated with splendid and costly ornaments. Here are reckoned 3770 streets and lanes, which are never clean, and the inhabitants are visited by the plague almost every year. The inhabitants have been estimated at 800,000, of which about half are Turks, two-thirds of the other half Greeks, Armenians, and Franks, and the rest Jews. The great square, near the mosque of the sultan Bajazet, is the place for public diversions, where the jugglers and mountebanks display their ticks. The street called Adrianople, is the longest and broadest in the city. The circumference of the city is by some said to be 15 miles, and by Tournefort 23 miles; to which if we add the suburbs, it may be 34 miles in compass. The suburb called Pera is delightfully situated, and is the place where the ambassadors of England, France, Holland, &c. reside. Constantinople is built in form of a triangle, and, as the ground rises gradually, there is a view of the whole town from the sea, in which the palaces, mosques, bagnios, and caravansaries, rising above the other houses, have a grand effect. The harbour is spacious and convenient. Constantinople is situated 112 miles E. S. E. of Adrianople, 670 S. E. of Vienna, and 1500 E. S. E. of London. Lat. 41 N. lon. 28. 59. E.

CONSTANTINOPLE, THE STRAIT OF, anciently the Thracian Bosphorus, forms the communication between the Euxine or Black Sea, and the Propontis or Sea of Marmora. It is the boundary between Europe and Asia in this part, and is 20 miles long, and, where narrowest, a mile and a quarter broad. The adjacent country is remarkably beautiful. On one side of the strait is situated Constantinople, and on the other Scutari, which is considered as a suburb to the city.

CONSTANTLY, ad. in an invariable, consistent, or unalterable manner; without ceasing; perpetually.

To CONSTE'LLATE, v. n. [from con, together, and stella, a star, Lat.] to shine with a collected lustre, or general light. Actively, to unite several shining bodies in one splendour.

CONSTELLA'TION, s. in astronomy, a system of several stars that are seen in the heavens, near to one another. Astronomers, for the better distinguishing and observing the stars, have reduced the constellations to the form of animals, as men, bulls, bears, &c. or to the images of some things known, as of a crown, a harp, a balance, &c. or give them the names of those whose memory, in consideration of some noble exploit, they had a mind to perpetuate. An assemblage of splendours, or excellencies.

CONSTERNATION, s. [consternatio, from consterno, to astonish, Lat.] amazement, or wonder, occasioned by some unexpected, great, and terrible object.

To CO'NSTIPATE, v. n. [con, together, and stipo, to cram, Lat.] to crowd together, or reduce into a narrow compass; to thicken any fluid body; to stuff up, or stop any passage In physic, to bind, or render costive.

CONSTIPATION, s. the act of crowding into a narrow compass; the forcing the particles of a body closer than they were before; the act of thickening, applied to fluids; stoppage or obstruction caused by fulness; costiveness.

CONSTITUENT, a. [from constituo, to constitute, Lat.] that makes any thing what it is; elemental; essential; original; necessary to existence; that of which any thing consists.

CONSTITUENT, s. [from constituo, to constitute, Lat.] the person or thing which constitutes to the formation of a thing: one who authorizes or deputes another to act for him; that which is necessary or essential to the being or subsistence of a thing.

To CO'NSTITUTE, v. a. [from con, together, and statuo, to place, Lat.] to give existence to a thing; to give a thing its particular nature and properties; to make a thing to be what it is. Applied to law, to enact, pass, or establish.

CO'NSTITUTER, s. the person who appoints another to act for him.

CONSTITUTION, v. a. [from constituo, to constitute, Lat.] the act of establishing; disposing; producing the particular texture of the parts of a body; the habit or temperament of a body, arising from a peculiar disposition and quality of its parts; temper of mind; and established form of government; particular law; established usage; institution.

CONSTITUTIONAL, a. flowing from the particular temperament or habit of a person's body, or from the peculiar temper and disposition of his mind; implanted in the very nature of a thing; consistent with the form of government; legal.

CONSTITUTIVE, a. that constitutes any thing what it is; elemental; essential; productive.

To CONSTRAIN, v. a. [constraindre, Fr.] to force a person to perform or refrain from some action; to violate; to ravish; to confine; including the idea of force or pressure.

CONSTRAINABLE, a. liable to force or compulsion.

CONSTRAINEDLY, ad. by constraint; by compulsion.

CONSTRAINER, s. the person that forces or compels.

CONSTRAINT, s. [constrainte, Fr.] the act of overruling the will or desire; compulsion or force; confinement. Figuratively, reserve. SYNON. The duty of a child to its parent obliges it to assist him in his old age. The weaker and softer sex is that which can least brook constraint.

To CONSTRI'CT, v. a. [constrictum, Lat.] to contract or bind close; to draw the parts of any thing closer to each other; to cramp.

CONSTRI'CTION, s. [constrictio, from constringo, to bind together, Lat.] the drawing the parts into a narrow compass, or close together; contraction. SYNON. Compression is from an outward force, constriction from some quality; as the throat is compressed by a bandage, and constringed by a cold.

CONSTRI'CTOR, s. [Lat.] that which contracts. In anatomy, applied to those muscles which shut up or close some of the canals or tubes of the body.

To CONSTRI'NGE, v. a. [constringo, Lat.] to bind, or force the parts of a body closer together; to compress.

CONSTRI'NGENT, part. [constringens, Lat.] having the quality of binding or making the parts of a body approach nearer to each other.

To CONSTRU'CT, v. a. [from con, together, and struo, to build, Lat.] to form from different materials; to build; to compile, or constitute.

CONSTRU'CTION, s. [constructio, from con, together, and struo, to build, Lat.] the act of forming from an assem-biage of different things, joined together with art and regularity; the form of a building: structure; the manner in which things are laid together. In grammar, the ranging or placing the words of a sentence according to the rules, or so as to convey a complete meaning or sense. Figuratively, the sense meaning, or interpretation, of a word; judgment; mental representation. Construction of Equations, is the reducing a known equation into lines and schemes, whereby the truth of the canon rule, or equation, may be demonstrated geometrically.

CONSTRU'CTURE, s. an edifice; a building; a pile or frames composed of several things placed together with regularity and art.

To CONSTRUE, v. a. [construo, Lat.] to place words in a grammatical order, and explain their meaning.

CONSUBSTA'NTIAL, (consubstanshial) a. [from con, together, and substo, to consist, Lat.] having the same substance or essence; of the same kind or nature, applied to material bodies.

CONSUBSTANTIA'LITY, (konsubstantiálity) s. the existence of more than one in the same essence.

To CONSUBSTA'NTIATE, (konsubstánshiate) v. a. [con and substantia, Lat.] to unite in one common substance or nature.

CONSUBSTANTIA'TION, (konsubstantiáshion) s. the union of the body and blood of Christ with the bread, after consecration, in the sacrament, according to the Lutherans.

CO'NSUL, s. [Lat.] the title of the chief magistrates at Rome, which were created on the expulsion of the Tarquins; they ruled one year; they were presidents in the senate, commanded the armies of the republic, and decided the differences between the citizens. A person commissioned to judge between merchants in foreign parts, take care of their interests, and protect their commerce.

CO'NSULAR, a. [consularis, Lat.] relating or belonging to a consul.

CO'NSULATE, s. [consulatus, from consul, a Roman magistrate, Lat.] the office of a consul; the time during which a person exercises the office of a consul.

CO'NSULSHIP, s. the office of a consul.

To CONSU'LT, v. n. [consulto, Lat.] to deliberate together. Actively, to apply to for advice; to act with regard or respect to; to act so as to promote some end. Figuratively, to plan or contrive; to examine into the sentiments of an author.

CONSULTA'TION, s. [consultatio, from consulto, to consult, Lat.] the act of taking the advice of one or more persons; an assembly of several persons meeting together to give their opinions on any subject.

CONSU'LTER, s. one who applies to another for counsel, advice, or intelligence.

CONSU'MABLE, a. that may be diminished, altered, wasted, or destroyed.

To CONSU'ME, v. a. [consumo, Lat.] to waste by separating the particles of a body; to diminish; to lessen a person's fortune or money by expenses; to destroy.

CONSU'MER, s. one who spends, wastes, or destroys.

To CONSU'MMATE, v. a. [consommer, Fr.] to perfect or finish; to complete, or render complete; to end.

CONSU'MMATE, a. [from consummo, to complete, Lat.] perfect; complete; finished; without defect of any circumstance or particular required for its completion or perfection.

CONSUMMA'TION, s., from consummo, to complete, Lat.] the completion or conclusion of any action or undertaking; the final termination of all things.

CONSU'MPTION, s. [from consumo, to consume, Lat.] the act of consuming, wasting, or destroying; the state of wasting, decaying, or perishing. In medicine, a decay occasioned by want of nourishment, or a preternatural decay of the body by a gradual wasting of the muscular flesh.

CONSU'MPTIVE, a. havin the quality of wasting, consuming, or destroying; diseased or affected with a consumption.

To CONTA'BULATE, v. a. [from con, with, and tabula, a table or board, Lat.] to floor with boards.

CONTABULA'TION, s. [from con, with, and tabula, a table or board, Lat.] a joining of boards or planks together.

CO'NTACT, s. [contactus, from contingo, to touch, Lat.] touch, close union. In astronomy, a planet and star, or any two planets are said to be in contact, when they are in or so near the same longitude and latitude of the zodiac, that the nearer body hides, either wholly or in part, the other from our view. Also applied to the first or last impression of the moon or inferior planet, on the sun's disk. In mathematics, it is when one line, plane, or body, is made to touch another, and the parts that do thus touch, are called the points or places of contact.

CONTA'CTION, s. [contactus, from contingo, to touch, Lat.] the act of joining or touching.

CONTA'GION, s. [contagio, from contingo, to touch, Lat.] the communicating a disease from one body to another. Pestilence, or that which affects a person with diseases by unwholesome effluvia. Figuratively, the propagation of vice, or the power which vice has to propagate itself.

CONTA'GIOUS, a. [contagio, from contingo, to touch, Lat.] infectious; to be communicated from one to another, applied to the manner in which pestilential diseases or vices are propagated.

CONTA'GIOUS, s. the quality of propagating a disorder or vice from one person to another.

To CONTA'IN, v. a. [contineo, Lat.] to include any fluid within its sides, applied to vessel; to comprise, applied to writings. Figuratively, to restrain or keep within bounds.

CONTA'INABLE, a. possible to be included within certain bounds; possible to be included within a vessel.

To CONTA'MINATE, v. a. [contamino, Lat.] to defile; to pollute by base mixture.

CONTA'MINATE, part. [contaminatus, Lat.] defiled; polluted; generally applied to the pollution of the marriage-bed.

CONTAMINA'TION, s. the act of pollution; the state of a thing defiled or polluted.

To CONTE'MN, (contém) v. a. [contemno, Lat.] to despise; to disregard; to slight, neglect, or defy.

CONTE'MNER, s. one who despises, scorns, or has a mean opinion of a thing; one who bears the threats of another without being concerned; a despiser; a scorner.

To CONTE'MPER, v. a. [contempero, Lat.] to moderate; or allay by the mixture of some opposite quality.

CONTE'MPERAMENT, s. temperature or quality resembling another.

To CONTE'MPERATE, v. a. to diminish any quality by the addition of its opposite.

CONTEMPERA'TION, s. the act of lessening any quality by the mixture of a contrary one; the act of tempering, or moderating; the act of blending opposite humours.

To CONTE'MPLATE, v. a. [contemplor, Lat.] to consider with continued attention and application. Neuterly, to muse; to think with great attention.

CONTEMPLA'TION, s. [contemplatio, Lat.] studious or intense thought on any subject; the act of keeping any idea brought into the mind for some time actually in view; the employment of the thoughts about divine things; study or speculation.

CONTE'MPLATIVE, a. given to thought: studious: employed in study.

CONTE'MPLATIVELY, ad. thoughtfully; attentively: with deep attention.

CONTEMPLA'TOR, s. [Lat.] one employed in study; a student.

CONTE'MPORARY, (usually pron. katémporary) a. [contemporain, Fr.] living in the same age; born at the same time; existing at the same point of time.

CONTE'MPORARY, s. one who lives at the same time with another.

To CONTE'MPORIZE, v. a. [from con and tempus, Lat.] to make contemporary; to place in the same age.

CONTE'MPT, s. [contemptus, from contemno, to despise, Lat.] the act of looking on a thing as an object worthy of scorn; and, on account of its meanness, unfit for approbation; the state of being despised.

CONTE'MPTIBLE, a. worthy of scorn on account of its vileness or insignificancy, despised, or thought unworthy of notice.

CONTE'MPTIBLENESS, s. that quality which renders a thing the object of scorn and contempt.

CONTE'MPTIBLY, ad. meanly; in a manner deserving contempt.

CONTE'MPTUOUS, a. using an insolent expression of scorn and disdain, on account of the meanness of a thing, whether it be real or imaginary.

CONTE'MPTUOUSLY, ad. in a manner which expresses a mean and disdainful idea either of a person or thing.

CONTE'MPTUOUSNESS, s. the quality expressive of an insolent disdain of a thing, on account of its real or supposed meanness.

To CONTE'ND, v. n. [contendo, Lat.] to strive or struggle in opposition to another; to vie with; to debate with warmth.

CONTE'NDER, s. one who opposes the opinions of another; an opponent.

CONTE'NT, a. [contentus, Lat.] satisfied with one's present lot, though not pleased with it; submitting without opposition.

To CONTE'NT, v. a. [from contentus, Lat.] to satisfy so as to stop complaint; to confine one's desires to that which is in our possession; to restrain our actions within certain limits; to give a person his demands, so as to hinder him from making any more; to please; to gratify.

CONTE'NT, s. a disposition of mind whereby a person confines his desires to what he enjoys, without murmuring at his lot, or wishing ardently for more. Applied to writings or opinions, such as are implicitly believed or acquieseed in without examination. In the plural, that which is contained or included in any vessel or receptacle; the capacity of containing; the purport of any writing; the chief things treated of by an author. SYNON. No restless or turbulent man can ever enjoy true content. Satisfaction hardly ever accompanies immoderate ambition.

CONTENTA'TION, s. satisfaction or content. Out of use.

CONTE'NTED, part. resigned to the dispensations of Providence; satisfied with one's present lot, without murmuring at its defectiveness, or desiring more.

CONTE'NTION, s. [contentio, from contendo, to contend, Lat.] an opposition of sentiments or opinion; a warm espousal of any doctrine or interest in opposition to others; eagerness to bring about a design; emulation.

CONTE'NTIOUS, (kontênshious) a. inclined to oppose the sentiments of another; quarrelsome; litigious. Contentious Jurisdiction, in law, is a court which has a power to judge and determine differences between contending parties. The lord chief justices and judges, have a contentious jurisdiction; but the lords of the treasury, and the commissioners of the customs, have none, being merely judges of accounts and transactions.

CONTE'NTIOUSLY, (kontênshiously) ad. out of a fondness for opposition or contradiction.

CONTE'NTIOUSNESS, (kontênshiousness) s. proneness to oppose, contend, or quarrel with.

CONTE'NTLESS, a. dissatisfied with one's present condition; void of resignation to the dispensations of Providence.

CONTE'NTMENT, s. [contentment, Fr.] full satisfaction in present enjoyment, without a wish for more; pleasure; gratification; or delight.

CONTE'RMINOUS, a. [from con, together, and terminus, a boundary, Lat.] bordering upon; touching at the boundaries.

To CONTE'ST, v. a. [contester, Fr.] to dispute, to oppose an opinion; to call in question; to contend with a person for any right, property, or other subject. Neuterly, to strive, contend, vie, or emulate.

CO'NTEST, s. a dispute, or opposition of opinions; a difference; a controversy.

CONTE'STABLE, a. that may be disputed, opposed, or controverted.

CONTE'STABLENESS, s. possibility of being disputed or controverted.

CONTESTA'TION, s. the act of opposing the sentiments of another; strife; contradiction.

To CO'NTEX, v. a. [from con, together, and texo, to weave, Lat.] to weave together; to unite by interposition of parts.

CO'NTEXT, s. [contextus, Lat.] the general tenor and series of a discourse; the parts which precede or follow a sentence quoted.

CONTE'XT, a. [from con, together, and texo, to weave, Lat.] woven close together; interwoven.

CONTE'XTURE, s. the peculiar arrangement, order, or disposition of the parts of a body; the composition which is formed from an union of various and previously separate parts; constitution; the manner in which any thing is woven or formed.

CONTIGNA'TION, s. [contignatio, from con, together, and tignum, a rafter, Lat.] a frame of beams or boards joined together; the act of framing or joining the parts of a building together.

CONTIGUITY, s. actual touching; a situation in which two things touch each other.

CONTI'GUOUS, a. [from con, together, and tango, to touch, Lat.] meeting so as to touch; bordering, applied to countries or places which join.

CONTI'GUOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to touch or join

CONTI'GUOUSNESS, s. touching; nearness, so as to touch.

CO'NTINENCE, or CO'NTINENCY, s. [from continco, to restrain, Lat.] restraint, or command over our thoughts and passions; continuance or uninterrupted series; chastity.

CO'NTINENT, part. [from continco, to restrain, Lat.] chaste; restrained from an immoderate use even of lawful pleasure; contiguous or joined to.

CO'NTINENT, s. [continens, from continco, to hold together, Lat.] a main land, not intersected by the sea; in contradistinction to an island which is surrounded with it. The continents which best deserve the name, are two, the ancient continent which comprehends Europe, Asia, and Africa, and the new continent, which is called America. Australasia or New Holland is by some considered as an island, by others as a continent. We are not yet able to ascertain the number of continents which exist, as it is uncertain whether land or water occupy the polar regions.

To CONTI'NGE, v. n. [from con, together, and tango, to touch, Lat.] to touch; to reach; to happen.

CONTI'NGENCE, or CONTI'NGENCY, s. [from con, together, and tango, to touch, Lat.] the quality of being free to exist or not to exist; applied to future events, and opposed to those which must necessarily happen.

CONTI'NGENT, a. [from con, together, and tango, to touch, Lat.] not necessarily happening; casual.

CONTI'NGENT, s. something casual, or uncertain; a future event which may or may not happen, according as things shall be circumstanced. In law, it is an use limited in a conveyance which may or may not happen, according to the contingency mentioned in the limitation of use. And a contingent remainder is when an estate is limited to take place at a time to come, on an uncertain event.

CONTI'NGENTLY, ad. in a contingent, uncertain, casual manner.

CONTI'NGENTNESS, s. the quality which denominates an action or future event to be uncertain with regard to its existence

CONTI'NUAL, a. [from continco, to hold together, Lat.] incessant; without interruption; succeeding without any respite or intermission.

CONTI'NUALLY, ad. without any pause or respite; without ceasing.

CONTI'NUANCE, s. an uninterrupted succession, habit, or repeated act of the same kind; abode or dwelling for some time in the same place; duration; perseverance.

CONTI'NUATE, a. [from continco, to hold together, Lat.] intimately, or closely; unint rrupted; unbroken, or incessant.

CONTI'NUATELY, ad. with continuity; without interruption.

CONTINUA'TION, s. [continuatio, Lat.] an uninterrupted succession.

CONTI'NUATIVE, s. an expression which denotes continuation, permanency, or duration.

CONTINUA'TOR, s. he that keeps a succession without interruption; one who goes on with the work which another has left imperfect, or carries it on.

To CONTI'NUE, v. n. [continuo, Lat.] to remain with a person; to last; to endure; to unite without any intervening substance; to proceed in an action without interruption.

CONTI'NUEDLY, ad. in a manner free from any intermission, respite, pause, or cessation; without ceasing.

CONTI'NUER, s. one who perseveres in any action without interruption or ceasing.

CONTINUITY, s. [from continco, to hold together, Lat.] close union without interruption or ceasing.

CONTI'NUOUS, a. [from continco, to hold together, Lat.] joined together without any chasm or intervening space.

To CONTORT, v. a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and torqueo, to twist, Lat.] to wrest, twist, or writhe.

CONTO'RTION, s. the action of twisting; the twisting or wresting of a member of the body out of its place.

CONTO'UR, (contôor) s. in designing and painting, an outline which limits or determines any figure.

CO'NTRA, prep. [Lat.] used in commerce, to signify the side of an account contrary to the debt; i. e. the credit side. In composition, it signifies contrary, or against.

CO'NTRABAND, a. [contrabando, Ital.] that is prohibited by the laws of nations; illegal.

To CO'NTRABAND, v. a. to import goods prohibited.

To CONTRA'CT, v. a. [from con, together, and traho, to draw, Lat.] to draw together; to draw into one mass; to comprise; to make a bargain; to betroth, applied to a compact between a man and woman; to acquire; to reduce to a narrow compass. Neuterly, to shrink or grow short.

CO'NTRACT, s. an agreement entered into by two parties; a compact; the act of betrothing; a writing which contains the terms or conditions of a bargain or agreement.

CONTRA'CTEDNESS, s. the quality which denotes a thing to be reduced into a narrower compass; narrowness or smallness of extent.

CONTRACTIBI'LITY, s. the possibility of being reduced to a less compass by shrinking.

CONTRA'CTIBLE, a. capable of being reduced to a narrower compass.

CONTRA'CTIBLENESS, s. the quality of being reduced to a less compass by shrinking, or of suffering contraction.

CONTRA'CTILE, a. having the power of contracting or shortening itself.

CONTRA'CTION, s. [contractio, from con, together, and traho, to draw, Lat.] the act of shortening a writing or reducing the substance of it to less compass; the act of shrinking or decreasing in magnitude or dimensions; the state of a thing shrunk, shrivelled, or drawn into a narrow compass. In anatomy, it means the shrinking up of a fibre, or an assemblage of fibres, when extended. As paralytic disorders generally proceed from a too great relaxation of the fibres in the part affected; so, on the other hand, convulsions and spasms proceed from a preternatural contraction of the muscles of the part affected. In grammar, the reduction of two vowels or syllables into one.

CONTRA'CTOR, s. one of the parties to a contract or bargain.

To CONTRADI'CT, v. a. [from contra, against, and dico, to speak, Lat.] to oppose; to assert a thing quite opposite or contrary to another; to deny the assertion of another; to oppose; to be opposite, or irreconcileable with.

CONTRADI'CTER, s. one who opposes the sentiments of another; an opponent.

CONTRADI'CTION, s. the asserting by words that the opinion of another is false; opposition; consistency; contrariety; a species of direct opposition.

CONTRADI'CTIOUS, (kontradikshious) a. inconsistent, or opposite; inclined to oppose, cavil at, or contradict another.

CONTRADI'CTIOUSNESS, (kontradikshiousness) s. inconsistence, opposition, or contrariety.

CONTRADI'CTORILY, ad. inconsistently; in such a manner as to be guilty of inconsistencies or contradictions.

CONTRADI'CTORINESS, s. the highest degree of opposition, applied to truth or opinions.

CONTRADI'CTORY, a. [from contra, against, and dico, to speak, Lat.] opposite to, or inconsistent with.

CONTRADISTI'NCTION, s. the explanation or determining the sense of a word, by producing one that has an opposite signification.

To CONTRADISTI'NGUISH, v. a. to distinguish or explain by contrast, or producing a contrary quality.

CONTRAFI'SSURE, s. in surgery, a crack or fissure in the skull, in the part opposite to that wherein the blow was received.

To CONTRAI'NDICATE, v. a. [from contra, against, and indico, to point out, Lat.] to point out a method contrary to the general tenor of a disease; as when a vomit seem advisable, the patient's being subject to vomiting shews that it ought by no means to be prescribed.

CONTRAI'NDICATION, s. in physic, a symptom which forbids that to be done which the main scope of a disease at first thought seems to point out.

CONTRAMU'RE, s. [contremur, Fr.] in fortification, an out-wall about, or opposite to, the main wall of a city.

CONTRANI'TENCY, s. [from contra, against, and nitor, to strive, Lat.] a contrary resistance, reaction, or a resistence to any force.

CONTRAPO'SITION, s. [from contra, against, and positio, placing, Lat.] the placing opposite, or over against.

CONTRAREGULA'RITY, s. contrariety to rule.

CONTRA'RIANT, a. [Fr.] contradictory; opposite and irreconcileable in sense.

CO'NTRARIES, s. plural of contrary; propositions which mutually destroy each other, and cannot both be true at the same time; or opposites, which, being of the same kind, or common nature, subsisting by turns in the same subject, are as remote from each other as possible, and mutually expel each other; such are whiteness and blackness, &c.

CONTRARI'ETY, s. [contrarietas, from contra, against, Lat.] opposition; inconsistency; a quality or position opposite to, or destructive of, another.

CONTRA'RILY, ad. in a manner opposite to, inconsistent, or irreconcileable with; differently; in opposite directions.

CONTRA'RINESS, s. the quality of being opposed to, or inconsistent with.

CONTRA'RIOUS, s. [from contra, against, Lat.] opposite; different in the highest degree.

CONTRA'RIOUSLY, ad. oppositely; in contrary or opposite directions; in a manner inconsistent.

CONTRA'RIWISE, ad. on the contrary; in a contrary manner.

CO'NTRARY, a. [from contra, against, Lat.] applied to qualities or truths, which are such opposites to one another, that the former cannot subsist in the same subject, and the latter cannot be both true at the same time; inconsistent; disagreeing, in an opposite direction, or unfavourable, applied to the wind.

CO'NTRARY, s. [contraries in the plural] a thing which has qualities opposite to those of another; a proposition or truth opposite to another. On the contrary, borrowed from the commercial phrase per contra, signifies on the opposite side, or in opposition to something which has been alleged or offered. To the contrary, to an intention or purpose quite contrary; against; or in opposition to any thing.

To CO'NTRARY, v. a. [contrarier, Fr.] to oppose; to thwart; to contradict.

CO'NTRAST, s. [contraste, Fr.] in painting and sculpture, an opposition or difference between the position, attitude, &c. of any two figures, or the lines which form objects by means whereof they cause a variety, and tend to set off each other. In architecture, the avoiding of the repetition of the same thing, in order to please by variety; as in the gallery of the Louvre, the pediments are alternately arched and angular.

To CONTRA'ST, v. a. in painting, to place in a contrary attitude, &c. in order to set off one figure by another. Figuratively, to set in contrary positions; to set one thing off by coupling it with another.

CONTRAVALLA'TION, s. [from contra, against, and vallo, to intrench, Lat.] in fortification, the means used by an army to defend themselves from the sallies of a town they besiege, consisting of a trench guarded by a parapet, without musket shot of the town, and drawn between the besiegers and the town.

To CONTRAVE'NE, v. a. [from contra, against, and venio, to come, Lat.] to oppose; to obstruct the performance of a thing; to act contrary to a bargain, contract, or agreement.

CONTRAVE'NER, s. he who opposes another.

CONTRAVE'NTION, s. [Fr.] an opposition to any law; a violation of, or acting contrary to, a law.

CONTRAYE'RVA, s. [from contra, against, Lat. and yerva, poison, Span.] a Peruvian root, which strengthens the stomach, dispels flatulencies, and helps digestion; is useful in fevers, and recommended against the plague and other malignant distempers, and is an excellent sudorific.

CONTRECTA'TION, s. [from contrecto, to handle, Lat.] a touching or handling.

CONTRIBUTARY, a. paying a tribute to the same person; concurring to promote a design.

To CONTRIBUTE, v. a. [contribuo, Lat.] to give or pay a portion of money towards carrying on some common design. Neuterly, to promote, or bear a part or share in the promoting any design.

CONTRIBUTION, s. the act of paying a share of the expenses required to carry on any design; a sum paid by a town taken, or in danger of being taken by an enemy, to prevent its being plundered; a sum of money collected from several persons.

CONTRIBUTIVE, a. that promotes any design in conjunction with other things or persons.

CONTRIBUTOR, s. [from contribuo, to contribute, Lat.] one who bears a part in the measures taken to accomplish any design; one who pays his share towards raising a sum of money.

CONTRIBUTORY, a. promoting the same end; paying a share towards raising a common fund, or certain sum.

To CONTRISTATE, v. a. [contristo, from tristis, sorrowful, Lat.] to sadden; to make sorrowful.

CONTRISTA'TION, s. [contristo, from tristis, sorrowful, Lat.] the act of making sad; sorrow; heaviness of heart; sadness; gloominess; grief; discontent; melancholy moan; trouble.

CONTRITE, a. [contritus, from contero, to break or bruise, Lat.] in its primary signification, bruised, or much worn. In divinity, sorrowful for sin from a love of God.

CONTRI'TENESS, s. contrition; repentance.

CONTRI'TION, s. [contritio, from contero, to break or bruise, Lat.] in its primary sense, the act of rubbing two bodies against each other so as to wear off some parts of the surfaces. In divinity, that penitence or sorrow for sin which arises from the love of God and virtue.

CONTRI'VABLE, a. possible to be discovered, or planned by the mind.

CONTRI'VANCE, s. the projecting or planning the most possible methods to accomplish any design, or attain any end. Figuratively, a plan; a scheme; a plot; an artifice.

To CONTRI'VE, v. a. to invent, plan, or project the means of attaining any end, or accomplishing any design. Neuterly, to form, design, or lay a plot.

CONTRI'VEMENT, s. invention.

CONTRI'VER, s. an inventor; a projector; one who forms projects for the attaining an end, or accomplishing some design.

CONTRO'L, (the o in this word and its derivatives is pron. long, kontrōl) s. [controle, Fr.] the account kept by a person as a check upon another. Figuratively, restraint; check; power; authority; dominion.

To CONTRO'L, v. a. to examine the accounts of another by a check kept against him. Figuratively, to restrain; to keep under restraint; to govern; to over-power; to confute.

CONTRO'LLABLE, a. liable to be controlled, overruled, or restrained; subject to restraint.

CONTRO'LLER, s. a person who examines public accounts by a check; one who has the power of over-ruling, restraining, or governing the actions of another.

CONTRO'LLERSHIP, s. the office or compliment of a controller.

CONTRO'LMENT, s. the power of restraining the actions or active powers of another; opposition; resistance.

CONTROVE'RSIAL, (controvérshial) a. relating to dispute, or opposition of sentiments; that may be disputed.

CO'NTROVERSY, s. [controversia, from contra, against, and verto, to turn, Lat.] an opposition of opinions or sentiments, generally applied to disputes carried on with some warmth in writing or print; a suit at law about the property of a thing; opposition, or struggling against the force of a thing.

To CONTROVE'RT, v. a. [from contra, against, and verto, to turn, Lat.] to oppose the sentiments of another in writing.

CONTROVE'RTIBLE, that may give occasion to dispute; that may be opposed.

CONTROVE'RTIST, s. a disputant; a person versed or engaged in literary wars or disputations.

CONTUMA'CIOUS, (kontumáshious) a. [contumax, Lat.] insolently obstinate, implying a contempt of lawful authority, and acting against it from a spirit of insolent opposition.

CONTUMA'CIOUSLY, (kontumáciously) ad. in such a manner as shews an insolent obstinacy, or disobedience of lawful authority.

CO'NTUMACY, or CONTUMA'CIOUSNESS, s. [from contumax, contemptuous, Lat.] disobedience to lawful authority, including insolence, perverseness, and the highest degree of impudence.

CONTUME'LIOUS, a. [contumeliosus, from contumco, to swell, Lat.] reproachful; rude; sarcastic; contemptuous. Inclined to utter reproach, or practice insults; brutal; Productive of reproach; shameful; ignominious.

CONTUME'LIOUSLY, ad. in a rude, reproachful; contemptuous, or abusive manner.

CONTUME'LIOUSNESS, s. that quality which arises from, or denominates any expressions to be rudely reproachful, and abounding with bitterness.

CO'NTUMELY, s. [contumelia, Lat.] language abounding with the bitterest expressions, intended to subject a person to the reproach of others, and to render him uneasy. Figuratively, infamy, which subjects a person to the reproaches of others.

To CONTU'SE, (kontuze) v. a. [con, with, to strengthen the signification, and tundo, to beat, Lat.] in its primary signification, to beat together, to bruise. In surgery, to hurt by a blow, or some blunt body, so as to discolour the skin by an extravasation of the blood, &c. without breaking it, or destroying its continuity.

CONTU'SION, s. [contusio, from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and tundo, to beat, Lat.] the act of beating or bruising. Figuratively, the effect of beating or bruising. In medicine, a hurt occasioned by a fall, or blow from any blunt weapon, which discolours the skin without cutting it, or destroying its continuity.

CONVALE'SCENCE, or CONVALE'SCENCY, s. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and valesco, to grow well, Lat.] a recovery of health.

CONVALE'SCENT, a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and valesco, to grow well, Lat.] recovering; or returning from a disorder to a state of health.

CONVE'NABLE, a. [convenable, Fr.] consistent with; agreeable to; accordant to.

To CONVE'NE, v. a. [from con, together, and venio, to come, Lat.] to call together by summons; to assemble a number of persons into the same place; to summons to appeal, in a law sense. Neuterly, to come or assemble together.

CONVE'NIENCE, or CONVE'NIENCY, s. [from con, together, and venio, to come, Lat.] the suitableness, or fitness of a thing to promote any end; advantage; profit; ease; or freedom from any obstruction, difficulty, or embarrassment.

CONVE'NIENT, a. [from con, together, and venio, to come, Lat.] fit, suitable to effect an end proper or necessary; free from obstructions. Applied to situation, commodious, seasonable.

CONVE'NIENTLY, ad. suitable with a person's ease, interest, or advantage; commodiously; properly.

CO'NVENT, s. [from con, together, and venio, to come, Lat.] an assembly of persons dedicating themselves entirely to the service of religion, and without any commerce with the world: the place inhabited by the religious of either sex.

CONVE'NTICLE, s. [a diminutive of convent] an assembly. Figuratively, a place of worship, generally applied by warm churchmen to the meetings of nonconformists, by way of reproach: a secret assembly for the contrivance of some plot or crime.

CONVE'NTICLER, s. one who frequents private and unlawful assemblies.

CONVE'NTION, s. [from con, together, and venio, to come Lat.] a treaty, contract, or agreement between two or more parties; also, an assembly, union, coalition. It is also a name given to an extraordinary assembly of parliament, or the states of the realm held without the king's writ; as was the convention of the estates, who, upon the retreat of king James II. came to a conclusion, that he had abdicated the throne, and the right of succession devolved to king William and queen Mary; whereupon their assembly expired as a convention, and was converted into a parliament. Also, in later history, the name of that assembly in France, which on the 21st of September, 1792, abolished royalty and founded a republic.

CONVE'NTIONAL, (konvénshional) a. stipulated; or agreed to by bargain or contract.

CONVE'NTIONARY, (konvénshionary) a. acting according to the articles of some agreement or contract.

CONVE'NTUAL, a. [conventuel, Fr.] belonging to a convent. Substantively, a monk; or one who lives in a convent.

To CONVE'RGE, v. n. [from con, with, and vergo, to incline, Lat.] to meet in a point; to approach nearer to each other till they join in a point, applied to the rays of light, or lines drawn from different surfaces.

CONVE'RGENT, or CONVE'RGING, part. [from con, with, and vergo, to incline, Lat.] issuing from divers points, and approaching nearer to each other till they meet in a point.

CONVE'RSABLE, a. written sometimes conversible, but improperly; [conversable, Fr.] qualified or fit for conversation; fit for company; affable; inclined to communicate knowledge or sentiments to another.

CONVE'RSABLENESS, s. the quality flowing from affability and good nature, which renders conversation agreeable.

CONVE'RSABLY, ad. in such a manner as to engage the conversation of others, and entertain them agreeably with discourse.

CONVE'RSANT, a. [conversant, Fr.] used or habituated to. Familiarly acquainted with; intimate; having intercourse with. Used with about, it implies employed; engaged; relating to; having for its object; or concerning.

CONVE'RSATION, s. [from converso, to converse, Lat.] easy discourse with another; a familiar discourse; intercourse; commerce; behaviour; life; or moral conduct.

CONVE'RSATIVE, a. fit for conversation, or intercourse with men, opposed to contemplative.

To CONVE'RSE, v. n. [con, with, and versor, to dwell, Lat.] in its primary signification, to live with; to keep company with. Figuratively, to hold intercourse with; to be acquainted with by study; to be used to; to discourse.

CO'NVERSE, s. conversation, or the sentiments of a person communicated in familiar discourse. Figuratively, familiar acquaintance. In geometry, the drawing a conclusion from something supposed, and afterwards drawing the proposition supposed as a conclusion from thence.

CONVE'RSELY, ad. with chance of order; in a contrary order; reciprocally.

CONVE'RSION, s. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and verto, to turn, Lat.] the change from one state to another. In divinity, a change from wickedness to piety, or from a false religion to a true one. In rhetoric, the retorting of an argument, whereby it is shewn on opposite sides. In algebra, the reducing an equation or quantity sought, if in fractions, to one common denominator, omitting the denominators, and continuing the equation in the numerators only.

CONVE'RSIVE, a. fit for conversation or discourse; inclined to communicate sentiments by discourse.

To CONVE'RT, v. a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and verto, to turn, Lat.] to change into another substance; to change from one religion to another, generally used for a change from a false to a true one; to change the terms of a proposition; to undergo or suffer a change.

CO'NVERT, s. one prevailed on to change his religion.

CONVE'RTER, s. a person who persuades another to change his religion.

CONVE'RTIBILITY, s. the quality of being an object of conversion; possibility of conversion.

CONVE'RTIBLE, a. that may be changed; that may be altered with respect to its qualities; that may be transmuted; that may be interchanged, or used instead of another.

CONVE'RTIBLY, ad. in such a manner as to be interchanged, or used one for the other.

CO'NVEX. a. [convexus, Lat.] swelling to the view; protuberant, applied to the external surface of a globe, or circular body.

CO'NVEX, s. a convex body; a body swelling externally into a circular form.

CONVE'XED, part. bending outwardly, applied to the outward surface of any round body.

CONVE'XEDLY, ad. protuberant; in a convex form; or like the outward surface of a globe.

CONVE'XITY, s. protuberance in a circular form.

CONVE'XLY, ad. in a convex form.

CONVE'XNESS, s. spheroidical protuberance; convexity.

CONVEXO-CONCAVE, a. hollow on one side, and convex on the other.

To CONVE'Y, v. a. [conveho, Lat.] to move from one place to another; to transport; to transmit; to transfer a right or property to another; to impart; to introduce.

CONVEYANCE, s. the act of moving a thing from one place to another; a method of sending goods from one place to another. Figuratively, the means or instruments by which any thing is introduced from one place to another; the transferring of property from one to the other; a writing or instrument by which property is transferred.

CONVEYANCER, s. a lawyer conversant in drawing writings whereby property is transferred from one person to another.

CONVEYER, s. a person who carries or removes goods from one place to another; one who is engaged in conducting waters from one place to another by means of pipes, channels, &c.

To CONVICT, v. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and vinco, to conquer or convince, Lat.] to prove guilty of some crime.

CONVICT, a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and vinco, to conquer, to convince, Lat.] convicted; detected in guilt.

CONVICT, s. a person proved to be guilty of a crime.

CONVICTION, or CONVINCEMENT, s. the proof of guilt, either by being outlawed, by appearing and confessing, or by inquest; the act of proving a crime; confutation; consciousness of guilt.

CONVICTIVE, a. have the power of convincing.

To CONVINCE, v. a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and vinco, to conquer or convince, Lat.] to prove any proposition so as to make a person acknowledge its truth; to evince, manifest, or vindicate.

CONVINCIBLE, a. capable of acknowledging the strength of a proof or evidence; capable of being convicted or proved guilty; liable to be confuted.

CONVINCINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to make a person see and acknowledge the truth of any proposition or reality of any fact.

CONVINCINGNESS, s. the power or convincing.

CONVIVAL, or CONVIVIAL, a. [convivialis, from con, with, and vivo, to live, Lat.] relating to an entertainment of several persons.

CONUNDRUM, s. [a cant word] a low jest or quibble, drawn from the double signification of words, or distant resemblance of things.

To CONVOCATE v. a. [from con, together, and voco, to call, Lat.] to call several persons together; to summons several persons to meet, or come to an assembly.

CONVOCATION, s. [convocatio, Lat.] the act of calling several persons to an assembly; an assembly. An assembly of the clergy of England, by their representatives, to consult upon matters ecclesiastical. It is held during the sessions of parliament, and consists of an upper and lower house. In the upper sit the bishops, and in the lower the inferior clergy, who are represented by their proctors, consisting of all the deans or archdeacons, of one proctor for every chapter, and two for the clergy of each diocese, in all 143 divines, viz. 22 deans, 53 archdeacons, 24 prebendaries, and 44 proctors of the diocesan clergy. The lower house chuses its prolocutor, whose business it is to take care that the members attend, to collect their debates and votes, and to carry their resolutions to the upper house. The Convocation is summoned by the king's writ, directed to the archbishop of each province, requiring him to summons all bishops, deans, archdeacons, &c. But since the year 1665, when the clergy gave up the privilege of taxing themselves to the House of Commons, they seldom have been allowed to do any business; and are generally prorogued from time to time till dissolved, a new one being generally called along with a new parliament. The only equivalent for giving up the privilege of taxing themselves, was their being allowed to vote at elections for members to the House of Commons, which they had not before. Likewise an assembly at Oxford, consisting of the vice-chanceller, doctors, and masters of arts, wherein the conferring of degrees, expulsion of delinquent members, and other affairs relating to the university, considered as a body corporate, are transacted.

To CONVOKE, v. a. [con, together, and voco, to call, Lat.] to call together several persons; to summons to an assembly.

To CONVOLVE, v. a. [from con, together, and volvo, to roll, Lat.] to roll together; or roll one part over another.

CONVOLUTED, part. [from con, together, and volvo, to roll, Lat.] twisted, writhed, or rolled up, so that one part laps over another.

CONVOLUTION, s. [from con, together, and volvo, to roll, Lat.] the act of rolling the parts of a thing over one another: the state of a thing rolled up, so as its parts close over each other.

To CONVOY, v. a. [convoyer, Fr.] to guard or protect ships by sea, or provisions by land, from falling into the hands of an enemy.

CONVOY, s. in maritime affairs, one or more ships of war, employed to accompany and protect merchant ships against pirates and other enemies. In military matters, it is a body of soldiers appointed to guard any supply of men, money, ammunition, or provisions, conveyed by land into a town, army, or the like, in time or war.

CONUSANCE, s. [connoissance, Fr.] notice; knowledge; or authority of inquiring into an affair. A law term.

To CONVULSE, v. a. [from con, together, to strengthen the signification, and vello, to snatch, Lat.] in medicine, to give involuntary motion or contraction to any parts of the body.

CONVULSION, s. [from con, together, to strengthen the signification, and vello, to snatch, Lat.] in medicine, a preternatural and violent contraction of the membranous and muscular parts, arising from a spasmodic stricture of the membranes surrounding the spinal marrow, and the nerves distributed from it, and an impetuous influx of the nervous fluid into the organs of motion. The term is likewise applied to any violent eruption, earthquake, or subterraneous disorder; also, to sudden commotions or rebellions in a state.

CONVULSIVE, a. [convulsif, Fr.] that gives an involuntary motion, twitches, or spasms. In medicines, applied to those motions which should naturally depend on the will, but by some disorder are caused involuntarily.

CONWAY, a town of N. Wales, in Carnarvonshire. It is seated at the mouth of the river Conway, and is a large walled town, with a castle, and the houses are well built and well inhabited, and yet the market is but small. Near this town, corn, timber, and oak-bark, are in great plenty; and they clear out at the custom-house here, from 11 to 12,000 bushels of grain every year. There is a vast body of marcasite up the river, with which corperas is made: and some think there are veins of copper-ore near it. Formerly it was famous for pearl-fishing, and there is still plenty of pearl muscles, but they are now neglected. It is 235 miles N. W. of London.

CONY, s. [cuniculus, Lat.] in natural history, a creature which burrows and breeds in warrens; a rabbit.

To COO. v. n. [formed from the sound] to make a mournful noise like a dove.

COOK, s. [coquus, from coquo, to cook, Lat.] a person who professes to dress victuals for the table. A cook-maid is a female employed in dressing victuals.

To COOK, v. a. [coquo, Lat.] to prepare victuals. Figuratively, to prepare any thing for a particular design.

COOKERY, s. the act of dressing victuals.

COOK-ROOM, s. a room in which provisions are prepared for the ship's crew; the kitchen of a ship.

COOK's RIVER, a large river of North America, which flows into the North Pacific Ocean, in lat. 59. 10. N. lon. 150. 0. W. Captain Cook sailed up this river 70 leagues, without finding any appearance of its source.

COOL, a. [koelen, Belg.] a lesser degree of coldness, approaching to, or somewhat cold. Figuratively, free from anger or any violent passion; not over fond; indifferent.

To COOL, v. a. [koelen, Belg.] to lessen heat. Neuterly, to lose heat; to become less hot. Figuratively, to become less eager by the impulse of passion or inclination.

CO'OLER, s. that which has the power of diminishing or lessening the degree of heat in any body: a vessel made use of by brewers to cool their sweet wort in.

CO'OLY, ad. in such a manner as to be between hot and cold. Figuratively, without heat or passion.

CO'OLNESS, s. a middle state between excessive heat and excessive cold. Figuratively, applied to the passions, freedom from any violent affection, want of cordial love, or affectionate regard; indifference.

COOM, s. [écume, Fr.] the soot that gathers over an oven's mouth; the matter which works out of carriage wheels.

COOMB, or COMB, s. a dry measure containing four bushels.

COOP, s. [kuype, Belg.] a vessel for keeping liquor; a pen or inclosure to confine poultry in.

To COOP, v. a. to confine, shut up, or inclose in a narrow compass.

COOPE'E, s, [coupé, Fr.] the name of a particular step or motion in dancing.

CO'OPER, s. one who makes casks, or any vessel whose parts are held together by hoops.

CO'OPERAGE, s. the price paid for coopers' work; a place where cooper's work.

To CO-O'PERATE, v. n. [from con, with, and operor, to work, Lat.] to labour with another, in order to perfect or finish any work; to concur in producing the same effect.

CO-OPERATION, s. the act by which two or more persons or things contribute to promote the same end.

CO-O'PERATIVE, a. concurring to promote the same design or produce the same effect.

CO-OPERATOR, s. he that endeavours to promote the same end as others.

CO-O'RDINATE, a. [from con, with, and ordo, order, Lat.] of equal rank, order, or degree with another; not being subordinate. Thus shell-fish may be divided into two co-ordinate kinds, crustaceous and testaceous; each of which is again divided into many species, subordinate to the kind, but co-ordinate to each other.

CO-O'RDINATELY, ad. in the same order or rank with another.

CO-O'RDINATENESS, s. the state of a thing of a degree or rank equal with another.

CO-ORDINATION, s. the state of holding the same rank or degree.

COOT, or COOTE, s. in natural history, a small black water-fowl, frequenting marshes and fens.

COP, s. [cop, Sax.] the top; the top or head of any thing; or any thing rising to a head or point.

CO'PAL, s. [Span.] a resinous substance, pure, transparent, of a watery colour, and a fragrant smell. It flows out of the trunk of a tree by incision, is inflammable, dissoluble in oil, and used in disorders of the breast.

COPA'RCENERS, s. [from con, with, and particeps, a partaker, Lat.] such as have equal portions in the inheritance of their ancestors. Thus, the female issue, in default of male, come equally to the lands of their ancestors; and by the custom of gavel-kind in Kent, the father's lands, at his death, are equally divided among all his sons.

COPA'RCENY, s. an equal share of coparceners.

COPA'RTNER s. one who has a share in some common stock or affair; one who carries on business in conjunction with another; one equally concerned and involved in the same calamity, or enjoying the same advantage with another.

COPA'RTNERSHIP, s. a state wherein a person has an equal share of the profits or loss of trade, or is engaged in the same common design with another.

COPA'YVA, s. [it is sometimes written copivi, copiri, cupaiba, capayva, cupayva,] in medicine, a gum which distils from a tree in the Brazils, and is made use of in disorders of the urinary passages.

COPE, s. [See COP] any thing with which the head is covered; an ornament worn by priests, reaching from the shoulders to the feet; any thing spread over the head.

To COPE, v. a. to cover, or arch over. To reward; to give in return. To cope with, to contend with; to fight or combat; to oppose.

COPENHA'GEN, the capital of Denmark, is the most uniform and best built city in the north. It contains 4 royal palaces, one university consisting of 4 colleges, 19 churches 4000 houses, and about 60,000 inhabitants. The streets are almost all broad, and in a straight line, well paved, with a foot-way on each side, but too narrow for general use. It was formerly the see of an archbishop; but the Danes have curtailed their prelates of their lands, revenues, and power. The haven is generally crowded with ships; and the ships are intersected by broad canals, which bring the merchandise close to the warehouses on the quays. Here the Danish ships of war were almost all destroyed by the English fleet, under Sir Hyde Parker and Lord Nelson, April 2, 1801; and the city itself has since sustained the calamity of three days' bombardment by the British army, which ended in the capitulation of the garrison on the 6th of September, 1807. It is about 5 miles in circumference, and is seated on the E. shore of the isle of Zealand, 500 miles N. E. of London. Lat. 55. 41. N. lon. 12. 40. E.

COPERNICAN SYSTEM, s. is that system of the world wherein the sun is supposed at rest in the centre, and the planets and comets, with the earth, to move in ellipses round him. The sun and stars are here supposed at rest, and that diurnal motion which they appear to have from east to west, is imputed to the earth's motion from west to east, round its axis.

COPHS, COPHTI, (kofs, lofti) or COPTS, a name given to such of the Christians of Egypt as are of the sect of the Jacobites. The Cophts have a patriarch, styled the Patriarch of Alexandria, having eleven or twelve bishops under him, but no archbishop. The rest of the clergy, whether secular or regular, are of the order of St. Anthony, St. Paul, and St. Macarius, each of whom have their monasteries. The Chopts have seven sacraments, viz. baptism, the eucharist, confirmation, ordination, faith, fasting, and prayer. They deny the Holy Ghost to proceed from the Son; they only allow of the three œcumenical councils, those of Nice, Constantinople, and Ephesus. They allow only of one nature, will, and operation, in Jesus Christ, after the union of the humanity and the divinity. With regard to their discipline, they circumcise their children before baptism; they ordain deacons at five years of age; they allow of marriage in the second degree, and put away their wives, and espouse others while the first are living; they forbear to eat blood, and believe in a baptism of fire, which, according to some, they confer, by applying a red-hot iron to their cheeks or forehead.

COPIER, s. one who transcribes a writing, or imitates any coin, or other original.

COPING, s. [coppe, Sax.] in architecture, the upper tire of masonry, which covers a wall.

COPIOUS, a. [copiosus, Lat.] plentiful; abundant; in great quantities; abounding in words and images; not confined.

COPIOUSLY, ad. plentifully; in great quantities; large; in a diffusive manner, applied to style or descriptions.

COPIOUSNESS, s. plenty; abundance; great quantities of any thing; diffusiveness; exuberance.

COPIST, s. in diplomatic science, signifies a transcriber or copier of deeds, books, &c.

COPLAND, s. a piece of ground which terminates with an acute angle.

COPPED, a. rising or teminating in a point at top.

COPPEL, s. spelt. likewise copel, cupel, cuple, and cuppel; [cuppe, Sax.] a vessel used by assayers and refiners to try and refine their metals in.

COPPER, s. [koper, Belg.] a hard, heavy metal, of a reddish colour, heavier than iron or tin, but lighter than silver, lead, or gold; the hardest of all metals next to iron, and on that account mixed with silver and gold to give them a proper degree of hardness; it is more liable to rust than any other metal; its ductility is very great, and its divisibility prodigious; for, as Mr. Boyle observes, a single grain of it dissolved in an alkali, will give a sensible colour to more than 500,000 times its weight of water. Copper also signifies a large vessel or boiler fixed in brickwork. A copper-plate is a thin piece of polished copper, engraved with some design. Copper-work is a place where copper is worked or manufactured. Copper-nose, is a red nose.

COPPERAS, s. [kopperoose, Belg.] a vitriolic substance, formed of an infusion of copperas stones or gold stones, in water, afterwards evaporated by fire. It is made use of in dying wool and hats black, in making ink, in tanning leather, in making oil of vitriol, and a kind of Spanish brown for painters.

COPPERSMITH, s. a person who makes vessels formed of copper.

COPPERY, a. containing copper; made of copper.

COPPICE, (it is often written and pron. copse) s. [coupeaux, Fr.] a low wood cut at stated times for fuel; a small wood, consisting of under-wood, or brush-wood.

COPPLE-DUST, s. a powder used in refining metals, or the gross parts separated by the coppel.

COPPLE-STONES, s. lumps or fragments of stone, broken from the adjacent cliffs, and rounded by being bowled and tumbled to and fro by the action of water.

COPROSE, s. a provincial term for the corn poppy.

COPSE, s. See COPPICE.

To COPSE, v. a. to preserve underwoods.

COPULA, s. [Lat.] in logic, the verb which joins the two terms in an affirmative or negative proposition; as, "poverty makes a man despised;" where makes is the copula: "no misery is the object of choice;" where is is the copula.

To COPULATE, v. a. [copulo, Lat.] to unite, join, or link together. Neuterly, to come together, applied to the commerce between animals of different sexes.

COPULATION, s. the congress or embrace of the different sexes.

COPULATIVE, a. [from copula, to unite, Lat,] a grammatical term that signifies such particles or words in a language that tie, join, and unite words or sentences together. In logic, those propositions are called copulative, where the subject and predicative are so linked together by copulative conjunctions, that they may be all severally affirmed or denied one of another.

COPY, s. [copia, low Lat.] a writing which consists of the substance of some other, and is wrote, word for word, from some original: an individual book, or manuscript of an author; an instrument by which any thing is conveyed in law; a picture drawn from an original piece; a line or piece of writing for scholars to go by.

To COPY, v. a. to transcribe a writing or book word for word; to imitate a design or picture. Used neuterly with from, and sometimes with after, before the object of imitation.

COPY-BOOK, s. a book in which copies are written for learners to imitate.

COPYHOLD, s. in law, a tenure by which the tenant hath nothing to shew but the copy of the rolls made by the steward of the lord's court. This tenure the tenant holds in some sort at the will of the lord, though not simply so, but according to the custom of the manor.

COPYHOLDER, s. a person admitted a tenant of any lands or tenements in a manor, which have, time out of mind, been deviseable to such as will take the same by copy of court-roll, according to the custom of the said manor.

To COQUET, v. a. [coqueter, Fr.] to entertain with amorous discourse; to treat with an appearance of love, without any real affection. Neuterly, to pretend the lover.

COQUETRY, s. [coqueteric, Fr.] a desire of attracting the notice of the other sex; an affectation of love expressed in advances, without being affected with that passion.

COQUETTE, s. [Fr.] a gay airy girl, who endeavours to attract the notice of the other sex, and by an affectation of tenderness to engage a number of suitors merely from a principle of vanity, and without any inclination to a connubial state.

CORACLE, s. [cwrwgle, Brit.] a boat used by the Welsh fishers, made of a frame of wicker-work covered with leather.

CORAL, s. [corallium, Lat.] a plant of a stony nature, growing in the water.

CORALLINE, a. [corallinus, Lat.] consisting of coral; resembling coral. This word is also used substantively for a kind of marine productions resembling corals, several beautiful specimens of which are in the annexed plate.

CORALLOID, or CORALLOIDAL, a. [from korallion, a coral, and eidos, form, Gr.] resembling coral.

CORALWORT, s. in botany, a species of the dentaria, found in shady places.

CORANICH, s. among the Scotch and Irish, the custom of singing at funerals, anciently prevalent in those countries, and still practised in several parts.

CORANT, s. [courant, Fr.] a dance, consisting of a nimble and sprightly motion.

CORBAN, s. [Heb.] a word which signifies a gift, offering, or present, made to God or his temple. When, among the Jews, a man had thus devoted all his fortune, he was forbidden to make use of it. If all that he was to give to his wife, or his father and mother, was declared Corban, he was no longer permitted to allow them necessary subsistence.

CORBE, a. [courbe, Fr.] crooked.

CORBEILS, s. [corbeille, Fr.] in fortification, little baskets filled with earth, and used to shelter the men when firing at the besiegers.

CORBEL, or CORBIL, s. in architecture, the representation of a basket. Also, a short piece of timber placed in a wall, with its end sticking out six or eight inches, as occasion serves, in the manner of a shouldering piece.

CORBY, a town of Lincolnshire, between Market Deeping and Grantham. Market on Wednesday.

CORCELET, s. in natural history, that part of the fly-class, which is analogous in its situation to the breast in other animals.

CORD, s. [cort, Brit.] a string made of hemp twisted, generally applied to that which is composed of several strands. In scripture, "The cords of the wicked," are the snares with which they entangle the weak and innocent, "The cords of sin," are the consequences of crimes and bad habits, which are as it were bands, which it is almost impossible to break. "Let us cast away their cords from us," is to cast off subjection, which, like cords, binds and restrains. "To draw iniquity with cords of vanity," are worldly profits, or pleasurable allurements, which attract as strongly as cords. "The cords of a man," are such motives as are suited to a man as a rational agent, and consist in reasons and exhortations. A cord of wood, is a quantity consisting of a pile of eight feet long, four high, and four broad, being supposed originally to be measured by a cord.

To CORD, v. a. to bind or fasten several things together with a cord.

CORDAGE, s. a quantity of cords; the ropes of a ship.

CORDATED, part. [from cor, a heart, Lat.] resembling a heart.

CORDED, part. made of ropes, or cords. A corded silk is that whose surface is not level, but rises in weals of the size of a small string or cord.

CORDELIERS, (Cordeliers) s. [Fr.] a Franciscan, or religious order of St. Francis; they wear a coarse grey cloth, with a little cowl, or cloak of the same cloth, and a rope-girdle with three knots, from whence they take their name. They are enjoined to live in common. Those who are admitted into the order, are first to sell all they have, and give it to the poor. The priests are to fast from the feast of All Saints till the Nativity.

CO'RDIAL, s. [from cor, a heart, Lat.] in medicine, a draught or potion which increases the strength of the heart, or that which increases the natural strength by bringing the serum of the blood into a condition proper for circulation and nutrition. Figuratively, any thing which occasions joy, gladness, or revives the spirits.

CO'RDIAL, a. reviving; strengthening. Applied to the affections, sincere; hearty; without hypocrisy.

CORDIA'LITY, s. sincere affection; freedom from hypocrisy.

CO'RDIALLY, ad. in a manner free from hypocrisy; in a sincere and affectionate manner.

CO'RD-MAKER, s. a ropemaker.

CO'RDON, s. [Fr.] the ribbon worn by a knight or member of any order. In fortification, a row of stones jutting out before the rampart and the basis of the parapet.

CORDO'VA, anciently CORDUBA, a large city of Andalusia, seated on the Guadalquiver, over which is a stone bridge of 16 arches, built by the Moors. Here are 16 parish churches, besides the cathedral, 36 convents, 16 hospitals, 2 colleges, and an ancient palace of the Moorish kings, lately converted into stables for 100 Andalusian horses. The cathedral, which was formerly a mosque, still retains the name of Mezquita. In the square, called the Plaza Major, are splendid buildings, under which are piazzas. There are many orchards and gardens within the walls of the city, and in the neighbouring mountains there are groves of citron, orange, fig, and olive trees. The trade consists of wine, fruits, silk, and Cordovan leather, and the best horses of Spain are had from it. It is 75 miles N. E. of Seville, and 135 S. by W. of Madrid.

CO'RDWAIN, s. a kind of leather, from Cordova in Spain.

CORDWA'INER, s. [cordonnier, Fr.] a person who makes and sells shoes.

CORE, s. [cor, Lat.] the heart; the inner part of any thing.

CORE'A, a peninsula, lying to the N. E. of China, bounded on the S. W. by the Yellow Sea, which parts it from China; on the N. by Chinese Tartary; and on the S. by a narrow sea, which parts it from the Japanese Islands. The people are civil and courteous, are fond of learning, music, and dancing, and greatly resemble the Chinese in customs and religion. The country is divided into eight provinces, and there are many towns in it exceedingly populous. It extends, from N. to S. about 500 miles, and about 200 from E. to W. They trade in ginseng, gold, silver, iron, yellow varnish, sable skins, castor, mineral salt, fowls with tails 3 feet long, and horses only 3 feet high. Corea, though mountainous, abounds in corn and rice. The king, who is tributary to the emperor of China, resides at Hanching.

CORFE CASTLE, a town of Dorsetshire, with some trade, in stone and knit stockings. It is seated on a peninsula, called Purbeck Isle, between two hills, on one of which stands the castle, said to have been built by king Edgar, now in ruins. It is 21 miles E. of Dorchester, and 120 W. by S. of London. Market on Thursday.

CORFU, anciently known by the name of SCHERIA, PHÆACIA, CORCHYRA, and DREPANO, an island of the Mediterranean, near the coast of Albania, long held by the Venetians, since subject to the French, but now occupied by the Russians. The islanders make great quantities of salt; and the country abounds with vineyards, oranges, lemons, citrons, olive trees, grapes, honey, wax, and oil. The capital is Corfu, on the E. coast of the island. Lat. 39. 40. N. lon. 20. 0. E.

CORIA'CEOUS, (koriáshious) a. [from corium, the hide of a beast, Lat.] consisting of, or resembling leather.

CORIA'NDER, s. [coriandrum, Lat.] a plant with a fibrous annual root; it has an umbellated flower; is found by roadsides and dunghills, and flowers in June. The leaves have a strong disagreeable smell, but the seeds are tolerably grateful when dry. It is used in medicine as a carminative, and corrector to some cathartics.

CO'RINTH, s. [from the famous city of Corinth in Greece] a small fruit commonly called a currant. The Corinthian order, in architecture, is one of the five orders, and is the most noble, rich, and delicate of them all. The capital of this order is adorned with two rows of leaves, between which little stalks arise, of which 16 volutes are formed, which support the abacus.

CO'RINTH, or CORANTO, an ancient and celebrated city, situated on the isthmus which joins the Morea to Greece. It is now decayed, the houses being intermixed with fields, orange groves, and gardens, like a village, the inhabitants not exceeding 1300 or 1400; there still remain, however, ruins of temples, and other marks of its former magnificence. The adjacent country abounds with corn, wine, and oil; and from the castle, seated on the top of an almost inaccessible rock, there is one of the finest prospects of land and water in the world. It is 40 miles N. W. of Athens. Lat. 38. 14. N. lon. 23. 18. E.

CORK, a county of Munster, in Ireland, 84 miles in length, and 62 in breadth, being the largest in the kingdom. It is bounded on the W. and S. W. by Kerry and the sea; on the N. by Limerick; on the E. by Waterford and a part of Tipperary; and on the S. by the ocean. It contains 269 parishes, 76,739 houses, and about 416,000 inhabitants. It abounds with excellent harbours, and has many fine rivers, as the Blackwater, Lee, Banon, Ilen, &c. The soil varies; in many parts it is fertile, and the country is pretty populous.

CORK, city of, the capital of the county, and the second in Ireland for extent, trade, and population, containing about 8600 houses, and upwards of 70,000 inhabitants. It is a well built place, and has improved surprisingly of late years, several broad streets having been lately added, by filling up the canals that ran through them. It is seated on the river Lee, by which it is nearly surrounded, and by means of the different channels, vessels come up into the different parts of the town. Its principal export is salt provisions. During the slaughtering season, which holds from August to the latter end of January, they kill and cure about 100,000 head of black cattle. Their other exports consist of pork, tallow, hides raw and tanned, butter, candles, calves', lambs', and rabbits' skins, wool, linen and woollen yarn, and worsted and linen cloth. The country adjacent to Cork, is hilly and beautiful, affording extensive and diversified prospects. It is 15 miles from the sea, about 50 nearly S. of Limerick, and 124 S. W. of Dublin. Lat. 51. 54. N. lon. 8. 23. W.—Cork Harbour, or the Cove of Cork, one of the best in the world, is about 7 miles below the town, and so spacious and deep, as to be capable of containing the largest vessels, and the most extensive fleets. The entrance is easy, and it is secure from currents and storms. One side of Cork Harbour is formed by Great Island, which is 4 miles long and 2 broad, and very fertile.

CORK, s. [kork, Belg.] in botany, a species of oak, which is stripped of its bark every eight or ten years, and is so far from being injured thereby, that it is preserved by that means to an hundred years or more. Of the bark are found bungs for barrels, and stopples for bottles, which likewise go by the name of the tree, and are called corks. These trees are very common in France, Spain, and Italy. In medicine, cork is of service to stop bleeding, being reduced to powder, and put into some astringent liquor; when burned and mixed with the unguentum populneum, it is proper for the piles.

CO'RKING-PIN, s. a pin of a large size.

CO'RKY, a. consisting of, or resembling cork.

CO'RMORANT, s. [cormorant, Fr.] a bird that preys upon fish. A glutton.

CORN, s. [corn, Sax. korn, Teut.] the grain or seed of plants, separated from the spica, or ear; one species of which is made into bread. There are several species of corn, such as wheat, rye, and barley, millet and rice, oats, maize and lentils, pease, and a number of other kinds, each of which has its usefulness and property. An excrescence or horny substance growing on the toes, from cornu, Lat. a horn. A single particle of gunpowder or salt.

To CORN, v. a. to form gunpowder into grain, or small particles; to salt, or sprinkle meat with salt; so used by the old Saxons.

CO'RNAGE, s. a tenure which obliges the landholder to give notice of an invasion by blowing a horn.

CO'RNEL, s. in botany, the cornus. There are two British species, viz. the dogberry tree, and dwarf honeysuckle. They both flower in June.

CORNE'LIAN, s. See CARNELION.

CO'RNEMUSE, s. [Fr.] a kind of rustic horn.

CO'RNEOUS, a. [from cornu, a horn, Lat.] horny, or resembling horn.

CO'RNER, s. [cornel, Brit.] an angle, or space formed by the meeting of two walls. Figuratively, a secret or private place; the extremities. Corner-stone, is the stone that unites the two walls at the corner; the principal stone. In Scripture, applied to the Messiah, Psa. cxviii. 22. Acts iv. 11. and elsewhere.

CO'RNERWISE, ad. from one corner to another; diagonally; with the corner in front.

CO'RNET, s. [cornette, Fr.] a horn or musical wind instrument, used by the ancients in war; a company or troop, perhaps as many as had one cornet. An officer in the cavalry, who bears the ensign or colours in the troop; he is the third officer in the company, and commands in the absence of the captain and lieutenant. Cornet, in farriery, is the lowest part of the pastern of a horse.

CORN FLAG, s. a plant, of which there are eleven species, some with red, and some with white flowers, according to Miller.

CO'RNICE, s. [corniche, Fr.] in architecture, the uppermost member of the entablature of a column, or that which crowns the order; likewise all little projectures of masonry, or joinery, where there are no columns, as the cornice of a chimney, of a beaufet, &c. Cornice ring, in gunnery, the next ring from the muzzle-ring backwards.

CORNI'CULATE, a. [from cornu, a horn, Lat.] in botany, applied to such plants as, after each flower, produce many horned pods, called siliqual. Corniculated flowers, are such hollow flowers as have a kind of spur or little horn on their upper part.

CORNI'FIC, a. [from cornu, a horn, and facio, to make, Lat.] productive of or making horns.

CORNI'GEROUS, a. [from cornu, a horn, and gero, to carry, Lat.] horned; bearing or having horns.

CO'RNUCOPIA, s. [Lat.] among the ancients, a horn, out of which plenty of all things are supposed to grow. It is generally the characteristic of the goddess of plenty, and described in the form of a large horn, adorned with flowers, and filled with fruits.

To CORNU'TE, v. a. [from cornu, a horn, Lat.] to confer or bestow horns.

CORNU'TED, part. [from cornu, a horn, Lat.] grafted with horns; horned; cuckolded.

CORNU'TO, s. [from cornu, a horn, Lat.] a cuckold.

CO'RNWALL, a county of England, which forms the S. W. extremity of Great Britain. It is bounded on the E. by Devonshire; its other parts are washed by the sea. Its length from E. to W. is 74 miles; its breadth next to Devonshire is about 46, but it soon contracts, and is gradually narrowed into isthmuses: on the S. W. it terminates in two promontories, the Lizard Point, and the Land's End. It contains 9 hundreds, and 161 parishes, between 1200 and 1300 villages, and 27 market towns. From its vicinity to the sea, it is exposed to frequent storms, but exempted from hard frosts and great heats. There is abundance of rainy and foggy weather; but the inhabitants are seldom troubled with agues or fevers. The spring shews itself in the buds and blossoms sooner than in the other parts of England; but the harvest is later, and the fruits have less flavour than in the midland counties. Here are some uncommon plants, and plenty of sea-herbs, as camphire, eringo, ros solis, &c. It is well suited for the herring and pilchard fisheries, and the inhabitants fully avail themselves of their local advantages. It derives, however, its chief importance from its minerals; these consist of tin and copper. The copper-mines are numerous and rich in ore; small quantities of gold and silver have sometimes been found, but its tin mines are its greatest source of wealth; for these it has been long famous, and its coasts have been visited by the Phenicians and Greeks in very remote antiquity; they were known several centuries before the Christian æra, and have been worked constantly ever since. With the metalline ores are found large quantities of mundic and arsenic; many sorts of stones are found here, particularly moorstone, which is used both in buildings and for mill-stones, and which, when polished, appears splendid and beautiful; and in the cavernous parts of the rocks are found transparent crystals, called Cornish diamonds, which are very brilliant when well polished. The number of men, women, and children, employed in raising the tin ore, washing, stamping, and carrying, is stated by some to amount to 16,000. The principal rivers are the Tamar, Camel, and Fale. As this county was one of the places to which the ancient Britons retreated, the Gælic or Celtic language was long retained here, and has become extinct but very lately.

CO'RNY, a. [from cornu, a horn, Lat.] horny, strong, or hard like a horn; producing grain or corn.

CORO'LLARY, s. [corollarium, Lat.] an useful consequence drawn from something which is proved or demonstrated.

COROMA'NDEL, the coast of, is the eastern coast of the peninsula of Hindoostan, extending from Cape Calymere in lat. 10. 20. to the mouth of the Kistuah, in lat. near 60. 0. N. On this coast lie Madras, Pondicherry, Tranquebar, and other European factories, from which chintz, calicoes, and muslins, with some diamonds, are imported into Europe. There is not a port for large vessels on the whole coast, which is an even, low, and sandy country; and about Madras, the land rises so little, that it is difficult from the sea to mark the distinction between land and water, unless by the different objects that are on the shore.

CORO'NA, s. [a crown, Lat.] in architecture, a large, flat, strong member of a cornice, so called from its crowning not only the cornice, but likewise the whole order. In optics, the halo, a luminous circle surrounding the sun, the moon, the planets, or the fixed stars.

CORO'NA BO'REALIS, in astronomy, the northern crown, a constellation of the northern hemisphere.

CORO'NAL, s. [from corona, a crown, Lat.] a crown, a garland. Adjectively, that belongs to the crown or top of the head. The coronal suture, in anatomy, is the first of the cranium, which reaches across from one temple to the other.

CORO'NARY, a. [from corona, a crown, Lat.] relating to or seated on the crown of the head. In anatomy, applied to those arteries which furnish the substance of the heart with blood.

CORONA'TION, s. [from corona, a crown, Lat.] the act or solemnity of crowning a king.

CO'RONER, s. an ancient officer of this kingdom, so called because he is wholly employed for the king and crown. Coroners are conservators of the peace in the county where they are elected, being usually two for each county. Their authority is judicial and ministerial; judicial where a person comes to a violent death; to take and enter up appeals of murder, pronounce judgment on outlawries, &c. The ministerial power is, when the coroner executes the king's writ, on exception taken to the sheriff. His authority does not terminate on the demise of the king, as that of judges, &c. does, who acts by the king's commission: on default of sheriffs, coroners are to impannel juries, and to return issue on juries not appearing.

CO'RONET, s. [from corona, a crown, Lat. coronetta, Ital.] an inferior crown worn by the nobility; that of a duke is adorned with strawberry leaves; that of a marquis with leaves and pearls placed interchangeably; that of an earl with the pearls raised above the leaves; that of a viscount is surrounded with pearls only; and that of a baron has only four pearls.

CO'RPORAL, s. [caporal, Fr.] in the army, an inferior and the lowest officer in the foot, who commands one of the divisions, places and relieves sentinels, keeps good order, and receives the word of the inferiors that pass by his corps. On board ship, an officer who has the charge of setting the watch and senteries, and relieving them; he sees that all the soldiers and sailors keep their arms neat and clean, teaches them how to use them, and has a mate under him.

CO'RPORAL, a. [corporel, Fr.] relating to the body, in divinity and philosophy. When used in opposition to spirit, or its affections, it is styled and spelt corporeal, and then signifies material.

CORPORA'LITY, s. the quality of consisting of body, or matter.

CO'RPORALLY, ad. in a sensible or material manner; bodily.

CO'RPORATE, a. [from corpus, a body, Lat.] united into a body or community.

CO'RPORATENESS, s. the state of a body corporate or community.

CORPORA'TION, s. [from corpus, a body, Lat.] a body politic, authorized by prescription; patent, charter, or by act of parliament, to have a common seal, one head officer or more, able, by their common consent, to grant or receive in law any thing within the compass of their charters, and to sue and be sued even as one man. Corporations are either spiritual or temporal; spiritual, as bishops, deans, archdeacons, parsons, vicars, &c. Temporal, as mayor, commonalty, bailiff, burgesses, &c. And some are of a mixed nature, and composed of temporal and spiritual persons, such as heads of colleges and hospitals.

CO'RPORATURE, s. [from corpus, a body, Lat.] the state of being embodied.

CORPO'REAL, a. [from corpus, a body, Lat.] consisting of matter or body, opposed to spiritual.

CORPOREITY, s. [from corpus, a body, Lat.] the quality of a thing which has a body.

CORPORIFICA'TION, s. [from corpus, a body, and facio, to make, Lat.] the act of giving a body to a thing, or rendering it the object of their touch or other senses. In chemistry, the act of re-uniting spirits into a body, resembling that which they had before their being raised into spirits.

To CORPO'RIFY, v. a. to thicken or gather into a body.

CORPS, (usually pron. kōr) s. [Fr.] a body or collection of soldiers. In architecture, that part which projects or stands out from a wall, and serves as a ground for some decoration or ornament.

CORPSE, s. [from corpus, a body, Lat.] the body, used in contempt; a dead body; a carcase.

CO'RPULENCE, or CO'RPULENCY, s. [corpulentia, from corpus, a body, Lat.] bulkiness of body; fatness; grossness. The most extraordinary instance perhaps of fatness ever known, was that of Edward Bright, of Malden in Essex, who dying in Nov. 1750, weighed 616 pounds; his waistcoat with great ease was buttoned round seven men of ordinary size.

CO'RPULENT, a. [corpulentus, from corpus, a body, Lat.] fleshy; abounding in fat and flesh.

CO'RPUS-CHRI'STI, s. a festival kept the next Thursday after Trinity-Sunday, instituted in honour of the eucharist; to which also one of the colleges in Oxford is dedicated.

CORPU'SCLE, s. [from corpusculum, a little body, Lat.] in physics, a minute particle, or physical atom, of which a natural body is composed or made up.

CORPU'SCULAR, or CORPUSCULA'RIAN, a. [from corpusculum, a little body, Lat.] belonging to atoms, or the same particles of bodies. The corpuscularian or corpuscular philosophy, is that which endeavours to explain the phenomena of nature by the motion, rest, or position of the corpuscles, or minute particles of which bodies consist.

To CORRA'DE, v. a. [corrado, Lat.] to rub off; to wear away, by rubbing two bodies together.

CORRADIA'TION, s. [from con, with, and radius, a ray, Lat.] the conjunction of rays in one point.

To CORRE'CT, v. a. [corrigo, from rectus, streight, Lat.] to punish a person for a fault in order to make him amend. To give a person notice of his faults. In medicine, to counteract, or lessen the force or ill qualities of one ingredient by another.

CORRE'CT, a. [correctus, Lat.] that is perfect; freed from errors or mistakes.

CORRE'CTION, s. [correctio, Lat.] punishment for faults in order to produce amendment; an amendment; reprehension; censure; or notice of a fault. In medicine, the lessening any quality of an ingredient by joining it with one of opposite qualities.

CORRE'CTIVE, a. having the power of counteracting any bad qualities.

CORRE'CTIVE, s. that which has the power of altering or counteracting any bad quality; limitation; restriction.

CORRE'CTLY, ad. in such a manner as to be free from faults; exactly.

CORRE'CTNESS, s. perfection, arising from frequent and accurate alterations.

CORRE'CTOR, s. [Lat.] he who amends a person by means of punishment. In medicine, an ingredient in a composition, which guards against, or abates, the force of another. Corrector of the press, one who amends the errors committed in printing.

CORRE'GIDOR, s. a chief magistrate in Spain.

To CO'RRELATE, v. n. [from con, with, and relatus, related, Lat.] to have a mutual or reciprocal relation to one another, as father and son.

CO'RRELATE, s. one that stands in an opposite relation, as father and son.

CORRE'LATIVE, a. [from con, with, and relatus, related, Lat.] having a reciprocal relation, so that the existence of the one depends on the existence of the other.

CORRE'PTION, s. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and ripio, to snatch, Lat.] reproof, chiding, reprehension or objurgation.

To CORRESPO'ND, v. n. [from con, with, and respondeo to answer, Lat.] to answer; to match; to suit; to be proportionate, or adequate to another; to keep up an acquaintance with another by sending and receiving letters.

CORRESPO'NDENCE, or CORRESPO'NDENCY, s. [from con, with, and respondeo, to answer, Lat.] an agreement; the matching and fitting of two things together; an intercourse kept up by letters: friendship; intercourse; a commerce.

CORRESPO'NDENT, s. a person with whom commerce is carried on, or intelligence kept by mutual messages or letters.

CORRESPO'NDENT, or CORRESPO'NSIVE, a. [from con, with, and respondeo, to answer, Lat.] suiting: fitting; agreeing; answering.

CO'RRIDOR, s. [Fr.] in fortification, a road or way, about twenty yards broad, along the edge of a ditch, without-side, encompassing the whole fortification, called likewise the covert way. In architecture, a gallery, or long aisle, round a building, leading to several chambers at a distance from each other.

CO'RRIGIBLE, a. [from corrigo, to correct, Lat.] that may be altered for the better; that is a proper object for punishment; corrective; or having the power of amending any error, fault, or bad quality.

CORRI'VALRY, s. competition; opposition.

CORRO'BORANT, part. [corroboro, from robur, strength, Lat.] having the power of strengthening or giving strength.

To CORRO'BORATE, v. a. [corroboro, from robur, strength, Lat.] to confirm an assertion; to strengthen, or make strong.

CORRO'BORATION, s. the act of strengthening; the confirmation or establishing a truth by some additional proof; addition of strength.

CORRO'BORATIVE, a. having the power of increasing strength, or of service in particular bodily weaknesses.

To CORRO'DE, v. a. [corrodo, Lat.] to eat away by degrees, applied to the action of a liquid on some solid body; to prey upon: to consume, or wear away by degrees.

CORRO'DENT, a. [corrodens, Lat.] having the power of separating the particles of a body, applied to the effect of some menstruum or fluid on solid bodies.

CORRO'DIBLE, a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and rodo, to gnaw, Lat.] possible to be consumed or corroded.

CORROSIBI'LITY, s. the quality of being corrosible; the possibility of having its particles divided by some menstruum.

CORRO'SIBLE, a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and rodo, to gnaw, Lat.] that may have its particles consumed, or separated by some menstruum.

CORRO'SIBLENESS, s. the quality of being liable to have its particles separated by a menstruum.

CORRO'SION, s. the dissolution or separation of the particles of a body by an acid or saline liquor or menstruum.

CORRO'SIVE, a. having the power of insinuating itself between, and separating the particles of, a body; having the power of vexing, or of making a person uneasy or angry.

CORRO'SIVE, s. that which has the power of consuming, eating, or wasting away; that which has the power of fretting, giving pain, or rendering a person uneasy.

CORRO'SIVELY, ad. in the manner of, or like a corrosive; having the quality of a corrosive.

CORRO'SIVENESS, s. the quality whereby a fluid insinuates itself between the pores of a solid body, separates them, or wastes away.

CO'RRUGANT, a. [corrugans, from ruga, a wrinkle, Lat.] having the power of wrinkling, or contracting into wrinkles.

To CO'RRUGATE, v. a. [corrugo, from ruga, a wrinkle, Lat.] to wrinkle, or purse up.

CORRUGA'TION, s. [corrugatio, from ruga, a wrinkle, Lat.] the act of drawing or contracting into wrinkles.

To CORRUPT, v. a. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and rumpo, to break, Lat.] to turn from a sound to a putrescent state; to infect. Figuratively, to engage a person to do something contrary to his inclination or conscience, by bribes or money; to spoil; to vitiate, or render bad.

To CORRUPT, v. n. to become putrid; to grow rotten; to putrefy; to lose putrity.

CORRUPT, a. [corruptus, Lat.] vicious; void of moral goodness; lost to piety; biased by brides. Tainted; rotten; applied to things.

CORRUPTER, s. that which putrefies, or taints. One who, by ill example, or base motives, seduces a person to vice.

CORRUPTIBI'LITY, s. the possibility of being corrupted, putrefied, or rendered worse.

CORRUPTIBLE, a. that may be putrefied, or grow rotten; that may be destroyed or rendered vicious.

CORRUPTION, s. [from con, with, to strengthen the signification, and rumpo, to break, Lat.] the action whereby the body loses all its properties and qualities for a certain time, or whereby its form is altered and its qualities changed from what they were before; rottenness. In polities, a state wherein persons act only from lucrative motives; the means by which any person may be rendered vicious; or a thing may be made rotten. In surgery, the matter contained in any ulcer or wound, called pus by practitioners. In law, the taint which grows to a person or his heirs, on account of his having been guilty of felony or treason.

CORRUPTIVE, s. having the power or quality of rendering tainted or rotten.

CORRUPTLESS, a. that cannot be corrupted.

CORRUPTLY, ad. with corruption; with taint; with vice; without integrity.

CORRUPTNESS, s. the quality or state of a corrupted body; vice.

CO'RSAIR, s. [Fr.] an armed vessel, which plunders merchant vessels; a pirate.

CORSE, s. [corps, Fr.] a poetical word for a carcase or dead body.

CO'RSELET, s. [Fr.] a little armour for the forepart of the body.

CO'RSHAM, or COSHAM, a town of Wilts. noted for its manufacture of woollens. King Ethelred had formerly a palace here, and it was once the chief residence of the earls of Cornwall. It is 4 miles S. W. of Chippenham, and 11 N. E. of Bath. Market on Wednesday.

CO'RSICA, a large island in the Mediterranean Sea, about 88 miles in length, and 40 in breadth. The air in some parts is unwholesome, and the land hilly, full of stones, and cultivated very poorly; however, the valleys produce wheat, and the hills fruits, viz. olives, figs, grapes, almonds, and chesnuts. There is a ridge of mountains which divides the island into two parts, the N. and S. The capital is Bastia. It belonged to the French, but on the revolution taking place in France, the Corsicans, rose, and appointed General Paoli for there chief, surrendered the island to the crown of Great Britain, with great formality, in July 1794, accepting at the same time a new constitution from the English government. In October, 1796, however, the English viceroy was obliged to abandon the island, and the French again took possession of it. The number of inhabitants is about 160,000. Here Napoleon Bonaparte, now emperor of France, was born, August 15, 1769.

CO'RTICAL, a. [from cortex, bark, Lat.] barky; belonging to the outward part of any thing. In anatomy, the cortical substance of the brain is its exterior part.

CO'RTICATED, a. [from cortex, bark, Lat.] resembling the bark of a tree.

CO'RTICOSE, a. [from cortex, bark, Lat.] full of bark.

CO'RVO, the smallest and most westernly of the Azores, about 24 miles in circumference, with a small port. It contains about 500 souls, who cultivate wheat and feed hogs.

CORU'SCANT, a. [from corusco, to glitter, Lat.] glittering by flashes; flashing.

CORUSCATION, s. [from corusco, to glitter, Lat.] a quick, sudden, and short darting of splendor; a flash; a glittering light.

CO'RVUS, in astronomy, the raven, a constellation in the southern hemisphere.

CORY'MBIATED, a. [from crymbus, a berry, Lat.] in botany, abounding or garnished with bunches of berries.

CORYMBI'FEROUS, a. [from corymbus, a berry, and fero, to bear, Lat.] bearing fruit or berries in bunches.

CORY'MBUS, s. [Lat.] in botany, a round cluster of berries, like those of the ivy, applied to such plants as have a compound discous flower, without any down adhering to their seeds.

CORYVRE'KAN, a dangerous vortex, or whirlpool, on the W. coast of Scotland, between the isle of Scarbia and the N. point of Jura. Its dreadful unfathomable vortex extends above a mile in circuit, and, at full tides, its numerous eddies form watery pyramids, which rise to a great height in the air, and bursting with the noise of thunder, overwhelm all vessels that come within the sphere of its attraction. It is so called from a young Danish prince, who perished in this place.

COSCI'NOMANCY, s. [from koskinon, a sieve, and manteia, divination, Gr.] the art of divination by a sieve.

COSE'CANT, s. in geometry, the secant of an arch, which is the compliment to another arch to 90 degrees.

CO'SIER, s. [from couser, old Fr.] a botcher; a low-lived person. A word of contempt.

CO'SINE, s. in geometry, the part of the diameter intercepted between the centre and the right sine, and always equal to the sine of the complement of the arch.

COSMETIC, a. [kosmetikos, from kosmeo, to ornament, Gr.] having the power of improving the personal charms; beautifying or heightening beauty.

CO'SMICAL, a. [from kosmos, the world, Gr.] relating to the world. In astronomy, rising together, or in the same degree of the ecliptic with the sun.

CO'SMICALLY, ad. at the same time with the sun.

COSMO'GONY, s. [from kosmos, the world, and gone, generation, Gr.] the rise, origin, or creation of the world.

COSMO'GRAPHER, s. [from kosmos, the world, and grapho, to describe, Gr.] one who composes a description of the relation, fitness, figure, and disposition of all the parts of the world.

COSMOGRA'PHICAL, a. [from kosmos, the world, and grapho, to describe, Gr.] relating to the general description of the world.

COSMOGRA'PHICALLY, ad. in a manner relating to the science by which the structure of the world is discovered and described.

COSMO'GRAPHY, s. [from kosmos, the world, and grapho to describe, Gr.] a description of the several parts of the world; or the art of delineating its several bodies according to their magnitudes, motions, relations, &c. It consists of geography and astronomy.

COSMO'POLITE, or COSMOPO'LITAN, s. [from kosmos, the world, and polites, a citizen, Gr.] a citizen of the world; one who is at home in all companies, and in all countries.

CO'SSACKS, a people inhabiting originally the confines of Poland, Russia, Tartary, and Turkey, between the Jaik and the Dneister. They are divided into several branches, the Kosakki sa Porovi, or Cossacks on the Boristhenes; the Kosakki Donski, or Cossacks on the Don; and the Kosakki Jaiki, which are the wildest of them all, dwelling in large villages along the banks of the river Ural, or Jaik, and the N. coast of the Caspian Sea. They are now entirely subject to Russia; and the Ukraine, or country of the Cossacks of Boristhenes, is become a government under the name of Ekaterinoslav. The Cossacks are large and robust, have blue eyes, brown hair, and aquiline noses; the women are complaisant to strangers. Their towns are built of wood, like those of the Russians. The Ukraine is one continued fertile plain, producing corn, pulse, tobacco, and honey. Its pastures are immensely rich, and the cattle are the largest in Europe.

CO'SSET, s. among farmers, a colt, calf, or lamb, brought up by the hand without the dam.

COST, s. [kost, Belg.] the price or money given for the purchase of a thing; charge; expense. Figuratively, sumptuousness; luxury; loss; detriment.

To COST, v. n. preter. and participle preter. cost; [couster, Fr.] to be purchased or bought at a particular sum.

CO'STAL, a. [from costa, a rib, Lat.] belonging to the ribs.

CO'STARD, s. the head or skull. In gardening, a round bellied apple, somewhat resembling the head.

CO'STA RICA, a province in the narrow part of Mexico, on the S. E. betweeen Veragua and Mosquito country, extending from sea to sea, 50 leagues in length, and nearly as much in breadth. The soil is ill cultivated, but there is plenty of cattle, hides, honey, and wax. The natives live mostly independent of the Spaniards. Carthage is the capital.

CO'STIVE, a. [constipatus, from constipo, to cram, Lat.] bound in the body; going seldom to stool; close; unpermeable.

CO'STIVENESS, s. in medicine, a preternatural detention of the excrements, attended with a difficulty of discharging them.

CO'STLINESS, s. sumptuousness; expensiveness; the great value, or sum required for the purchase of a thing.

CO'STLY, a. requiring a large sum, or much money for its purchase; expensive. Figuratively, rare; valuable.

CO'STMARY, s. [from costus, the name of a shrub, and Maria, Mary, Lat.] an herb, called also alcost and balsam herb.

CO'STREL, s. a bottle.

CO'STUME, s. among painters, denotes that every figure in a piece of painting must be drawn in its proper character.

COT, COTE, or COAT, at the end of the names of places, come generally from the Saxon cot, a cottage.

COT, s. [Sax.] a hut; a cottage.

COTA'NGENT, s. in geometry, the tangent of an arch which is the complement of another to 90 degrees.

COTE'MPORARY, a. [from con, with, and tempus, time, Lat.] living at the same time with another.

CO'T-LAND, s. land belonging to a cottage.

CO'TQUEAN, s. a person who officiously concerns himself with women's affairs.

CO'TESWOLD, s. a hilly plain, with several sheep-cotes, and sheep feeding. It comes from the Saxon cote, a cottage, and wold, a place where there is no wood.

CO'TESWOLD HILLS, a long tract of high ground, in the E. part of Gloucestershire, noted for large flocks of sheep with fleeces of fine white wool; a great part of it, however, is now devoted to the growth of corn.

COTI'LLION, s. the name of a well known brisk dance, in which eight persons are employed. Cotillion is a French word, meaning an under petticoat.

CO'TTAGE, s. See COT.

COTTA'GER, s. one who dwells in a hut or cottage. In law, one who lives on a common, without paying rent, and without any lands of his own.

COTTON, s. [coton, Fr.] the down of the fruit of the cotton tree. Cotton likewise signifies a coarse kind of cloth made of its threads when spun.

CO'TTONGRASS, s. a genus of plants called by Linnæus eriophorum. There are two British species, viz. the common, and hair's-tail. The former is very serviceable, in the isle of Skye, to cattle in the earlier parts of the spring, before the other grasses are grown up. Poor people stuff their pillows with the down, and make wicks for candles with it.

CO'VARD, a town of Gloucestershire, 20 miles from Gloucester, on the road to St. David's, and 124 from London. Market on Tuesday.

To COUCH, v. n. [coucher, Fr.] to lie down on a bed; to lie down on the knees bent under, applied to beasts; to lie in wait, or ambush; to lay under as a stratum; to stoop or sink down, through pressure of a heavy burthen, or through pain, fear or respect; to include; to comprise; to urge by way of implication; to include by way of analogy or indirectly; to incline a spear to a proper posture for attack. In surgery, to depress, or take off a film, which obstructs the sight, called improperly, couching the eye, or couching a patient, instead of couching a cotaract.

COUCH, s. a long seat furnished with a mattrass, on which people lie down for repose or ease; a lay or stratum.

COU'CHANT, (koóshong) a. [Fr.] lying down; squatting. In heraldry, applied to the posture of a beast lying with his belly on the ground, his legs bent under him, and his head looking upwards.

COU'CHEE, (koóshee) s. [Fr.] the time of going, to bed, opposed to levee.

CO'UCHER, s. one who couches persons for cataracts; an oculist.

CO'UCHGRASS, s. a weed.

COVE, s. [from couvrir, Fr.] a small creek or bay; a shelter, a cover.

COVENANT, s. [convenant, Fr.] an agreement between two persons.

To COVENANT, v. a. to bargain; to agree, or stipulate; to agree with a person on certain conditions.

COVENANTE'E, s. in law, one who is a party to an agreement, or covenant.

COVENA'NTER, s. one who makes an agreement with another.

CO'VENOUS, a. in law, fraudulent; with an intention to deceive or cheat.

CO'VENTRY, a large and populous city of Warwickshire, noted chiefly for its manufactures of silk ribands, as also of cloths, stuffs, thread, gauzes, camlets, and lastings. The account, at present, of its inhabitants vary from 20 to 30,000, although, by Bradford's Survey of Coventry, made in 1748 and 1749, the houses appear to have then been 2065, and the inhabitants only 12,117. It has communication, by canals, with Oxford, Lichfield, many other inland navigations, and with the Thames. The story of Leofric, earl of Mercia, and lord of this place, heavily taxing the citizens, and only remitting them at the entreaty of Godina his wife, on condition of her riding naked through the city, which he thought she would never submit to; but which, it is said, she performed, with her long hair so disposed as almost wholly to cover her body, is commemorated till this day, by the figure of a man peeping down into the street from one of the houses. On that extraordinary occasion, all the doors and windows were shut, and Campden says, that nobody looked after her. The tradition however is, that one would needs be peeping, and that he was thereupon struck blind. The inhabitants celebrate this event by the exhibition of a mock procession annually. Coventry is 91 miles N. W. of London. Lat. 52. 28. N. lon. 1. 28. W. Market on Friday. Fairs on May 2, Friday in Trinity Week, and November 1.

To COVER, v. a. [couvrir, Fr.] to spread, or overspread with something; to conceal under something; o hide by false appearances, or specious pretexts; to overwhelm or bury; to conceal, as in a wrapper, from human sight; to incubate; to brood on; to copulate with the other sex, applied to horses.

CO'VER, s. that which is spread over another. Figuratively, concealment; a specious pretence to conceal or hide a person's designs, used with for. Also, shelter; a place free from danger, used with under.

CO'VERING, s. dress; any thing spread over another.

CO'VERLET, s. [couvrelit, Fr.] the uppermost part of the bed-clothes; or an ornamental covering thrown over the rest of the bed-clothes.

CO'VERT, s. [convert, Fr.] a shelter, a place of defence from danger; a thicket or hiding-place.

CO'VERT, a. [convert, Fr.] sheltered; not open or exposed. Figuratively, secret; private; concealed by some fair pretext, or specious appearance. In law, under protection or shelter; hence femme converte, is used for a married women. Covert way, in fortification, a space of ground level with the field on the edge of the ditch, three or four fathom broad, ranging round the half-moons, or other works.

CO'VERTLY, ad. in a secret, private, or indirect manner.

CO'VERTNESS, s. the quality of being hidden, unperceived, indirect, or insidious.

CO'VERTURE, s. shelter; defence against any danger or inconvenience. Figuratively, a specious pretext or appearance to conceal a bad design. In law; the state or condition of a married woman.

To CO'VET, v. a. [convoiter, Fr.] to desire vehemently what a person is not possessed of; to prosecute; or endeavour to acquire with great eagerness. Neuterly, to have a strong and violent desire.

CO'VETABLE, a. that is proper, or fit, or worthy to be desired or wished for.

CO'VETOUS, a. [convoiteax, Fr.] excessively desirous of; inordinately eager after the acquiring and preserving of money; avaricious, in a bad sense. Desirous, fond, or eager to possess, used in a good sense.

CO'VETOUSLY, ad. in a greedy, avaricious manner.

CO'VETOUSNESS, s. the quality of being inordinately fond of money, or eager after gain.

CO'VEY, s. [couvée, Fr.] a hatch; or an old bird with her young; a number or collection of birds near one another.

COUGH, (koff) s. [kuck, Belg.] in medicine, a convulsive motion of the diophragm, the muscles of the larynx, thorax, and abdomen, violently shaking and expelling the air drawn into the lungs by respiration.

To COUGH, (koff) v. n. [kuchen, Belg.] to have the diaphragm or lungs convulsed by the irritation of serous humours, which they endeavour to expel, and by that means cause a noise like an explosion; to make a noise by endeavouring to discharge the trachea or lungs of the lymph with which it is overcharged, on account of the stoppage of perspiration. Actively, to eject by coughing, used with up.

CO'UGHER, (koffer) s. a person affected with a cough.

CO'VIN, or CO'VINE, s. [from convenir, Fr.] an agreement between two or more, in order to cheat a person.

CO'VING, s. [from couvrir, Fr.] in building, applied to houses projecting over the ground plot, or the turned projecture, arched with timber, lathed and plastered.

COULD, [the preterimperfect of CAN] was able to; had power to.

CO'ULTER, s. [culta, from colo, to cultivate, Lat.] the sharp iron which cuts the earth, perpendicular to the plough-share.

CO'UNCIL, s. [concilium, Lat.] an assembly met together to consider, examine, or deliberate on any subject. Common-council is a court wherein are made all by-laws that bind the citizens. It consists, like the parliament, of two parts, the upper and the lower; the upper is composed of the lord-mayor and aldermen, and the lower of a number of common-council men chosen by the several wards, as representatives of the body of citizens. Privy-council may be called the primum mobile of the civil government of Great Britain, bearing part of that great weight of it, which otherwise would lie too heavy upon the king. It is composed of persons eminent for their political knowledge, the number of whom is at the sovereign's pleasure, who are bound by oath to advise the king to the best of their judgment, with all the fidelity and secrecy that becomes their station. Cabinet-council, a select number chosen out of the privy-council, with whom his majesty determines such matters as are most important, and require the utmost secrecy. Council of war, is an assembly of the principal officers of an army or fleet, convened by the general or admiral to concert measures for their conduct in their respective operations. Oecumenical or general council, is an assembly which represents the whole body of the universal church. Provincial council, an assembly of the prelates of a province under their metropolitan. National council, is the assembly of all the prelates in a nation under their prelate or metropolitan.

CO'UNCIL-BOARD, s. a table at which matters of state are taken into consideration.

CO'UNSEL, s. [consilium, Lat.] advice; direction; deliberation; prudence; secrecy; scheme; design. In law, a person who pleads at the bar, an abbreviation of counsellor.

To CO'UNSEL, a. a. [consilior, Lat.] to give advice, or inform a person of the most advantageous way of regulating any point in his conduct, or ordering any particular measure; to advise any particular measure.

CO'UNSELLABLE, a. ready to follow the advice or persuasion of others.

CO'UNSELLOR, s. one who gives advice to, or endeavours to persuade another; a confidant. Figuratively, one whose province it is to advise in matters of state. In law, a person who is consulted on any difficulty arising in any writing, who pleads at the bar, and has been admitted as a barrister.

COUNSELLORSHIP, s. the office or post of counsellor.

To COUNT, v. a. [compter, Fr.] to number, or tell; to reckon; to esteem; to account, or look upon in any particular light; to impute or charge; used with to. Neuterly, to draw as a consequence from; to found or build a scheme or argument upon.

COUNT, s. [compte, Fr.] See COMPT.

COUNT, s. a nobleman who possesses a domain erected in a county, in rank between a duke and baron, and bears on his arms a coronet, adorned with three precious stones, and surmounted with three large leaves, whereof those in the middle and extremities advance above the rest. In England the title of earl is equivalent to that of count in foreign countries.

COUNTABLE, s. that may be numbered.

COUNTENANCE, s. [countenance, Fr.] the form of the face, or particular cast of the features. Air, or look; confidence of mien. To keep countenance, a composure of the features and complexion wherein they undergo no change. Show; resemblance. Figuratively, protection; patronage.

To COUNTENANCE, v. a. to support, favour, or protect. Figuratively, to act suitable to; to keep up the appearance of a thing; to encourage; to appear in defence of.

COUNTENANCER, s. one who appears in behalf of, or encourages a person or design.

COUNTER, s. [contoir, Fr.] a small piece of money used as a means of reckoning. The table or board on which goods are shewn, or money told in a shop. In farriery, that part of a horse's forehand that lies between the shoulder and under the neck.

COUNTER, ad. [contre, Fr.] in opposition to; contrary to. This word is often used in composition, and may be placed before any word used in a sense of opposition.

To COUNTERA'CT, v. a. to destroy the power of any cause, by acting contrary to it.

To COUNTERBA'LANCE, v. a. to weigh one thing against another. Figuratively, to act against with an opposite effect.

To COUNTERBU'FF, v. a. to beat back a thing in motion, in a direction contrary to that in which it moved at first.

COUNTERCHANGE, s. exchange; reciprocation.

To COUNTERCHANGE, v. a. to give and receive; to change one thing for another.

To COUNTERCHARM, v. a. to destroy the effect of a charm by counteracting it.

To COUNTERCHE'CK, v. a. to stop by a sudden obstruction or opposition.

COUNTERDRAW, v. a. to copy a design by means of some linen cloth, oiled paper, or some transparent substance, whereon the strokes appearing, are followed or traced with a pencil.

COUNTEREVIDENCE, s. testimony by which the deposition of some former witness is opposed.

To COUNTERFEIT, v. a. [counterfaire Fr.] to copy or imitate with an intention to make the thing pass for an original; to imitate; to resemble. Figuratively, to put on the appearance of something really excellent.

COUNTERFEIT, a. made or copied from another, with an intention to pass for an original; forged; fictitious. Figuratively, deceitful; hypocritical.

COUNTERFEIT, s. one who personates another; an impostor. Something made in imitation of another, intended to pass for that which it resembles; a forgery.

COUNTERFEITER, s. a forger; one who imitates a thing with an intention to pass the resemblance as an original.

COUNTERFEITLY, ad. with forgery; fictitiously; with dissimulation.

COUNTERGA'GE, s. in carpentry, a method used in measuring the joints, by transferring the breadth of a mortise to the place in the timber where the tenon is to be, in order to make them fit each other.

COUNTERGUA'RD, s. a small rampart, with a parapet and ditch, to cover some part of the body of the place.

COUNTERLIGHT, s. in painting, a window or light opposite any thing, which makes it appear to a disadvantage.

To COUNTERMA'ND, v. a. [contremander, Fr.] to order something contrary to what has been commanded; to contradict or repeal an order. Figuratively, to oppose; to set one's self in opposition to the commands of another.

To COUNTERMA'RCH, v. n. to march in a direction opposite to that in which an army began; to march back.

COUNTERMA'RCH, s. in war, a change of the wings and front of a battalion, whereby the men in front come to be in the rear. Figuratively, a change or alteration of measures or conduct, opposite to those which preceded.

COUNTERMA'RK, s. a second or third mark put on a bale of goods belonging to several persons, that it may not be opened but in the presence of them all.

COUNTERMI'NE, s. in war, a subterraneous passage made by the besieged in search of the enemy's mine, to take out the powder, give air to it, or any other way to frustrate its effects.

To COUNTERMI'NE, v. a. to dig a passage into an enemy's mine, by which the powder may be taken out, air given to it, or means used to frustrate its intention. Figuratively, to frustrate its design; to counterwork or defeat by secret measures.

COUNTERMO'TION, s. a motion opposite or contrary to another.

COUNTERMU'RE, s. [contremur, Fr.] a little wall built close to another to strengthen and secure it.

COUNTERNATURAL, a. contrary to nature.

COUNTERNOISE, s. a sound or noise made in opposition to another, in order to drown it, and hinder its being heard.

COUNTEROPENING, s. an opening, vent, or aperture, opposite to another.

COUNTERPANE, s. [contrepoint, Fr.] a cloth or ornamental covering laid over a bed.

COUNTERPART, s. a part opposite to, or which answers another.

COUNTERPLE'A, s. the plea of a respondent to that of another; a reply in order to oppose the plea of another.

To COUNTERPLOT, v. a. to lay one plot against another; to endeavour to hinder the effects of, by forming and carrying on one of contrary tendency.

COUNTERPLOT, s. a stratagem or artifice opposed to another.

To COUNTERPOISE, (kounterpoize) v. a. [contre and poids, Fr.] to place one weight against another; to act against with equal weight. Figuratively, to produce a contrary action by an equal weight; to act with equal power against any person or cause.

COUNTERPOISE, (kounterpoize) s. a weight which is heavy enough to counterbalance another. Figuratively, an equivalent or thing of equal worth with another.

COUNTERPOISON, s. antidote; medicines by which the effects of poison are obviated.

COUNTERPRESSURE, s. an opposite force or measure, by which that which presses the contrary way is counterpoised or destroyed.

COUNTERPROJECT s. correspondent part of a scheme.

COUNTERSCARP, s. [contrescarpe, Fr.] in fortification, that part of the ditch which is next the camp, or the acclivity or exterior part of the ditch next the country, or field; sometimes it is taken for the whole covert-way, or glacis.

To COUNTERSIGN, (kountersin) v. a. to sign an order or instrument signed before by a king or person of high rank; thus when a charter is signed by the king, and afterwards by the secretary, the latter is said to countersign it.

COUNTER TE'NOR, s. one of the mean or middle parts of music, so called because opposite to the tenor.

COUNTERTIDE, s. contrary tide; fluctuations of the water.

COUNTERTURN, s. in dramatic poetry, the catastasis, or full growth of a play, which destroys the expectation, embroils the action in new difficulties, and leaves a person distant from that hope in which it found him.

To COUNTERVAIL, v. a. [from contra, against, and valeo, to prevail, Lat.] to act with a force opposite to another; to be of equal force with another. Figuratively, to be equal to; to compensate for; to counterbalance.

COUNTERVAIL, s. equal weight or force; power or value sufficient to oppose or hinder any contrary effect, or objection. Figuratively, a compensation, or that which is of equal force with something else.

COUNTERVIEW, s. opposition, or a situation in which two persons view each other. Figuratively, opposition, or a design which is contrary to that of another. In painting, a contrast, or situation in which two things illustrate or set off each other.

To COUNTERWORK, v. a. to endeavour to hinder another effect by acting against it; to counteract.

COUNTESS, s. [comtesse, Fr.] the wife of a count or earl.

COUNTING-HOUSE, s. a place or room where traders post and settle their books, or keep their accounts.

COUNTLESS, a. innumerable; without number; not to be reckoned.

COUNTRY, (kúntry) s. [contrée, Fr.] a tract of land under one governor. Figuratively, those parts of a kingdom which are at a distance from cities and courts; the place of any person's birth or dwelling.

COUNTRY, (kúntry) a. rude; unpolished; uncultivated; rustic. At a distance in situation, or opposite in principles, to the court. Figuratively, rude; untaught; ignorant. Country dance seems to be derived from the French, which signifies that the partners stand opposite to each other; but not from its being a manner of dancing peculiar to the country.

COUNTRYMAN, (kúntryman) s. one born in the same kingdom or shire with another. Figuratively, a person bred at a distance from cities or courts. A farmer; a husbandman.

COUNTY, s. [comté, Fr.] originally signified the estate of a count, or so far as he had any jurisdiction; at present, it is used in the same sense with a shire, both containing a compass or portion of the realm, into the which all the land is divided for the better government thereof; so that there is no portion of land that is not contained within some county. There are 40 counties in England, and 12 in Wales. Counties or shires are subdivided into rapes, laths, wapentakes, and hundreds, and these into tithings, &c. In all the counties, except Durham, Cumberland and Westmoreland, officers are appointed every Michaelmas term under the denomination of sheriffs, for the executing justice; other officers of the counties are lord lieutenants, who command the militia, custos rotulorum, justices of the peace, bailiffs, high constables, and coroner. There are four of the counties called counties palatine, viz. Lancaster, Chester, Durham, and Ely, which formerly had very great privileges that are now very much abridged.

COVORDEN, a strong city, the capital of Drent, in Overyssel. Lat. 52. 43. N. lon. 6. 11. E.

COUPE'E, (koopeé) s. [Fr.] in dancing, a motion made with the leg forwards, while the other is bent and suspended from the ground.

COUPLE, (kúple) s. [couple, Fr.] a chain, or band which holds dogs together; two; pair, Figuratively, a male and female joined in marriage.

To COUPLE, (kúple) v. a. [copulo, Lat.] to chain or fasten two or more dogs together. Figuratively, to join two or more things of the same kind together; to join two persons together in marriage; to join in embraces, or copulate.

COUPLE-BEGGAR, s. one that makes it his business to marry beggars to each other.

COUPLET, (kúplet) s. [Fr.] two verses rhyming together. Figuratively, a pair.

COURAGE, (kúraje) s. a manly braveness of mind, which enables a person to run any risks, undergo any difficulties, and confront any dangers, arising from a sense of duty, and a fear of offending him that made us.

COURA'GEOUS, (kúrájeous) a. [courageux, Fr.] resolutely bold, and undertaking any enterprise, though attended with dangers, and surrounded with difficulties.

COURA'GEOUSLY, (kúrájeously) ad. in a manner free from fear, and resolutely opposing difficulties and dangers.

COURA'GEOUSNESS, s. bravery; boldness; spirit; courage.

COURA'NT, (kooránt) s. [courante, Fr.] any thing which is spread or published quickly; hence courant has been used for the title of a newspaper.

COURIER, s. [courier, Fr.] a messenger sent in haste with dispatches relating to the state; an express.

COU'RLAND, (dutchy of) is bounded on the N. by the Gulf of Riga and part of Livonia; on the W. by the Baltic; and on the E. and S. by Russia and Poland. It is divided into Courland Proper and Semigallia, and is 250 miles long and 40 broad. The country swells into gentle hills, and is fertile in corn, hemp, and flax. It is mostly open; but in some parts covered with forests of pine and fir, and groves of oak, with much underwood. The woods abound with bears, wolves, and elks. The villages are neat, and the inns have good accommodations. The religion is chiefly Lutheran. Mittau is the capital. This country is now a province of Russia.

COURSE, (kōrse) s. [cursus, from curro, to run, Lat.] a race. Figuratively, the place where races are run. Passage from place to place; progress. Tilt; act of running in the lists. Track in which a ship sails. A turn in order of succession, used with in. "Every one in his course." A methodical procedure. A course of philosophy, chemistry, &c. In cookery, a number of dishes set at one time on the table. Empty form. Of course, by consequence, by settled rule. In architecture, a continued range of stones, level, or of the same height throughout the whole length of a building, without any interruption or aperture. Courses, the mainsails and foresails of a ship.

To COURSE, (kōrse) v. a. to hunt; to pursue game; to pursue with dogs that hunt in view; to exercise in running or galloping. Neuterly, to run; to pass; or make itself a passage; to rove.

COURSER, (kōrser) s. a swift horse; a war-horse.

COURT, (kōrt) s. [cour, Fr.] the place where a prince resides; an open space before a house; a small place inclosed with buildings, excepting an avenue which leads to it, and having no other passage at the other end. Likewise, a large hall or room where justice is publicly administered. Courts are of various kinds; and are either held in the king's name, as all the ordinary courts; or where the precepts are issued in the name of the judge; as the admiral's court. The superior courts are those of the King's Bench, the Common Pleas, the Exchequer, and the Court of Chancery. (See them under their respective heads.) A court of record has power to hold plea of real, personal, and mixed actions, where the debt is 40s. or above; as the court of King's Bench, &c. A base court, or court not of record, is, where it cannot hold plea of debt or damage, amounting to 40s. or where proceedings are not according to the course of the common law; such as the county court, court of hundreds, court baron, &c. Court Baron is a court held by every lord of a manor within his own precincts, by common law and custom; the former is where the barons or freeholders, being suitors, are the judges; the other is that where the lord or his steward, is the judge. Court of Chivalry, or the Marshal's Court, of which the lord high constable and the earl marshal of England were judges. This court is the fountain of martial law, and the earl marshal is not only one of the judges, but is to see execution done. Court of Conscience, a court in the cities of London and Westminster, and some other places, where all causes where the debt and damages come under 40*s.* are determined. Court of Delegates, where delegates are appointed by the king's commission, under the great seal, upon an appeal to him; and is granted in three cases: 1. When a sentence is given in an ecclesiastical cause by the archbishop, or his official; 2. When a sentence is given in an ecclesiastical cause in places exempt; and 3. When sentence is given in the court of admiralty, in suits civil or marine, by order of the civil law. Court of Hustings, is a court of record, held at Guildhall, for the city of London, before the lord-mayor and aldermen, sheriffs and recorder, where all pleas, real, personal, and mixt, are determined; where all lands, tenements, &c. within the said city, or its bounds, are pleadable, in two Hustings; the one called the Hustings of the pleas of lands, and the other the Hustings of the common pleas. This is the highest court within the city, in which writs of exigent may be taken out, and outlawries awarded, wherein judgment is given by the recorder. Court-Leet, is a court held by the lord of a manor, wherein all offences, except high treason, are inquired into, and punished. Court-Martial, is appointed for inquiring into, and punishing offences in officers, soldiers, and sailors, in a manner agreeable to the regulations of the mutiny bill. Court of Requests was anciently a court of equity, of the same nature with the chancery, but inferior to it; and has been long since abolished. Figuratively, the retinue or persons which attend on a prince in his palace; any jurisdiction, military, civil, or ecclesiastical. The art of pleasing or insinuation.

To COURT, (kōrt) v. a. to woo; to endeavour to engage the affections of a woman with a view of marriage. Figuratively, to solicit; to seek after with eagerness; to flatter; to endeavour to please, or to insinuate one's self into the good graces of another.

COURT-DAY, s. the day on which justice is solemnly administered.

COURTEOUS, (kōrteous, or kúrteous) a. [courtois, Fr.] affable; polite; full of respect and civility.

COURTEOUSLY, (kōrteously or kúrteously) ad. in a respectful, civil, complaisant manner.

COURTEOUSNESS, (kōrteousness, or kúrteousness) s. civil, affable, and complaisant behaviour, tending to gain the affection of another.

COURTESAN, or COURTEZAN, (kōrtezan, or kúrtezan) s. [courtisane, Fr.] an unchaste woman; a prostitute.

COURTESY, (kōrtesy, or kúrtesy) s. [courtoisie, Fr.] an affable and polite address; an act of kindness, civility, or respect. Figuratively, the method in which women shew their respect of ceremony, i. e. by bending the knees and sinking the body. In law, a tenure, not of right, but purely by the favour and good nature of others. Courtesy of England, is applied to a right which a person has to an inheritance who marries an heiress, that has a child by him, after both she and the child are dead. PROV. Full of courtesy full of craft.

To COURTESY, (pron. cúrtsey and cúrchee) v. n. to sink the body by bending the knees, applied to the method used by the fair sex to shew their respect and breeding.

COURT-HAND, (kōrt-hand) s. a large square character, abounding in abbreviations, in which records and law proceedings were formerly wrote.

COURTIER, (kōrtier) s. one who frequents the courts of princes; one who espouses the measures of the court, in opposition to those of the country; one who solicits and endeavours to engage the affections or esteem of another.

COURTLIKE, (kōrtlike) a. elegant; polite; resembling the court.

COURTLINESS, (kōrtliness) s. elegance of manners, civility of behaviour, and politeness of address.

COURTLY, (kōrtly) a. relating to, favouring, or flattering the court. Adverbially, in the manner of courtiers; elegantly.

COURTSHIP, (kōrtship) s. the act of endeavouring to gain the favour of a superior, or the affections of a woman.

COUSIN, (kúzin) s. [cousin, Fr.] a title of relation, applied to those who are born of two sisters, or two brothers. Figuratively, a title given by the king to a nobleman, especially to such as form the privy council.

COW, s. [in the plural anciently kine or keen, but now cows; eu, Sax.] the female of the larger or black cattle; its young are called calves; the male a bull; and its flesh, when killed, beef.

To COW, v. a. [by a contraction from coward] to depress, to keep in great subjection, so as to render a person unable to undertake any bold and generous action.

COWARD, s. [couard, Fr.] a person who is viciously timorous, or afraid of opposing danger; a word of reproach. SYNON. The coward will fire up upon the least offence, but proceed no further. The poltroon is so meanly spirited as through want of courage to take every insult calmly. The coward draws back; the poltroon dares not advance.

COWARDICE, s. an excessive timorousness, which renders a person the contempt of his adversaries, and the scorn of his friends.

COWARDLINESS, s. the quality of acting like a coward.

COWARDLY, a. fearful; timorous; pusillanimous.

COWARDLY, ad. in the manner of a person who is afraid to shew resentment, or oppose an enemy.

COWBRIDGE, a town of Glamorganshire, in South Wales, with a market on Tuesday. It is called by the Welsh Pont-Van, from the stone bridge over the river, which soon after falls into the sea. It is seated in a low bottom, and in a fertile soil. The streets are broad and paved; and it is governed by two bailiffs, 12 aldermen, and 12 common-council. The market is well supplied with corn, cattle, sheep, and provisions. It is 176 miles W. from London.

COWBANE, s. the long-leaved water hemlock.

To COWER, v. n. [cwrain, Brit.] to stoop by bending the knees, applied to beasts. Figuratively, to stoop or hang over a thing, applied to the attitude of a human creature.

COWES, EAST and WEST, a sea port on the N. coast of the Isle of Wight, divided by the river Meden, or Medina. It is a place of good trade, resorted to by merchant ships waiting for convoy, passage-boats to and from Portsmouth, Southampton, &c. and the station of the packet, with the mail from the island to London. It is 8 miles S. W. of Portsmouth.

COWEY STAKES, Surry, near Lalam, the place where Julius Cæsar passed the Thames, though the Britons had planted stakes to hinder it, both on the bank and ford.

COWGARTH, Westmoreland, near Winandermere, an old seat, with ancient trees about it, the boughs of one of which spread out to such an extent, that several hundreds of persons might find shelter under it.

COWISH, a. timorous; fearful to a vice.

COWKEEPER, s. one whose business is to keep cows.

COWL, s. [cugle, Sax.] a kind of veil worn by monks; a vessel in which water is carried on a pole between two persons.

COW-LEECH, s. one who professes to cure distempered cows.

COWPAR, a parliament town of Scotland, in the county of Fife, 10 miles W. of St. Andrews.

COW-POX, s. See VACCINE INOCULATION.

COWQUAKES, s. a provincial term for the quakegrass or ladies-hair.

COWSLIP, s. [cuslippe, Sax.] in botany, a small yellowish flower, a species of the primrose.

COWS-LUNGWORT, s. a species of mullein, called also hightaper, common on dry ditch banks.

COWWEED, s. the common wild chervil.

COWWHEAT, s. in botany, the melampyrum of Linneus. There are two British species, viz. the crested and purple.

COXCOMB, (kóxcom) s. an ignorant pretender to knowledge and polite accomplishments.

COXCO'MICAL, a. foppish; conceited; affecting an appearance of learning and politeness, including the idea of vanity. A low word, unworthy of use.

CO'XWOLD, a town in the North Riding of Yorkshire. It is 214 miles N. by W. of London.

COY, a. [coi, Fr.] modest; reserved; not submitting to the familiarities of a lover, or testifying any approbation of his advances.

To COY, v. n. to behave with reserve and disapprobation of the familiarities of a lover; to condescend with reluctance.

CO'YLY, ad. with reserve; with unwillingness to admit any advances of a lover.

CO'YNESS, s. reserve; unwillingness to admit the advances or familiarities of a lover.

CO'YSTREL, s. a degenerate kind of hawk.

To CO'ZEN, (kúzn,) v. a. to impose on by feigned appearances; to cheat, trick, or defraud.

CO'ZENAGE, (kúznaje) s. imposing upon a person by false appearances, in order to deprive him of his property; a fraud.

CO'ZENER, (kúzner) s. one who defrauds another by means of specious pretences, or false appearances.

CRAB, s. [crabba, Sax.] a roundish flat crustaceous animal. There are several things remarkable in the natural history of the crab, particularly three. 1st. That it divests itself of its shell every year, and repairs its loss by means of a juice with which it covers its body. 2d. That if any of its claws are injured, it has the power of breaking off the wounded member, whose loss is in a little time repaired with a new one. 3d. That animals of this species live in companies, and if they are returned to the sea at a considerable distance from the place whence they where taken, they will find their way back to their companions again, as has been ascertained by marking their shells. A wild sour apple, or the tree that bears it. Figuratively, a sour, cross, morose person. A wooden engine with three claws, used in launching ships, or heaving them into the docks. In astronomy, one of the signs of the zodiac. See CANCER.

CRAB, a. It is used by way of contempt for any sour or degenerate fruit; as, a crab cherry, a crab plum.

CRA'BBED, a. applied to the temper and behaviour of a person, sour, morose, void of affability. Figuratively, disagreeably or unpleasing. Applied to writings, not easy to be understood, difficult or perplexing.

CRA'BBEDLY, ad. in a peevish, morose, sour, and unsociable manner.

CRA'BBEDNESS, s. applied to the taste, sour, or resembling that of a crab; applied to the looks, crossness; applied to behaviour, moroseness; and applied to writings, difficulty or hardness to be understood.

CRAB'S-EYES, in pharmacy and natural history, are found in two separate bags on each side of the stomach of the crawfish, and are alkaline, absorbent, and in some degree diuretic.

CRAB-LICE, a species of vermin, so denominated from the resemblance which they bear to the figure of a crab.

CRACK, s. [kraeck, Belg.] a sudden bursting, by which the parts of a body are separated from each other. Figuratively, the chink or chasm made by the separation of the parts of a body; the sound made by any body in bursting or falling; a sound made by a sudden and quick blow; a flaw. Craziness of intellect; a boast.

To CRACK, v. a. [kraecken, Belg.] to break into chinks; to break or split; to destroy by breaking; to make a flaw in a thing; to craze. Neuterly, to burst; to split; to open in chinks; to fall or run to ruin; to make a loud noise by bursting, or from a sudden blow; to boast, used with of.

CRACK-BRAINED, a. crazy; without right reason.

CRA'CKER, s. a noisy boasting fellow. A quantity of gunpowder, confined so as to burst with a noise.

To CRA'CKLE, v. n. to make a loud and frequent noise, resembling that of a bay leaf when burnt.

CRA'CKNEL, s. a hard brittle cake.

CRACOW, formerly the capital of Poland, and now capital of a palatinate of the same name, is situated on the Vistula, which is here broad and shallow. The city and suburbs occupy a vast tract of ground, yet contain scarcely 16,000 inhabitants. The great square is spacious and well built; the houses were once richly furnished and well inhabited, but are now either untenanted, or in a state of decay. Many of the streets are spacious and handsome; but almost every building bears striking marks of ruined grandeur. The regalia were preserved here, and in the cathedral most of the sovereigns of Poland have been interred. They were also crowned here for nearly five centuries. It has an university, now much decayed, and is 130 miles S. S. W. of Warsaw. Lat. 50. 8. N. lon. 20. 16. E.

CRA'DLE, s. [cradel, Sax.] a small moveable bedstead for children, made of wicker-work, and fitted with pieces of wood underneath, which make the segment of a circle, by means of which it is rocked to and fro. Figuratively, infancy. In surgery, a kind of case resembling a cradle, in which a limb is laid that has been lately set. In ship building, a frame of timber raised along the outside of a ship, by the bulge, serving to launch her with greater ease and security. In masonry, a sort of cage, in which workmen are suspended on the side of any high building which they are repairing.

To CRA'DLE, a. to lay or rock in a cradle. Figuratively, to lay or compose.

CRAFT, s. [craft, Sax.] a trade or mechanic employ; a kind of low cunning, whereby one person outwits or overreaches another. Small sailing vessels.

CRA'FTILY, ad. in a cunning manner: in a manner which includes in it more art than honesty.

CRA'FTINESS, s. cunning.

CRA'FTSMAN, s. an artificer, tradesman, manufacturer or mechanic.

CRA'FTSMASTER, s. a man skilled in his trade.

CRA'FTY, a. cunning; full of art, whereby a person overreaches another, or carries on a design against him without his discovery; it includes the idea of selfishness; and sometimes dishonesty.

CRAG, s. [craeghe, Belg.] a neck, or the small end of the neck, applied to a joint of butcher's meat.

CRAG, s. [craig, Brit.] a rough steep rock; the rugged parts of a rock.

CRA'GGED, a. full of ruggedness, or uneven parts.

CRA'GGEDNESS, s. fulness of crags, or prominent rocks.

CRA'GGINESS, s. the state of being craggy.

CRA'GGY, a. uneven; broken; rugged.

CRAIL, a parliament town of Scotland, in the county of Fife, seated of the mouth of the Frith of Forth, 7 miles S. E. of St. Andrews.

CRA'KENEEDLE, s the common venus comb, or shepherds-needle.

To CRAM, v. a. [cramman, Sax.] to stuff by force; or to force more into a thing than it can conveniently contain; to fill with more food than a person can conveniently eat; to thrust down by force, applied to the method used to feed and cram turkies. Neuterly, to eat more than a person can well bear.

CRA'MBO, s. [a cant word] a play in which one person is obliged to find a rhyme to a word given by another.

CRAMP, s. [crampe, Fr.] in medicine, a convulsive or involuntary contraction of the muscular part of the body, attended with great pain. Figuratively, any restraint which hinders a person from exerting either the faculties of his mind, or the strength of his body. A piece of iron beat at each end, by which two bodies are held together.

CRAMP, a. attended with difficulties; not easy to be understood. A low term.

To CRAMP, v. a. to contract the muscular parts, and thereby to occasion great pain. Figuratively, to restrain, confine; obstruct, or hinder. To fasten together with cramping irons.

CRA'MPFISH, in natural history, the torpedo, a fish, which not only benumbs the hands of those that touch it, but likewise affects them in the same manner when they take it with a line and fishing-rod.

CRA'NBERRIES, s. the same with moss-berries or moor-berries; a species of whortle.

CRA'NBOURN, a town of Dorsetshire, well watered with streams. In the chase, which is so by prescription, having never been a forest, there are 6 lodges, and formerly were 8; it extends almost to Salisbury. It is 38 miles N. E. of Dorchester, and 94 S. W. of London. Market on Thursday.

CRA'NBROOK, a town in Kent, with a market on Saturdays. It is a large and well frequented place, and the market is the best in these parts. It is 13 miles S. of Maidstone, and 52 S. E. of London.

CRANE, s. [cran, Sax.] a bird with a long bill, neck, and legs. Also a machine used in building and commerce, for raising large stones and other weights. A syphon, or crooked pipe, for drawing liquors out of a bottle or cask. Likewise, a long piece of iron put in a chimney, to hang pots upon.

CRA'NEAGE, s. the liberty of using a crane at a wharf; also, the money paid for drawing up wares out of a ship, &c. with a crane.

CRA'NESBILL, s. a genus of plants, of which sixteen species are natives of England. A pair of pincers terminating in a point, used by surgeons.

CRA'NIUM, s. [Lat.] in anatomy, an assemblage of bones, which involve and include the cerebellum and brain commonly called the skull.

CRANK, s. [krank, Belg.] the end of an iron axis turned square down, and turned again square to the first turning down, so that on the last turning down a leather thong is slipt to tread the treadle-wheel about; or, it is a contrivance of a square form projecting out from an axis or spindle, serving by its rotation to raise and fall the pistons of an engine for raising water. Figuratively, any pleasing conceit or pun formed by wresting a word from its original signification.

CRANK, a. in sea language, is applied to a ship which is said to be cranksided, when she cannot bear her sails, or but small sail, without danger of oversetting; and to be crank by the ground, when her floor or bottom is so narrow that she cannot be brought on ground without danger. Healthy; sprightly.

To CRA'NKLE, v. n. to run in and out; to run in mazes, meanders, or windings. Actively, to break into windings.

CRA'NKLES, s. an unequal surface, angles formed by the windings of the stream.

CRA'NNIED, a. full of holes or chinks.

CRA'NNY, s. [crena, Lat.] a chink, cleft, or a narrow hole made in a rock or solid body.

CRAPE, s. [crepa, low Lat.] a light transparent manufacture resembling gauze, made of raw silk gummed and twisted in the mill, wove without crossing, and much used in mourning.

CRA'PULENCE, s. [from crapula, a cup, Lat.] drunkenness; or the disorder of the head occasioned by excessive drinking.

CRA'PULOUS, a. [from crapula, a cup, Lat.] drunk; sick or disordered in the head by excessive drinking.

To CRASH, v. n. to make a loud noise; applied to that which is occasioned by the fall of several things at once. Actively, to break or bruise by means of force. Figuratively, to drink, applied to liquor.

CRASH, s. a loud, sudden, mixed sound, occasioned by several things falling, or being dashed together.

CRA'SIS, s. [krasis, Fr.] constitution, or the habit of body formed by a due temperature of the humours of the body health.

CRASS, a. [crassus, Lat.] thick; gross; not easily running, applied to fluids.

CRA'SSITUDE, s. [from crassus, thick, Lat.] that state of a fluid which enables it to support solid bodies without sinking; grossness.

CRASTINATION, s. [from cras, to-morrow, Lat.] the delaying a thing, which ought to be done immediately, to another time.

CRATCH, s. [creche, Fr.] the pallisaded frame, in which the hay is put; a manger.

CRA'TER, in astronomy, the cup, a constellation in the southern hemisphere.

CRA'VAT, s. a cloth worn round the neck; a neckcloth.

To CRAVE, v. n. [crafian, Sax.] to ask with earnestness and submission. Figuratively, to ask insatiably, or wish for without being satisfied; to require as necessary; to call for as a claim, applied to things.

CRA'VEN, a division of the West Riding of Yorkshire, which lies on the river Are.

CRA'VEN, s. a cock that is conquered, and void of courage. Figuratively, a coward, or one afraid to encounter any danger.

To CRA'VEN, v. a. to render inactive by fear; to render a person a coward, or affect with cowardice.

CRA'VER, s. an insatiable asker.

To CRAUNCH, v. a. [from schrantsen, Belg. whence the vulgar more properly say to scraunch] to crush with the teeth.

CRAW, s. [kroe, Dan.] the crop or first stomach in birds, made by the infinitely wise Architect of the world to supply the want of teeth and mastication in birds.

CRA'WFISH, s. sometimes written crayfish; [écrevisse. Fr.] in natural history, a small fresh-water fish, in the form of a lobster.

To CRAWL, v. a. [krielen, Belg.] to move with a slow motion along the ground, like a worm. Figuratively, to move slowly; to move in an abject posture, despised by all.

CRA'WLER, s. an animal which moves with its belly on the ground; any animal moving with a slow and creeping motion.

CRA'YFISH, s. the same with the CRAWFISH, which see.

CRA'YON, s. [Fr.] any colour formed into a roll or pencil, with which pictures or portraits are drawn or coloured. Figuratively, any design or portrait formed with crayons.

To CRAZE, v. a. [écraser, Fr.] to break. Figuratively, to crush or weaken a claim, or arguments; to powder. To disorder the senses or brain of a person; to make a person mad.

CRA'ZEDNESS, s. the state of a thing broken; weakness; madness, applied to the understanding.

CRA'ZINESS, s. the state of being mad; weakness.

CRA'ZY, a. [écrasé, Fr.] broken. Figuratively, weak with age; decrepit; feeble; disordered in mind; lunatic, or mad.

To CREAK, (kreek) v. n. [corrupted from crack] to make a harsh, shrill, and disagreeable noise, like that of a rusty hinge, applied both to things and animals.

CREAM, (kreem) s. [cremor, Lat.] the thick, fat, or unctuous substance which rises on the surface or milk when it has stood for some time, used in making butter. Figuratively, the best, essential, or most valuable part of any thing; as the cream of the jest. Cream-faced, implies pale with fear.

To CREAM, (kreem) v. n. to rise in cream. To look pale like cream. Actively, to skim off the cream of milk. Figuratively, to take or collect the flower, best part, or quintessence of any thing.

CRE'AMY, (kreemy) a. abounding with, or of the nature of cream.

CRE'ANCE, s. [Fr.] in falconry, a fine small line, fastened to a hawk's leash when she is first lured.

CREASE, (kreese) s. a mark made in a thing by folding or doubling it.

To CREASE, (kreese) v. a. to make a mark in any thing by folding or doubling it.

To CREA'TE, v. a. [creo, Lat.] to form out of nothing.

Figuratively, to cause or produce; to occasion; to confer an honour or dignity. In law, to give a thing new qualities; or put it into a new state.

CREATION, s. [creatio, from creo, to create, Lat.] the act of forming or giving existence. In its strict sense, it implies the giving existence to a thing which had no pre-existent matter. Figuratively, the act of conferring titles and dignity. The things created; the universe.

CREATIVE, a. having the power to form out of nothing; exerting the act or power of creation.

CREATOR, s. [from creo, to create, Lat.] the Being that bestows existence, or forms without any preceding matter.

CREATURE, (krećture) s. a being which owes its existence to something else. Any thing created. An animal not human. A general term for man. A word of contempt for a human being. A word of petty tenderness. Figuratively, used for one who owes his fortune to, and is at the devotion of, another.

CREATURELY, (krećturely) ad. having the qualities of a created thing.

CREBRITUDE, s. [crebritudo, Lat.] frequentness, or the quality of repeating the same thing often.

CREBROUS, a. [creber, Lat.] frequent.

CRE'CY, or CRESSY, a village in the department of Somme, famous for a great victory obtained over the French by Edward III. August 26th, 1346, wherein the latter were defeated with great slaughter, 30,000 foot being left dead in the field, besides the horse; among whom were the king of Bohemia, the count of Flanders, 8 other sovereign princes, 80 bannerets, 1200 knights, 1500 gentlemen, 4000 men at arms, with the duke of Alençon, and other great men, the flower of the French nobility. The English army was drawn up in three lines; the first consisted of 800 men at arms, 4000 English archers, and 600 Welsh foot, commanded by Edward prince of Wales, assisted by the earls of Warwick, Oxford, &c. The second line, composed of 800 men at arms, 4000 halbidiers, and 2400 archers, was led by the earls of Arundel and Northampton. The third line, or body of reserve, in which were 700 men at arms, 5300 hilmen, and 6000 archers, was ranged along the summit of a hill, and conducted by the king in person, attended by the lords Mowbray, Mortimer, and others. The army of the French consisted of more than 120,000 men. Crecy is about 10 miles N. of Abbeville.

CRE'DENCE, s. [from credo, to believe, Lat.] belief; credit; the act of the mind whereby it asserts to the truth of a persons pretensions, and places confidence in his claim to assert. Figuratively, that which gives a person a right to belief or credit.

CREDE'NDA, s. [Lat.] things or articles which it is necessary to believe; those propositions or articles which are merely the objects of faith, opposed to agenda, or practical duties.

CRE'DENT, a. [from credo, to believe, Lat.] believing; easy of belief.

CREDE'NTIAL, (kredenshial) s. [credo, to believe, Lat.] that which gives a right to belief and credit; that which warrants assuming any authority, and claims the respect due to one of that character.

CREDIBI'LITY, s. the claim which a thing may have to be assented to or believed; the quality or evidence which renders a thing fit to be assented to; probability.

CRE'DIBLE, a. [from credo, to believe, Lat.] worthy of credit, assent, or belief.

CRE'DIBLENESS, s. the quality which renders a thing worthy of credit, assent, or belief.

CRE'DIBLY, ad. in such a manner as may be assented to; in such a manner as to claim belief.

CRE'DIT, s. [credit, Fr.] belief of a thing as a truth. Figuratively, honour, esteem, testimony, or reputation for honesty; the lending and expectation of money lent within some limitted time; the faith reposed in the government by lending money at interest, which may be transferred, though not redeemable, or is promised to be repaid at a certain time. In commerce, it signifies something sold on trust; and the credit of a person's account is that on which his payments, whether in cash or other commodities, are registered.

To CRE'DIT, v. a. [credo, Lat.] to believe or assent to what a person says as truth. Figuratively, to reflect honour on a person or thing; to trust or confide in one; to let a person have goods on trust. In commerce, to discharge a debt, by entering an article on the credit side of an account.

CRE'DITABLE, a. that may engage confidence or esteem. In commerce, that may procure trust; honourable; estimable.

CRE'DITABLENESS, a. reputation; the being generally praised and esteemed.

CRE'DITABLY, ad. in such a manner as to keep one's reputation, or avoid disgrace.

CRE'DITION, or KIRTON, a town in Devonshire, with a considerable manufacture of serges; formerly the see of a bishop, removed to Exeter in 1050. The cathedral, a magnificent structure, 200 feet in length, is still standing. It is seated between two hills, on the river Creddy, 9 miles N. W. of Exeter, and 181 W. by N. of London. Market on Saturday.

CRE'DITOR, s. [from credo, to believe, Lat.] one who lets another have any thing on trust; one to whom a debt is owing. In book-keeping, that side of an account wherein all things are delivered are entered; in the cash-book, it contains a person's payment.

CREDU'LITY, s. [from credo, to believe, Lat.] belief without examining into the truth of the thing asserted to; too great easiness in believing.

CREDU'LOUS, s. [from credo, to believe, Lat.] assenting to any thing proposed as an object of belief, without examining into its truth.

CREDULOUSNESS, s. the quality of believing without examining.

CREED, s. [from credo, Lat.] is a brief summary of the articles of a Christian's belief. There are several ancient forms and scattered remains of creeds to be met with in the records of the primitive church; but the most universal creeds, and those which are allowed by the canons of the church, are the Apostolical, the Athanasian, and Nicene creeds. Any solemn profession of principles and opinion. "There's my creed." Shak.

To CREEK, v. a. [krecke, Belg.] to make a harsh noise.

CREEK, s. [creeca, Sax.] in geography, a part of the sea which runs into the land; a port or bay; a prominence, or jutting, in a winding coast.

CRE'EKY, a. full of creeks and windings.

To CREEP, v. n. preter. crept; [crypan, Sax.] to move with the belly on the ground, applied to reptiles or animals which have no legs, such as worms and serpents. Figuratively, to grow on the ground, or upon supporters, applied to vegetables. To move slowly; to move unperceived into any place; to come unexpected, or steal out of a place unperceived and unheard; to behave with abjectness, or meanness of spirit.

CRE'EPER, s. a plant which runs along the ground, or supports itself by means of some stronger body; a kind of small bird, whose manners resemble those of the woodpecker; an iron used to slide along the grate in kitchens; a grappling iron employed in bringing up drowned persons, or other objects from the bottom of the water; a kind of patten or clog worn by women in dirty weather.

CRE'EPHOLE, s. a hole or cavity into which an animal may retire to escape danger. Figuratively, an excuse; means devised to escape shame, or elude the force of law.

CRE'EPINGLY, ad. in a slow motion; after the manner of a reptile.

CRE'MA, the capital of Cremasco, a small but fertile territory of Venice, insulated in the Milanese. It is well-built; populous and commercial. Lat. 45. 25. N. lon. 9. 50. E.

CREMATION, s. [crematio, from cremo, to burn, Lat.] a burning.

CREMO'NA, the capital of the Cremonese, a territory of Milan, having Mantua on the E. and the Bressan on the N. The principal streets are broad and straight, and there are some small squares. The country about is fertile, producing wine, fruits, honey, flax, &c. Here is an university, of no great celebrity. It is seated on the Oglio, near the Po, 30 miles N. W. of Parma.

CREMOR, s. [Lat.] a milky substance; a soft liquor resembling cream.

CRE'NATED, a. [from crena, a notch, Lat.] in botany, notched; jagged; or sewed on the edges.

CRE'OLES, a name given to the families descended from the Spaniards who first settled at Mexico in America. These are much more numerous than the Spaniards properly so called, and the Mulattoes, which two other species of inhabitants they distinguish; and are excluded from all considerable employments.

CRE'PANE, s. in farriery, an ulcer in the midst of the fore part of the foot, caused by a bilious, sharp, and biting humour, that frets the skin, or by a hurt given by striking the hinder feet.

To CRE'PITATE, v. n. [crepito, Lat.] to make a small crackling noise.

CREPITA'TION, s. a small crackling noise, as the burning of thorns, parching of peas, &c.

CREPT, the participle of creep.

CREPU'SCULE, s. [crepusculum, Lat.] in astronomy, the twilight.

CREPU'SCULOUS, a. [from crepusculum, Lat.] glimmering; in a state between light and darkness.

CRE'SCENT, a. [crescens, from cresco, to grow, Lat.] growing; increasing; in a state of increase.

CRE'SCENT, s. the moon in her state of increase. In heraldry, it is a bearing in form of a new moon; and is used either as an honourable bearing, or as a distinction between elder and younger families; being generally assigned to the second son, and his descendants.

CRESS, s. [plural cresses, perhaps from cresco, Lat. on account of its quick growth] a herb used for salad, or eat raw, of which there are several sorts; the garden cress and the water cress are the most known.

CRE'SSET, s. [from croisette, Fr.] a great light set on a light-house, or watch-tower; a beacon.

CREST, s. [crista, Lat.] in armoury, the top part of the armour for the head, mounting over the helmet in manner of a comb, or tuft of a cock, deriving its name from crista, a cock's comb, and was for the most part made of feathers, or the hair of horses' tails. In heraldry, the uppermost part of an armoury, or that part of the casque or helmet next to the mantle. The crest is deemed a greater mark of nobility than the armoury; being borne at tournaments, to which none were admitted, till they had given good proof of their nobility. Figuratively, pride, spirit, or courage.

CRE'STED, a. [from crista, a crest, Lat.] adorned with a plume or crest; having a tuft or comb on the head. In botany, flowers furnished with a tuft or crest, as in the common milk-wort.

CRE'ST-FALLEN, a. dispirited; coward; in a state of dejection.

CRE'STLESS, a. in heraldry, not honoured with coat-armoury; or of a noble or honoured family.

CRETA'CEOUS, (kretáceous) a. [from creta, chalk, Lat.] chalky; abounding with having the quality of chalk.

CRE'VICE, s. [from crever, Fr.] a narrow opening made in a thing by its cracking, generally applied to walls or wainscots.

CREW, s. [probably from crud, Sax.] formerly a company met together for any purpose. At present applied to a ship's company; or used to signify a company of contemptible persons, or such as herd together with some bad design.

CRE'WEL, s. [klewel, Belg.] fine worsted or yarn twisted and made up in a knot or ball.

CRE'WKERNE, a town of Somersetshire, containing about 3000 inhabitants. Here are some manufactures of dowlas, sail-cloth, gut-web, and stockings. It is seated on a branch of the Parret, on the confines of Dorsetshire, 132 miles W. by S. of London. Market on Saturday.

CRIB, s. [Teut. crybbe, Sax.] the rack in a stable. Figuratively, the stall of an ox; a small habitation or hut. The cards which each party lay out of their hands, and are reckoned for the benefit of the dealer at the game of cribbage.

CRI'BBAGE, s. a game at cards, wherein the players endeavour to make pairs, sequents, pairs royal, and one and thirty at playing, and to hold in their hands as many fifteens, pairs, and sequents, as they can.

CRI'BBLE, s. [cribrum, Lat.] a corn-sieve.

CRICKEITH, a town in Carnarvonshire, whose market is on Wednesday. It is 236 miles from London.

CRICK, s. [cricco, Ital.] the noise made by a door when its hinges are rusty, or want oiling; a painful stiffness in the neck, from cryce, Sax.

CRI'CKET, s. an insect which frequents fire-places or ovens, and is remarkable for a continual chirping or creaking noise; a game which is played with a bat and ball.

CRICKHO'WEL, a town of Brecknockshire, much resorted to by invalids for the purpose of drinking goat's milk and whey. Here are the ruins of a castle, which appears to have been formerly a place of considerable strength. It is seated on the river Usk, 13 miles E. by S. of Brecknock. Market on Thursday.

CRI'CKLADE, a town of Wilts, containing about 250 houses. It is seated on the Thames, (and the Thames and Severn Canal now comes up to the town,) 25 miles S. W. of Oxford, and 83 W. of London. Market on Saturday.

CRIER, s. a person authorised to proclaim things that are lost, or those which are to be sold.

CRIM-TA'RTARY, or CRIMEA, a peninsula of Asia, bounded on the N. by part of the district of Taurida, (a division of the Russian government of Ekaterinoslav,) and on the other parts by the Black Sea and the Sea of Asoph. It is divided into two parts by mountains which run E. and W. The N. division is fit for pasturage only; in the S. part the valleys are remarkably fertile, and the climate extremely mild. The lower hills, extending from Theodosia to the E. extremity of the country, are principally used in gardening, and produce excellent fruit. The Tartars are short and squat, with swarthy complexions, pig's eyes, square and flat faces; their hair is black, and as strong as horse hair, with very little beards. Their shirts and drawers are cotton cloth, and over them they have cloaks of felt, or sheep-skins. The women are too much like their husbands to be handsome; however, the men usually make use of the slaves which they steal from their neighbours; and are continually roving from one place to another. The Tartar inhabitants are estimated at 70,000. Achmetsted was made the capital in 1785. Besides the ports of Kerth and Jenikale, the road of Caffa, and the harbour of Baluclava, there is, near Sebastapol, one of the most capacious and secure harbours in the world. This country is in some maps called Tauriea, from its having been the ancient Taurica Chersonesus.

CRIME, s. [crimen, Lat.] a voluntary breach of any known law; an offence. SYNON. Faults result from human weakness, being transgressions of the rules of duty. Crimes proceed from the wickedness of the heart, being actions against the rules of nature.

CRI'MINAL, a. [criminalis, from crimen, a crime, Lat.] contrary to any known law. Figuratively, faulty; worthy of blame; guilty; subject to some punishment on account of the violation of a law. In law, that which is opposed to civil.

CRI'MINAL, s. a person who is accused of a voluntary breach of a known law; a person who has knowingly and wilfully acted contrary to any law.

CRI'MINALLY, ad. in a manner inconsistent with innocence; in a manner which implies guilt, or the wilful breach of some law; in a manner which deserves blame or punishment.

CRIMINATION, s. [criminatio, from crimen, a crime, Lat.] the act of accusing a person of the breach of some law.

CRIMINOUS, a. [from crimen, a crime, Lat.] enormously guilty; iniquitous.

CRIMP, a. [from crimble or crumble] easily broken; crumbling with dryness; easily reduced to powder. Figuratively, not consistent; not of any force. A low word.

To CRIMPLE, v. a. [from rumple, crumple, or crimple] to to draw together in wrinkles.

CRIMSON, s. [crimosino, Ital.] a deep red colour, mixed with an appearance of blue. Figuratively, in poetical language, used for a dark, or any degree of a red colour.

To CRIMSON, v. a. to dye or colour with red or crimson.

CRINCUM, s. [a cant word] a cramp; whimsy.

CRINGE, s. a low bow, carrying with it the idea of fawning and mean servility.

To CRINGE, v. a. [kriechen, Teut.] to form into wrinkles, or uncouth appearances. Neuterly, to behave in a mean, servile, complaisant manner, in order to gain a person's favour, or avert his anger; to fawn.

CRINIGEROUS, a. [from crinis, hair, and gero, to carry, Lat.] hairy; overgrown with hair.

To CRINKLE, v. n. [krinckelen, Belg.] to go in and out; to wrinkle. Actively, to draw a thing into wrinkles; to make the surface of a thing uneven.

CRINKLE, s. a wrinkle.

CRINOSE, a. [from crinis, hair, Lat.] hairy.

CRINOSITY, s. [from crinis, hair, Lat.] the quality of abounding in hair; hairiness.

CRIPPLE, s. [crypel, Sax.] a person who has not the use of his limbs, especially his legs.

To CRIPPLE, v. a. to make lame, or deprive a person of the use of his limbs.

CRIPPLENESS, s. the state of a person who is lame, or has not the use of his limbs.

CRISIS, s. [krisis, Gr.] in medicine, a change in a disorder, which either determines a patient's death or recovery. Figuratively, in politics, a period of time wherein an undertaking is arrived at its greatest height; any particular period of time.

CRISP, a. [crispus, Lat.] curled, indented, winding. Dry, brittle, or easily broken.

To CRISP, v. a. [crispo, Lat.] to curl, or form a thing into a ring; to twist. Neuterly, to run in and out. To make a thing easy to be broken by frying or drying it.

CRISPING-PIN, s. a curling iron.

CRISPNESS, s. the quality of a thing curled; easiness to be broken, owing to dryness. In cookery, the brittleness of a thing, owing to the hard incrustation formed by a brisk fire.

CRISPY, a. curled. In cookery, brown and brittle.

CRITERION, s. (kriterion, from krino, to judge, Gr.] a standard by which the goodness or badness of a thing may be measured or judged.

CRITIC, s. kritikos, from krino, to judge, Gr.] a person formed by nature, and qualified by art, to point out the perfection and imperfection of any of the productions in the arts or sciences; one who is employed in distinguishing the beauties or defects of an author. Figuratively, a censurer, or a person apt to find fault either with the writings or actions of another.

CRITIC, a. belonging to criticism; or the art of judging of the performances of an author.

CRITIC, (by some spelt critique, and then pron. kreeteek) s. [critique, Fr.] an examination or comment on the works of an author, wherein both taste and learning are used as guides; a criticism; the art of criticism.

CRITICAL, a. able to distinguish the beauties and defects of any production; nice, exact, accurate; with all the judgment and care of a critic; after the manner of a critic; according to the rules of criticism. Captious; inclined to find fault; censorious. In medicine and politics, that in which some crisis or important change happens.

CRITICALLY, ad. in a critical manner; in such a manner as to discover beauties or defects; exactly; curiously.

CRITICALNESS, s. exactness, nicety, accuracy; the act of exercising the judgment, in order to discern the faults or perfections of any production.

To CRITICISE, (kriticize) v. a. to write remarks, or point out the beauties and defects of any production. Figuratively, to find fault with. Actively, to censure, blame, or find fault with.

CRITICISM, s. the art or standard of judging well of the merits or demerits of any production. Figuratively, remark or observation made by a critic.

To CROAK, (krōk) v. n. [cracezzan, Sax.] to make a hoarse noise, applied to that made by a frog or raven. —Figuratively, to caw, to cry, or make a disagreeable murmur.

CROAK, (krōk) s. the noise made by a frog, raven, or crow.

CROATIA, a country of Europe, bounded on the N. by Hungary; on the E. and S. E. by Hungary and Sclavonia; on the S. by Sclavonia and Bosnia; on the W. by Morlachia. The Austrian Croatia is about 130 miles in length, and from 40 to 60 in breadth. The Turkish Croatia is about 40 miles long and 20 wide. In the middle ages they had kings of their own, but in the 11th century, Croatia and Dalmatia devolved to the king of Hungary.

CROCEOUS, a. [from crocus, saffron, Lat.] consisting of, or resembling saffron; yellow, or of a saffron colour.

CROCHES, s. little buds upon the top of a deer's horn.

CROCK, s. [krwick, Belg.] a cup or earthen vessel; a pot to boil victuals in. Figuratively, the smut occasioned by rubbing the outside of a pot against any thing.

CROCKERY, s. [from krwick, Belg.] earthenware.

CROCODILE, s. [krokodeilos, from krokos, saffron, and deilos, timorous, Gr.] an amphibious voracious animal, in shape resembling a lizard, and found in Egypt and the Indies. It is covered with very hard scales, which cannot without great difficulty be pierced; except under the belly, where the skin is tender. It has a wide mouth, with several rows of teeth, sharp and separated, which enter one another. It runs with great swiftness; but does not easily turn itself. It is long lived, and is said to grow continually to its death. Some are ten or twelve yards long. Crocodiles lay their eggs, resembling goose eggs, sometimes amounting to sixty, near the water side; covering them with the sand, that the heat of the sun may hatch them.

CROCODILINE, a. [crŏcŏdīlīnus, Lat.] resembling a crocodile.

CROCUS, s. a plant, of which there are two kinds, the vernal and autumnal; the summits of the pointal of the latter species, with narrow leaves rolled back at the edges, are the saffron of the shops. In chemistry, it denotes any metal calcined to a red or deep yellow colour.

CROFT, s. [croft, Sax.] a little close joining to a house, used either for corn or pasture.

CROISADE, or CROISADO, s. [from croix, cross, Fr.] a holy war; a name given to the expeditions of the Christians against the infidels, for the recovery of Palestine; so called because those who were engaged in them wore a cross on their clothes, and bore one on their standard. Several circumstances contributed to give rise to the croisades, such as a desire of visiting Palestine, an opinion that the end of the world was approaching, and the hardships which were suffered by pilgrims in the Holy Land, after the Turks had taken that country from the Saracens. The first croisade began in 1095, being instigated principally by Peter the hermit. The next year 800,000 croisaders invaded Palestine, and in a little time gained considerable advantages. They were however expelled by the Turks in the thirteenth century, after which no advantages remained from these ill-conducted expeditions, but their having contributed to civilize Europe.

CROISES, s. [croisés, Fr.] pilgrims bound for the Holy Land, or those who have been already there.

CROMACK WATER, a romantic lake of Cumberland, on the Cocker, between Buttermere and Lowes Water. It is 1 miles in length, nearly half a mile in breadth, in some places very deep, and contains 3 little islands, one of which is a rock.

CROMARTY, a tolerable fertile, and, of late years, well-cultivated county of Scotland, comprehending part of a peninsula on the south coast of the Frith, to which it gives name. On the S. and W. it is bounded by Ross-shire; and on the E. by the Frith of Murray. It is 12 miles long from E. to W. and about 3 miles in its greatest breadth. Its capital of the same name, has a manufacture of hempen cloth, which employs about 200 persons, and a considerable coasting trade in corn, thread, yarn, fish, and skins. It it situated at or near the entrance of the Frith of Cromarty, the most safe, extensive, and commodious bay, or harbour, of Scotland, and one of the finest in Europe, or the world. This truly excellent, but much neglected harbour, the Portas Salutis of the Romans, is about 22 miles in length, and in some parts 4 in breadth; the entrance is narrow and bold, being formed by two huge lofty rocks, which project into the sea till they approach within a mile of each other, and, therefore, defend this fine bay completely from winds and storms. These rocky promontories, or islands, thus approaching each other, and having also, a similar appearance, are called by the natives, The sooters of Cromarty, which, in the Scottish language, means wooers, or lovers. Such, in fact, is the vast extent of sea-room in this bay, and such its length, depth, and breadth, that almost the whole British navy might ride with safety within it; and the state of the shore, or anchorage ground, on both sides, for several miles up, is so favourable and smooth, that were a vessel driven from her cables and cast ashore, there would be little or no damage incurred. In violent easterly winds, when no vessel can venture to look into any port of the east coast of Scotland, from the Frith of Forth northwards, all vessels, thus situated, flock into this bay. It will appear of still greater importance, when it is known, that from Wick, in Caithness, to this frith, a distance of 60 miles, the shore is bold, rocky, and utterly inaccessible to sea-vessels of any size, the waters of Dornoch excepted; which, however, are of no great utility to navigation, by reason of shallows and quicksands.

CROMER, a town of Norfolk, with a market on Saturday. It is seated near the sea-side, and was formerly more considerable than it is at present; for it had two churches, one of which, with several houses, were swallowed up by the sea. The inhabitants are now chiefly fishermen. It has been of late much resorted to as a watering-place. It is 22 miles N. of Norwich, and 127 N. E. of London.

CROMWELL, (OLIVER) was the son of Mr. Robert Cromwell, who was the second son of Sir Henry Cromwell, of Hinchingbrooke, in the county of Huntingdon, by Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Richard Stewart of the Isle of Ely, knight. He was born in the parish of St. John, in the ancient borough of Huntingdon, on April 24 or 25, in 1599, in the 41st year of the reign of Q. Elizabeth. He was sent to school under the care of Dr. Thomas Beard, master of the free-school at Huntingdon. He from thence removed to Sidney college in Cambridge, where he was admitted April 23, in 1616, under the tuition of Mr. Richard Howlet, who, by a strict attention to his pupil's disposition very quickly discovered, that he was less addicted to speculation than to action. His father dying, he returned home, where his conduct was far enough from being regular, insomuch that it gave his mother, who was a notable and prudent woman, much uneasiness. She was advised by some near relations to send him up to London, and to place him in Lincoln's inn, which she accordingly did, but without any extraordinary effects, since it only served to bring him acquainted with the vices of the town, by way of addition to those to which he had been addicted in the country. It does not at all appear that he applied himself to the study of the law, which was what his friends aimed at; on the contrary, he continued to pursue his pleasures, and gave himself up to wine, women, and play; in which last, though he was sometimes fortunate, yet, taking all his expenses together, they so much exceeded his income, that he quickly dissipated all that his father left him. But after a few years spent in this manner, he saw plainly the consequence of his follies, renounced them suddenly, and began to lead a very grave and sober life, and entered into a close friendship with several eminent divines, who looked upon his reformation as very extraordinary, and spoke of him as a man of sense and great abilities. As he was nearly related to Mr. Hampden of Buckinghamshire, to the Barringtons of Essex, and other considerable families, they interested themselves in his favour, and were very desirous of seeing him settled in the world; in order to which, a marriage was proposed, which soon after took effect. The lady he married was Elizabeth, daughter of Sir James Bouchier, of Essex, knight, a woman of spirit and parts, and being descended from an ancient family, did not want a considerable portion of pride. Mr. Cromwell soon after returned to his own country, and settled at Huntingdon, till the death of his uncle Sir Thomas Stuart, who left an estate of between 4 and 500£. a year, induced him to remove into the Isle of Ely. It was about this time that he began to converse mostly with them that were then styled Puritans, and by degrees affected their notions with great warmth and violence. He was elected a member of the third parliament in the reign of Charles I. which met Jan. 20, in 1628, and was of the committee for religion, where he distinguished himself by his zeal against popery, and by complaining of Dr. Neile, then bishop of Winchester, licensing books which had a very dangerous tendency. After the dissolution of that parliament, he returned again into the country, where he continued to express much concern for religion, to frequent silenced ministers, and to invite them often to lectures and sermons at his house, by which he again brought his affairs into a very indifferent situation; so that he judged it necessary to try what industry might do towards repairing these breaches, which led him to take a farm at St. Ives, and this he kept about five years; though indeed, instead of repairing, it helped to run out the rest of his fortune. He had prayers in the morning and afternoon, and he gave public notice that he was ready to make restitution to any from whom he had won money at play; and he actually did return 30£. to Mr. Calton, from whom he won it several years before. When the earl of Bedford, and some other persons of high distinction, who had estates in Lincolnshire, were desirous of having the fens drained, Cromwell violently opposed it, which gave occasion to Mr. Hampden to recommend him to his friends in parliament as a person capable of conducting great things. He had the address to get himself chosen for Cambridge, a place in which he was not known, and was very zealous in promoting the remonstrance which was carried on Nov. 14, 1641, which laid the basis of the civil war. In 1642 Mr. Cromwell raised a troop of horse, which he commanded, by virtue of a commission from the earl of Essex, and acted very vigorously, so that he was promoted to the rank of colonel, and had 1000 horse under his command, and was some time afterwards lieutenant-general of the horse. In the battle of Marston-Moor, July 3, 1644, it was universally allowed that his cavalry had the greatest share in gaining the battle. In the winter, when the parliament sat, Cromwell and his friends carried what was then called the self-denying ordinance, that excluded the members of either house from having any commands in the army; however, Cromwell was at first occasionally, and at last absolutely exempted. Upon the introduction of the new model, as it was called, the chief command of the army was given to Sir Thomas Fairfax; and from being lieutenant-general of horse, Cromwell became lieutenant-general of the army, of which, while another had the title, he seems to have had the direction

In 1646 the earl of Essex died suddenly; and Cromwell turned his thoughts entirely to make the army the supreme power, which he accordingly effected, and turned out those members of the house who would not act by his direction. As to the circumstance of the beheading the king, and the public transactions of those times, they are so well known, that I shall pass them slightly over. Cromwell had the command of the forces of Ireland, and the title of Lord Lieutenant was bestowed upon him; and by the month of June 1650; all Ireland was in a manner subdued, and that in so short a space as nine months. He left Ireton, his deputy there, and came over to England. On June 26, 1650, he was appointed general and commander in chief of all the forces of the commonwealth, and set out on his march against the Scots, who had received Charles II. On September 3, 1651, he totally defeated the king's forces at Worcester; he then came up to London, and was congratulated by the house of commons, the council of state, the lord mayor, &c. On the 19th of April, 1653, he called a council of officers, to debate about the government; while they were sitting, colonel Ingolby came and informed them, that the parliament had framed a bill to continue themselves till Nov. 5, in the next year, proposing to fill up the house by new elections; whereupon the general marched directly to Westminster, with about 300 men, placed his soldiers about the house, entered first himself, and after staying sometime talking to them, he ordered the soldiers to see the house clear of all members, and having caused the doors to be locked up, went away to Whitehall. On December 16, the same year, Cromwell was invested in the court of Chancery in Westminster hall, with great solemnity, with the title of Protector of the Commonwealth of England, Scotland, and Ireland, being then in the 54 year of his age. He applied himself immediately to the settling of public affairs, both foreign and domestic, and concluded a peace with the states of Holland, in which Denmark was included. He also made peace with Sweden, and both France and Spain contended so earnestly for his friendship, that they made themselves ridiculous. As to domestic affairs, he filled the courts of Westminster with able judges, professed an unalterable resolution of maintaining liberty of conscience, and dismissed from their commands such officers as he could not confide in. He gave the command of all the forces in Scotland to general Monk, and sent his own son Henry to govern Ireland. He, by an ordinance datad April 12, 1654, united England and Scotland, fixing the number of representatives for the latter at thirty, and soon after he did the same by Ireland. He shewed a great regard to justice, in causing the brother of the ambassador from Portugal to be executed for murder. He called a parliament to meet on Sept. 3, which was accordingly opened on that day, to which the protector went in great state. He received the house of commons in the painted chamber, where he made them a very long speech. When they came to their house, after electing Mr. William Lenthall their speaker, they fell to debating whether the supreme legislative power of the kingdom should be in a single person or a parliament. This so alarmed the protector, that on the 12th of the same month, he caused a guard to be set at the painted chamber, where he gave them a sharp reproof, and none were permitted to go into the house afterward before they had taken an oath to be faithful to the protector and his government. The protector finding this parliament would give him no money, and that they were about to take away his power, dissolved them. He restored to the city their militia. This year, 1655, there were some conspiracies, for which several persons suffered death, and the protector from henceforth made no difficulty of supporting his authority, in any manner, and by any means. In the spring of this year he sent a powerful fleet under the command of admiral Penn, and a great body of land forces, commanded by general Venables, in hopes to make himself master of great part of the Spanish West-Indies; and though they failed in their main design, yet they made themselves masters of Jamaica, and admiral Blake did great things in the Mediterranean; so that the protector's reputation was very high abroad. Writs were issued out for the parliament to meet Sept. 17, 1656, at which time they met accordingly, but there was a guard posted at the door of the house, who suffered none to enter till they had swallowed the oaths that were ready prepared for them; by which 200 were excluded. In the spring of the year 1657, a kind of legislative government was brought upon the carpet, and it was agreed to offer Cromwell the title of king. Finding it disagreeable to his best friends, he told them he could not, with a good conscience, accept the title of king; but his highness resolved upon a new inauguration, which was accordingly, with great solemnity, performed, June 26, 1657, in Westminster hall, with all the splendour of a coronation. On Jan. 20, 1658, the commons met as the other house also did, pursuant to the writs of summons issued by the lord protector; and all shew of force was withdrawn; but the two houses being at variance, the protector dissolved them Feb. 4, with great bitterness of speech, and deep sorrow of heart. This year Dunkirk, which was taken chiefly by the valour of the English, was delivered into the hands of Lockhart his ambassador. His favourite daughter, Mrs. Claypole, was about this time taken ill, and died Aug. 6. He was from that time wholly altered, grew daily more reserved and suspicious, not indeed without reason; for he found a general discontent prevail through the nation. At Hampton-court he fell into a kind of slow fever, which soon degenerated into a tertian ague. Being removed to London, he became much worse, grew first lethargic, then delirious, from which he recovered a little, but was not capable of giving any distinct directions about public affairs. He died Sept. 3, 1658, in the 60th year of his age. A very pompous funeral was ordered at the public expense, and performed from Somerset house with a splendour superior to any that has been bestowed upon crowned heads. The protector had several children, of whom six survived to be men and women, viz. two sons and four daughters. 1. Richard Cromwell, born October, 1626, and died July 13, 1712, at Cheshunt in Hertfordshire; 2. Henry Cromwell, born Jan. 20, 1627, died March 25, 1674. 3. Bridget, who first married commissary-general Ireton, and after his decease lieutenant-general Fleetwood. 4 Elizabeth, born 1650; she married John Claypole, esq. a Northamptonshire gentleman, whom the protector made master of the horse, created him a baronet, July 16, 1657, and appointed him one of his lords. 5. Mary, who was married to the Lord Viscount Fauconberg, Nov. 18, 1657, who was raised to the dignity of an earl by king William, and died on the last day of the year 1700. 6. Frances, his youngest daughter, was twice married, first to Mr. Robert Rich, grandson to the earl of Warwick, Nov. 11, 1657, who died the 16th of February following. She afterwards married Sir John Russel, of Chippenham in Cambridgeshire; by whom she left several children, and lived to a great age.

CRONBORG, a fortress of Zealand, situated on a point of land, on the W. coast of the Sound, a little E. of Elsinore, and opposite to Helsingborg, in Sweden. The late unfortunate queen Matilda was imprisoned here, before she was removed to Zell. Adjoining to a palace, about half a mile from Cronborg, is a garden called Hamlet's Garden, supposed to be the spot where the murder of that king was committed.

CRONE, s. [kronie, Belg.] an old ewe. Figuratively, an old woman.

CRONET, s. in farriery, the hair which grows over the top of a horse's hoof.

CRONSTADT, a town and fortress of Russia, situated on the island of Retusari, on the E. of the Gulf of Finland, 12 miles W. of Petersburg. Its harbour is the station of the Russian fleet, having great magazines of naval stores, and numerous docks and yards for building and careening ships of the line. It was founded by Peter I. improved by his daughter Elizabeth, and completed by the late empress. The number of inhabitants is about 6000. Lat. 59. 58. N. lon. 29. 56. E.

CRONY, s. an old and very intimate acquaintance or confidant. A cant word.

CROOK, s. [croc, Fr.] any thing bent; a sheephook; a meander or winding.

To CROOK, v. a. [crocher, Fr.] to bend, to turn any thing so as to resemble a hook.

CROO'KBACK, s. a term of reproach for a man that has gibbous shoulders.

CROO'KED, a. [crochê, Fr.] bent, opposed to straight; formed into an angle or hook; winding. Figuratively, perverse or bad. SYNON. By crooked, is understood any deviation from natural straightness. Deformed implies any part of the body being imperfect or unnatural. Thus a man is crooked if any ways twisted or bent from the natural shape, and deformed if he has an eye, a finger, or a toe, too little or too much.

CROO'KEDLY, ad. not straight; in an untoward, perverse, or uncomplying manner.

CROO'KEDNESS, s. the bending of a body. Figuratively, a deformity of the body, arising from any of its limbs being distorted or out of shape. Applied to the mind or temper, perversity, or a disposition which is not easily pleased.

CROO'KHORN, a town of Somersetshire, with a market on Saturday. It is seated on a branch of the river Parret, on the confines of Dorsetshire, and the market is good for corn, sheep, &c. It is 132 miles W. by S. of London.

CROP, s. [crop, Sax.] the craw, or first stomach of birds, wherein their food is prepared for digestion.

CROP, s. [croppa, Sax.] the highest part, end, or top of a thing. Figuratively, corn collected in a harvest; the product of a field; any thing cut off.

To CROP, v. a. to cut off the tops or ends of any thing; to mow, reap, or lop. Figuratively, to shorten or consume in eating. Neuterly, to yield a harvest.

CRO'PFUL, a. filled; satiated with food.

CRO'PPER, s. in natural history, a kind or pigeon, remarkable for swelling its crop.

CRO'PSICK a. sick, or disordered by intemperate eating or drinking.

CRO'SCOMB, a town of Somersetshire, near Wells; some cloth is made here: but the chief manufacture is that of stockings. Market is on Tuesday.

CRO'SIER, (krozier) s. [croisor, Fr.] the pastoral staff of a bishop, so called from its having a cross on the top.

CRO'SLET, s. [croisselet, Fr.] a small cross.

CROSS, s. [croix, Fr.] an instrument made of two pieces of wood, cutting or crossing each other at right angles, on which malefactors were executed among the Romans. The sign made by the priest on the forehead of a person when baptized, by drawing two marks, which cross each other, with his fingers dipped in water; one line drawn athwart another. Figuratively, any thing which is contrary to a person's wishes, and is a trial of his patience.

CROSS, a. that falls athwart. Figuratively, opposite to a person's wishes and expectations; perverse; not complying; peevish; displeased with trifles; not easily persuaded; reciprocal on each side; interchanging.

CROSS, prep. athwart, so as to intersect from one side to another. In riding, so as to have one leg on each side of a horse. "Cross his back."

To CROSS, v. a. to lay one line so as to form angles with another; to sign with a cross: to mark or conceal; to go over a river. Figuratively, to oppose the designs of another, and thereby render him peevish; to contradict; to debar; to preclude.

CROSS-BAR-SHOT, s. a round shot or bullet with a bar put through it.

CRO'SSBILL, s. in Chancery, is an original bill, by which the defendant prays relief against the plaintiff.

CRO'SSBITE, s. a cheat which frustrates a person's designs; a deception.

CRO'SSBOW, s. an engine or instrument made of a bow fixed across a piece of wood, used in shooting deer, pigeons, &c. It will carry a bullet a considerable distance, and do execution.

To CROSS-EXA'MINE, v. a. to try the faith of evidence by captious questions of the contrary party.

CRO'SSGRAINED, a. in joinery, applied to wood, from whence a bough or branch has shot out, the grain of the branch shooting forward, and crossing that of the trunk. Figuratively, hard to please; peevish; perverse; troublesome; vexatious.

CRO'SSLY, ad. athwart, so as to intersect or form angles. Figuratively, opposite, contrary, untowardly.

CRO'SSNESS, s. transverseness; intersection; perverseness; peevishness.

CRO'SSROW, s. the alphabet; so named from a cross being placed at the beginning of it.

CLO'SS-STAFF, s. an instrument used by seamen to take the meridian altitude of the sun or stars, called likewise a fore-staff.

CRO'SSWIND, s. a wind blowing either from the right or left across a ship's way.

CRO'SSWAY, s. a small path intersecting a main road.

CRO'SS-WORT, s a plant called also mugweed, found on ditch-banks, and flowers in May and June.

CRO'TCH, s. [croc, Fr.] a hook or fork.

CRO'TCHET, [crochet, Fr.] in Music, one of the notes and marks of time, so called from its resembling a hook, thus ♩; it is equal to half a minim or double quaver. In Printing, two opposite lines, serving to include any sentence or word that may be left out, without spoiling the sense of a period, marked [thus.] In Building, a support, or piece of wood fitted into another to sustain it. Figuratively, a fancy, odd conceit, or device.

To CROUCH, v. n. [crocher, Fr.] to stoop low, applied to the posture of beasts, when they bend their legs, and approach with their bellies towards the ground, in testimony of obedience and submission. Figuratively, to bend or stoop to a person in a fawning and servile manner.

CROUP, (krŭp) s. [croupe, Fr.] the rump of a fowl; the buttocks of a horse. Also, a disease of the throat, a species of quinsy.

CROUPADES, s. in farriery, higher leaps than those of corvets, that keep the fore and hind quarters of a horse in an equal height, so that he trusses his legs under his belly without yerking.

CROUTE, s. a preparation of cabbage much used on ship-board, and esteemed a preservative against the sea-scurvy.

CROW, (krō) s. [crawe, Sax.] a black bird of the carnivorous kind, or feeding on carrion. To pluck a crow, is to contend with a person. Sometimes it is used for a contention about some worthless thing, or trifling subject. In mechanics, a strong iron bar, used as a lever to lift up the ends of great heavy timber, force open doors, &c. The noise made by a cock. PROV. The crow thinks her own bird the fairest. So the Ethiopians are said to paint the devil white. Every one is partial to, and well conceited of his own art, his own compositions, his own children, his own country, &c.

To CROW, (krō) v. n. preter. I crew, crowed, or have crowed; [crawan, Sax.] to make a loud shrill noise, applied to that made by a cock. Figuratively, to boast, bully, or assume a superiority over another.

CRO'WBERRY, s. a small drooping shrub with trailing stems, and black berries, called also crakeberries. It is found on boggy heaths and mountains, and flowers in April and May. The berries when boiled with alum, afford a dark purple dye.

CROWD, s. [cruth, Sax.] a great number of people squeezed or close together: a great number of any thing of the same sort adjacent to each other. Figuratively, the vulgar or lower sort of people. Also a fiddle.

To CROWD, v. a. to fill a place with a great and confused multitude of people; to force a great many things in a confused manner into the same place; to press close to gether; to incumber, or oppress by multitudes. In the marine, to crowd sail, is to spread all the sails wide upon the yard for the sake of expedition, or quickening the motion of a ship. Neuterly, to go in great multitudes; to thrust among a multitude of others.

CROWDER, s. a fiddler. A low word.

CROWFOOT, s. in botany, the ranunculus, of which there are twelve species found native in England. In war, a caltrop, a piece of iron, with four points, two, three, or four inches long, used for incommoding the cavalry.

CROWLAND, a town of Lincolnshire, in the Fens, approachable only by narrow causeways. It has three streets separated from each other by water-courses, whose banks are supported by piles, and set with willow-trees. The chief trade is in fish and wild fowl, which are in great plenty in the adjacent pools and marshes. It was formerly celebrated for its abbey of black monks, a noble structure, founded by Ethelbald, king of Mercia, of which nothing now remains except the N. aisle, which is used as the parish church. It is seated on an island of the same name, (called Crowland, from its soil, cruda terra, which signifies raw, or muddy land,) 11 miles N. of Peterborough, and 39 N. by W. of London. Market on Saturday.

CROWN, s. [corona, Lat.] an ornament worn on the head by kings, princes, and noblemen, as a mark of their dignity. It was at first only a fillet tied round the head, but was afterwards made of leaves and flowers and rich stuffs, and sometimes ornamented with jewels of great value. The Jewish high-priest wore a crown, which was girt about his mitre, on the lower part of his bonnet. The Romans had various kinds of crowns, which they bestowed as rewards of military merit; as, 1. The oval crown, bestowed on generals who were entitled to the honours of the lesser triumph, called ovation. 2. The naval, or rostral crown, composed of a circle of gold, with ornaments, representing beaks of ships, and given to the captain who first grappled, or the soldiers who first boarded an enemy's ship. 3. The corona villaris, or castrensis, was a circle of gold raised with jewels or pallisades; the reward of him who first entered the enemy's entrenchments. 4. The mural crown, a circle of gold indented and embattled; given to him who first mounted the wall of a besieged place, and there planted a standard. 5. The civic crown, made of the branch of a green oak, and given to him who had saved the life of a citizen. 6. The triumphal crown, consisting at first of the leaves of laurel, but afterwards made of gold, for those generals who had the honour of a triumph. 7. The crown called obsidionalis, or graminea, made of grass growing on the place; the reward of a general who had delivered a Roman army from a siege. 8. The crown of laurel, given by the Greeks to their athletæ, and by the Romans, to those who had negotiated or concluded a peace with an enemy. They had likewise other crowns for those who excelled as poets, orators, &c. The crowns were marks of nobility to the wearers; and, upon competitions for ranks and dignity, often determined the preference in their favour. The Roman emperors had four kinds of crowns, still seen on medals, viz. a crown of laurel, a radiating crown, a crown adorned with pearls and precious stones; and the fourth a kind of bonnet or cap, something like the mortier. The papal crown, is composed of a cap or tiara, enclosed by three marquisses' coronets, having two pendants, like the bishops' mitres; and on its top a mound of gold; these three crowns represent the pretended triple capacity of the pope, viz. as high-priest, supreme judge, and sole legislator of the Christians. The imperial crown is a bonnet or tiara, voided at the top like a crescent, with a circle of gold adorned with precious stones and pearls, heightened with fleurs-de-lis, supporting a globe with a cross at the top. The English crown, is adorned with four crosses, in the manner of those of Malta; between which are fleurs-de-lis. It is covered with four diadems, which meet at a little globe supporting a cross. The French crown is a circle, enamelled, of eight fleurs-de-lis, encompassed with eight arched diadems; bearing a-top a double fleur-de-lis, which is the crest of France. The Spanish crown is adorned with large indented leaves, covered with diadems; bordering on a globe, surmounted with a cross. Those of Portugal, Poland, Denmark, and Sweden, are of the same form. The crowns of most other kings are circles of gold, adorned with precious stones, and heightened up with large trefoils, and closed by four, six, or eight diadems, supporting a mound, surmounted with a cross. The great Turk bears over his arms a turband, enriched with pearls and diadems under two coronets, the first of which is made of pyramidal points, heightened up with large pearls, and the uppermost is surrounded with crescents. The crown of the Prince of Wales consists of one arch adorned with pearls; in the middle of which is a ball and cross, and bordered with ermine, as in the royal diadem. Besides this, the prince of Wales has another distinguishing mark of honour, viz. a plume of three ostrich feathers, with an ancient coronet of a prince of Wales, with this motto, Ich dien, i. e. I serve. This device was at first taken by Edward, prince of Wales, commonly called the Black Prince, after the battle of Cressy, where having killed John, king of Bohemia, he took from his head such a plume, and put it on his own. That of the younger sons and brothers of the king, consists likewise of a circle of gold, bordered with ermine, and heightened with four crosses and fleurs-de-lis alternately, but without any arch, or being surmounted with a globe and cross on the top. That of the other princes of the blood, consists alternately of crosses and leaves, like those in the coronets of dukes, &c. Those of the princesses have the addition of strawberry-leaves. The coronet of a duke is a circle of gold, bordered with ermine, and enriched with pearls and precious stones, and set round with eight large leaves of parsley, or strawberry. That of a marquiss is set round with four strawberry-leaves, and as many pearls, on pyramidal points of equal height, alternately. An earl's has eight pyramidal points, with as many large pearls on the tops of them, placed alternately with as many strawberry-leaves, lower than the pearls. The viscount has only pearls, without any limited number, placed on the circle itself all around. A baron has only six pearls, set at equal distance, on the golden border of ermine; not raised to distinguish him from the earl, and limited to shew that he is inferior to the viscount. Figuratively, a garland of flowers, &c. worn on the head as a mark of mirth or merit; a reward for some meritorious deed: royalty; a monarchy; the top of any thing, but of the head particularly; that part of a hat or cap which covers the head; a piece of money, valued at five shillings in England; honour; ornament; completion, or accomplishment. For the Naval, Mural, Imperial, English, French, Spanish, and Turkish crowns, with that of the Prince of Wales, see the annexed plate.

To CROWN, v. a. to place a crown on a person's head; to surround the head as with a crown. Figuratively, to dignify or adorn; to perfect; to complete; to finish.

CROWNED, part. in botany, applied to the seeds, that to which the cup of the flower adheres, as in teasel; a seed furnished with a feather, as in dandelion.

CROWN GLASS, s. the finest sort of window-glass.

CROWN-IMPERIAL, s. a plant placed by Linnæus in the first section of his sixth class.

CROWN-OFFICE, s. a court or office under the king's bench, so called because the crown is immediately concerned in what is transacted therein.

CROWNPOST, s. in building, a post which in some buildings stand upright in the middle between two rafters. In architecture, the uppermost member of the cornice, called also corona and larmier.

CROWNS AB, s. a stinking filthy scab, that breeds round about the corners of a horse's hoof, and is a cancerous and painful sore.

CROWN THISTLE, s. a species of thistle found on hilly pastures, with purple or white flowers.

CROWN-WHEEL, s. the upper wheel of a watch next to, and driven by, the balance.

CROWN-WORKS, s. in fortification, an out-work running into the field, in order to gain some hill, and cover the other works of a place, &c.

CROYDON, a town in Surry, the manor of which has belonged, ever since the conquest, to the archbishops of Canterbury, who had a venerable place here, since the year 1278, alienated and sold by authority of parliament, in 1780; and now, or lately, employed for a cotton manufacture. A new one also is to be built, in a more healthy situation, at Park Hill Farm, about half a mile from Croydon. It is situated near the source of the Wandel, 9 miles S. of London. Market on Saturday, chiefly for corn, oats, and oatmeal. Its second fair, Sept. 21, is much frequented by young persons of both sexes from London, for walnuts.

CROYLSTONE, s. in natural history, crystallized caulk, in which the crystals are small.

CRU'CIAL, (krüshial) a. [from crux, a cross, Lat.] in form of a cross. Crucial incision, in anatomy, an incision or cut in any fleshy part, in form of a cross.

CRU'CIBLE, s. [crucibulum, low Lat.] a little vessel made either of earth or iron, without a handle, used by refiners, chemists, and others, to melt metals, &c. in. It derives its name from its being formerly marked with a cross.

CRUCIFEROUS, a. [from crux, a cross and fero, to bear or carry, Lat.] bearing the cross.

CRU'CIFIX, s. [from crux, a cross, and figo, to fasten, Lat.] a cross whereon the crucifixion of Christ is represented.

CRUCIFIXION, s. [from crux, a cross, and figo, to fasten, Lat.] the act of nailing to a cross.

To CRU'CIFY, v. a. [from crux, a cross, and figo, to fasten, Lat.] to fasten a person by nailing his hands and feet on a cross.

CRUD, s. See CURD,

CRUDE, a. [crudus, Lat.] raw, applied to flesh not dressed; unchanged or unaltered by any process or preparation. Figuratively, unfinished; immature; not brought to perfection; not reduced to order, or properly examined or modified by the mind; imperfect, unpolished, inadequate, and unrefined, applied to ideas.

CRU'DELY, ad. without any preparation; without examination or consideration; gross, applied to ideas.

CRU'DENESS, s. unripeness; imperfection; indigestion.

CRU'DITY, s. rawness; indigestion; or a thing in its indigested state; the state of a disease, wherein the morbific matter is not yet come to a head, but increases the disorder.

CRU'EL, a. [crudelis, Lat.] void of compassion, mercy, or pity, and delighting in the miseries, and increasing the sufferings of others. Figuratively, implacable, inveterate, and causing the greatest degree of torture.

CRU'ELLY, ad. in an inhuman, barbarous, and savage manner, wherein the sufferings and tortures of others are beheld with delight, and increased with joy.

CRU'ELTY, s. a savage disposition delighting in the misfortunes and sufferings of another, and in increasing them.

CRU'ENTATE, a. [cruentatus, from cruor, blood, Lat.] smeared with blood.

CRU'ET, s. [kruicke, Belg.] a phial for vinegar or oil.

CRUISE, s. [kruicke, Belg.] a small cup.

CRUISE, (kruze) s. [croise, Fr. a cross, the original cruisers bearing the cross] a voyage made by a ship up and down a coast, in order to guard it from any attack, or to intercept such of the enemy's ships as are near it.

To CRUISE, (kruze) v. n. to rove about at sea, in search of an enemy's vessel; to sail to and fro, without any certain course or destination.

CRUISER, (krúzer) s. a vessel that sails to and fro, in quest of an enemy's ship.

CRUM, or CRUMB, s. [cruma, Sax.] the soft part of bread. Figuratively, a small particle, or bit.

To CRU'MBLE, v. a. [from the noun] to break into small particles or pieces. Neuterly, to fall into small pieces.

CRU'MENAL, s. [crumena, Lat.] a purse.

CRU'MMY, a. resembling the crumb of bread; soft. Figuratively, plump, or fleshy.

CRUMP, a. [crump, Sax.] crooked or deformed.

To CRU'MPLE, v. a. [rompelen, Belg.] to contract; to draw into wrinkles; to squeeze together in order to discover the wrinkles.

CRU'MPLING, s. a small degenerate apple.

To CRUNK, or CRU'NKLE, v. n. to cry like a crane.

CRU'PPER, s. [from croupe, Fr.] that part of a horse-furniture which reaches from the saddle to the tail.

CRU'RAL, a. [cruralis, from crus, the leg, Lat.] belonging to, or situated in the leg.

CRUSA'DE, or CRUSA'DO, s. See CROISADE.

CRUSE, s. See CRUISE.

CRU'SET, s. a goldsmith's melting pot.

To CRUSH, v. a. [ecraser, Fr.] to break to pieces, or to make the two opposite sides of a vessel meet by external violence; to overwhelm; to beat down; to depress; subdue; or destroy by force.

CRUSH, s. collision; destruction.

CRUST, s. [from crusta, a hard piece of any thing, Lat. the hard external surface or coat of a thing; a collection of matter grown hard; the case which contains the fruit or meat of a pie or pudding; the outer hard part of bread; a waste piece of bread.

To CRUST, v. a. to cover with a hard case; to fowl with soil, or dirt. Neuterly, to have its external surface hardened.

CRUSTA'CEOUS, (krustáshious) [from crusta, a hard piece of any thing, Lat.] covered with shell, applied to fish.

CRU'STILY, ad. in a morose, surly, or peevish manner.

CRU'STINESS, s. the hardness of the outside of bread. Figuratively, peevishness, moroseness.

CRU'STY, a. covered with a hard surface or coat. Figuratively, not easily prevailed on; morose; peevish.

CRUTCH, s. [crucke, Teut.] a support, composed of a round piece of wood, in which a long staff is fixed, placed under the arm pits, and used by cripples or lame persons to walk with.

To CRUTCH, v. a. to support as with crutches.

CRUXHA'VEN. See CUXHAVEN.

To CRY, v. n. [crier, Fr.] to speak with vehemence and loudness; to speak to with great importunity and sorrow: to proclaim, to publish; to exclaim; to speak with a mournful tone of voice, attended with tears; to make a noise or squalling like an infant; to weep or shed tears. In hunting, to yelp, applied to the noise made by a hound in full scent. To cry out, to scream, or make a shriek when in danger; to complain loudly; to blame or censure; to be in labour. Actively, to proclaim any thing that is lost, or to be sold. To cry down, to depreciate or under value; to blame, or detract from; to forbid; to overbear. To cry up, to praise, or increase the value of a thing by applause.

CRY, s. [cri, Fr.] lamentation; a mournful shriek or cream; clamour or outcry; an exclamation of triumph and wonder; a proclamation; the hawkers' proclamation of wares to be sold in the streets, as, "the cries of London;" acclamation; popular favour; importunate call; the method of utterance made use of by different animals to express their wants, &c. In hunting, the yelping of dogs. Figuratively, a pack of hounds; a confused inarticulate noise. SYNON. Children commonly cry; grown persons generally weep. 'Tis not the noise we make that denotes a greater or less measure of grief; for the secret weeper may be more distressed than one who cries aloud.

CRY'AL, s. the heron.

CRY'ER, s. [See CRIER] a kind of hawk, called the falcon gentle, an enemy to pigeons.

CRYPTIC, or CRYPTICAL, a. [from krypto, to hide, Gr.] dark; abstruse; secret; occult; hidden; not made public.

CRYPTOGRAPHY, s. [from krypto, to hide, and graphe, to write, Lat.] the art of writing in secret characters.

CRYPTOLOGY, s. [from krypto, to hide, and logos, a word, Gr.] enigmatical language.

CRYSTAL, s. [crystallos, Gr.] in natural history, a hard, transparent, colourless stone, composed of simple plates, giving fire with steel, not fermenting with acid menstrua, calcining in a strong fire, of a regular angular figure, supposed by some to be formed of dew coagulated by nitre. Crystal glass is that which is carried to a degree of perfection beyond the common glass, was originally manufactured at Venice only, but introduced into this kingdom by Mr. Bowles, who brought it to so much perfection, that it not only rivals, but even surpasses that of Venice. In chemistry, applied to express salts, or other matters, shot or concealed in the manner of a crystal.

CRYSTAL, a. consisting or made of crystal. Figuratively, bright, clear, transparent.

CRYSTALLINE, a. [crystallinus, Lat.] consisting of crystal. Figuratively, bright, clear, transparent. Crystalline humour, in anatomy, the second humour of the eye, lying immediately next the aqueous, beyond the uvea.

CRYSTALLIZATION, s. in chemistry, an operation of nature, in which various earths, salts, and metallic substances pass from a fluid to a solid state, assuming certain determinate geometrical figures.

To CRYSTALLIZE, v. a. to form into a mass resembling that of crystals. Neuterly, to coagulate, or shoot into angular shapes, resembling a crystal.

CUB, s. [etymology uncertain] the young of a bear or fox; sometimes applied to that of a whale. Figuratively, the offspring of a human creature, by way of reproach.

To CUB, v. a. to bring forth, applied to a fox or bear.

CUBA, a West India island, near the entrance of the Gulf of Mexico, about 700 miles in length, and 70 in its mean breadth, subject to the Spaniards. Round the coast are many convenient harbours; and several sorts of mines among the mountains. Here are large forests abounding with game, and extensive pastures, which feed large flocks and herds of horned cattle, sheep, and hogs, originally brought from Europe, and which now run wild. The hills run through the island from E. to W. and from these fall many rivulets, which run to the N. and S. The land is generally level near the coast. The produce is that of sugar-canes, ginger, long pepper, cassia, wild cinnamon, excellent tobacco, called by the Spaniards cigarros, aloes, mastic, cassia fistula, manioc, maize, cocoa, and some coffee. Here are cedar trees so large, that canoes made of them will hold 50 men; also oaks, firs, palms, cotton trees, ebony, and mahogany. Havannah is the capital, where the galleons rendezvous that return annually to Spain.

CUBATION, s. [from cubo, to lay down, Lat.] the act of laying down.

CUBATORY, a. [from cubo, to lay down, Lat.] recumbent.

CUBATURE, s. the finding the solid contents of a body.

CUBE, s. [kubos, Gr.] in geometry, a solid body, consisting of six equal square sides. In arithmetic, a number arising from the multiplication of a square number by its root.

CUBEB, s. a small dried fruit resembling pepper, but somewhat longer, and of a grayish brown colour on the surface.

CUBIC, or CUBICAL, a. belonging to, or having the properties of a cube.

CUBICALNESS, s. the state or quality of being cubical.

CUBIFORM, a. in the shape or form of a cube.

CUBIT, s. [cubitus, Lat.] a measure in use among the ancients, which was the distance from the elbow bending inward to the extremity of the middle finger, fixed by some to 1 foot 9,888 inches English measure; by others to 1,824 foot; the reason of this variety is, that in Scripture there were two kinds of cubits, one measuring according to the first computation, and the other according to the latter.

CUBITAL, a. containing the length or measure of a cubit.

CUCKFIELD, a town of Sussex, with a market on Friday. It is 40 miles S. by W. of London.

CUCKINGSTOOL, s. a chair in which women are plunged into the water, as a punishment for scolding.

CUCKOLD, s. [cocu, Fr.] one married to a woman that violates the marriage-bed.

To CUCKOLD, v. a. to lie with another man's wife; to lie with another man, though married.

CUCKOLDLY, ad. after the manner of a cuckold. Figuratively, mean or base.

CUCKOLD-MAKER, s. one who makes a practice of corrupting wives.

CUCKOLDOM, s. the act of lying with another man's wife; the state or condition of a cuckold.

CUCKOO, or CUCKOW, s. [cwcw, Brit.] in Natural History, a bird which appears in the spring, said to suck the eggs of other birds, and lay her own to be hatched in their stead; hence it was usual to give the husband a sign of the approach of an adulterer by crying cuckoo, and in process of time it was usual to call the person whose bed was defiled a cuckold. This bird is remarkable for the uniformity of its note, and its name seems in most languages, to be derived from it. Figuratively, used as a word of reproach or contempt.

CUCKOO-FLOWER, s. a species of the cardamine of Linnæus.

CUCKOO-SPITTLE, s. the frothy substance or dew found about the joints of lavender, rosemary, &c.

CUCULLATE, or CUCULLATED, a. [cucullatus, from cucullus, a hood, Lat.] hooded; covered as with a hood or cowl; having the resemblance or shape of a hood.

CUCUMBER, (vulgarly pron. cowcumber,) s. [cucumis, Lat.] a well known plant and fruit. Besides the use of cucumbers as a food, their seed is one of the four greater cold seeds of the shops, and is almost an universal ingredient in emulsions, and of great service in fevers and nephritic complaints.

CUCURBITACEOUS, (kukurbitáshious) a. [from cucurbita, Lat.] in botany, applied to those plants which resemble a gourd; such as the pompion and melon.

CUCURBITE, s. a chymical vessel or glass made in the shape of a gourd, and commonly called a body.

CUD, s. [Sax.] the inside of the throat; the food kept by a cow in the first stomach, which it chews a second time.

CUDDEN, or CUDDY, s. a clown; a stupid rustic fellow. A bad word.

To CUDDLE, s. n. [a low word] to lie close; to squat.

CUDGEL, s. [kudse, Belg.] a stick made use of to strike with, lighter, than a club, and shorter than a pole.

To CUDGEL, v. a. to beat with a stick.

CUDLE, s. a small sea-fish.

CUDWEED, s. a plant, called also chafeweed, found in barren pastures and road sides, with brownish flowers. It is esteemed good in dysenteries.

CUDWORT, s. in botany, a plant, called also sea cudweed; a species of athanasia.

CUE, s. [queue, Fr.] the tail or end of any thing; the last words of a speech, which a player looks upon as a sign for him to begin to speak. A hint. The part which a person is to play in his turn.

CUERPO, s. [Span.] without the upper coat or cloak.

CUFF, s. [from zuffa, Ital.] a box given on the ear, or the head, with the fist. To strike with the talons or wings, applied to birds.

To CUFF, v. n. to fight; to scuffle. Actively, to strike with the fist, or talons.

CUFF, s. [coeffe, Fr.] that part of the sleeve which is turned back again from the wrist towards the shoulder.

CUINAGE, s. the making up twine in peculiar form for carriage.

CUIRASS, (keúrasse) s. [cuirasse, Fr.] a part of defensive armour, made of iron well hammered, covering the body from the neck to the girdle.

CUIRA'SSIER, (kurásseer) s. a soldier dressed in his armour, or cuirass.

CUISH, s. [cuisse, Fr.] the armour which covers the thighs.

CU'LDEES, s. [culdei, Lat.] in church history, a sort of monkish priests, formerly inhabiting Scotland and Ireland. Being remarkable for the religious exercises of preaching and praying, they were called by way of eminence, Cultores Dei; from whence is derived the word Culdees.

CU'LERAGE, s. a plant, the same with arse-smart.

CU'LINARY, a. [from culina, a kitchen, Lat.] belonging to the kitchen; or used in cookery.

To CULL, v. a. [cueillir, Fr.] to pick or choose from a number.

CU'LLEN, a parliament town of Scotland, seated on the sea-coast of the county of Banff, 40 miles W. of Aberdeen.

CU'LLER, s. one who chooses a thing from a great many others.

CU'LLION, s. [coglione, Ital.] a low, mean, or dirty scoundrel; a word of great contempt.

CU'LLITON, a town of Devonshire, 17 miles nearly E. of Exeter, and 159 S. W. of London. Market on Saturday.

CU'LLODEN MUIR, a wide heath, 3 miles E. of Inverness, where the duke of Cumberland gained a decisive victory over the Highland rebels, April 16, 1746.

CU'LLUMBINE, s. or more properly COLUMBINE. The flowers of this plant are beautifully variegated with blue, purple, red, and white.

CU'LLY, s. [coglione, Ital.] a man deceived or seduced by sharpers or prostitutes.

To CU'LLY, v. a. to make a fool of a person; to deceive or impose upon.

CULMI'FEROUS, a. [from culmus, a stalk, and fero, to bear, Lat.] in botany, applied to such plants as have a smooth jointed stalk, usually hollow; are wrapped about at each joint with single, narrow, sharp-pointed leaves, and have their seed contained in chaffy husks; such as wheat, barley, &c.

To CU'LMINATE, v. n. [from culmen, the top, Lat.] in astronomy, to be at its greatest altitude; to be vertical, or in its meridian.

CULMINA'TION, s. astronomy, the transit or passage of a star over the meridian, or that point of its orbit wherein it is at its greatest altitude.

CULPABI'LITY, s. the quality which subjects a thing to blame, or renders it an object of blame.

CU'LPABLE, a. [culpabilis, from culpa, a fault, Lat.] worthy of, or deserving blame, including the idea of some voluntary fault of a slight kind.

CU'LPABLENESS, s. the quality wich renders a person an object of blame.

CU'LPABLY, ad. in such a manner as to deserve blame; criminally.

CU'LPRIT, s. a word used by a judge on the trial of a person, who, when the person arraigned pleads not guilty, answers, "Culprit, God send thee a good deliverance." In law, a malefactor, or criminal.

CULROSS, a parliament town of Scotland, seated on the river Forth, in the county of Monteith, 33 miles N. W. of Edinburgh.

CU'LTER, or COULTER, s. [from colo, to cultivate, Lat.] the iron of a plough, which cuts the ground perpendicular before the ploughshare.

To CU'LTIVATE, v. a. [cultiver, Fr.] to heighten the fruitfulness of the earth by manuring it, or by other methods of husbandry. Figuratively, to improve the understanding by education and study.

CULTIVA'TION, s. the act of improving soils by husbandry. Figuratively, the improvement of the understanding by education and study; improvement in any science.

CULTIVA'TOR, s. one who improves, promotes, or endeavours to forward any vegetable product, or any thing else capable of improvement.

CU'LTURE, s. [from colo, to cultivate Lat.] the act of cultivating or tilling the ground. Figuratively, the improvement of the mind by education and study, improvement in any branch of learning.

To CU'LTURE, v. n. to cultivate; to manure, till, or improve soil by labour, and other methods of husbandry.

CU'LVER, s. [culfre, Sax.] a pigeon. An old word.

CU'LVERIN, s. [coulouvrine, Fr.] a slender piece of ordnance, or artillery, from 5 one-half to 5 inches bore, from 13 to 12 feet long, and carrying a shot from 5 one-fourth to 3 three-fourths inches diameter.

CU'LVERKEY, s. a flower.

To CU'MBER, v. a. [komberen, Belg.] to hinder a person from acting by its weight; to put a person to difficulty in managing a thing, by its weight or length. Figuratively, to load with something useless; to disturb, distress, or involve in difficulties; to distract or perplex with variety of employments.

CU'MBER, s. [komber, Belg.] hinderance; unmanageableness caused by bulk.

CU'MBERLAND, a maritime county of England, bounded on the W. by the Irish Sea and Solway Frith; on the N. by Scotland; on the E. by Northumberland, Durham, and Westmoreland; and on the S. W. and S. by the sea and Lancashire. It is 58 miles in length from S. W. to N. E. and its greatest breadth, from E. to W. is about 45 miles. It contains 1 city, 15 market towns, and 58 parishes. The air is cool: the mountains are large and lofty, feeding numerous flocks of sheep; and the valleys and plains are well cultivated. From the coal-pits on the coast, Ireland is principally supplied with fuel; this trade constantly requiring a great number of ships and mariners. The property here, both in lands and shipping, is more equally divided than in most other counties. Besides the coal mines, there are others of lead, copper, blue slates for covering the roofs of houses, lapis calaminaris, and of black lead, a mineral almost peculiar to this county, and produced here in quantities sufficient to supply all Europe. This county and the adjoining one of Westmoreland, are celebrated for their lakes, and the beautiful romantic scenery, which their banks, and the adjacent country exhibit. They have often afforded subjects for the pen and pencil, and a visit to the lakes has of late become a fashionable tour. See BORRODALE, BUTTERMERE, &c.

CU'MBERSOME, a. occasioning great trouble and vexation. Figuratively, burthensome; occasioning perplexity; unwieldy, or not easily managed, on account of its length or weight.

CU'MBERSOMELY, ad. in a troublesome manner; in a manner that produces hinderance and vexation.

CU'MBERSOMENESS, s. encumbrance; hinderance; obstruction.

CU'MBRANCE, s. burden; hinderance: impediment.

CU'MBROUS, a. troublesome, vexatious; causing uneasiness.

CU'MFREY, s. a medicinal plant.

CU'MIN, s. [cuminum, Lat.] a plant.

To CU'MULATE, v. a. [cumulo, from cumulus, a heap, Lat.] to lay one thing upon another; to heap together.

CUNCTA'TION, s. [cunctatio, from cunctor, to delay, Lat.] the act of deferring the doing of a thing to another time, which ought to be done immediately.

To CUND, v. n. [from kōmen, Belg.] to give notice. Obsolete. See CONDER, or BALKER.

CU'NEAL, a. [from cuneus, a wedge, Lat.] relating to, or having the shape of, a wedge.

CU'NEATED, part. [from cuneus, a wedge, Lat.] made in the form of a wedge.

CUNEIFORM, a. [from cuneus, a wedge, and forma, a form, Lat.] having the form of a wedge. In anatomy, applied to the fourth, fifth, and sixth bones of the foot, from their wedge-like shape, being large above and narrow below.

CUNNER, s. a kind of fish less than an oyster, which sticks close to the rocks.

CUNNING, a [from connan, Sax.] learned, knowing, or of an extensive knowledge. Performed with art or skill; curious. Figuratively, sly; designing; crafty; over-reaching another by superior wit and understanding.

CUNNING, s. [cunninge, Sax.] artifice; deceit; superior talents employed in deceiving others; art; skill; knowledge.

CUNNINGHAM, a shire of Scotland, lying on the river Clyde, opposite to the isle of Bute.

CUNNINGLY, ad. in a sly, crafty manner.

CUNNINGMAN, s. a man who pretends to tell fortunes, or teach how to recover stolen goods.

CUNNINGNESS, s. craftiness; slyness.

CUP, s. [cup. Sax.] a small vessel, with a foot, to drink in. Figuratively, the liquor contained in a cup. In the plural, a merry bout or entertainment of drinking. Any thing hollow like a cup, as the husk of an acorn, the bell of a flower. In botany, a kind of empalement contiguous to the other parts of the flower, including either one flower, as in the primrose; or several florets, as in the daisy.

To CUP, v. n. to supply with liquor. A sense now obsolete. To bleed a person after having fixed a cupping-glass to the part.

CUPAR, the county town of Fifeshire, beautifully situated on the Eden. Here the Thanes of Fife held their courts from the earliest times. Also, a town of Angus.

CUPBEARER, s. an officer of the king's household; an attendant to give wine at a feast.

CUPBOARD, s. [cup and bord, Sax.] a case or receptacle; a place fitted with shelves and a door, in which victuals or earthenware are placed, distinguished from a closet, which is considerably longer.

To CUPBOARD, v. a. to put into a cupboard. Figuratively, to board.

CUPEL, s. in metallurgy, a vessel made of calcined bones, mixed with a small proportion of clay and water. It is used whenever gold and silver are refined by melting them with lead. The process is called cupellation.

CUPIDITY, s. [cupiditas, from cupio, to desire, Lat.] concupicence; unlawful or unreasonable longing.

CUPOLA, s. [Ital.] in architecture, a spherical vault, or the round of the top of the dome of a church, which resembles a cup inverted; called by some a Janthorn.

CUPPER, s. one who applies a cupping-glass, and scarifies a person.

CUPPING, s. in surgery, the applying a cupping-glass for the discharge of blood, and other humours, by the skin.

CUPPING GLASS, s. a glass vessel, which having its air rarefied, gives room for that contained in the part to which it is applied to expand itself, and bring with it such humours as it is involved in, which are afterwards discharged by a scarifier, or instrument fitted with the points of several lancets, which by means of a spring enter the skin at the same time.

CUPREOUS, a. [cupreus, from aes Cyprum, Cyprian brass, i. e. copper, Lat.] coppery, or consisting of copper.

CUR, s. [korre, Belg.] a degenerate, worthless dog. Figuratively, used as a term of reproach for a man.

CURABLE, a. [from curo, to take care of, to heal, Lat.] that may be healed.

CURABLENESS, s. the possibility of being healed.

CURA'COA, (Curacoa) a West India island, subject to the Dutch, 25 miles long and 12 broad. The principal town is of the same name, and has a good harbour. The principal articles of commerce are sugar, skins, and salt, and the inhabitants have long carried on a smuggling trade with the Spaniards. The island is barren, and dependant on the rains for water; yet the Dutch have built on the southern coast, one of the largest, and by far the most elegant and cleanly town, called St. Barbara, in the West Indies. The harbour is naturally one of the worst in America; yet the Dutch have entirely remedied that defect. Lat. 12. 6. N. lon. 68. 20. W.

CURACY, s. the employment of a clergyman, who does the duty of the person who has the benefice, for a certain salary.

CURATE, s. [from curo, to take care of, to heal, Lat.] a clergyman who performs the duties of another; a parish priest.

CURATIVE, a. relating to the cure of a disease; recovering, or able to recover from a disorder.

CURATOR, s. [Lat.] one who has the cure and superintendance of a thing, place, or person.

CURB, s. [from courber, Fr.] in farriery, an iron chain fastened to the upper part of the branches of a bridle, in a hole called the eye, and running over the beard of a horse, used to manage a hard-mouthed horse. Figuratively, a restraint put on the inclinations of a person. It is also a large swelling that runs along the inside of a horse's hoof, in the great sinews behind, above the top of the horn, which makes him go lame after he has been heated.

To CURB, v. a. to manage or guide a horse by means of a curb. Figuratively, to check, or restrain the passions or inclinations.

CURD, s. [kruyden, Belg.] the thickening or clotting of any liquor, generally applied to that of milk, which is occasioned by mixing runnet with it.

CURDISTAN, a country of Asia, partly in Armenia, and partly in Persia. The inhabitants are a mixture of Christians, Mahometans, and idolaters; they offer cocks, &c. in sacrifice to the devil, and, like the Arabs, partly live in towns and villages, and partly rove about with tents, subsisting chiefly by plunder. They are called Curas, and are not subject to either the Turks or Persians.

To CURDLE, v. n. to grow into clots; to grow thick, like milk mixed with runnet. Actively, to make a thing grow thick, clot, or coagulate, by mixing some acid with it.

CURDY, a. coagulated; clotted.

CURE, s. [from curo, to take care of, to heal, Lat.] a remedy; the healing of a wound, or recovering from a disease; the benefice or employment of a clergyman or curate. SYNON. Cure seems to have no other object than stubborn disorders, and those which proceed from constitution; whereas remedy has a view to slight complaints, and such as are of short duration.

To CURE, v. a. [curo, Lat.] to heal a wound; to restore to health; to recover from a disease. In cookery, to preserve from stinking, or corrupting; to salt.

CURELESS, a. without cure or remedy; not to be cured.

CURER, s. a healer or physician.

CURFEW, s. [couvre feu, Fr.] an evening bell, on the sound of which every man was obliged to put out his fire, and extinguish his candle, in the time of the Conqueror. Figuratively, any bell which tolls constantly in the night time; a cover for a fire, or a fire place.

CURIALITY, s. [from curialis, Lat.] the privileges, prerogatives, or retinue of a court.

CURIOSITY, s. a propensity or disposition of the soul, which inclines it to inquire after new objects, and to delight in viewing them; a nice experiment; an object of curiosity, or a rarity.

CURIOUS, a. [curiosus, Lat.] inquisitive, or disposed to inquire into novelties, whether they respect truths or objects of sight; attentive to, or diligent. Accurate, or careful to avoid an impropriety or mistake. Exact; nice; artful; elegant; neat; rigid; severe.

CURIOUSLY, ad. in an inquisitive, exact, accurate, elegant, laboured, or high-finished manner; captiously.

CURL, s. a ringlet of hair formed into a ring, or making many eccentric circles. Figuratively, a wave; undulation; or waving line.

To CURL, v. a. [cyrran, Sax.] to make the hair twist in circles or ringlets; to writhe or twist round; to dress with curls; to raise in waves, or in a spiral form. Neuterly, to form itself into ringlets; to form circular lines; to twist itself.

CURLEW, s. [courlieu, Fr.] 1. A water-fowl, with a long beak, of a gray colour, with red and black spots. 2. A bird larger than a partridge, with longer legs; it runs very swiftly, and frequents the corn-fields in Spain, Sicily, and sometimes in France.

CURMUDGEON, s. [a corrupt pronunciation and spelling of cœur mechant, Fr. a bad heart] one who is void of generosity; a niggardly or avaricious person; a miser.

CURRAGH, an extensive common, of fine land, in Kildare, Leinster, about 30 miles from Dublin, celebrated for horse-races.

CURRANT, s. in botany, the tree so called, and the berry of it; likewise a small dried grape; properly written coriuth.

CURRENCY, s. [from curro, to run, Lat.] circulation; passing from hand to hand, and acknowledged as local, applied to coin or money, whether in metal or paper. General reception; fluency; readiness of utterance; constant flow; uninterrupted course; general esteem and repute.

CURRENT, a. [from curro, to run, Lat.] passing from hand to hand; established or legal, applied to money. Generally received; not contradicted, applied to opinions. Popular or established by a majority; fashionable; passable, or to be admitted; what is now passing. In commerce, account current, is that which is opened by two persons that have dealings with each other, wherein the different credits and debts of each are registered on opposite sides, in order to form a balance between them.

CURRENT, s. in hydrography, a running stream. In navigation, a progressive motion of the water of the sea, by which a ship may be retarded in her course, or carried more swiftly, when moving in the same direction as the current. SYNON. A stream issues from a head, and moves forward with a continuity of parts. A current is a certain progressive motion of some fluid body. These words in the literal sense are applied to water. Thus we say the stream of a river, the current of the sea.

CURRENTLY, ad. in a constant motion; without opposition; without ceasing.

CURRENTNESS, s. circulation; general reception; easiness of pronunciation.

CURRIER, s. [from corium, a hide, Lat.] one who dresses leather.

CURRISH, a. like a cur; snappish; quarrelsome.

To CURRY, v. a. [from corium, a hide, Lat.] to dress leather with oil, tallow, &c. To rub a horse with a sharp pointed instrument or comb, in order to smooth his hide, promote circulation, and increase his flesh. Figuratively, to tickle; to flatter. To curry favour with, is to endeavour to gain the esteem or friendship of another by trivial offices and small compliances.

CURRYCOMB, s. an iron instrument set with iron teeth or wires, used to dress a horse.

To CURSE, v. a. [cursian, Sax.] to wish a person ill; to devote to destruction. Figuratively, to afflict or torment.

CURSE, s. the action of wishing any tremendous evil to another. The act of devoting to temporal or eternal torments; affliction; torment or misery.

CURSED, part. under a curse. Figuratively, hateful; unholy; vexatious.

CURSEDLY, ad. miserably; shamefully; a low cant word.

CURSEDNESS, s. the state of being under a curse.

CURSITOR, s. [Lat.] an officer, or clerk belonging to chancery, who makes out original writs. There are 24, having each particular shires allotted them, for which they make such original writs as are required, and are called clerks of course in the oath of the clerks of chancery.

CURSORILY, ad. in a hasty manner; without care or attention.

CURSORINESS, s. haste; slightness of attention.

CURSORY, a. [cursorius, from curro, to run, Lat.] hasty, quick; careless; transcient.

CURST, a. [korsel, Belg.] forward, snarling; peevish; delighting in mischief.

CURSTNESS, s. peevishness; frowardness: malignity.

CURT, a. [curtus, Lat.] short.

To CURTAIL, v. a. [curto, from curtus, short, Lat.] to cut off; to shorten by cutting. Figuratively, to retrench, applied to expenses.

CURTAIL DOG, s. a dog whose tail is cut off, and is thence rendered unfit for coursing; perhaps the original, from whence cur is formed by contraction.

CURTAIL-DOUBLE, s. a musical wind instrument like the bassoon, which plays the bass to the hautboy.

CURTAIN, s. [cortina, Lat.] a cloth hung before a window, and running on a string or iron rod, by which means it is spread or contracted, made use of to exclude the light, air, or to hide any thing. In fortification, that part of a wall or rampart which lies between two bastions, Curtain lecture, is a reproof given by a wife to her husband in bed.

To CURTAIN, v. a. to furnish or hang with curtains.

CURTATE DISTANCE, s. in astronomy, the distance of the sun's place, and that of the moon or a planet, reduced to the ecliptic.

CURTATION, s. [from curto, to curtail, Lat.] in astronomy, a little part cut off from the line of a planet's internal or distance from the sun

CURTELASSE, CURTELAX, s. See CUTLASS.

CURTSY, s.. See COURTESY.

CURVATED, a. [curvatus, from curvus, crooked, Lat.] bent.

CURVATION, s. [from curvo, to bend, Lat.] the act of bending or crooking.

CURVATURE, s. crookedness; inflection; manner of bending.

CURVE, a. [curvus, Lat.] crooked, bent, formed or forced from a perpendicular or straight surface to an angular one.

CURVE, s. any thing bent; a bending. In geometry, a line whose points are placed and extended different ways, running on continually in all directions, and may be cut by a right line in more points than one.

To CURVE, v. a. [curvo, from curvus, crooked, Lat.] to bend; to crook; to bend back, or fold.

To CURVET, v. a. [corvettare, Ital.] to bound or leap; to frisk; to grow wanton, or licentious.

CURVET, s. in the menage, a leap or bound. Figuratively, a frolic or prank.

CURVILINEAR, a. [from curvus, crooked, and linea, a line, Lat.] consisting of, or composed of, one or more crooked lines.

CURVITY, s. [curvitas, from curvus, crooked, Lat.] crookedness.

CUSCO, a large city of Peru, formerly the residence of the Incas. It is built in a square form, and in its centre is the best market in all Spanish America. Four large streets, perfectly straight, meet in the square, and streams of water run through the town. The number of the inhabitants is about 50,000, of which three fourths are of the original Americans. It is 290 miles S. E. of Lima. Lat. 13. 9. S. lon. 71. 0. W.

CUSHION, s. [kussen, Belg.] a case of silk, velvet, or worsted, stuffed with wool, feathers, or horse hair, placed on the seat of a chair, to render the sitting easy.

CUSHIONED, a. supported by cushions; seated on a cushion.

CUSP, s. [cuspis, the point of a lance, Lat.] in astronomy, the horns of the moon or any other planet.

CUSPATED, or CUSPIDATED, a. [from cuspis, the point of a lance, Lat.] in botany, applied to the leaves or petals of a flower, which end in a point, called spear-shaped by Miller.

CUSTARD, s. [cwstard, Brit.] a kind of pastry made with milk, eggs, and sugar, which are thickened into a mass, either by baking in an oven, or boiling over a fire.

CUSTODY, s. [custodia, from custos, a keeper, Lat.] confinement in prison; restraint of liberty. Figuratively, the charge or keeping of a person; defence; preservation; security.

CUSTOM, s. [costume, Fr.] repeated and habitual practice of any action; fashion, or method adopted by the majority; an established manner; a good run of trade; a tribute or tax paid to the government on goods imported or exported. Custom house is the place where those taxes are paid. Among lawyers, it is a law or right not written, established by long usage, and the consent of our ancestors, has been, and daily is practised. SYNON. Fashion introduces itself, and extends daily. Custom establishes itself, and gains authority. The first forms a mode; the second a usage. Each is a kind of law independent on reason, with respect to that which relates to our outward actions. Customs relate to the general practice of the people; manners to their way of life; and fashions to their dress.

CUSTOMABLE, s. that is frequently or commonly practised.

CUSTOMABLENESS, s. frequency, habit; conformity to custom.

CUSTOMABLY, ad. according to custom.

CUSTOMARILY, ad. commonly; generally.

CUSTOMARINESS, s. frequency of repetition, or practice.

CUSTOMARY, a. habitual; usual.

CUSTOMED, a. usual; common; generally practised.

CUSTOMER, s. one who purchases any thing of a tradesman.

CUSTOS, s. [Lat.] a keeper, or person who has the charge of any thing. So, Custos Brevium is a clerk belonging to the common pleas, who has the charge of writs and records of Nisi prius; there is also one in the Court of King's Bench, who files such writs as are to be filed, and all warrants of attorney, and transcribes or makes out records of Nisi prius. Custos Rotulorum, one who has the custody of rolls or records of the sessions of peace; he is also a justice of the peace, and of the quorum in the county where he has his office. Custos Spiritualium, one who acts as an ecclesiastical judge during the vacancy of a see. Custos Temporalium, one appointed by the king to take care of the rents and profits of a vacant see.

CUSTREL, s. a buckler-bearer; a vessel for holding wine.

To CUT, v. a. preter. and participle passive cut; [from couteau, Fr.] to penetrate, or divide with a sharp-edged instrument; to hew; to carve; to wound or pierce with any uneasy or poignant sensation. In gaming, to separate a pack of cards, by taking off some of them from the others. To intersect; to cross. Figuratively, to excel, or surpass. To cut off, to destroy; to rescind; to intercept; to obviate; to withhold; to preclude; to interrupt; to abbreviate. To cut out, to shape; to form; to contrive; to fit; to debar; to excel. To cut up, to carve, or divide a joint or fowl properly.

CUT, part. prepared, or fit for use, alluding to hewn timber.

CUT, s the action or effect of a sharp or edged instrument; a channel made by art; a small piece, or shred, separated by an edge-tool from a larger substance; a lot; a short way, by which some winding is cut off, or avoided; a picture taken from a copper-plate, or carved wood. Fashion; form; shape.

CUTA'NEOUS, a. [from cutis, a skin, Lat.] relating to the skin.

CUTICLE, s. [from cuticula, a little skin, Lat.] the first and outermost covering of the body, commonly called the scarf-skin. This is that soft skin which rises in a blister upon any burning, or the application of a blistering-plaster. It sticks close to the surface of the true skin, to which it is also tied by the vessels which nourish it, though they are so small as not to be seen. When the scarf-skin is examined with a microscope, it appears to be made up of several lays of exceeding small scales. Figuratively, a thin skin formed on the surface of any liquor.

CUTICULAR, a. belonging to the cuticle, or skin.

CUTLASS, s. [coutelas, Fr.] a broad cutting sword.

CUTLER, s. [coutelier, Fr.] one who makes and sells knives.

CUT-PURSE, s. one who robs a person of his money by cutting his purse; a common practice before the invention of breeches, when men wore their purses at their girdles; a thief; a robber.

CUTTER, s. a person or instrument which cuts any thing; a small nimble-sailing vessel; the fore-teeth.

CUT-THROAT, s. a murderer. Used adjectively, cruel; inhuman; barbarous.

CUTTING, s. a shred, or piece separated by means of a knife, or sharp instrument. In surgery, it signifies the extracting the stone out of the bladder. In the Menage, it is when the feet of a horse interfere, or when with the shoe of one foot he beats off the skin from the pastern joint of another hoof. In painting, it is the laying one strong lively colour over another, without any shade or softening.

CUTTLE-FISH, s. [cuttlewisch, Belg.] in natural history, a fish, which when pursued by a fish of prey, emits a black liquor, by which it darkens the water and escapes.

CUXHA'VEN, a sea port of Bremen, situated on the German Ocean, between the mouths of the Elbe and the Weser.

CY'CLE, s. [from kyklos, a circle, Gr.] in chronology, it is a certain period or series of years, which regularly proceed from the first to the last, and then return again to the first, and circulate perpetually. The cycle of the sun consists of 28 years; the metonic, or that of the moon, is a period of 19 years. The cycle of the Roman indiction, is completed in 15 years.

CY'CLOID, s. [kyklos, a circle, and eidos, form, Gr.] a geometrical curve, formed by the line which a nail, in the circumference of a wheel, makes in the air, while the wheel revolves in a right line.

CYCLO'IDAL, a. [from kyklos, a circle, and eidos, form, Lat.] relating to a cycloid. The cycloidal space, is that contained between a cycloid and its substance.

CYCLOPAE'DIA, s. [from kyklos, a circle, and paideia, education, Lat.] a circle of knowledge; a course of sciences.

CY'DER, s. See CIDER.

CY'GNET, s. [from cygnus, a swan, Lat.] a young swan.

CY'GNUS, the swan, in astronomy, a constellation in the northern hemisphere.

CY'LINDER, s. [kylindros, from kylio, to roll, Gr.] in geometry, a round solid, having its base circular, equal and parellel, in the form of a rolling-stone, used by gardeners.

CYLI'NDRIC, or CYLI'NDRICAL, a. partaking of the nature, or in the form of, a cylinder.

CY'MAR, s. [properly written simar] a slight loose covering or scarf.

CYMA'TIUM, s. [kymation, from kymo, a wave, Gr.] in architecture, a member or moulding of the cornice, the profile of which is waved, or concave at top, and convex at bottom.

CY'MBAL, s. [cymbalum, Lat.] a musical instrument used by the ancients, supposed to be made of brass, and in the form of a kettle drum, though somewhat less.

CYNA'NTHROPY, s. [from kyon, a dog, and anthropos, a man, Gr.] a species of madness, in which persons resemble a dog; the species of madness contracted by the bite of a mad dog.

CYNARCTO'MACHY, s. [from kyon, a dog, arktos, a bear, and mache, a fight, Gr.] a word coined by Butler, to denote bear-baiting with a dog. "In bloody cynarctomachy." Hudibras;

CYNE'GETICS, s. [kynegetokos, from kyon, a dog, and ago, to lead, Gr.] the art of hunting; the art of training dogs for hunting.

CYNIC, or CYNICAL, a. [kunikos, from kyon, a dog, Gr.] snarling; brutal, or partaking of the qualities of a cynic philosopher, who was remarkable for his contempt of riches, and rigorous reprehension of vice.

CYNIC, s. [kynikos, from kyon, a dog, Gr.] a philospher who valued himself for his contempt of every thing, except morality; a sect founded by Diogenes.

CYNOSURE, s. [from kyon, a dog, and oura, a tail, Gr.] in astronomy, the name given by the Greeks to ursa minor, or the little bear: the polar star, by which sailors steer.

CYPHEL, s. a provincial term for the common houseleek.

CYPRESS TREE, s. [cypressus, Lat.] a tall straight tree, whose fruit is of no use; its leaves are bitter, and the very smell and shade of it are dangerous. Hence the Romans looked on it as a fatal tree, and made use of it at funerals and in mournful ceremonies. The wood of it is always green, very heavy, of a good smell, and never rots, or is worm eaten.

CYPRUS, s. [so called from the place where it was made] a thin transparent stuff, used for sieves, &c.

CYPRUS, an island in the Mediterranean, between the coast of Syria and that of Caramania, subject to the Turks. The soil is fertile, but subject to long droughts, and there are numerous springs, but no rivers. The Cypriots are, in general, tall and well made; many of them live to a very advanced age; their women have fine eyes, but in other respects are far from being beautiful; they do not, however, degenerate from their ancestors, as votaries of that goddess whose favourite habitation this island was supposed to be. It abounds with game; and great numbers of ortolans, boiled and pickled in vinegar, are annually exported. The chief produce is cotton, silk, and wines; the annual amount of the former is from 3 to 5000 bales; that of the silk is about 25,000; and the wines amount to near 40,000 gallons. The other exports are wool, nutmegs, turpentine, madder, kermes, opium, coloquinteda, salt, umber, green earth, and a small quantity of cochineal. Nicosia is the metropolis of the island.

CYST, or CYSTIS, s. [kystis Gr.] in surgery, a bag containing some morbid matter.

CYSTIC, a. in surgery, contained in a bag.

CYSTOTOMY, s. [from kystis, a vessel, and temno, to cut, Gr.] the act of opening encysted tumors, or cutting the bag in which any morbid matter is contained.

CZAR, (zar) s. [Sclav.] written more properly tzar, the title of the emperor of Russia.

CZARINA, (zarena) s. the title of the empress of Russia.

CZASLAU, a town and circle of Bohemia. In the church of the former is the tomb of Zisca, the celebrated general of the Hussites. It is 42 miles E. S. E. of Prague.

CZERNICK, or CZIRNITZ, a town of Carniola, in the circle of Austria. Here is a remarkable tract of land, 15 miles in length, and 5 in breadth, which in summer produces excellent grass and corn, but in winter is overflowed, yields fish, and is called the Czirnitzer Sea. It is 28 miles S. E. of Laubach.

D.

D THE forth letter of the alphabet, is a consonant, differing but little in sound from T. In the Roman, Saxon, and our alphabet, it is of the same shape, and seems formed from the Delta of the Greeks. It is pronounced by applying the tip of the tongue to the fore-part of the palate, and then separating them by a gentle breathing, the lips being open at the same time. The sound of D in the English is uniform, and is never mute, except in the words Wednesday and handkerchief. D, as a numeral, denotes 500; and with a dash over it thus D, 5000. In Abbreviations, it has various significations; thus D. stands for doctor, as M. D. for doctor of medicine; D. T. doctor of theology; D. D. doctor of divinity.

To DAB, v. a. [dauber, Fr.] to touch gently with something soft or moist.

DAB, s. a small lump, generally applied to something moist: a blow with something moist or soft. In low language, a person expert in any thing. In natural history, a small flat fish.

To DA'BBLE, v. a. [dabbelen, Belg.] to smear, moisten, or daub with something wet; to play in the water; to do any thing in a slight or superficial manner.

DA'BBLER, s. one that plays in water. Figuratively, one who performs a thing superficially; one who never makes himself a complete master of any subject, or branch of science.

DAB CHICK, s. a small water fowl, called likewise dobchick, didapper, and dipchick.

DA CAPO, s. an Italian term in music, meaning that the first part of the tune should be repeated at the conclusion.

DA'CCA, a city of Bengal, once the capital, situated in the E. quarter, on a branch of the Ganges, which has a ready communication with all the other channels of that river, and the Burrampooter. It is the third city of Bengal in extent and population, and the capital of a district. It has large manufactories of the finest muslins and silks, and cotton is produced within the province. The country round Dacca lying low, is covered with perpetual verdure during the dry months, and is not subject to violent heats as Moorshedabad, Patna, and other places. It is 120 miles N. E. of Culcutta. Lat. 23. 43. N. lon. 90. 30. E.

DACE, s. [derceau, Fr.] a small river-fish resembling a roach, but something less.

DA'CTYL, or DA'CTYLE, s. [from daktylos, a finger, Gr.] a foot, in Latin or Greek poetry, consisting of one long and two short syllables

DAD, or DA'DDY, s. [tad, Brit.] a child's way of expressing father.

DÆDAL, a. [dædalus, Lat.] various; variegated; skilful.

DÆMON, s. See DEMON.

DAFFODIL, DAFFODI'LLY, or DAFFODOWNDILLY, in botany, the narcissus.

To DAFT, v. a. to toss aside; to throw away slightly.

DAG, s. [dague, Fr.] a dagger; a hand-gun.

To DAG, v. a. [from dag, Sax.] to dirt or bemire the lower parts of a garment.

DA'GGER, s. [dague, Fr.] a short word. In fencing schools, a blunt blade of iron with a basket hilt, used for defence. In printing, the obelisk, used as a mark of reference, and of this form [†].

DA'GGER'S DRAWING, s. the act of drawing a dagger. Figuratively, quarrelsomeness, or readiness to fight.

To DA'GGLE, v. a. See DRAGGLE.

DAHOMY, a country of Guinea, E. of the Slave Coast, and about 70 miles from the sea, called also FOUIN, and supposed to reach from the sea coast 150 or 200 miles inland. The government is perfect despotism; yet, in the country, strangers are the least exposed to insults, and reside there in security and tranquillity. The king of Dehomy maintains a considerable standing army, among whom are several hundreds of women, immured within his palace, that are trained to the use of arms, under a female general. The capital is Abomey, in lat. 9, 50. N. and lon. 3. 30. E.

DAILY, a. [daglic, Sax.] happening, done, or repeated every day. Figuratively, constantly or frequently; used adverbially, every day, frequently.

DAINTILY, ad. in a curious, elegant, or delicate manner; deliciously; pleasantly.

DAINTINESS, s. delicacy, softness; elegance; nicety; squeamishness; or the not being easily pleased either with food, or the productions of art.

DAINTY, s. pleasing to the taste, and purchased with great cost. Figuratively, of delicate or exquisite sensibility; squeamish; not easily pleased with food; scrupulous; elegant; well or nicely formed; nice, or affected.

DA'INTY, s. some rare food of exquisite taste. A word of fondness.

DA'IRY, s. [perhaps from dey, an old word for milk] the employment of making several kinds of food from milk; pasturage; a milk farm, or place where milk is kept, and butter or cheese made.

DAIRY-MAID, s. a woman-servant who has the care of the dairy, and makes butter or cheese.

DA'ISY, (dázy) s. [dais, Fr.] in botany, a spring flower, called also the bellis.

DALE, s. a low or hollow place between hills; a vale or valley. SYNON. Valleys are for the most part winding; and as they receive waters from the hills on each side, are generally converted into meads. A fine vale, with beautiful inclosures, bounded by rising woods, is a delightful prospect. Dales are much easier to be plowed than hilly lands.

DALECA'RLIA, a river and province of Sweden, near Norway. The latter is about 80 leagues in length, and from 15 to 40 in breadth; and is surrounded by Helsingland, Gestricia, Westmanland, Wermeland, and Norway. It is mountainous, yet has fertile pastures, and abounds in mines of copper, iron, and silver, some of which are of a prodigious depth. The inhabitants are a plain, hardy, warlike race. The principal productions are corn, wood, and hemp.

DA'LKEITH, a parish and town in Mid Lothian, seated on the Esk, 6 miles S. E. of Edinburgh. Dalkeith House, is the principal seat of the duke of Buccleugh. The present magnificent palace was built about the beginning of the 18th century, on the spot formerly occupied by Dalkeith Castle, built on a perpendicular rock of great height, and inaccessible on all sides except the E. where it was defended by a fossé.

DA'LLIANCE, s. acts of fondness between lovers. Figuratively, the caresses of a married couple. Delay, or deferring a thing.

DA'LLIER, s. a trifler; a person who practises acts of fondness.

To DA'LLY, v. n. [dollen, Belg.] to trifle; to play the fool; to amuse one's self, and lose time in idle play; to exchange caresses of fondness; to sport; to frolic; to delay.

DA'LTON, a town in Lancashire, with a market on Saturday. It is seated on the spring head of a river, in a champaign country, not far from the sea; and the ancient castle is made use of to keep the records and prisoners for debt in the liberty of Furness. It is 16 miles N. W. of Lancaster, and 273 N. N. W. of London.

DAM, s. [from dame, which, according to Chaucer, formerly signified a mother] the mother, applied most commonly to beasts; but figuratively, and by way of reproach, applied to persons.

DAM, s. [dam, Belg.] a mole, bank, or any other obstruction to confine water.

To DAM, v. a. [demman, Sax.] to confine water by moles or other obstructions. Figuratively, to damp; to extinguish, obstruct, or intercept.

DA'MAGE, s. [domage, Fr.] mischief; hurt; detriment; loss. In common law, it is what the jurors, upon a trial, allow the party who appears to have suffered wrong.

To DA'MAGE, v. a. to spoil, hurt, or impair any thing; to affect a person with loss, or hinder him in the prosecution of his business. Neuterly, to impair: to lose of its worth by time.

DA'MAGEABLE, a. that may be impaired or spoiled by time; mischievous or hurtful.

DA'MASCENE, or DA'MSON, s. [damascenus, Lat.] in gardening, a small round black plum, of a rough and astringent taste.

DAMASCUS, now called SHAM, a very ancient city of Syria, and the capital of a pachalic, is built in the form of an oblong square. Streams of clear water run across the plain of Damascus, which fertilize the gardens, supply the public fountains and run into every house. The caravansaries have long galleries, supported by marble pillars, surrounding a large court. The private houses, which are built of wood, have their fronts inwards, inclosing a court, and presenting a dead wall to the streets, although often richly adorned within. The castle is like a little town, having its own streets and houses. The mosques are superb and numerous. The straight street, which runs across the city and suburbs in a direct line, has shops on each side, where all sorts of merchandise are sold. The gardens and orchards extend several miles round, and are embellished with summer-houses, turrets, fountains, cascades, and streams of water. A manufactory of cutlery is carried on here. Damascus stands on the river Barida, in a very fertile plain, extolled by the Arabs, who speak of it with enthusiasm, as the best watered, and the most delicious, of all Syria; and contains about 80,000 inhabitants, of whom 15,000 are Christians. It is 112 miles N. N. E. of Jerusalem. Lat. 33. 45. N. lon. 37. 0. E.

DA'MASK, s. [from Damascus, the place where it was invented] a manufacture of linen or silk woven with raised flowers; likewise a very fine steel, at Damascus in Syria, used for swords and cutlass blades, and of a very fine temper. Figuratively, a red colour, alluding to that of the damask rose.

To DA'MASK, v. a. to weave linen or silk in raised figures; to variegate, diversify, or embellish. To adorn steel work with figures.

DA'MASK-ROSE, s. a red rose.

DA'MASKENING, s. the art of adorning iron and steel, by cutting and carving holes in them, and filling them up with gold or silver wire; used in enriching the blades of swords and locks of pistols.

DA'MBEA, an extensive lake of Abyssinia, containing many fertile islands, and abundance of fish and river horses. It is 100 miles from the source of the Nile: the country of Dambea, on the N. of the lake, being flat, is subject to inundation.

DAME, s. [dame, Fr.] originally applied to a person who was mistress of a family, and of noble birth, as it is at present used in law; but now commonly used for a farmer's wife, or one of the lower sort. Figuratively, women in general.

DAMIETTA, a sea port town of Egypt, situated on the eastern branch of the Nile, about 7½ miles from its mouth, in the most fruitful part of Egypt. The number of inhabitants is about 80,000; they manufacture fine linen of all colours; napkins fringed with silk, &c. &c. Multitudes of boats and small vessels fill the port or road, which, however, is very defective and disadvantageous to trade, being every where totally exposed. It is a place of great trade, and is 84 miles N. N. E. of Cairo.

DAMES-VIOLET, s. a plant, the same with the queen's gilliflower.

To DAMN, (dam) v. a. [damno, Lat.] to doom, devote, or curse to eternal torments; to condemn; to explode or render any performance unpopular, by hissing or criticising.

DA'MNABLE, a. deserving, or justly condemned to, eternal punishment. Sometimes used indecently, in a ludicrous sense, for pernicious or odious.

DA'MNABLY, ad. in such a manner as to incur eternal punishment.

DAMNATION, s. exclusion from Divine mercy; the state of a person who is sentenced to eternal punishment.

DA'MNATORY, a. [from damno, to condemn, Lat.] containing the sentence to eternal punishment.

DA'MNED, part. hateful; detestable; abominable; doomed to everlasting punishment.

DAMNIFIC, a. procuring loss; mischievous.

To DA'MNIFY, v. a. [from damnum, a loss, and facio, to make, Lat.] to cause loss, to spoil, hurt, or impair.

DA'MNINGNESS, s. tendency to procure damnation.

DAMP, a. [dampe, Belg.] moist; inclining to wet; moistened by the air or vapours. Figuratively, dejected, full of sorrow, on account of some sudden disappointment or unexpected calamity.

DAMP, s. a fog or mist; a moist, noxious vapour

Damps are of two kinds, the choke damp, and the fire damp. The former is a species of fixed air, which is heavier than common air, and therefore lies at the bottom of mines or pits; the latter is inflammable air, which is found principally in coal pits, and sometimes in lead mines; and if it comes in contact with the flame of a candle, explodes and sometimes produces very shocking effects. Figuratively, dejection or sorrow, arising from some sudden calamity.

To DAMP, v. a. to wet or moisten; to chill; or diminish heat by water. Figuratively, to lessen any quality; to smother, check, or depress any ardour or passion. To weaken; to abandon.

DA'MPISHNESS, s. tendency to wetness, or moisture, arising from fogs, vapours, &c.

DA'MPNESS, s. cold, moisture, or fogginess.

DA'MPY, a. moist or wet.

DA'MSEL, s. [damoiselle, Fr.] originally used for a young gentlewoman or lady of distinction; an attendant of the higher rank; but at present for a young country lass.

DA'MSON, s. See DAMASCENE.

DAN, s. [dominus, Lat.] a title of dignity, or honour, formerly used for master.

DA'NBURY, Essex, on a hill, 5 miles E. of Chelmsford; its spire serves as a sea-mark.

To DANCE, v. n. [danser, Fr.] to move in a graceful attitude, according to an air sung or played. Actively, to make a person dance or skip. To dance attendance is to wait in an humble and suppliant manner on a person.

DANCE, s. [danse, Fr.] an agreeable motion of the body and feet, adjusted by art to the measure or tune of a musical instrument, or the voice.

DA'NCER, s. one who practises dancing.

DA'NCINGMASTER, s. one who teaches the art of dancing.

DA'NCINGSCHOOL, s. the school where the art of dancing is taught.

DANDE'LION, s. [dent de lion, Fr. lion's tooth] in botany, a genus of plants, of which there are divers species, vulgarly called piss-a-bed.

DA'NDIPRAT, s. [dandin, Fr.] a little fellow, used sometimes as a word of fondness, and sometimes as a word of reproach.

To DA'NDLE, v. a. [dandelen, Belg.] to keep a child in motion, either on the knee or otherwise, to quiet it. Figuratively, to treat with too much fondness; to use like a child.

DA'NDLER, s. a person that fondles a child.

DA'NDRUFF, s. the dirt or scurf which sticks to the head.

DA'NEGELT, s. a tax, or tribute on every hide of land, imposed on the Saxons our ancestors, by the Danes, on their frequent invasion as the arbitrary terms of peace, and their departure. After their expulsion it was imposed by Ethelred as a standing yearly tax, to be employed for the fitting out such a fleet as should be sufficient to protect the country from the Danes. It was continued for other purposes under the Norman kings, and appears to have been last levied by king Henry II.

DA'NEWORT, s. in botany, a species of elder, likewise called the dwarf-elder, or wall-wort.

DA'NGER, (Isles of) three islands in the S. Pacific Ocean, discovered by Commodore Byron, in June 1765. They are very populous, but surrounded with dangerous rocks. Lat. 10. 15. S. lon. 169 28 W.

DA'NGER, s. [danger, Fr.] hazard; risk; or a condition which is liable to mischief or calamity. SYNON. The avaricious man, spurred on by interest, fears no danger; hazards his health and happiness; runs every risk that attends his profession, and gladly ventures his all in search of that which, if obtained, he would not have the spirit to enjoy.

To DA'NGER, v. a. to expose to loss, calamity, or misery.

DA'NGERLESS, a. out of a possibility of meeting with any calamity or accident.

DA'NGEROUS, a. exposed to accidents, loss, harm, or mischief.

DA'NGEROUSLY, ad. hazardous; perilous; full of danger.

DA'NGEROUSNESS, s. a condition which exposes to accidents, calamity, or death.

To DA'NGLE, v. n. to hang loose, so as to be put in motion by the wind, breath, or a shake. Figuratively, to hang as a dependant upon a person.

DA'NGLER, s. a person who frequents the company of women merely to pass or kill time.

DA'NIEL, a canonical book of the Old Testament, so denominated from its author Daniel, who was a very extraordinary person, and was favoured of God and honoured of men beyond any who lived in his time. The first six chapters of the book of Daniel, are a history of the kings of Babylon, and what befel the Jews under their government. In the six last he is altogether prophetical, foretelling not only what should happen to his own church and nation, but events in which foreign princes and kingdoms were concerned. The style of Daniel is not so lofty and figurative as that of the other prophets; it is clear and concise, and his narrations and descriptions simple and natural; in short he writes more like a historian than a prophet.

DA'NK, a. [from tuncken, Teut.] moist; wettish.

DA'NKISH, a. somewhat moist or wet.

DA'NTZICK, one of the largest, richest, and strongest towns of Europe, late capital of Regal Prussia, and of Pomerella in Poland, with a famous harbour, a bishop's see, and an university. It is encompassed with a wall and fortifications of great extent. The houses are well built of stone or brick, six or seven stories high; and the granaries, containing vast quantities of grain and naval stores are still higher, to which the ships lie close, when they take in their lading. The arsenal is well provided, and the exchange is a handsome structure. It is reckoned to contain 200,000 inhabitants, though there died of the plague 30,000 persons. The college is provided with very learned professors. It carries on a great trade, particularly in corn, timber, and naval stores, which are chiefly purchased by the Dutch. It was once a free Hanseatic town, under the protection of Poland; but in 1793 it submitted to the king of Prussia, who forcibly usurped the sovereignty, in a second partition of the Polish dominions. Since that time it has been erected into a dutchy by the emperor Napolean. The established religion was the Lutheran, but there were papists, calvinists, and anabaptists, who were all tolerated. The jurisdiction of this town extended about 50 miles round it; and they maintained a garrison at their own expense. It is seated on the western banks of the river Weissel, or Vistula, near the gulf of Angil, in the Baltic sea; 30 miles S. E. of Marienburg, and 104 N. of Warsaw. Lon. 19. 5. E. lat. 54. 22. N.

DA'NUBE, towards the mouth called ISTER by the ancients, a river of Europe, rising in and running through the circle of Suabia, passing by Ulm, then through Bavaria and Austria, passing by Ratisbon, Passau, and Vienna, it then enters Hungary, passing on to Presburg, Buda, and Belgrade, after which it divides Bulgaria from Morlachia and Moldavia, falling into the Black Sea, by several channels, in the province of Bessarabia. It begins to be navigable for boats at Ulm: receives several large rivers as it passes along; is so deep between Buda and Belgrade, that the Turks and their enemies have had men of war on it; yet there are cataracts on it, both above and below Buda, which prevent its being navigable either way in that part.

To DAP, v. a. [from dip] in angling, to let fall, or put gently into the water.

DA'PIFER, s. the dignity or office of grand master of a prince's household. In Germany, the elector of Bavaria assumed the title of Archdapifer of the empire, whose office was, at the coronation of the emperor, to carry the first dish of meat to table on horseback.

DA'PPER, a. [dapper, Belg.] small of stature, and full of spirit and vivacity. It is usually spoken in contempt.

DAPPERLING, s. a person of low stature; a dwarf.

DAPPLE, a. marked, variegated, or clouded with different colours.

To DAPPLE, v. a. to streak, or diversify with a different colour.

DAR, or DART, s. a fish found in the Severn.

DARABGERD, a town of Farsistan, Persia, with a considerable manufacture of glass. Near it is found salt of various colours, red, white, black, and green. It is 116 miles E. S. E. of Schiras.

DARDANELLES, two castles, (built by Mahomet IV. in 1658) one on each side of the Strait of Gallipoli, anciently the Hellespont, between the Archipelago and the Sea of Marmora. The strait is 33 miles long; in the broadest part it is a mile and a half across, and in the narrowest half a mile. At the entrance, where guarded by the castles, it is about two miles over.

To DARE, v. n. preter. I durst, or have dared; [dearran, Sax.] to undertake a thing without being discouraged by the dangers which attend it. Actively, to challenge, or provoke a person to fight. To dare larks, is to catch them by means of a looking-glass, or by keeping a bird of prey hovering aloft, which keeps them in amaze till caught.

DARE, s. a provocation, or calling on a person to fight; a challenge; defiance.

DA'REFUL, a. full of defiance; without fear.

DA'RGLE, a romantic vale, or glen, in the county of Wicklow, about 10 miles from Dublin. The lofty mountains on each side are clothed with trees down to the edge of the river, which noisily rumbles from rock to rock in the bottom, forming many cascades; and the views from the eminences are grand and beautiful.

DARIEN, an isthmus, or narrow country, which joins N. and S. America, having the Atlantic on the N. E. and the Pacific on the S. W. It extends about 360 miles in length, and from 48 to 135 in breadth. It is generally considered as a province of Terra Firma, though it seems to be a part of N. America, and is of great importance to the Spaniards, as the wealth of Peru is brought annually to Panama and Porto Bello, and thence exported to Europe. Here are many high mountains, and the low grounds are frequently overflowed with the heavy rains. The natives build their houses with hurdles, plastered over with earth, and have plantations along the banks of the rivers. The girls pick and spin cotton, and the women weave it; and the men fabricate very neat baskets with canes, reeds, or palmetto-leaves dyed of several colours. Polygamy is allowed among them.

DA'RING, a. bold; adventurous; courageously undertaking an affair notwithstanding the dangers attending it.

DA'RINGLY, ad. in a bold, courageous, outrageous, or impudent manner.

DA'RINGNESS, s. boldness.

DARK, a. [deorc, Sax.] without light; not bright; dull, applied to colours. Opaque, not to be seen through; not having light in itself. Figuratively, not easy to be understood; obscure; ignorant; not enlightened with knowledge or revelation. Gloomy; not cheerful, applied to the temper.

DARK, s. want of light, by which all objects become visible. Figuratively, obscurity: the condition of a person not known or famous; want of knowledge; ignorance.

To DA'RKEN, v. a. [adearcian, Sax.] to deprive of, or shut out the light; to cloud, perplex; to render the mind unable to distinguish the qualities of objects; to grow towards night; to grow dark or gloomy.

DA'RKING, a town of Surry, noted for corn and fowls. The custom of borough English prevails in this manor. It is seated in a healthy air, on a soft sandy rock, near the river Mole, 23 miles S. W. of London. Market on Saturday; and a large fair on May 23, for lambs.

DA'RKLING, part. hid in the dark; concealed from sight.

DA'RKLY, ad. in a situation void of light; obscurely.

DA'RKNESS, s. a state wherein light is absent, and objects which are discovered by the sight become invisible; opaqueness. Obscurity, or difficulty to be understood, applied to books. The infernal gloom; wickedness; the empire of Satan. SYNON. Considering them in a figurative sense, darkness implies a state of life in which we are shut up from the world; as the state of a hermit; state of a recluse. By obscurity, is understood a state of retirement, as when we retreat into the country far from the notice of the public eye.

DA'RKSOME, a. gloomy; obscure.

DA'RLING, s. [deorling, Sax.] a person more beloved than any other; a favourite.

DA'RLINGTON, a neat thriving town, in the county of Durham, noted for its manufacture of huckabacks, 10 quarters wide, diapers, stuffs, &c. Some fine linens are also made here, the Skerne waters being famous for bleaching. It has a spacious market place, and handsome church. A curious water machine for grinding optical glasses, and another for spinning linen-yarn, have been invented and erected here. Darlington is seated on the river Skerne, which falls into the Tees, 3 or 4 miles below the town, 18 miles S. of Durham, and 236 N. by W. of London. Market on Monday.

DA'RMSTADT, the capital of the landgraviate of Hesse Darmstadt, in the circle of the Upper Rhine. It has a consistory, a criminal court, a college, a court of appeals, &c. It is seated on a river of the same name, 18 miles E. S. E. of Mentz.

To DARN, v. a. to mend holes by stitches, in imitation of the fabric of the stuff.

DA'RNEL, s. a weed growing in corn fields, of which there are two kinds, the red and the white; called also rye-grass, or ray grass.

To DA'RRAIN, v. a. to prepare for battle; to range troops for battle.

DART, s. [dard, Fr.] a small lance or weapon thrown by the hand.

To DART, v. a. to cast or throw a dart; to wound at a distance; to emit, or cast. Neuterly, to fly as a dart.

DA'RTFORD, a town in Kent, seated on the river Darent, near its influx into the Thames, which is a harbour for barges, 7 miles W. of Gravesend, and 16 E. by S. of London. It is full of inns and public houses, from its being a great thoroughfare on the road from London to Canterbury. Market, chiefly for corn, on Saturday.

DA'RTMOUTH, a town of Devonshire, with a safe haven, capable of sheltering 500 sail of ships. It is seated at the mouth of the Dart, which river rises at the foot of Dartmoor hills, (an extensive moorish tract, feeding great numbers of black cattle,) and after passing Totness, where it is navigable for small vessels, is joined by the Hareborn, 7 miles above its fall into Dartmouth haven. The town, which is about a mile long, stands on the side of a craggy hill, with streets very irregular, sometimes two or three, one above another; yet the houses are generally very high. The harbour is defended by three castles, besides forts and blockhouses; and here is a large quay with a spacious street before it, inhabited by some considerable merchants. Dartmouth has a considerable trade to Italy, Spain, Portugal, &c. and to Newfoundland, as well as a share in the coasting traffic. Its pilchard and foreign fisheries employ nearly 3000 men. It is 30 miles nearly S. of Exeter, and 204 W. by S. of London. Market on Friday for corn and provisions; and one almost every day for fish.

To DASH, v. a. [of uncertain etymology] to throw one thing with violence and suddenness against another; to break by throwing with violence; to besprinkle; to wet by beating the water with a stick, or by flinging a stone or other thing into it; to mingle or mix with another liquor; to obliterate or cancel a writing, by drawing a careless stroke over it with a pen; to make a person ashamed; to confound. Neuterly, to fly in waves or sparkles over the surface or brim of a vessel or bank; to fly in sparkles or sheets, attended with a loud noise, applied to water.

DASH, s. the stroke occasioned by flinging one body forcibly against another; a stroke made with a pen; a blow; a mixture of another liquor.

DASH, ad. an expression of the sound of water dashed.

DA'SSEN EYLAND, or DEER ISLAND, one of the three small islands lying between the Cape of Good Hope and Saldanha Bay, so called from the great number of deer which were first brought here in 1601. Here are also sheep whose tails weigh 19lbs. a piece. Lat. 33. 25. S. lon. 17. 56. E.

DA'STARD, s. [adastriga, Sax.] a coward; a person infamously fearful.

To DA'STARD, v. a. to terrify; to affect with fear.

To DA'STARDIZE, v. a. to intimidate; to render cowardly with fear.

DA'STARDLY, a. cowardly; mean; timorous.

DA'STARDY, s. cowardliness; timorousness.

DA'TARY, s. [datarius, from do, to give, Lat.] an officer of the chancery of Rome, through whose hands benefices pass.

DATE, s. [datum, from do, to give, Lat.] the time or day in which a writing is signed or written, or an event happens; the time appointed for a thing to be done; continuance; the fruit of the palm tree, from dactylus, Lat.

To DATE, v. a. to set down the time in which a thing is done, or a writing performed.

DA'TELESS, a. without any fixed term or period.

DA'TIVE, a. [dativus, from do, to give, Lat.] the case of a noun which signifies the person to whom any thing is given or done. As we have no cases in English, this relation is generally expressed by prefixing to before the noun, but after verbs of giving, the particle is omitted. In law, such executors as are appointed by a judge's decree.

To DAUB, v. a. [dauber, Fr.] to smear with something sticking; to soil, or make dirty. Figuratively, to paint coarsely; to cover with something that disguises; to cover with something gaudy; to flatter grossly.

DA'UBER, s. one who soils or smears a thing; a coarse low painter.

DAUBRY, s. an old word for any thing artful.

DA'UBY, a. vicious; adhesive; glutinous.

DA'VENTRY, or DA'INTRY, a town of Northamptonshire, with a market on Wednesday. It is seated on the side of a hill, and is a pretty handsome town, on the great road to Chester and Carlisle; and the market is well supplied with horses, cattle, sheep, corn, and provisions. Its principal trade is making whips. It is 10 miles W. of Northampton, and 72 N. W. of London.

DA'VID ST. anciently called MENEW, or MENERIA, a town of Pembrokeshire, formerly the see of an archbishop, and metropolis of the British church. It is an episcopal town, and the cathedral is a pretty good structure. It contains about 1200 inhabitants, and is seated on a barren soil, on the river Ilen, 22 miles N. W. of Pembroke, and 225 W. by N. of London. Market on Wednesday.

DA'VID'S, ST. a town and fort of Asia, in the peninsula on this side the Ganges, and on the coast of Coromandel. It is an English factory, and one of the strongest places they have in the East-Indies. The fort stands close to the river, and the territory belonging to it is 8 miles on the sea-shore, and 4 within land. It produces good long cloths, chints, callicoes, and muslins. Each house has a garden, and there are plenty of black cattle, but small. The river and sea abound with good fish. It is 80 miles S. of Fort St. George. Lon. 79. 56. E. lat. 11. 30. N.

DA'UGHTER, (dawter) s. [dohter, Sax. and Teut.] the female offspring of a man or woman. A daughter-in-law. A woman.

DAVIS' STRAITS, an arm of the sea, separating Greenland from Labrador, and other parts of North America. It was discovered by Captain Davis in 1585. Lat. 60. to 70. N. lon. from 50. to 70. W.

To DAUNT, v. a. [domito, Lat.] to discourage; to damp a person's courage.

DA'UNTLESS, a. without fear or discouragement.

DA'UNTLESSNESS, a. a condition void of fear.

DA'UPHIN, s. a title formerly given to the eldest son of the king of France, on account of the province of Dauphiny, which, in 1343, was given to Philip of Valois, on this condition, by Hubert, dauphin of Viennois.

DA'UPHINY, a ci-devant province of France, now forming the departments of Drome, Isere, and Upper Alps.

DAW, s. a bird.

To DAWN, v. n. [dagian, Sax.] to grow light; to advance towards day. Figuratively, to glimmer, or afford an obscure light to the understanding; to give some indication of greater and approaching splendour.

DAWN, s. the first appearance of day or light. Figuratively, a beginning.

DAY, s. [dæg, Sax.] that space of time wherein it is light; but a natural or civil day is that space of time wherein the earth performs one rotation on its axis, so as its different parts shall successively enjoy the light of the sun; this consists of a period of 24 hours at a mean rate. Figuratively, light; sunshine. Any time specified and distinguished from other time; an age; the time. In this sense it is usually plural. Life: in this sense it is commonly plural; as, "He never in his days broke his word." The day of contest: the battle. Unappointed time. To day, on this day. Days of grace, in commerce, are certain days allowed by custom, for the payment of a bill of exchange, &c. after it is become due. Three days of grace are allowed in England; ten in France and Dantzic; eight at Naples; six at Venice, Amsterdam, Rotterdam, and Antwerp; four at Franckfort; five at Leipsic; twelve at Hamburgh; six in Portugal; fourteen in Spain; thirty in Genoa, &c.

DA'YBOOK, s. a book wherein tradesmen enter all the occurrences of the day in the order they happen; called likewise a waste-book.

DA'YBREAK, s. the dawn; the first appearance of light.

DAYLA'BOUR, s. a portion of labour exacted of a person every day, and implies the idea of hardship and fatigue.

DAYLA'BOURER, s. a person who is hired to work by the day; a hard-working and slaving person.

DA'YLIGHT, s the light of the day, as opposed to that of the moon or a candle.

DA'YLILY, s. a plant, placed by Linnæus in the first section of his sixth class, called also asphodel; it flowers in August.

DA'YSMAN, s. a person chosen to determine or decide a dispute between others.

DA'YSPRING, s. the first appearance of light in the morning; the dawn; the daybreak.

DA'YSTAR, s. the morning star. Figuratively, the light shed by the daystar; the light of the gospel which is spread by Christ the daystar of righteousness.

DA'YTIME, s. in the day, opposed to night.

DA'YWORK, s. work imposed by the day; daylabour.

To DAZE, v. a. [dwæs, Sax.] to overpower with light.

DA'ZIED, a. adorned or over-grown with daisies.

To DA'ZZLE, v. a. [See DAZE] to overpower the eyes, and injure the sight, with too great a degree of light or splendor. Neutrely, to be overpowered, or lose the use of sight for a time, by too much light, or too great an application to reading.

DE'ACON, (dêkon) s [from diakonos, a servant, Gr.] a lower degree of clergy, rather a noviciate, or state of probation for one year, after which a person is admitted into full orders, or ordained a priest. In Scotland, an overseer of the poor. In dissenting congregations, an officer chosen to assist the pastor in conducting the affairs of the church, and to superintend its temporal concerns.

DE'ACONESS, (d êkouess) s. a female in the ancient church, who administered such offices to those of her own sex, which it was not decent for the men to do, such as the baptism of adult women, &c.

DE'ACONRY, or DE'ACONSHIP, s. the office or dignity of a deacon.

DEAD, (ded) s. [dood, Belg.] without, or deprived of life, applied to those persons whose souls are separated from their bodies. Figuratively, without sense or motion; hence a dead sleep, which imitates the want of sense and motion in a dead body, is called a dead sleep. Inactive, dull, applied to colours. Useless; unaffecting; void of ardour or warmth; gloomy; still; obscure; obtuse. Tasteless or vapid, applied to liquors. Uninhabited, or not interspersed with houses. "A dead wall." Withered, "A dead bough or plant." The dead, dead men. Prov. He that waits for dead men's shoes may go long enough barefoot.

DEAD, (ded) s. time in which there is a remarkable stillness or gloom; as midnight.

To DEAD, (ded) or DE'ADEN, (dedeu) v. a. to deprive a thing of any quality or sensation. Figuratively, to make liquors vapid, tasteless, or spiritless.

DE'AD-DOING, part. a. destructive; killing; mischievous; having the power to make dead.

DE'AD-LIFT, (ded lift) s. a pressing necessity, call, or exigence; a last resort.

DE'AD LIGHTS, s. wooden ports, which are made to fasten into the cabin windows to prevent the waves from gushing into the ship during a storm; the glass lights are then taken out.

DE'ADLY, (dédly) a. that kills; murderous; mortal; inveterate.

DE'ADLY, (dédly) ad. in a manner resembling the dead. "Looked deadly pale." Shak. Implacably; irreconcileably. Sometimes used in familiar discourse, only to enforce the signification of a word, implying very much; prodigiously; exceedingly. "Though deadly weary." Orrery.

DE'ADNESS, (dedness) s. want of warmth and ardour. Figuratively, languor or faintness. Vapidness; loss of spirit: applied to liquors.

DE'ADNETTLE, or ARCHA'NGEL, s. a plant, of which there are three kinds; the red, the white, and the henbit; they flower in May and June. The young leaves of the two first species may be eaten with other potherbs.

DEAD RECKONING, s. [a sea term] That estimation or conjecture which the seamen make of the place where a ship is, by keeping an account of her way by the log, by knowing the course they have steered by the compass, and by rectifying all with allowance for drift or lee way; so that this reckoning is without any observation of the sun, moon, and stars, and is to be rectified as often as any good observation can be had.

DEAD SEA, or Lake ASPHALTITES, in Palestine, abounding in bitumen: it contains no verdure on the banks, nor fish in its waters. The cause which deprives it of vegetable and animal life, is the extreme saltness of its water, which is infinitely stronger than that of the sea. It is not true, however, that its exhalations destroy birds flying over it, as it is very common to see swallows skimming along its surface. Fragments of sulphur and bitumen, and mines of fossil salt, are found in the mountains, which extend along the shore. The Jordan runs into it, without any visible discharge for its waters.

DE'ADTONGUE, s. in botany, a species of the dropwort or oenanthe, having leaves with numerous blunt and nearly equal clefts, a yellowish red stem, angular scored fruitstalks, and white blossoms found on banks of rivers, and flowering in June. The whole of this plant is poisonous, and Dr. Poulteney remarks, that the root is the most virulent of all the vegetable poisons that Great Britain produces.

DEAF, (def) a. [deaf, Sax.] wanting the sense of hearing, or having it greatly impaired. Figuratively, regardless, inattentive.

To DEAF, or DE'AFEN, (def or déffen) v. a. to deprive of hearing.

DE'AFLY, (défly) ad. [deaflic, Sax.] without any sense of sounds, imperfectly heard.

DE'AFNESS, (défness) s. the state of a person who has entirely lost, or has the sense of hearing greatly impaired. Figuratively, inattention, or entire disregard.

DEAL, a sea port town in Kent, whose market is on Thursday. It is seated near the sea, and is a member of Sandwich, governed by a mayor and jurats. It has a church and chapel, and three long but narrow streets. No manufacture is carried on here, the trades-people chiefly depend on the sea faring men who resort thither. This place is defended by a castle built by Henry VIII. and near it are two others. Between this and Goodwin's Sands are the Downs, where ships usually ride at going out or coming home. It is 72 miles E. by S. of London.

DEAL, (deel) s. [deel, Belg.] a part or portion. It is a general word for expressing much, joined with great. The office or practice of distributing cards to those who are engaged in any game. Fir, or pine wood, from deyl, Belg.

To DEAL, (deel) v. a. [deelen, Belg.] to distribute or dispose of to different persons; to scatter promiscuously; to give to several persons in order, one after another. Neuterly, to transact business; to trade; to act; to sell; to be conversant in; to practise; to behave towards; to treat; sometimes to contend with or approve.

DEALBATION, s. [dealbatio, from albus, white, Lat.] the act of bleaching or whitening.

DE'ALER, (deéler) s. one who trades in any particular commodity; one who has to do with or practises any thing; one who distributes cards.

DE'ALING, (deéling) s. practice; action; behaviour; treatment; business; or trade.

DEAMBULATION, s. [deambulatio, from ambulo, to walk, Lat.] the act of walking abroad.

DEAN, GREAT DEAN, or MICHEL DEAN, a town of Gloucestershire in the Forest of Dean, 11 miles W. of Gloucester, and 112 W. S. W. of London. The forest comprehends that part of the county which lies between the Severn and the shires of Monmouth and Hereford. It contains 4 market towns and 23 parishes, is fertile in pasture and tillage, produces fine oaks, abounds in orchards, and has rich mines of iron and coal. Market on Monday.

DEAN, (deen) s. [from deka, a Greek word, signifying ten, because at first always presiding over ten prebendaries, or canons, at least according to Ayliffe] a person in collegiate churches or chapels, who is president of the chapter.

DEANERY, (deénery) s. the government, authority, revenue, or residence of a dean.

DE'ANSHIP, s. the office of a dean.

DEAR, (deer) a. [deor, Sax.] an object of great love, and of warm affection: beloved. Figuratively, valuable; of high price; costly; scarce; not plentiful.

DEAR, (deer) s. a word of endearment; darling.

DE'AR-BOUGHT, a. purchased at a high rate; bought at too high a price.

DE'ARLING, or DA'RLING, s. [dearling, Sax.] a person caressed with great affection.

DE'ARLY, (deérly) ad. with great affection. Used with pay or buy, at a high price; at too great a price.

To DEARN, v. a. [dyrnan, Sax.] See DARN.

DE'ARNESS, (deérness) s. fondness; a warm or great degree of affection; scarcity; costliness; a high, or too high a price.

DEARTH, (derth) s. [from dear] scarcity; want; need; famine; barrenness.

To DEARTICULATE, v. a. [from de, from and articulus, a member, Lat.] to disjoin; to dismember.

DEATH, (deth) s. [death, Sax.] the departure of the soul from the body; loss of sensibility, motion, and all the functions of animal life. Figuratively, mortality; destruction; the manner of dying; the image of mortality represented by a skeleton; the state of the dead; murder, or depriving a person of life by violence and unlawful means; the cause of death. In law, there is a natural and civil death; natural, where nature itself expires; civil, where a person is not naturally dead, but adjudged so by law. Thus, if a person for whose life an estate is granted remains beyond sea, or is otherwise absent for seven years, and no proof made of his being living, he shall be accounted naturally dead. SYNON. Departure, is still more refined, and carries with it an idea of the passage from one life to another. Death, more common, and signifies precisely extinction of life. Decease, more studied, is a term somewhat bordering upon the law, and implies the refuge of mortality. The second of these words is made use of with respect to all sorts of animals; the other two to man only.

DE'ATHBED, (dĕthbed) s. the bed on which a person dies.

DE'ATHFUL, (dĕthful) a. pregnant with death; mortal; fatal; destructive.

DE'ATHLESS, (dĕthless) a. not subject to death; immortal; everlasting.

DE'ATHLIKE, (dĕathlike) a. [deathlic, Sax.] resembling death, either in its horrors, or in its insensibility or motionless state.

DE'ATH's-MAN, (dĕth's-man,) s. an executioner.

DE'ATH-WATCH, (dĕth-watch) s. something that is foolishly reported to make a ticking noise in a wall, &c. against the death of some friend. This ticking is produced by two species of insects, one of which is a small beetle, about a quarter of an inch long, dark brown, spotted with white; the other nearly resembles the louse in size and appearance. The males make this noise by sticking a part of their heads against the floor by way of invitation to the females, and vice-versa.

To DEAURATE, v. a. [deauro, from aurum, gold, Lat.] to gild, or cover with gold.

DEAURA'TION, s. [deauro, from aurum, gold, Lat.] the gilding or covering any thing with gold or silver.

DEBACCHA'TION, s. [debacchatio, Lat. from Bacchus, the god of wine, whose votaries counterfeited madness] a raging; a madness.

To DEBA'R, v. a. to hinder or restrain a person from the enjoyment of a thing.

To DEBA'RB, v. a. [from de, from, and barba, the beard, Lat.] to deprive of the beard.

To DEBA'RK, v. a. [debarquer, Fr.] to come out of a ship upon shore.

To DEBA'SE, v. a. to reduce from a higher to a lower value; to adulterate metal or liquor by the addition of something less valuable: to spoil or render less perfect by mean and unworthy additions.

DEBA'SEMENT, s. the act or debasing or degrading a thing by the mixture of something mean or worthless.

DEBA'SER, s. the person who lessens the value of a thing by some mixture; one who adulterates metals or liquors.

DEBA'TABLE, a. that may be disputed, or give occasion for controversy.

DEBA'TE, s. [debat, Fr.] a dispute concerning the meaning of the truth of any proposition; a quarrel or contest.

To DEBA'TE, v. a. [debattre, Fr.] to controvert or dispute; to produce the arguments which may be brought to support any side of a question. Neuterly, to deliberate.

DEBA'TEFUL, a. fond of dispute or contradiction. Quarrelsome or contentious, when applied to persons. Contested, or occasioning disputes, when applied to things.

DEBA'TEMENT, s controversy; deliberation.

DEBA'TER, s. a disputant, or one fond of dispute.

To DEBAUCH, v. a. [debaucher, Fr.] to seduce a person, or prevail on him to do something amiss; to corrupt a person's morals, so as to make him lewd; to corrupt by intemperance in meat or drink, but especially the latter.

DEBAU'CH, s. a fit of intemperance; luxury; excess; lewdness.

DEBAUCHE'E, (dĕbŭshee) s. [debauché, Fr.] a person given to intemperance in drink, or lewdness.

DEBAU'CHER, s. one who seduces others to intemperance; a corrupter.

DEBAU'CHERY, s. the practice of excess; intemperance; lewdness.

DEBAU'CHMENT, s. the act of corrupting the morals of a person, whether it respects temperance or chastity.

To DEBE'L, or DEBELLATE, v. a. [debello, from bellum, war, Lat.] to conquer, or overcome, in war.

DE'BENHAM, a town in Suffolk, with a market on Friday. It is seated near the head of the river Deben, on the side of a hill, 24 miles E. of Bury, and 84 N. E. of London.

DEBE'NTURE, s. [from debeo, to owe, Lat. is a term used in the custom-house, for a kind of certificate which is signed by the officers of the customs, and entitles a merchant exporting goods to the receipt of a bounty or drawback; which debentures for foreign goods are to be paid within one month after demand.

DE'BILE, a. [debilis, Lat.] weak; feeble; languid; faint; impotent.

To DEBI'LITATE, v. a. [from debilis, weak, Lat.] to deprive of strength; to weaken, or render weak.

DEBILITA'TION, s. [from debilis, weak, Lat.] the act of depriving a person of strength, or rendering him weak.

DEBI'LITY, s. [from debilis, weak, Lat.] loss of strength; weakness; want of strength to bear any weight, or to accomplish an undertaking.

DEBONA'IR, a. [debonnaire, Fr.] lively; affable; genteel; civil; well bred; elegant.

DEBONA'IRLY, ad. with an elegant or genteel air: civilly; sprightly.

DEBT, (det) s. [debitum, from debeo, to owe, Lat.] that which one person owes to another. That which any man is obliged to do or suffer.

DE'BTOR, (dĕttŏr) s. [debitor, from debo, to owe, Lat.] he that owes another money; one who has taken goods of another on trust; that side of an account which contains the articles which a person has had on trust.

DEBULLI'TION, s. [debullitio, from ebullio, to boil, Lat.] the bubbling of water over the side of the vessel which contains it.

DECACU'MINATED, a. [decacuminatus, from cacumen, the top, Lat.] having the top or point cut off.

DECA'DE, s. [from deka, ten, Gr.] a number amounting to, or consisting of ten.

DECA'DENCY, s. [decadence, Fr.] decay.

DE'CAGON, s. [from deka, ten, and gonia, an angle, Gr.] in geometry, a figure having ten equal sides and angles.

DE'CALOGUE, (dekălŏg) s. [from deka, ten, and logos, a word, Gr.] the ten commandments given by God to Moses.

DECA'MERON, s. [from deka, ten, and meros, part, Gr.] a book, discourse, or other matter, divided into ten distinct parts.

To DECA'MP, v. n. [decamper, Fr.] to shift a camp; to remove from a place.

DECA'MPMENT, s. the act of moving from a place.

To DECA'NT, v. a. [decanto, Lat. decanter, Fr.] to pour liquor off gently.

DECANTA'TION, s. [decantation, Fr.] the act of pouring liquor off the lees.

DECA'NTER, s. a bottle of white glass, used to contain liquors.

To DECA'PITATE, v. a. [decapito, from caput, the head Lat.] to behead.

To DECA'Y, v. n. [dechoir, from de, and cadere, Lat.] to lose of its value, substance, strength, or perfection; to be gradually impaired. Actively, to impair, to consume gradually, or waste the substance of a thing.

DECA'Y, s. a gradual loss of substance, qualities, value, or perfection; the effects or marks of consumption or decline. The cause of decline.

DECA'YER, s. that which causes decay.

